Now in view of these instances of services in this country, rewarded by appointments in Europe, the question naturally occurs: What interest have these servants of a foreign despotism in the free institutions of this country? What sympathies with American liberty can these foreigners have, educa-ted, as they have been in their own country, in the principles of despotic institutions, living but temporarily in this country, (whose entire political sys-tem is diametrically opposed to their whole educa-tion,) and looking forward, after their task is per-formed, to a recal to comfortable benefices and high places of profit and honor at home, to rewards devised by Austria and the Pope, and meted out to their faithful advocates according to the zeal and devotion manifested to their interests? What would be said of the Episcopalian, or Presbyterian, or Methodist, or Baptist clergy, were they announ-ced as foreigners sent from England, who after a short sojourn of active service in this country, were known to be recalled and promoted in their own country, to be Bishops, and dignified officers under the British government? Is there no danger to our free institutions from a host commanded by such men, whose numbers are constantly increasing by the machinations and funds of Austria?

Consider, too, the power which these Jesuits and other Catholic priests possess through the confessional, of knowing the private characters and af-fairs of all the leading men in the community; the power arising from their right to prescribe the kinds and degrees of penance; and the power arising from the right to refuse absolution to those who do not comply with their commands. Suppose such powers were exercised by the ministers of any other sect, the Episcopalian, the Methodist, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, &c. what an outcry would be raised in the land! And should not the men who possess such powers be jealously watched by all lovers of liberty?

Is it possible that these Jesuits can have a sincere attachment to the principles of free institutions? Do not these principles oppose a constant barrier to their exercise of that arbitrary power, which they claim as a divine right, and which they exercise too in all countries where they are dominant? Can it not be perceived, that although they may find it politic for the present to conceal their anti-republican tenets, yet this concealment will be merely temporary, and is only adopted now, the better to lull suspicion? Is it not in accordance with all experience of Popish policy, that Jesuits should encroach by little and little, and persevere till they have attained to plenitude of power. At present they have but one aim in this country, which absorbs all others, and that is to make themselves popular. If they suc-ceed in this we shall then learn, when too late to remedy the evil, that Popery abandons none of its divine rights. The leaders of this sect are disciplined and organized, and have their adherents entirely subservient to their will. Here then is a regular party, a religious sect, ready to throw the weight of its power, as circumstances may require, ready to favor any man, or set of men, who will engage to favor it.
And to whom do these leaders look for their instructions? Is it to a citizen or body of citizens belonging to this country; is it to a body of men kept in check by the ever jealous eyes of other bodies around them, and by the immediate publicity which must be given to all their doings? No, they are men owning no law on this side of the ocean; they are the Pope and his Consistory of Cardinals, following the plans and instructions of the imperial cabinet of Austria,-plans formed in the secret councils of that cabinet, instructions delivered in secret, according to the modes of despotism, to their obedient officers, and distributed through the well disciplined ranks in this country, to be carried into effect in furtherance of any political designs the Austrian cabinet may think advantageous to its own interests. And will these designs be in favor of liberty? With a party thus formed and disciplined among us, who will ven-ture to say that our elections will not be under the control of a Metternich, and that the appointment of a President of the United States will not be virtually made in the Imperial Cabinet of Vienna, or the Consistory of Cardinals at Rome? Will this be pronounced incredible? It will be the almost certain result of the dominion of Popery in this country.

But we need not imagine that it will always be deemed expedient to preserve the name of President, or even the elective character of our chief magistrate. How long would it take the sophistry that deludes the mind of its victim into the belief of a man's infallibility, and fixes the delusion there indelibly, binding him soul and body to believe against the evidence of his reason, and his senses; holding him in the most abject obedience to the will of a fellow-man; how long, I say, would it take such sophistry to impose the duty of acknowledging the divine right of an emperor over the priest conquered vassals of this country-vassals well instructed in the Russian Catechism, and prepared to worship, love and obey as their Lord and Master, some scion of the House of Hapsburg,-the Emperor of the United States?

CHAPTER V.

Points in our political system which favor this foreign attack-Our toleration of all religious systems-Popery opposed to all toleration-Charge of intolerance substantiated-The organization of Popery in America connected with and strengthened by foreign organization-Without a parallel among Protestant sects-Great preponderance of Popish strength in consequence-The divisions among Protestant sects nullifies their attempts at combination-Taken advantage of by Jesuits-Popish duplicity illustrated in its opposite alliances in Europe with despotism, and in America with democracy-The laws relating to immigration and naturalization favor foreign attack-Emigrants being mostly Catholic and in entire subjection to their priests-No remedy provided by our laws for this alarming evil.

WHAT I have advanced in my previous chapters may have convinced my readers that there is good reason for believing that the despots of Europe are attempting, by the spread of Popery in this country, to subvert its free institutions; yet many may think that there are so many counteracting causes in the constitution of our society, that this effort to bind us with the cast-off chains of the bigotry and superstition of Europe cannot meet with success. I will, therefore, in the present chapter, consider some of the points in our political system, of which advantage has already been taken to attack us, by the wily enemies of our liberties.

It is a beautiful feature in our constitution, that every man is left to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, that the church is separated from the state, and that equal protection is granted to all creeds. In thus tolerating all sects, we have admitted to equal protection not only those sects whose religious faith and practice support the principle on which the free toleration of all is found-ed, but also that unique, that solitary sect, the Cath-olic, which builds and supports its system on the destruction of all toleration. Yes, the Catholic is permitted to work in the light of Protestant toleration, to mature his plans, and to execute his designs to extinguish that light, and destroy the hands that hold it. It is no refutation of the charge of intolerance here made against Catholics as a sect, to show that small bodies of them, under peculiar circum-stances, have been tolerant, or that in this country, where they have always been a small minority, they make high professions of ardent love for the republican, tolerant institutions of our government. No one can be deceived by evidence so partial and cir-cumscribed, while the blood of the persecuted for opinion's sake, stains with the deepest tinge every page of the history of that church, aye, even while it is still wet upon the dungeon floors of Italy; while the intolerant and anti-republican principles of Popery, are now weekly thundered from the Vatican, and echoed in our ears by almost every arrival from Europe. Footnote: Sanguinary spirit still existing in Modern Popery. If any suppose that Popery has changed its intolerant character in modern times, we refer them to the following specimen of its spirit. It is Popery of the present day; Popery of 1833.

In the recent journals of Modena, in Italy, are articles signed by the duke of Canosa, the language of which knows no bounds. He justifies the St. Bartholomew's Massacre. He says, "when a disease has made such progress, that it cannot be cured by magnesia and calomel, to save life, resort must be had to arsenic. If Charles IX. had recoiled from the massacre of the Huguenots, he would certainly have perished, a few weeks after, upon the scaffold, as happened to the indulgent and compassionate Louis XVI., because he took an opposite course. He who in such a case has not the courage of a lion, and does not resolve on rigorous measures, is lost. The pusillanimous alone are ignorant of this truth." Such shocking sentiments, be it remembered, are published in a country, where there is a censorship of the press: and they are therefore the language of the government.
The duke reasons like a true legitimate. The happiness and lives of the people to any amount, are mere chaff compared with the happiness and life of that sainted bauble called a king. His reasoning amounts to this: "better that thousands of the common people should perish by the bloodiest butchery, than that the single life of one human being endowed with divine right to reign, should like Louis XVI. perish on the scaffold." It is not necessary to defend the shedding of royal blood, but there is a trick of kingcraft which ought to be exposed, because its influence is not unfelt in this country. The divine right to reign is first assumed, then the human being thus invested with power partakes of divinity, he becomes sacred, and all the names and paraphernalia of idolatrous worship surround him. He becomes a God, every word he utters, every step he takes, every action, however unimportant in any other human being, is invested in this earthly divinity with a sacred character. Does the god-king ride out, the whole country must know the important event; is he married, the whole nation keeps jubilee; is he dead, the world is clad in mourning. The misfortunes of his offspring are magnified and consecrated by all the arts of the imagination, by all the embellishments of romance. Is an illustration wanted? Take a recent case. Look at the history of the Duchess de Berri, an infamous woman, notoriously profligate, of a character that in common life would condemn her to the neglect of the world, and cast her out of all society. But she is a princess, she has a spark of royal divinity that shines upon her brazen front, and the duped multitude bow in adoration before her. Her sufferings, her wanderings, her dress in the minutest particulars, her words, her looks, are the subject of sympathetic appeals to the compassion of the world; ladies shed tears over the distresses of the unfortunate princess. Alas! alas! that royal blood should suffer! And are we not influenced by this mawkish, morbid sympathy for suffering despots? Where are our sympathies, when the interested statements of a government-controlled foreign press, inform us of the struggles of the people against age-consecrated oppression. Are they with the people? Do we ever suspect the truth of the glowing details of the doings of the scandalous mob, the high-wrought accounts of outrage and rebellion of a wicked rabble against lawful authority, which circulate through our land, the production abroad of pensioned writers; of a licensed press, and those too without remark or explanation from our press? What should be the feelings of a true American? Where should be his sympathies, who has been nurtured in the air of liberty, who has learned from his father's lips the black catalogue of despotic wrongs, which his ancestors suffered, and which were defended by all the tricks and glosses, and arts of oppression? If any human being should feel quick sympathy with the struggles of the people, should examine with the greatest care the charges preferred against them, and exercise a willing charity for their apparent or real excesses, and quick mistrust of all the doings, representations and fair speeches of despotism, it is an American.

Let me not be charged with accusing the Catholics of the United States with intolerance. They are too small a body as yet fully to act out their principles, and their present conduct does not affect the general question in any way, unless it may be to prove that they are not genuine and consistent Catholics. The conduct of a small insulated body, under the restraints of the society around it, is of no weight in deciding the character of the sect, while there are nations of the same infallible faith acting out its legitimate principles uncontrolled, and producing fruits by which all may discern, without danger of mistake, the true nature of the tree. If Popery is tolerant, let us see Italy, and Austria, and Spain, and Portugal, open their doors to the teachers of the Protestant faith; let these countries grant to Protestant missionaries, as freely as we grant to Catholics, leave to disseminate their doctrine through all classes in their dominions. Then may Popery speak of toleration, then may we believe that it has felt the influence of the spirit of the age and has reformed; but then it will not be Popery, for Popery never changes; it is infallibly the same, infallibly intolerant.

The conspirators against our liberties who have been admitted from abroad through the liberality of our institutions, are now organized in every part of the country; they are all subordinates, standing in regular steps of slave and master, from the most abject dolt that obeys the commands of his priest, up to the great master-slave Metternich, who commands and obeys his Illustrious Master the Emperor. Footnote: Popery is organized throughout the World. This organization is asserted in the late proclamation of the Pope to the Portuguese. In the catalogue of his complaints he says: "Nevertheless, that which principally afflicts us is, that those acts and measures have evidently for their aim to break every bond of union, with that venerable chair of the blessed Peter" (his own throne) "which Jesus Christ has made the centre of unity; and thus the society of communion being once broken, to wound the church by the most pernicious schism. In fact, how can there be unity in the body, when the members are not united to the head, and do not obey it?" They report from one to another, like the sub-officers of an army, up to the commander-in-chief at Vienna, (not the Pope, for he is but a subordinate of Austria. Footnote: Lest the charge often made in these numbers should seem gratuitous; of the Pope being the creature of Austria, and entirely subservient to the Imperial Cabinet, it may be as well to state that the writer was in Rome during the deliberations of the Conclave, respecting the election of the present Pontiff. It was interesting to him to hear the speculations of the Italians on the probability of this or that cardinal's election. Couriers were daily arriving from the various despotic powers, and intrigues were rife in the anti-chambers of the Quirinal palace; now it was said that Spain would carry her candidate, now Italy, and now Austria, and when Cardinal Capellani was proclaimed Pope, the universal cry, mixed too with low-muttered curses, was that Austria had succeeded. The new Pope had scarcely chosen his title of Gregory XVI. and passed through the ceremonies of coronation, before the revolution in his states, gave him the opportunity of calling in Austria to take possession of the Patrimony of St. Peter, which his own troops could not keep for an hour, and at this moment Austrian soldiers hold the Roman Legations in submission to the cabinet of Vienna. Is not the Pope a creature of Austria?) There is a similar organization among the Catholics of other countries, and the whole Catholic church is thus prepared to throw its weight of power and wealth into the hands of Austria, or any Holy Alliance of despots who may be persuaded to embark for the safety of their dynasties, in the crusade against the liberties of the country which, by its simple existence in opposition to their theory of legitimate power, is working revolution and destruction to their thrones.

Now, to this dangerous conspiracy what have we to oppose in the discipline of Protestant sects? However well organized, each according to its own manner, these different sects may be, there is not one of them that can by any possibility derive strength through its organization, from foreign sects of the same name. Nor is this a matter of regret; it is right that it should be so; no nation can be truly independent where it is otherwise. Foreign influence, then, cannot find its way into the country through any of the Protestant sects, to the danger of the State. In this respect Catholics stand alone. They are already the most powerful and dangerous sect in the country, for they are not confined in their schemes and means like the other sects, to our own borders, but they work with the minds and the funds of all despotic Europe.

And not only are each of the Protestant sects deprived of foreign aid; they are weak collectively, in having no common bond of union among them-selves, so far as political action is concerned. The mutual jealousies of the different sects have hitherto prevented this, and it is a weakness boasted of by Catholics, and of which advantage is and ever will be taken while the unnatural estrangement lasts. Catholics have boasted that they can play off one sect against another, for in the petty controversies that divide the contending parties, the pliable conscience of the Jesuit enables him to throw the weight of his influence on either side as his interest may be the command of his superiors, and the alleged good of the church, (that is the power of the priesthood,) being paramount to all other considerations.

This pliability of conscience, so advantageous in building up any system of oppression, religious or political, presents us with strangely contradictory alliances. In Europe Popery supports the most high-handed despotism, lends its thunders to awe the people into the most abject obedience, and maintains at the top of its creed, the indissoluble union of church and state! while in this country, where it is yet feeling its way, (oh! how consistent!) it has allied itself with the democracy of the land, it is loudest in its denunciations of tyranny, the tyranny of American patriots! it is first to scent out oppression, sees afar off the machinations of the native American Protestants to unite church and state! and puts itself forth the most zealous guardian of civil and religious liberty! With such sentinels, surely our liberties are safe, with such guardians of our rights, we may sleep on in peace!

Another weak point in our system is our laws encouraging immigration, and affording facilities to naturalization. Footnote: Immigration and our Naturalization Law. The subject of immigration is one of those which demands the immediate attention of the nation, it is a question which concerns all parties: and if the writer is not mistaken in his reading of the signs of the times, the country is waking to a sense of the alarming evil produced by our naturalization laws. Let us war among ourselves in party warfare, with every lawful weapon that we can convert to our purpose. It is our birthright to have our own opinion, and earnestly to contend for it, but let us court no foreign friends. Every Ame-rican should feel his national blood mount at the very thought of foreign interference. While we welcome the intelligent and persecuted of all nations and give them an asylum and a share in our privileges, let us beware lest we admit to dangerous fellowship those who cannot and will not use our hospitality aright. That such may come, and do come, there is no reason to doubt. Consider the following testimony of an emigrant, given before a justice in Albany. He says that "in June last, the parish officers paid the passages of himself and about forty others of the same parish, from Chatham to the city of Boston, in America, on board the ship Royalist, Capt. Parker, and that they landed in Boston in the month of July last-that the parish officers gave him thirty shillings sterling, in money, in addition to paying his passage,-that he is now entirely destitute of the means of living, and is unable to labor, and prays for relief."

Now here are forty paupers cast upon our shores from one parish in England, and in five years they become citizens, entitled to vote!! Is there an American of any party, who can believe that there is no danger in admitting to equal privileges with himself such a class of foreigners. A remedy to this crying evil admits of not a moment's delay. At this moment the ocean swarms with ships crowded with this wretched population, bearing them from misery abroad to misery here.

The expense incurred in this city (New York) for the support of foreign paupers, it is well known is enormous. In Philadelphia more than three fourths of the inmates of their Almshouse are foreigners. Whole families have been known to come from on board ship, and go directly to the Almshouse. In the Boston Dispensary there were the last year, (1831) from two districts only, 477 patients; of these 441 were foreigners!! Leaving but 36 of our own population to be provided for. In the Boston Almshouse, the following returns show the increase of foreign paupers in five years.

The year ending Sept. 30, 1829, Americans 395
" " " " " " Foreigners 284
The year ending Sept. 30, 1834, Americans 340
" " " " " " Foreigners 613

Thus we see that native pauperism has decreased in five years, and foreign pauperism more than doubled.

In Cambridge, (Mass.) more than four fifths of the paupers are foreigners.
The first and immediate step that should be taken, is to press upon Congress and upon the nation, instant attention to the NATURALIZATION LAWS. We mast first stop this leak in the ship, through which the muddy waters from without threaten to sink us. If we mean to keep our country, this life-boat of the world, from foundering with all the crew, we must take on board no more from the European wreck until we have safely landed and sheltered its present freight. But would you have us forfeit the character of the country as the asylum of the world? No: but it is a mistaken philanthropy indeed that would attempt to save one at the expense of the lives of thousands; that would receive into our families those dying of the plague. Our naturalization laws were never intended to convert this land into the almshouse of Europe, to cover the alarming importation of every thing in the shape of man that European tyranny thinks fit to send adrift from its shores, nor so to operate as to compel us to surrender back all the blessings of that freedom for which our fathers paid so dear a price into the keeping of its foreign enemies. No, we must have the law so amended that NO FOREIGNER WHO MAY COME INTO THE COUNTRY, AFTER THE PASSAGE OF THE NEW LAW, SHALL EVER BE ALLOWED TO EXERCISE THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE. This alone meets the evil in its fullest extent.

Who can complain of injustice in the enactment of such a law? Not the native American, he is not touched by it. Certainly not the foreigner now in the country, whether naturalized or not. It cannot operate against him. It would take away no right from a single individual in any country. This law would withhold a favor, not a right from foreigners, and from those foreigners only who may hereafter come into the country. If foreigners abroad choose to take offence at the law, we are not under obligations to consult their wishes, they need not come here. This favor, it should be understood, has repeatedly been abused, and it is necessary for the safety of our institutions in future to withhold it. The pressing dangers to the country from Popery, which I think I have shown not to be fictitious; other visible indications of foreign influence in the political horizon; the bold organization of foreigners as foreigners in our elections-these all demand the instant attention of Americans, if they mean not to be robbed by foreign intrigue of their liberty and their very name. In the early state of the country liberality in these points was thought to be of advantage, as it promoted the cultivation of our wild lands, but the dangers which now threaten our free institutions from this source more than balance all advantages of this character. The great body of emigrants to this country are the hard-working men-tally neglected poor of Catholic countries in Europe, who have left a land where they were enslaved, for one of freedom. However well disposed they may be to the country which protects them, and adopts them as citizens, they are not fitted to act with judgment in the political affairs of their new coun-try, like native citizens educated from their infancy in the principles and habits of our institutions. Most of them are too ignorant to act at all for themselves, and expect to be guided wholly by others. These others are of course their priests. Priests have ruled them at home by divine right; their ignorant minds cannot ordinarily be emancipated from their habitual subjection, they will not learn nor appreciate their exemption from any such usurpation of priestly power in this country, and they are implicitly at the beck of their spiritual guides. They live surrounded by freedom, yet liberty of conscience, right of private judgment, whether in religion or politics, are as effectually excluded by the priests, as if the code of Austria already ruled the land. They form a body of men whose habits of action, (for I cannot say thought,) are opposed to the principles of our free institutions, for they are not accessible to the reasonings of the press, they cannot and do not think for themselves.

Every unlettered Catholic emigrant, therefore, that comes into the country, is adding to a mass of ignorance which it will be difficult to reach by any liberal instruction, and however honest, (and I have no doubt most of them are so,) yet from the nature of things they are but obedient instruments in the hands of their more knowing leaders to accomplish the designs of their foreign masters. Republican education, were it allowed freely to come in contact with their minds, would doubtless soon furnish a remedy for an evil for which, in the existing state of things, we have no cure. It is but to continue for a few years the sort of immigration that is now daily pouring in its thousands from Europe, and our insti-tutions, for aught that I can see, are at the mercy of a body of foreigners, officered by foreigners, and held completely under the control of a foreign power. We may then have reason to say, that we are the dupes of our own hospitality; we have shel-tered in our well provided house a needy body of strangers, who, well filled with our cheer, are en-couraged by the unaccustomed familiarity with which they are treated, first to upset the regula-tions of the houshold, and then to turn their host and his family out of doors.

CHAPTER VI.

The evil from immigration further considered-Its political bearings-The influence of emigrants at the elections-This influence concentrated in the priests-The priests must be propitiated-By what means-This influence easily purchased by the demagogue-The unprincipled character of many of our politicians favor this foreign attack-Their bargain for the suffrages of this priest-led band-A church and state party-The Protestant sects obnoxious to no such bargaining-The newspaper press favors this foreign attack-From its want of independence and its timidity-An anti-republican fondness for titles favors this foreign attack-Cautious attempts of Popery to dignify its emissaries and to accustom us to their high-sounding titles-A mistaken notion on the subject of discussing religious opinion in the secular journals favors this foreign attack-Political designs not to be shielded from attack because cloaked by religion.

I WILL continue the consideration of some of the points in our political system, of which the foreign conspirators take advantage in their attacks on our liberties. We have seen that from the nature of the case the emigrant Catholics generally are shamefully illiterate, and without opinions of their own. They are and must be under the direction of their priests. The press, with its arguments for or against any political measure, can have no effect on minds taught only to think as the priest thinks, and to do what the priest commands. Here is a large body of ignorant men brought into our community, who are unapproachable by any of the ordinary means of enlightening the people-a body of men who servilely obey a set of priests imported from abroad, bound to the country by none of the usual ties, owing allegiance and service to a foreign gov-ernment, depending on that government for promo-tion and reward, and this reward too depends on the manner in which they discharge the duties pre-scribed to them by their foreign master; which is, doubtless for the present, to confine themselves sim-ply and wholly to increasing the number of their sect and the influence of the Pope in this country. It is men thus officered and of such a character, that we have placed in all respects on a level at our elections with the same number of native patriotic and intelligent citizens.

The Jesuits are fully aware of the advantage they derive from this circumstance. They know that a body of men admitted to citizenship, un-learned in the true nature of American liberty, ex-ercising the elective franchise, totally uninfluenced by the ordinary methods of reasoning, but passively obedient only to the commands of their priests, must give those priests great consequence in the eyes of the leaders of political parties; they know that these leaders must esteem it very important that the priests be propitiated. And how is a Catholic priest to be propitiated? How, but by stipulating for that which will increase his power or the power of the church, for be it always borne in mind, that they are identical. The Roman church is the body of priests and prelates; the laity have only to obey and to pay, not to exercise authority. The priest must be favored in his plans of destroying Protest-antism, and building up Popery. He must have money from the public treasury to endow Catholic institutions; he must be allowed to have charters for these institutions which will confer extraordinary powers upon their Jesuit trustees; Footnote: One College at the West under Austrian influence. The following fact illustrates the dangerous, successful intriguing spirit of the Jesuits, and the culpable negligence of one of our state legislatures (that of Kentucky) who has thus suffered itself to be the dupe of Popish artifice. "St. Joseph's College, at Bardstown, Kentucky, was incorporated by the State Legislature in 1824. The Bishop of Bardstown is Moderator, and five Priests are Trustees. And there is this provision in the charter: "The said trustees shall hold their station in said college one year only, at which time the said moderator shall have the power of electing others, or the same, if he should think proper, and increase the number to twelve, and this power may be exercised by him every year thereafter, or his successor or successors to the Bishopric; and in case of the removal, resignation or death of either of the said trustees, his place may be supplied by an appointment that may be made by the said Bishop, or his successor or successors, who may also become moderators in the institution, and act and do as the said B. J. Flaget is empowered by this act to do."

The Bishop of Bardstown, in a letter to a friend in Europe, dated February, 1825, says:-"Our Legislature has just incorporated the college. The Bishops of Bardstown are continued perpetually its moderators or rectors. I might have dictated conditions, which I could not have made more advantageous or honorable; and what is still more flattering is, that these privileges were granted almost without any discussion, and with unanimity in both houses."

Now the Pope it is well known appoints all Bishops. Here then is one college in the country already placed in perpetuo under the exclusive control of the Pope, and consequently for an indefinite period under that of Austria!! he must be per-mitted quietly to break down the Protestant Sabbath, by encouraging Catholics to buy and sell on that day as on other days; in one word, he must have all the powers and privileges which the law or the offi-cers appointed to administer the law can conveniently bestow upon him. The demagogue or the party who will promise to do most for the accom-plishment of these objects, will secure all the votes which he controls. Surely there is great danger to our present institutions from this source, and men as skilful as are the Jesuits we may be sure will not fail to use the power thus thrown into their hands to work great mischief to the republic.

The recklessness and unprincipled character of too many of our politicians give a great advantage to these conspirators. There is a set of men in the country who will have power and office, cost what they may; men who, without a particle of true patriotism, will yet ring the changes on the glory and honor of their country, talk loud of liberty, flatter the lowest prejudices, and fawn upon the powerful and the influential; men who study politics only, that they may balance the chances of their own success in falling in with, or opposing, this or that fluctua-ting interest, without caring whether that interest tends to the security or the downfall of their coun-try's institutions. To such politicians a body of men thus drilled by priests, presents a well fitted tool. The bargain with the priest will be easily struck. "Give me office, and I will take care of the interests of your church."

The effect of the bargain upon the great moral or political interests of the country, will not for a moment influence the calculation. Thus we have among us a body of men, a religious sect, who can exercise a direct controlling influence in the politics of the country, and can be moved to-gether in a solid phalanx; we have a church inter-fering directly and most powerfully in the affairs of state. There is not in the whole country a paral-lel to this among the other sects. What clergymen of the Methodists, or Baptists, or Episcopalians, or of any other denomination, could command the votes of the members of their several congregations in the election of an individual to political office? The very idea of such power is preposterous to a Protestant. No freeman, no man accustomed to judge for himself, would submit even to be advised, unasked, by his minister in a matter of this kind, much less dictated to.

Connected with these evils, and assisting to in-crease them, we have a Press, to an alarming ex-tent, wanting in independence. Most of our jour-nals are avowedly attached to a particular party, or to particular individuals, they are like council re-tained for a particular cause; they are to say every thing that makes in favor of their client, and conceal every thing that makes against him. Does a ques-tion of principle arise, of fundamental importance to the country?-the inquiry with a journal thus pledged is not, how are our free institutions, how is the coun-try affected by the decision, but how will the decision affect the interests of our particular party or favorite? How few are there among our newspaper editors who dare to take a manly stand for or against a principle that affects vitally the constitution, if it is found to bear unfavorably upon their party or their candidate? A press thus wanting in magnanimity and independence is the fit instrument for advancing the purposes of unprincipled men; and editors of this stamp, and they are confined to no particular party, whether they have followed out their conduct or not to its legitimate results can easily be made the tools of a despot to subvert the liberties of their country.

Again we have, still unsubdued, some weaknesses: (perhaps they belong to human nature,) of which advantage may be taken, to the injury of our republi-can character, and in aid of despotism, and which may seem to some too trivial to merit notice in con-nection with the more serious matters just considered. One of these weaknesses is an anti-repub-lican fondness for titles; Footnote: Glory-giving Titles. One of the plainest doctrines of American Republicanism, which is essentially democratic, is, that mere glory-giving titles, or titles of servility, are entirely opposed to its whole spirit. They are considered as one of those artificial means of kingcraft by which it fosters that aristocratic, unholy pride in the human heart, which loves to domineer over its fellow-man, which loves artificial distinction of ranks, a privileged class, and of course which helps to sustain that whole system of regal and papal usurpation which has so long cursed mankind. If such titles are to some extent still acknowledged in this country, they have either been thoughtlessly but unwisely used as mere epithets of courtesy, or they are the remains of old deep-rooted foreign habits, which, in spite of the uncongenial soil to which they have been transplanted, still maintain a sort of withered existence. It now, however, becomes a serious inquiry, whether this practice, hitherto seemingly unimportant, may not be attended with danger to the institutions of the country. For Popery, it appears, is already taking advantage of this, as of all other weaknesses in our habits and customs, to introduce its anti-democratic system, and this too while it manifests in words great zeal in defence of democratic liberty. Let the democracy look well to this.

Is it asked, to what extent should titles or names of distinction be abolished throughout the land, the answer is plain. Every title that merely designates an office, is perfectly in accordance with our institutions, such as President, Secretary, Senator, General, Commodore, &c. So are letters after a name which designate the office or membership in a society, but titles of reverence, titles which imply moral qualities, such as Your Excellency, Your Honor, The Reverend, Rt. Reverend, Honorable, &c.; and letters which imply moral or intellectual superiority, I think it must be conceded are now not only useless but dangerous. There needs no law to abolish these gewgaw appendages to a name; they must be left to the good sense of the individual who uses them, to discontinue them; and fortunately they generally belong to intellectual men, who have minds capable of discerning the remote evils to which the practice leads, and patriotism enough to make a greater sacrifice than this occasion calls for to avert dangers which threaten their country.
Will it be said that this is a little matter. Nothing is of little consequence that may endanger, however remotely, the civil liberty of the country. Nay more, no practice is unworthy of reform, which continued may aid by its example in the surrender of Religious liberty into the hands of Popery. and whoever has lived in the old world, and knows the extraordinary and powerful influence which mere titles of honor exercise over the minds of men, and their tendency to keep in due subjection the artificial ranks into which despotic and aristocratic power divide the people, subduing the lower orders to their lords and masters, will not think it amiss in this place to draw attention to the subject. Republicans as we are, I fear we are influenced, in a greater degree than we are aware, by the high sounding epithets with which despotism and aristocracy surround their officers, to awe into reverence the ignorant multitude. A name having half a dozen titles for its avant couriers, and as many for its rear guard, swells into an importance, even in the estimation of our citizens, which the name alone, and especially the individual himself, could never assume. Let Mr. Brown, or Mr. Smith, or any other intelligent, upright, active citizen, be elected president of a benevolent society, does he excite the gaze of those who meet him, or inspire awe in the multitude? No one regards him but as a respectable, useful member of the community. But let us learn that a gentleman, not half as intelligent, or upright, or active, is to land in our city who is announced as the "Most Illustrious Archduke and Eminence his Imperial Highness the Cardinal and Archbishop of Olmutz, RODOLPH, (this last is the gentleman's real name) Highest Curator of the Leopold Foundation," and although not half as capable in any respect as Mr. Brown, or Mr. Smith, or ten thousand other honest, untitled citizens among us, I very much fear that the Battery would be thronged, and the windows in Broadway would be in demand, and the streets filled with a gaping crowd to see a man who could have such a mighty retinue of glittering epithets about him. Yet this title-blazoned gentleman holds the same office as Mr. Brown or Mr. Smith. Poor human nature! Alas, for its weakness? Footnote: There is reason to believe we are reforming in this particular, for we have now titled foreigners, respectable men, travellers in the country, and our press no longer lends itself to announce their unimportant presence or movements.

Who is not struck with the difference of effect upon the imagination, when we describe a person thus : "Mr. ----, a good-hearted old gentleman, rather weak in the head, who finds in the manufacture of sealing-wax one of the chief and most agreeable employments of his time," and when we should describe a man thus: "His Imperial Majesty FRANCIS I., Emperor of Austria, King of Jerusalem, Hungary, Bohemia, of Lombardy and Venice, Dalmatia, Croatia, Sclavonia, Galizia, and Lodomiria, Archduke of Austria, Duke of Lorena, Salsburg, Styria, Carinthia, and Carniola, Grand Prince of Transylvania, Margrave of Moravia, Count Prince of Hapsburg, and Tyrol," &c. &c.-and yet these two descriptions belong to one and the same individual.

There used to be a sound democratic feeling in the country, which spurned such glosses of character and frowned out of use mere glory-giving title. Austria, however, is gradually (as fast as it is thought safe) introducing these titled gentlemen into the country. Bishop Fenwick, a Catholic priest, is "his Grace of Cincinnati," Mr. Vicar-General Rese, another priest, is only "his Reverence," and Bishop Flaget, and all the other Bishops, are simple Monseigneurs, this title in a foreign language being less harsh at present to republican ears than its plump, aristocratic English translation, "My Lord Bishop of New-York," "My Lord Bishop of Boston," "My Lord Bishop of Charleston," &c. &c. &c. As we improve, however, under Catholic instruction, we may come to be quite reconciled even to his Eminence Cardinal, so and so, and to all the other graduated fooleries, which are so well adapted to dazzle the ignorant. The scarlet carriage of a Cardinal, too, bedizzened with gold, and containing the sacred person of some Jesuit, all scarlet and humility, as is at this day often seen in Rome, may yet excite our admiration as it rolls through our streets, and even a Pope, (for in these republican times in Italy, who knows but his Holiness may have leave of absence,) yes, even a Pope, a Vicegerent of God, the great divinely appointed appointer of Rulers, the very centre from which all titles emanate, may possibly in his scarlet and gold and jewel-decked equipage, astonish our eyes, and prostrate us on our knees as he moves down Broadway. To be sure some of his republican friends, now in strange holy alliance with his faithful subjects here, might find their Protestant knees at first a little stiff, yet the Catholic schools which they are encouraging with their votes and their money and their influence, will soon furnish them good instructors in the art of reverential gesture, and genuflexion.

Again, there are some minds of a peculiarly sensitive cast, that cannot bear to have the subject of religious opinion mooted in any way in the secular journals. They use a plausible argument that satisfies them, namely, that religion is too sacred a subject to be discussed by the daily press. I agree to a certain extent, and in a modified sense, with this sentiment, but it should be remembered that all is not religion which passes under that name. The public safety makes it necessary sometimes to strip off the disguise, and show the true character of a design which may have assumed the sacred cloak, the better to pass unchallenged by just such feeble hearted objectors. Were such objections valid, how easy would it be for the most dangerous political designs, (as in the case we are considering,) to assume a religious garb, and so escape detection. The exposure I am now making of the foreign designs upon our liberties, may possibly be mistaken for an attack on the Religion of the Catholics, yet I have not meddled with the conscience of any Catholic; if he honestly believes the doctrine of Transubstantiation, or that by doing penance he will prepare himself for heaven, or in the existence of Purgatory, or in the efficacy of the prayers and masses of priests, to free the souls of his relatives from its flames, or that it is right to worship the Virgin Mary, or to pray to Saints or keep holy days, or to refrain from meat at certain times, or to go on pilgrimages, or in the virtue of relics, or that none but Catholics can be saved, or many other points; however wrong I may and do think him to be, it is foreign from the design of these chapters, to speak against them. But when he proclaims to the world that all power temporal as well as spiritual exists in the Pope, (denying of course the fundamental doctrine of republicanism;) that liberty of conscience is a "raving," and "most pestilential error," that "he execrates and detests the liberty of the press;" when his intolerant creed asserts that no faith is to be kept with heretics, (all being heretics in the creed of a Catholic who are not Catholics,) and many other palpable anti-republican as well as immoral doctrines, he has then blended with his creed political tenets that vitally affect the very existence of our government, and no association with religious belief shall shield them from observation and rebuke. It would indeed be singular if these mere "ravings" (the Pope's phrase is appropriate here,) subversive of the fundamental principles of our government, should be shielded from exposure because misnamed religion. If incendia-ries or robbers should ensconce themselves within a church, from the windows and towers of which they were assailing the people, the cry of sacrilege shall not prevent us from attempts to dislodge them, though the walls which protect them should suffer in the conflict.

CHAPTER VII.

The political character of this ostensibly religious enterprise proved from the letters of the Jesuits now in this country-Their antipathy to private judgment-Their anticipations of a change of our form of government-Our government declared too free for the exercise of their divine rights-Their political partialities-Their cold acknowledgment of the generosity, and liberality, and hospitality of our government-Their estimate of our condition contrasted with their estimate of that of Austria-Their acknowledged allegiance and servility to a foreign master-Their sympathies with the oppressor, and not with the oppressed-Their direct avowal of political intention.

LET me next show the political character of this ostensibly religious effort, from the sentiments of the Austrian emissaries expressed to their foreign patrons. The very nature of a conspiracy of this kind precludes the possibility of much direct evidence of political design; for Jesuit cunning and Austrian duplicity would be sure to tread with unusual caution on American ground. Yet if I can quote from their correspondence some expressions of antipathy to our free principles, and to the government; some hinting at the subversion of the government; prevailing partialities for arbitrary government; and siding with tyranny against the oppressed; and some acknowledgments of POLITICAL EFFECTS to be expected from the operations of the society, I shall have exhibited evidence enough to put every citizen who values his birthright, upon the strict watch of these men and their adherents, and to show the importance of some measures of repelling this insidious invasion of the country.

The Bishop of Baltimore writing to the Austrian Society, laments the wretched state of the Catholic religion in Virginia, and as a proof of the difficulty it has to contend with, (a proof doubtless shocking to the pious docility of his Austrian readers,) he says:

"I sent to Richmond a zealous missionary, a native of America. He travelled through the whole of Virginia. The Protestants flocked on all sides to hear him, they offered him their churches, courthouses, and other public buildings, to preach in, which however is not at all surprising, for the people are divided into numerous sects, and know not what faith to embrace. In consequence of being spoiled by bad instruction, they will judge every thing themselves; they, therefore, hear eagerly every new comer," &c.

The Bishop, if he had the power, would of course change this "bad instruction" for better, and, as in Catholic countries, would relieve them from the trouble of judging for themselves. Thus the liberty of private judgment and freedom of opinion, guaranteed by our institutions, are avowedly an obstacle to the success of the Catholics. Is it not natural that Catholics should desire to remove this obstacle out of their way? Footnote: A Catholic journal of this city, (the Register and Diary,) was put into my hands as I has completed this last paragraph. It contains the same sentiment, so illustrative of the natural abhorrence of Catholics to the exercise of private judgment, that I cannot forbear quoting it.

"We seriously advise Catholic parents to be very cautious in the choice of school-books for their children. There is more danger to be apprehended in this quarter, than could be conceived. Parents, we are aware, have not always the time or patience to examine these matters: but if they trust implicitly to us, we shall with God's help, do it for them. Legimus ne legantur." We read, that they may not read!!

How kind! they will save parents all the trouble of judging for themselves, but "we must be trusted implicitly" Would a Protestant journal thus dare to take liberties with its readers?

My Lord Bishop Flaget, of Bardstown, Kentucky, in a. letter to his patrons abroad, has this plain hint at an ulterior political design, and that no less that the entire subversion of our republican government. Speaking of the difficulties and discouragements the Catholic missionaries have to contend with in converting the Indians, the last difficulty in the way he says, is "their continual traffic among the whites, WHICH CANNOT BE HINDERED AS LONG AS THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT SHALL SUBSIST!" What is this but saying, that a republican government is unfavorable in its nature to the restrictions we deem necessary to the extension of the Catholic religion; when the time shall come that the present government shall be subverted, which we are looking forward to, or hope for, we can then hinder this traffic?

Mr. Baraga, the German missionary in Michigan, seems impressed with the same conviction of the unhappy influence of a free government upon his attempts to make converts to the church of Rome. In giving an account of the refusal of some persons to have their children baptized, he lays the fault on this, "TOO FREE (allzu freien) GOVERNMENT." In a more despotic government, in Italy or Austria, he would have been able to put in force compulsory baptism on these children. Footnote: Compulsory Baptism. Perhaps Father Baraga was thinking of the facilities afforded in Spain in the time of Ximenes for administering baptism, when "Fifty thousand (50,000,) Moors under terror of death and torture received the grace of baptism, and more than an equal number of the refractory were condemned, of whom 2,536 were burnt alive." May our government long be "too free" for the enacting of such barbarity.

These few extracts are quite sufficient to show how our form of government, which gives to the Catholics all the freedom and facilities that other sects enjoy, does from its very nature embarrass their despotic plans. Accustomed to dictate at home, how annoying it is to these Austrian ecclesiastics to be obliged to put off their authority, to yield their divine right of judging for others, to be compelled to get at men through their reason and conscience, instead of the more summary way of compulsion! The disposition to use force if they could, shows itself in spite of all their caution. The inclination is there. It is reined in by circumstances. They want only strength to act out the inherent despotism of Popery.

But let me show what are some of the political partialities which these foreign emissaries discover in their letters and statements to their Austrian supporters. They acknowledge their unsuspicious reception by the people of the United States; they acknowledge that Protestants in all parts of the country have even aided them with money to build their chapels and colleges and nunneries, and treated them with liberality and hospitality, and-strange infatuation!!-have been so monstrously foolish as to intrust their children to them to be educated! so infatuated as to confide in their honor and in their promises that they would use no attempts to proselyte them! And with all this, does it not once occur to these gentleman, that this liberality, and generosity and openness of character are the fruits of Protestant republicanism? Might we not expect at least that Popery, were it republican in its nature, would find something in all this that would excite admiration, and call forth some praise of a system so contrasted to that of any other government; some acknowledgments to the government of the country that protects it, and allows its emissaries the unparalleled liberty even to plot the downfall of the state? But no, the government of the United States is not once mentioned in praise. The very principle of the government, through which they are tolerated, is thus slightingly noticed: "The government of the United States has thought fit to adopt a complete indifference toward all religions." Footnote: Quart. Regist. Feb. 1830, p. 198. They can recognize no nobler principle than indifference.

Again, of the people of our country they thus write: "We intreat all European Christians to unite in prayer to God for the conversion of these unhappy heathen, and obstinate heretics." We are spoken of as a country "on which the light of faith has hitherto not shined." "A vast country, destitute of all spiritual and temporal resources." But if Austria is mentioned, what are the terms? "Your Society, (the Leopold Foundation) which is an ornament to the illustrious Austrian Empire,"-"the noble and generous inhabitants of the Austrian empire." " Of many circumstances in our condition, few perhaps in your happy empire can form a correct notion;" and again, "Here are many churches, if you may so call the miserable wooden buildings, differing little from the barns of your happy land!" Austria, happy land!! How enthusiastic, too, is another Bishop, who writes, "we cannot sufficiently praise our good Emperor (of Austria,) were we to extol him to the third heaven!" Such are the political partialities which are discovered in various parts of these documents. Are they in favor of our republican darkness, and heathenism, and misery, or of Austrian light, and piety and happiness?

In the struggles of the European people for their liberty, do these foreign teachers sympathize with the oppressor or with the oppressed? "France no more helps us," (Charles X. had just been dethroned,) "and Rome, beset by enemies to the church and public order, is not in a condition to help us." And who are these men stigmatized as enemies of public order? They are the Italian patriots of the Revolution of 1831, than whom our own country in the perils of its own Revolution did not produce men more courageous, more firm, more wise, more tolerant, more patriotic; men who had freed their country from the bonds of despotism in a struggle almost bloodless, for the people were with them; men who, in the spirit of American patriots, were organizing a free government; rectifying the abuses of Papal misrule, and who, in the few weeks of their power, had accomplished years of benefit. These are the men afterwards dragged to death, or to prison by -Austrian intruders, and styled by our Jesuits, enemies of public order! Austria herself uses the self-same terms to stigmatize those who resist oppression.
I will notice one extract more, to which I would call the special attention of my readers. It is from one of the reports of the society in Lyons, which society had the principal management of American missions under Charles X. When this bigoted monarch was dethroned, and liberal principles reigned in France, the society so languished that Austria took the design more completely into her own hands, and through the Leopold Foundation she has the enterprise now under her more immediate guardianship.

"Our beloved king (Charles X.) has given the society his protection, and has enrolled his name as a subscriber. Our society has also made rapid progress in the neighboring states of Piedmont and Savoy. The pious rulers of those lands, and the chief ecclesiastics, have given it a friendly reception."

Charles X., be it noticed, and the despotic rulers of Piedmont and Savoy, took a special interest in this American enterprise. The report goes on to say-
"Who can doubt that an institution which has a purely spiritual aim whose only object is the conversion of souls, desires nothing less than to make whole nations, on whom the light of faith has hitherto not shined, partakers of the knowledge of the gospel; an institution solemnly sanctioned by the supreme head of the church: which, as we have already remarked, enjoys the protection of our pious monarch, the support of archbishops and bishops; an institution established in a city under the inspection of officers, at whose head stands the great almoner, and which numbers among its members, men alike honorable for their rank in church and state; an institution of which his excellency the minister of church affairs, lately said, in his place in the Chamber of Deputies, that, independent of its purely spiritual design, IT WAS OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST."

Observe that great pains are here taken to impress upon the public mind the purely spiritual aim, the purely spiritual design of the society, and yet one of the French ministers, in the Chamber of Deputies, states directly that it has another design, and that it was of "GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST."-He gives some of these political objects-"because it planted the French name in distant countries, caused it, by the mild influence of our missionaries, to be loved and honored, and thus opened to our trade and industry useful channels," &c. Now if some political effects are already avowed as intended to be produced by this society, and that too, immediately after reiterating its purely spiritual design, why may not that particular political effect be also intended, of far more importance to the interests of despotism, namely, the subversion of our Republican institutions?

CHAPTER VIII.

Some of the means by which Jesuits can already operate politically in the country-By mob discipline-By priest police-Their great danger-Already established-Proofs--Priests already rule the mob-Nothing in the principles of Popery to prevent its interference in our elections-Popery interferes at the present day in the politics of other countries-

Popery the same in our country-It interferes in our elections-In Michigan-In Charleston, S. C.-In New-York-Popery a political despotism cloaked under the name of Religion-It is Church and State embodied-Its character at head-quarters in Italy-Its political character stripped of its religious cloak.

BUT some of my readers, notwithstanding they may be convinced that it is for the interest of despotism to subvert our institutions, and are even persuaded that this grand enterprise has been actually undertaken, may be inclined to ask in what manner can the despots of Europe effect, by means of Popish emissaries, any thing in this country to counteract the influence of our liberal institutions? In what way can they operate here?

With the necessity existing of doing something from the instinct of self-preservation, to check the influence of our free institutions on Europe, with the funds provided, and agents on the spot interested in their plans, one would think it needed but little sagacity to find modes and opportunities of operating, especially too, when such vulnerable points as I have exposed, (and there are many more which I have not brought forward,) invite attack.

To any such inquirers, let me say, there are many ways in which a body organized as are the Catholics, and moving in concert, might disturb (to use the mildest term) the good order of the republic, and thus compel us to present to observing Europe the spectacle of republican anarchy. Who is not aware that a great portion of that stuff which composes a mob, ripe for riot or excess of any kind, and of which we have every week or two, a fresh example in some part of the country, is a Catholic population; Footnote: Priests control the Mob. If farther proof were wanting of the fact of the supreme influence of the Catholic priests over the mob, it is opportunely furnished in the testimony on the trial of the rioters at Charlestown, (Mass.). Mr. Edward Cutter testified that the Lady Superior, in an interview previous to the burning of the convent, thus threatened him; she said "the bishop had 20,000 of the vilest (or boldest) Irishmen under his control, who would tear down the houses of Mr. Cutter and others; and that the selectmen of Charlestown might read the riot act till they were hoarse, and it would be of no use."

But if any doubt is thrown over Mr. Cutter's testimony because he is a Protestant, hear what the Lady Superior herself testifies; "I told him," she says, that "the Right Reverend Bishop's influence over ten thousand brave Irishmen might lead to the destruction of his property, and that of others."

Here we have the startling fact, acknowledged in a court of justice by the Superior of the convent, that the Bishop has such influence over a mob of foreigners, that he can use them for vengeance or restrain them at pleasure. The question that occurs is, How much stronger is it necessary for this foreign corps to become, before it may prudently act offensively against our noxious Protestant institutions? The fact is established by Catholic testimony, that the Popish population is not an un-organized mob, but is moved by priestly leaders, Jesuit foreigners in the pay of Austria. They are ready to keep quiet or to strike as circumstances may render expedient. But exclusive of other proof, another most important fact is rendered certain by this singular confession of the Lady Superior, and that is Roman Catholic interference in our elections. Jesuits are not in the habit of slighting their advantages, and the Bishop who can control ten or twenty thousand, or five hundred thousand men, as the case may be, for the purpose of destruction and riot, can certainly control the votes of these obedient instruments! Will not American freemen wake to the apprehension of a truth like this? and what makes it turbulent? Ignorance, an ignorance which it is for the interest of its leaders not to enlighten; for enlighten a man and he will think for himself, and have some self-respect; he will understand the laws and know his interest in obeying them. Keep him in ignorance, and he is the slave of the man who will flatter his passions and appetites, or awe him by superstitious fears. Against the outbreakings of such men, society, as it is constituted on our free system, can protect itself only in one of two ways: it must either bring these men under the influence and control of a sound republican and religious education, or it must call in the aid of the priests who govern them, and who may permit, and direct, or restrain their turbulence, in accordance with what they may judge at any particular time to be the interest of the church. Yes, be it well remarked, the same hands that can, whenever it suits their interest, restrain, can also, at the proper time, "let slip the dogs of war." In this mode of restraint by a police of priests, by substituting the ecclesiastical for the civil power, the priest-led mobs of Portugal and Spain, and South America, are instructive examples. And start not, American reader, this kind of police is already established in our country! We have had mobs again and again, which neither the civil nor military power have availed any thing to quell, until the magic 'peace, be still' of the Catholic priest has hushed the winds, and calmed the waves of popular tumult. Footnote: At the time this was written, riots in this country were almost entirely confined to the emigrants from foreign countries employed as laborers on our rail-roads, canals, &c. While I write, what mean the negociations, between two Irish bands of emigrants, in hostile array against each other, shedding each other's blood upon our soil, settling with the bayonet miserable foreign feuds which they have brought over the waters with them? Why have not the civil and military power been able to restore order among them, and obedience to our laws, without calling in the priests to negociate and settle the terms on which they will cease from violating our laws? Footnote: As our readers have probably forgotten the particulars of the affair here alluded to, we subjoin from the Journal of Commerce, a copy of the agreement subscribed by the leaders of the riot. The civil and military authorities of Maryland had tried repeatedly, but in vain, to quell the riot.-Ed. Obs.

From the Journal of Commerce.

THE RIOTERS.-It appears by the following notice, that the rioters on the Baltimore and Washington Rail-road have concluded a treaty of peace, through the intervention of a priest. There was considerable talk during the late riots in this city, of calling in the agency of the priests, to put an end to the disturbance. No doubt it would have been effectual.

AGREEMENT.

On the 24th of June, 1834, the subscribers, in the presence of the Rev. John McElroy, have respectively and mutually agreed to bury forever, on their own part, and on behalf of their respective sections of country, all remembrance of feuds and animosities, as well as injuries sustained. They also promise to each other, and make a sincere tender of their intention to preserve peace, harmony, and good feeling between persons of every part of their native country without distinction.

They further mutually agree to exclude from their houses and premises all disorderly persons of every kind, and particularly habitual drunkards. They are also resolved, and do intend to apply in all cases where it is necessary, to the civil authorities, or to the laws of the country for redress-and finally they are determined to use their utmost endeavors to enforce, by word and example, these, their joint and unanimous resolutions.

Signed by fourteen of the men employed on the 4th, 5th, and 8th sections of the 2d division, B. and W. R. R. } on behalf of all employed.
And also by thirteen of the 8th section of the 1st division. } on behalf of all employed.

Have the priests become necessary in our political system? Have the emissaries of a foreign despotic power stolen this march upon us? Can they tell their foreign masters, "we already rule the mob?" Yes, and facts will bear them out in their boasting. Footnote: See previous footnote "Priests control the Mob."

And what now prevents the interference of Catholics as a sect directly in the political elections of the country? They are organized under their priests: Is there any thing in their religious principles to restrain them? Do not Catholics of the present day use the bonds of religious union to effect political objects in other countries? Did not the Pope interfere in Poland in the late revolution, and through the priests command submission to the tyranny of the Czar? At the moment I am writing, are not monks and priests leaders in the field of battle in Spain; in Portugal? Is not the Pope encouraging the troops of Don Miguel, and exciting priests and people to arms in a civil contest? Has Popery abandoned its ever busy meddling in the politics of the countries where it obtains foothold? Footnote: Political interference of Popery. The kind of interference in the political affairs, of other countries by the Sovereign of Rome, may be learned from the following extracts from the Pope's Proclamation against Don Pedro in which he thus speaks of Portugal.-He laments the defection of "That kingdom, cited, until now, as a model of devotion and of fidelity to the Catholic faith, to the Holy See, and to the Roman pontiffs, our predecessors; a kingdom which, as is meet, has already felt it an honor to obey its Sovereigns, distinguished by the title of Most faithful Kings. We confess that we could not at first believe what report and public rumor related upon enterprises so audacious, but the unexpected return to Italy of him who represented us in the said kingdom as Apostolic Nuncio, and the most positive testimony of many persons, soon convinced us that what had been previously announced to us was but too true.

"It is then as certain as it is greatly to be deplored, that the above-mentioned Government has unjustly driven away him who represented our person and the Holy See, commanding him to quit the kingdom without delay. But after so gross an insult offered to the Holy See, and to us, the audacity of these perverse men bas been carried still further against the Catholic Church, against ecclesiastical property, against the inviolable rights of the Holy See. Considering that all these measures have been exercised, almost at the accession of a new Power, and in consequence of a conspiracy prepared beforehand, our mind is filled with horror, and we cannot refrain from tears. All the public prisons have been opened, and, after having let those who were detained there go forth, they have thrown into them, in their place, some of those of whom it is written, Touch not my Anointed. Laymen have rashly arrogated to themselves a power over sacred things; they have proclaimed a general reform of the secular clergy, and of religious orders of both sexes."

After enumerating various acts of rigor of the new government against those priests, monks and other ecclesiastics, who had taken an active part in the civil war, the Pope continues:-"For this reason, venerable brethren, we expressly proclaim that we absolutely reprobate all the decrees issued by the aforesaid government of Lisbon, to the great detriment of the Church, of its holy ministers, of the ecclesiastical law, and Holy See prerogatives; we, therefore, declare them to be null and of no effect, and express our most serious complaints against the audacious measures we have referred to; we declare that in exercising the duties of our office, and with God's help, we will oppose ourselves as a wall for the House of Israel, and show ourselves in the combat at the day of the Lord, as the interests of religion and the gravity of circumstances may require."

He hopes this low rumbling of the thunders of the Vatican will prevent his "having recourse to those spiritual arms with which God has invested his apostolic ministry," namely anathemas, curses of excommunication, &c. And these are not the records of doings of the dark ages, but are fresh from the papal throne, the acts of 1833.

Will it be said, that however officious in the old countries, yet here, by some strange metamorphosis, Popery has changed its character, and is modified by our institutions; that here it is surely religious, seeking only the religious welfare of the people, that it does not meddle with the state? Footnote: If any suppose that Popery meddles not with civil matters in this country, let them peruse the following extract of a letter from one of their missionaries.

"Mr. Baraga to the Central Direction of the Leopold Foundation, dated L'ARBRE CROCHE, October 10th, 1832.

" * * On the 5th of August, after partaking the sacrament of confirmation, the bishop called all the chiefs and head men of the mission, and made known to them some civil laws, which he had made for the Ottowas. The Indians received these laws with much pleasure, and promised solemnly to obey them. The missionary and four chiefs are the administrators of these laws.

"FREDERICK BARAGA, Missionary."

Here is a specimen of the disposition of Popery to meddle in civil matters in this country where it has the power; the Bishop is the propounder, and the Missionary one of the administrators of the civil laws. It is not true that Popery meddles not with the politics of the country. The cloven foot has already shown itself. Popery is organized at the elections! For example: In Michigan the Bishop Richard, a Jesuit (since deceased,) was several times chosen delegate to Congress from the Territory, the majority of the people being Catholics. As Protestants became more numerous, the contest between the bishop and his Protestant rival was more and more close, until at length by the increase of Protestant immigration the latter triumphed. The bishop, in order to detect any delinquency in his flock at the polls, had his ticket printed on colored paper; whether any were so mutinous as not to vote according to orders, or what penance was inflicted for disobedience, I did not learn. The fact of such a truly Jesuitical mode of espionage I have from a gentleman resident at that time in Detroit. Is not a fact like this of some importance? Does it not show that Popery, with all its speciousness, is the same here as elsewhere; it manifests, when it has the opportunity, its genuine disposition to use spiritual power for the promotion of its temporal ambition. It uses its ecclesiastical wea-pons to control an election.

In Charleston, S. C., the Roman Catholic Bishop England is said to have boasted of the number of votes that he could control at an election. I have been informed, on authority which cannot be doubted that in New-York, a priest, in a late election for city officers, stopped his congregation after mass on Sunday and urged the electors not to vote for a particular candidate, on the ground of his being an anti-Catholic; the result was the election of the Catholic candidate.

It is unnecessary to multiply facts of this nature nor will it be objected that these instances are unworthy of notice, because of their local or circumscribed character. Surely American Protestants, freemen, have discernment enough to discover beneath them the cloven foot of this subtle foreign heresy, and will not wait for a more extensive, disastrous, and overwhelming political interference, ere they assume the attitude of watchfulness and defence. They will see that Popery is now, what it has ever been, a system of the darkest political intrigue and despotism, cloaking itself to avoid attack under the sacred name of religion. They will be deeply impressed with the truth, that Popery is a political as well as a religious system; that in this respect it differs totally from all other sects, from all other forms of religion in the country? Popery embodies in itself THE CLOSEST UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE. Observe it at the fountain head. In the Roman States the civil and ecclesiastical offices are blended together in the same individual. The Pope is the King. A Cardinal is Secretary of State. The Consistory of Cardinals is the Cabinet Council, the Ministry, and they are Viceroys in the provinces. The Archbishops are Ambassadors to foreign courts. The Bishops are Judges and Magistrates, and the road to preferment to most if not all the great offices of State is through the priesthood. In Rome and the patrimony of St. Peter the temporal and spiritual powers are so closely united in the same individual, that no attack can be made on any temporal misrule, without drawing down upon the assailants the vengeance of the spiritual power exercised by the same individual. Is the Judge corrupt or oppressive; and do the people rise against him, the Judge retires into the Bishop, and in his sacred retreat cries "Touch not the Lord's anointed."

Can we not discern the political character of Popery? Shall the name of Religion, artfully connected with it, still blind our eyes? Let us suppose a body of men to combine together, and claim as their right, that all public and private property, of whatever kind, is held at their disposal; that they alone are to judge of their own right to dispose of it; that they alone are authorized to think or speak on the subject; that they who speak or write in opposition to them are traitors, and must be put to death; that all temporal power is secondary to theirs and amenable to their superior and infallible judgment; and the better to hide the presumption of these tyrannical claims, suppose that these men should pretend to divine right and call their system Religion, and so claim the protection of our laws, and pleading conscience, demand to be tolerated. Would the name of Religion be a cloak sufficiently thick to hide such absurdity, and shield it from the frown of public indignation? Take then from Popery its name of Religion, strip its officers of their pompous titles of sacredness, and its decrees of the nauseous cant of piety, Footnote: Through the Leopold foundation reports there is this perpetual cant of piety. We have "pious prelate," "pious purpose," "pious end," "pious curiosity," "pious dread," and even "pious progress," and "pious dress." and what have you remaining? Is it not a naked, odious Despotism, depending for its strength on the observance of the strictest military discipline in its ranks, from the Pope, through his Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, &c., down to the lowest priest of his dominions? And is not this despotism acting politically in this country?
Let us suppose, for the sake of illustration, that the Emperor of Russia, in a conceited dream of di-vine right to universal empire, should parcel out our country into convenient districts, and should proclaim his intention to exercise his rightful sway over these States, now not owning his control. Should we not justly laugh at his ridiculous pretensions? But suppose he should proceed to appoint his Viceroys, Grand Imperial Dukes, giving to one the title of "his Grace of Albany," to another the "Grand Duke of Washington," and to another "his Imperial Highness of Savannah," and should send them out to take possession of their districts, and subdue the people as fast as practicable to their proper obedience to his legitimate sway. And should these pompous Viceroys, with their train of sub-officers, actually come over from Russia, and erect their government houses, and commence by compliant manners and fair promises to procure lands and rentals to hold in the power of the Emperor, and under the guise of educating the rising generation should begin to sap the foundations of their attachment to this government, by blinding their reasoning faculties, and by the Russian catechism instilling the doctrine of passive obedience and the divine right of the Emperor, what should we say to all this? Ridiculous as the first conceited dream of imperial ambition appeared, if matters got to this pass, we should begin to think that there was something serious in the attempt, and very properly too, be a little alarmed. Suppose then further that the Emperor's cause, by Russian emigration, and the money supplied by the Emperor, had become so strong that the Viceroys were emboldened in a cautious way, to try their influence upon some of the local elections, that the Russian party had become a body somewhat formidable, that its foreign leaders had their passive obedience troops, so well under command as to make themselves necessary in the police of the country, that we feared to offend them, that the secular press favored them; Footnote: Is this a harsh judgment on the secular press? If a secular paper ventures to remonstrate against Catholics, is not the cry of intolerance or persecution at once raised and the editor scared away from his duty of exposing the secret political enemies of the republic, under the false notion that he is engaged in a Religious controversy? and the unprincipled courted them; to what point then, in the process of gradually surrendering our liberties to the Russian Czar, should we have come; and how near to their accomplishment would be those wild dreams of imperial ambition, which we had in the first instance ridiculed?

And is this a caricature? What is the difference between the real claims, and efforts, and condition of Popery at this moment in these United States, and the supposed claims, and efforts, and condition of the Russian despotism? The one comes disguised under the name of Religion, the other, more honest and more harmless, would come in its real political name. Give the latter the name of Religion, call the Emperor, Pope, and his Viceroys, Bishops, interlard the imperial decrees with pious cant, and you have the case of pretension, and intrigue, and success too, which has actually passed in these United States! Yes, the King of Rome, acting by the promptings of the Austrian Cabinet, and in the plentitude of his usurpation, has already extended his sceptre over our land, he has divided us up into provinces, and appointed his Viceroys who claim their jurisdiction, Footnote: "Indiana and Illinois, two states depending on my jurisdiction!"- [My Lord Bishp Flaget's letter.] from a higher power than exists in this country, even from his majesty himself, who appoints them, who removes them at will, to whom they owe allegiance, for the extension of whose temporal kingdom they are exerting themselves, and whose success let it be indelibly impressed on your minds, is the certain destruction of the free institutions of our country.

Is not the evidence I have exhibited in my previous numbers sufficiently strong to prove to my countrymen the existence of a foreign conspiracy against the liberties of the country? Does the nature of the case admit of stronger evidence? or must we wait for some positive, undisguised acts of oppression, before we will believe that we are attacked and in danger? Must we wait for a formal declaration of war? The serpent has already commenced his coil about our limbs, and the lethargy of his poison is creeping over us; shall we be more sensible of the torpor when it has fastened upon our vitals? The house is on fire; can we not believe it, till the flames have touched our flesh? Is not the enemy already organized in the land? Can we not perceive all around us the evidence of his presence? Have not the wily manœuverings of despotism already commenced? Is he not inveigling our children to his schools? Is he not intriguing with the press? Is he not usurping the police of the country, and showing his front in our political councils? Because no foe is on the sea, no hostile armies on our plains, may we sleep securely? Shall we watch only on the outer walls, while the sappers and miners of foreign despots are at work under our feet, and stealthily advancing beneath the very citadel ? Where is that unwearying vigilance which the eloquent Burke proclaimed to be the characteristic of our fathers, who did not wait to feel oppression, but "augured misgovernment at a distance, and snuffed the approach of tyranny in every tainted breeze?" Are we their sons, and shall we sleep on our posts? We may sleep, but the enemy is awake; he is straining every nerve to possess himself of our fair land. We must awake, or we are lost. Foundations are attacked, fundamental principles are threatened, interests are put in jeopardy, which throw all the questions which now agitate the councils of the country into the shade. It is Liberty itself that is in danger, not the liberty of a single state, no, nor of the United States, but the liberty of the world. Yes, it is the world that has its anxious eyes upon us; it is the world that cries to us in the agony of its struggles against despotism, THE WORLD EXPECTS AMERICA, REPUBLICAN AMERICA, TO DO HER DUTY.

Our institutions have already withstood many assaults from within and from without, but the war has now assumed a new shape. An effort is now making that is to try the MORAL STRENGTH of the Republic. It is not a physical contest on the land, or on the water. The issue depends not on the strength of our armies or navies. How then shall we defend ourselves from this new, this subtle attack?

"Defend yourselves!" cries the Austrian papist, "you cannot defend yourselves;" your government, in its very nature, is not strong enough to protect you against foreign or domestic conspiracy. You must here take a lesson from legitimate governments. We alone can teach the effectual method of suppressing conspiracies. You say you have a body of conspirators against your liberties, a body of foreigners who are spreading their pernicious heresies through your land, and endangering the state. The weakness of republicanism is now manifest. What constitutional or legal provision meets the difficulty? Where are your laws prohibiting Catholics from preaching or teaching their doctrines, and erecting their chapels, churches, and schools? Where is your Passport system, to enable you to know the movements of every man of them in the land? Where is your Gens d'armerie, your armed police, those useful agents, whose domiciliary visits could ferret out every Catholic, seize and examine his papers, and keep him from further mischief in the dungeons of the state? Where are your laws that can terrify, by the penalty of imprisonment, any man that dares to utter an opinion against the government? Where is your judicious censorship of the press, to silence the Catholic journals, and stifle any Catholic sentiments in other journals? Where is your Index expurgatorius, to denounce all unsafe books, that no Catholic book may be printed or admitted into the country? Where is your system of espionage, that no Protestant may read a Catholic publication, or express in conversation a single sentiment unfavorable to Protestantism, without being overlooked, and overheard by some faithful spy, and reported to the government? Where are the officers in your post-office department for the secret examination of letters, so that even the most confidential correspondence may be purified from dangerous heresy? Where is your secret Inquisitorial Court for the trial and condemnation of apostate Protestants? Without these changes in the constitution and laws of your government, you can oppose no efficient obstacle to the success of this conspiracy.

And what shall I reply to this consistent Papist? The methods he would prescribe have the sanction of successful experiment for some centuries. They are in sober truth the very means that Popery employs at this very day, in the countries where it is dominant, to prevent the spread of opinions contrary to its own dogmas.
But are these the methods that commend themselves to American Protestants? Does not such a cumbrous machinery of chains, and bolts, and bayonets, and soldiers, to hold the mind in bondage, seem rather a dream of the dark ages, than a real system, now in actual operation in the nineteenth century? Away with Austrian and Popish precedent. American Protestantism is of a different school. It needs none of the aids which are indispensable to the crumbling despotisms of Europe; no soldiers, no restrictive enactments, no index expurgatorius, no Inquisition. This war is the war of principles; it is on the open field of free discussion; and the victory is to be won by the exercise of moral energy, by the force of Religious and Political Truth. But still it is a war, and all true patriots must wake to the cry of danger. They must up, and gird themselves for battle. It is no false alarm. Our liberties are in danger. The Philistines are upon us. Their bonds are prepared, and they intend, if they can, to fasten them upon our limbs. We must shake off our lethargy, and like the giant awaking from his sleep, snap these shackles asunder. We are attacked in vulnerable points by foreign enemies to all liberty. We must no longer indulge a quiet complacency in our institutions, as if there were a charm in the simple name of American liberty sufficiently potent to repel all invasion. For what constitutes the life of our justly cherished institutions? Where is the living principle that sustains them? Is it in the air we breathe? Is it in the soil we cultivate? Is our air or our soil more congenial to liberty than the air and soil of Austria, or Italy, or Spain? No! The life of our institutions! It is a moral and intellectual life; it lies in the culture of the human mind and heart, of the reason and conscience; it is bound up in principles which must be taught by father to son, from generation to generation, with care, with toil, with sacrifice. Hide the Bible for fifty years-(we will not ask for the hundred years so graciously granted by the autocrat to stifle liberty)-hide the Bible for fifty years, and let our children be under the guidance of men, whose first exercise upon the youthful mind is to teach that lesson of old school sophistry, which distorts it forever, and binds it through life in bonds of error to the dictation of a man; a man whom, in the same exercise of distorted reason, he is persuaded to believe infallible; let these Jesuit doctors take the place of our Protestant instructors, and where will be the political institutions of the country? Fifty years would amply suffice to give the victory to the despotic principle, and realize the most sanguine wishes of the tyrants of Europe.

The first thing to be done to secure safety, is to open our eyes at once to the reality and the extent of the danger. We must not walk on blindly, crying "all's well." The enemy is in all our borders. He has spread himself through all the land. The ramifications of this foreign plot are every where visible to all who will open their eyes. Surprising and unwelcome as is such an announcement, we must hear it and regard it. We must make AN IMMEDIATE, A VIGOROUS, A UNITED, A PERSEVERING EFFORT TO SPREAD RELIGIOUS AND INTELLECTUAL CULTIVATION THROUGH EVERY PART OF OUR COUNTRY. Not a village, nor a log-hut of the land should be overlooked. Where Popery has put darkness, we must put light. Where Popery has planted its crosses, its colleges, its churches, its chapels, its nunneries, Protestant patriotism must put side by side college for college, seminary for seminary, church for church. And the money must not be kept back. Does Austria send her tens of thousands to subjugate us to the principles of darkness? We must send our hundreds of thousands, aye our millions, if necessary, to redeem our children from the double bondage of spiritual and temporal slavery, and preserve to them American light and liberty. The food of Popery is ignorance. Ignorance is the mother of papal devotion. Ignorance is the legitimate prey of Popery.
But some one here asks, are not the Roman Catholics establishing schools and colleges, and seminaries of various kinds, in the destitute parts of the land? Are not they also zealous for education? May we not safely assist them in their endeavors to enlighten the ignorant? Enlighten the ignorant? Does Popery enlighten the ignorant of Spain, of Portugal, of Italy, of Ireland, of South America, of Canada? What sort of instruction is that, in the latter country, for example, which leaves 78,000 out of 87,000 of its grown up scholars signers of a petition by their mark, unable to write their own names, and many of the remaining signers, who write nothing but their names. What sort of light is that which generates darkness? Popery enlighten the ignorant? Popery is the natural enemy of GENERAL education. Do you ask for proof? It is overwhelming. Look at the intellectual condition of all the countries where Popery is dominant. If Popery is in favor of general education, why are the great mass of the people, in the papal countries I have named, the most ill-informed, mentally degraded beings of all the civilized world, arbitrarily shut out by law from all knowledge but that which makes them slaves to the tyranny of their oppressors? No! look well to it! If Popery in this country is professing friendship to general knowledge, it is a feigned alliance. If it pretends to be in favor of educating the poor, it is a false pretence, it is only temporizing. It is conforming for the present, from policy to the spirit of Protestantism around it, that it may forge its chains with less suspicion. If it is establishing schools, it is to make them prisons of the youthful intellect of the country. If the Papists in Europe are really desirous of enlightening ignorant Americans, by establishing schools, let them make their first efforts among their brethren of the same faith in Canada and Mexico.

Do our fellow citizens at the South and West ask for schools, and are there not funds and teachers enough in our own land of wealth and education to train up our own offspring in the free principles of our own institutions? or are we indeed so beggared as to be dependent on the charities of the Holy Alliance, and the Jesuits of Europe for funds and teachers to educate our youth-in what? The PRINCIPLES OF DESPOTISM! Forbid it patriotism! Forbid it religion!-Our own means are sufficient; we have wealth enough, and teachers in abundance. We have only to will it with the resolution and the zeal that have so often been shown, whenever great national, or moral interests are to be subserved, and every fortress, every corps of Austrian darkness would be surrounded: the lighted torches of truth, political and religious, would flash their unwelcome beams into every secret chamber of the enemies of our liberty, and drive these ill-omened birds of a foreign nest to their native hiding-place.

CHAPTER X.

All classes of citizens interested in resisting the efforts of Popery-The unnatural alliance of Popery and Democracy exposed-Religious liberty in danger-Specially in the keeping of the Christian community-They must rally for its defence,-The secular press has no sympathy with them in this struggle, it is opposed to them-The Political character of Popery ever to be kept in mind and opposed-It is for the Papist, not the Protestant to separate his religious from his political creed-Papists ought to be required publicly and formally and officially to renounce foreign allegiance and anti-republican customs.

In considering the means of counteracting this foreign political conspiracy against our free institutions, I have said that we must awake to the reality and extent of the danger, and rouse ourselves to immediate and rigorous action in spreading religious and intellectual cultivation through the land. This indeed would be effectual, but this remedy is remote in its operation, and is most seriously retarded by the enormous increase of ignorance which is flooding the country by foreign immigration. While therefore the remote effects of our exertions are still provided for, the pressing exigency of the case seems to require some more immediate efforts to prevent the further spread of the evil. The two-fold character of the enemy who is attacking us must be well considered. Popery is doubly opposed,-civilly and religiously,-to all that is valuable in our free institutions. As a religious system, it is the avowed and common enemy of every other religious sect in the land. The Episcopalian, the Methodist, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Quaker, the Unitarian, the Jew, & c. & c., are alike anathematized, are together obstinate heretics, in the creed of the Papist. He wages an indiscriminate, uncompromising, exterminating war with all.

As a Political system, it is opposed to every political party in the country. Popery in its very nature is opposed to the genius of our free system, notwithstanding its affected, artful appropriation (in our country only,) of the habits and phraseology of democracy. Present policy alone dictates so unnatural an alliance, aye, most unnatural alliance. What! Popery and Democracy allied? Despotism and Liberty hand in hand? Has the Sovereign Pontiff in very deed turned Democrat in the United States? Let us look into this incongruous coalition, this solecism in politics-Popish Democracy. Do Popish Bishops or Priests consult the people? Have the people any voice in ecclesiastical matters? Can the people vote their own taxes? or are they im-posed upon them by irresponsible priests? Do the bishops and priests account for the manner in which they spend the people's money? Has Popery here adopted the American principle of RESPONSIBILITY TO THE PEOPLE; a responsibility which gives the most insignificant contributor of his money towards any object, a right to examine into the manner in which it is disbursed? No! the people account to their priests in all cases, not the priests to the people in any case. What sort of Democracy is that where the people have no power, and the priests have all, by divine right? Let us hear no more of the presumptuous claim of Popery to Democracy.-Popery is the antipodes of Democracy. It is the same petty tyrant of the people here, as in Europe. And this is the tyranny that hopes to escape detection by assuming the name and adopting the language of democracy. Footnote: The poor, the illiterate, and the working classes, the most deeply interested in quelling riot and disorder. I have elsewhere hinted at the danger to the stability of our institutions of the mob spirit which has been manifested in different parts of the country. But I fear that the process of disorganization, the gradual change which frequent riot necessarily works in the nature of government has not been duly considered by those whom it most deeply, most vitally concerns; I mean the hardworking, uneducated poor. Let me endeavor to trace this process. What is the proper effect of our democratic republican institutions upon the various classes into which human society must ever be divided? How do they affect the condition of the rich and the poor, the educated and the illiterate? Equality, the only practicable equality, is their result; not that spurious, visionary equality which would make a forced community of property, but that equality which puts no artificial obstacles in the way of any man's becoming the richest or most learned in the state; which allows every man without other impediment than the common obstacles of human nature and the equal rights of his neighbor impose, to strive after wealth and knowledge and happiness. True Christian republicanism, by its benevolent and ennobling principles, impels the wealthy and the educated to use their talents for the benefit of the whole community; it prompts to acts of public spirit, to self-sacrifice, and to unwearied effort to lessen the natural obstacles in the way of the poor and uneducated to competence and intellectual character, by affording them both employment and education. The kindness and benevolence thus shown to the poor beget in this class of our citizens, industry and mental effort. They feel that they are not like the proscribed of other countries, they see that the way is equally open to all to rise to the same rank of independence in mind and condition, and they consequently are without the exciting causes of envy and ill-will and bitterness of feeling towards the wealthy and educated, which exist and produce these fruits in other and arbitrary governments. Society in its two extremes is thus knit together by a mutual confidence, and a mutual interest, for causes beyond human control are ever varying the condition of men. He that is rich to-day may be poor to-morrow; and thus there is a constant interchange, a mingling of ranks, which like a healthful circulation in the natural body, begets soundness and vigor through the political body. The vicious, and voluntarily ignorant being the only portions of society naturally and justly excluded from the benefits of this system.

Let us now look at the condition of these same classes under an arbitrary government. In Austria, for example, the poor and illiterate are considered as the natural slaves of the wealthy and learned. These classes are perpetually separated by the artificial barrier of hereditary right; the line of separation is distinctly drawn, and in all that relates to social intercourse there is an impassable gulf. There may be condescension on the one part, but no elevation on the other. High birth, learning, wealth, and polished manners are on the one side, strengthening the hands of the arbitrary power that sustains them; on the other, low birth, ignorance, poverty, and boorishness, kept down by their intrinsic weakness, generation after generation in irretrievable subjection; the upper classes knowing that their own security is based upon the perpetuity of ignorance and superstition in the lower classes. Now to make the change from republicanism to absolutism, what means would an arbitrary power like Austria be most likely to devise? Would she not attain her object entirely by the creation on the one hand, in the wealth and talent of this country, a necessity for employing physical force to hold in subjection the poor and illiterate? And the production, on the other hand, of a class ignorant and unprincipled, and turbulent enough to need the very restraints the other class might be compelled to employ? Are there any indications of such a change in this country? We have a daily increasing host of emigrants, a portion of the very class used to foreign servitude abroad. How could Austrian emissaries better serve their imperial master's interests, than by keeping these unenlightened men in the same mental darkness in which they existed in the countries from which they came, surrounding them here with a police of priests, and shutting out from them the light which might break in upon them in this land of light, nourishing them for riot and turbulence, at political meetings, and for bullying at the polls those of opposite political opinions? And what would be the effect of such a mode of proceedings upon that class, who have acquired by lives of honest industry and studious application, wealth, and knowledge, and political experience? Is not such a course calculated to drive them away from any participation in the politics of the country, and is not such seditious conduct intended to produce this very result? Will not men who have any self-respect, who have any sense of character, turn away and ask with feelings of indignation, where is that intelligent, sober, orderly body of native mechanics and artizans, who once composed the wholesome, substantial democracy of the country, and on whose independence and rough good sense the country could always rely, that well-tried body of their own fellow-citizens, accustomed to hear and read patiently, and decide discreetly? And when they see them associated with a rude set of priest-governed foreigners, strangers to the order and habits of our institutions, requiting us for their hospitable reception by conduct subversive of the very institutions which make them freemen; when they see them become the dupes of the machinations of a foreign despotic power, refusing to be undeceived, and madly rushing to their own destruction, will they not from motives of self preservation be willing to adopt any system of measures, however arbitrary, which will secure society from violence and anarchy? When disgust at priest-guided mobs shall have alienated the minds of one class of the citizens frorn the other, we have then one of the parties nearly formed, which is necessary for the designs of despotism in accomplishing the subversion of the republic. And the other party is still easier formed. The alienation of feeling in the wealthier class, and their remarks of disgust, may be easily tortured into contempt for the classes below them, and then the natural envy of the poor towards the rich, will always furnish occasions to excite to violence. When hostility between these two parties has reached a proper height, the signal from the arch jugglers in Europe to their assistants here, can easily kindle the flames of civil strife. And then comes the dextrous change of systems. Frequent outrage must be quelled by military force, for the public peace must at all events be preserved, and the civil arm will have become too weak, and thus commences an armed police, itself but the precursor of a standing army. And which party will be the sufferer? All experience answers that wealth and talent are more than a match for mere brute force, for the plain reason that they can both purchase and direct it. The rich can pay for their protection, and soldiers belong to those who pay them. The man of talent is wanted to direct, and he also is retained by the rich. What then becomes of the illiterate and laboring poor? Reduced after ineffectual, ill-concerted resistance to the same state of perfect subjection that obtains in the "happy Austrian empire." It is the poor then, the poor and ignorant, not the rich and learned, that have every thing of hope and liberty to lose from the machinations of Austria. In a moral and intelligent Democracy, the rich and poor are friends and equals, in a Popish despotism the poor are in abject servitude to the rich. Let the working men, the laboring classes, well consider that their liberty is in danger, and can be preserved only by their encouragement of education and good order. It is this tyranny that is courted and favored at political elections by our politicians of all parties, because it has the advantage of a despotic organization. Footnote: And infidelity too, it seems, has just learned the secret of political power, and not content with civil and religious liberty, has introduced a third kind, and organizing itself into a new interest, demands to be represented in the state as the advocate of irreligious liberty! How much longer are the feelings of the religious community to be scandalized, and their moral sense outraged, by the bare-faced bargainings for Catholic and infidel votes? Have the religious community no remedy against such outrage? If they have not, if there is not a single point on which they can act together, if the religious denominations of various names can have no understanding on matters of this kind, if they have no common bond to unite them in repelling common enemies, then let us boast no more of religious liberty. What is religious liberty? Is it merely a phrase to round a period in a fourth of July oration? Is it a dazzling sentiment for Papists to use in blinding the eyes of the people, while they rivet upon them their foreign chains of superstition? Is it a shield to be held before Infidels, from behind which, they may throw their poisoned shafts at all that is orderly and fair in our civil as well as religious institutions? Or is it that prize above all price, that heaven-descended gift to the world, for which, with its twin sister, we contended in our war for independence, and which we are bound by every duty to ourselves, to our children, to our country, to the world, to guard with the most jealous care? And has it ever occurred to Christians that this duty of guarding religious liberty in a more special manner devolves on them? Who but the religious community appreciate the inestimable value of religious liberty?-Are their interests safe in the hands of the infidel, who scoffs at all religion, and uses his civil liberty to subvert all liberty? Is it safe in the hands of imported radicals and blasphemers? Is it safe in the hands of calculating, selfish, power-seeking politicians? Is it safe in the keeping of Metter-nich's stipendiaries, the active agents of a foreign, despotic power? Does the secular press take care of our religious liberty? Is there a secular journal that has even hinted to its readers the existence of this double conspiracy? The most dangerous po-litico-religious sect that ever existed, a sect that has been notorious for ages, for throwing governments into confusion, is politically at work, in our own country, under the immediate auspices of the most despotic power of Europe, interested politically and vitally in the destruction of our free institutions, and is any alarm manifested by the secular press? No! they are altogether silent on this subject. They presume it is only a religious controversy, and they cannot meddle with religious controversies. They must not expose religious imposture, lest they should be called pious. They have no idea of blending church and state. They have a religion of their own, a worship in which the public, they think, feel a more exciting interest. One has a liberty pole to be erected, another a hickory tree, and the rival pre-tensions to superiority of these wooden gods of their idolatry, it is of the last importance to settle, and the bacchanalian revelry of their consecration must be recorded and blazoned forth in italics and capitals in its minutest particulars. "Oh Pole! oh Tree! thou art the preserver of our liberty!" No; If the religious community, (in which term I mean to include Protestants of every name who profess a religious faith,) awake not to the defence of their own rights in the state, if they indulge timidity or jealousy of each other, if they will not come forward boldly and firmly to withstand the encroachments of corruption upon their own rights; the selfish politicians of the factions of the day (and they swarm in the ranks of all parties,) will bargain away all that is valuable in the country, civil and religious, to the Pope, to Austria, or to any foreign power that will pay them the price of their treason.

We cannot be too often reminded of the double character of the enemy who has gained foothold upon our shores, for although Popery is a religious sect, and on this ground claims toleration side by side with other religious sects, yet Popery is also a political, a despotic system, which we must repel as altogether incompatible with the existence of freedom. I repeat it, Popery is a political, a despotic system, which must be resisted by all true patriots.

Is it asked, how can we separate the characters thus combined in one individual? How can we repel the politics of a Papist, without infringing upon his religious right? I answer, that this is a difficulty for Papists, not for Protestants to solve. If Papists have made their religion and despotism identical, that is not our fault. Our religion, the Protestant religion, and Liberty are identical, and liberty keeps no terms with despotism. American Protestants use no such solecism as religious despotism. Shall political heresy be shielded from all attack, because it is connected with a religious creed? Let Papists separate their religious faith from their political faith, if they can, and the former shall suffer no political attack from us. "But no," the Papist cries, "I cannot separate them; my religion is so blended with the political system, that they must be tolerated or refused together; my 'whole system is one, and indivisible, unchangeable, infallible'-I am conscientious, I cannot separate them." What are we to do in such a case? Are we to surrender our civil and religious liberty to such presumptuous folly?

No! our liberties must be preserved; and we say, and say firmly to the Popish Bishops and Priests among us, give us your declaration of your relation to our civil government. Renounce your foreign allegiance, your allegiance to a FOREIGN SOVEREIGN. Let us have your own avowal in an official manifesto, that the Democratic Government under which you here live, delights you best. Put your ecclesiastical doings upon as open and popular a footing. as the other sects. Open your books to the people, that they may scrutinize your financial matters, that the people, your own people, may know how much they pay to priests, and how the priests expend their money; that the poorest who is taxed from his hard earned wages for church dues, and the richest who gives his gold to support your extravagant ceremonial, may equally know that their contributions are not misapplied. Come out and declare your opinion on the LIBERTY OF THE PRESS, on LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE, and LIBERTY OF OPINION, Americans demand it.

They are waking up. They have their eyes upon you. Think not the American eagle is asleep. Americans are not Austrians to be hoodwinked by Popish tricks. This is a call upon you, you will be obliged soon to regard. Nor will they be content with partial, obscure avowals of republican sentiments in your journals, by insulated priests or even bishops. The American people will require a more serious testimonial of your opinions on these fundamental political points. You have had Convocations of Bishops at Baltimore. Let us have at their next assembling their sentiments on these vital points. Let us have a document full and explicit, signed by their names, a document that may circulate as well in Austria, and Italy, as in America. Aye, a document that may be published "Con permissione" in the Diario di Roma, and be circulated to instruct the faithful in the united church, the church of but one mind, in the sentiments of American democratic Bishops on these American principles. Let us see how they will accord with those of his Holiness Pope Gregory XVI. in his late encydical letter! Will Popish Bishops dare to put forth such a manifesto? No? They dare not.

CHAPTER XI.

The question, what is the duty of the Protestant community, considered-Shall there be an Anti-Popery Union?-The strong manifesto that might be put forth by such a union-Such a political union discarded as impolitic and degrading to the Protestant community-Golden opportunity for showing the moral energy of the Republic-The lawful, efficient weapons of this contest-To be used without delay.

THERE is no question of more pressing, more vital importance to the whole country, than this: What is the duty of the Protestant community in the perilous condition to which religious as well as civil liberty is reduced by the attempts of Popery and foreign enemies upon our free institutions? Have Christian patriots reflected at all on the possible, nay, I will say probable loss of religious liberty; or in idea attempted to follow out to their result and in their immeasurable extent the fearful consequences of its loss? Why is it then, that no more energetic efforts are made to save ourselves?

----we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm;
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.
* * * * * * * *
We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavoided is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wreck.
~Shakspeare~

Yes, the rocks are in full view on which American liberty must inevitably be wrecked, unless all hands are aroused to immediate action. Our dangers are none the less, be assured, because they are not those against which the general cry of alarm is so loudly raised by the two great political parties of the day. In the heedless strife they are now waging, the most superlative epithets of alarm have been already exhausted by each, on fictitious, or comparatively trivial dangers to the commonwealth. The public ear is deafened by their noise; its sense of hearing is grown callous with the reiterated cries of alarm on every slight occasion. "Wolf! Wolf!" has been so often falsely cried, that now, when the wolf has in reality appeared, we cannot be made to realize it. "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?" We are busying ourselves in quenching the few falling sparks that threaten the deck of the ship without heeding the fire beneath, that is approaching the magazine. In this reckless warfare of passion, and falsehood, and slander, and aided by the deafening din of party strife, neither party seem to have observed that a secret enemy, an artful foreign enemy, has stolen in upon us, joining his foreign accents to swell the uproar, that he may with less suspicion do his nefarious work. Footnote: Dangers from a riotous spirit, and the kind of treatment due from Protestant Americans to Catholic Emigrants. All the topics which grow out of this momentous subject of Popery as their prolific parent, are of absorbing national interest, but no one forces itself upon our consideration more imperiously at this moment than that which heads this note. For, unless I am greatly deceived, the waking up of this great nation's indignation, the shaking off of the lethargy which has so long held in unaccountable stupor the senses of the people, which has shut their eyes and stopped their ears to the proofs of foreign conspiracy which every where surround them, the mighty gathering of all real patriots to the defence of their liberties, which the sounds of preparation from all quarters of the land but too strongly indicate, may be attended with effects disastrous to the cause of true liberty, may produce through excess or ill-regulated zeal, the evil which it is desirous to remedy. For excess even in favor of right principles, doubles the amount of the evil which it attempts to cure. Excess of all kinds, whether in thought, word, or action, (oh! that this could be impressed on every American heart,) is just so much gain to the side of Popery. I know not how prevalent is error on this point, but I am persuaded that it exists to an extent to make an American tremble for the permanency of our democratic institutions.

Is there not a culpable acquiescence in the doings of a mob, if their violence is directed against some apparent or real irritating popular evil? Is not the language of such acquiescence most dangerous? It amounts to this; "Although we are averse to mob law, yet on the whole there are cases where the sin is venial, and the character of the nuisance it would abate justifies its violence." Now once concede in a democratic community, a community which makes its own laws according to modes prescribed by itself, that an irresponsible minority may set at defiance these laws, and then let me ask where is government? It is prostrated. It has become anarchy, and on the ruins of social order will arise another form of government more or less arbitrary, according to the more or less profound causes which effected the destruction of the first. Of all forms of government, a truly democratic government, while it is least obnoxious to the disturbing influences of mobs, can at the same time least of all bear the shocks of their turbulence. No events, therefore, that have occurred in the eventful history of the country, have so justly caused alarm for the stability of the government, as the spirit of mob violence which has lately manifested itself so frequently in our large cities. We should do well to remember that we have secret and artful enemies busily at work, who can and will take advantage of this unnatural state of the public feeling, and who will not fail secretly to administer fuel, in modes in which they are perfectly familiar, to a diseased excitement so favorable to their views.

We have in the country a powerful religious-politico sect, whose final success depends on the subversion of these democratic institutions, and who have therefore a vital interest in promoting mob-violence. The saying of the German ambassador concerning the Papists, (quoted in the prefatory remarks,) is full of meaning, and should be constantly borne in mind; it lets us into the secret of much of their manœuvering in this country; "they will be hammer or nails, they will persecute or be persecuted." Where they are in power they always persecute; when not in power and consequently unable to persecute, they will be sure to conduct, either in so outrageous or mysterious, or deceptive a manner, as to rouse public indignation. They will contrive ingenious modes of irritation that shall draw upon them popular vengeance, and then all meekness and innocence, and resignation, raise the imploring cry of persecution. And how do they gain by these opposite modes? If they are strong enough to persecute, they will destroy their opponents, in obedience to the openly avowed principles of their sect, by exile, by dungeons, and by death. If they themselves are persecuted in a Protestant community, (Protestant principles being in known direct opposition to persecution,) it is always by an irreligious mob, acting in defiance of Protestant principle, and unsustained by public opinion, and the reaction of Protestant sympathy for the sufferers on any such occasion, more than makes amends by its gifts for the injury sustained. Thus the very virtues of Protestants growing out of principles directly antagonist to Popish principles, are made to work against Protestantism, and in favor of Popery. Do not Jesuits know the well known truth, that a sect is helped by a little persecution? Do they not now act upon a knowledge of it? And should not Americans replenish their memory with it also, that they may most rigidly abstain from disorder, and discountenance every disposition to riot or violence? Let them remember that the laws that govern them are their own laws, and they must not allow them to be broken. Let them suspect a Popish plot to rob them of their liberties in every disorderly assemblage, and by good order, by firmness of resistance to every temptation to riot, defeat the designs of these worst enemies of Democracy.

In close connection with this topic, is that of the kind of treatment which Protestant Americans should show to Catholic emigrants. On this subject a volume could be written. I have space but for a few remarks.

The condition of the Catholic emigrants that are daily pouring into the country from Germany and Ireland should awaken the strongest sympathies of Americans; and in whatever aspect viewed, should enlist all their feelings of benevolence. Reflect a moment who and what they are. We have read, and our own countrymen who have travelled and seen them in their native land, bear testimony to the effects upon the people of the grinding oppressions of Papal government; to the mental degradation, to the poverty, to the wretchedness of the vassals of despotism. And as if to prove to us what we might doubt on the authority of others, so sombre is their picture of human misery, the very subjects of foreign oppression are brought and placed before our eyes. See yonder ship slowly furling her sails. She approaches the city. She casts her anchor. Who are those that crowd her decks? With eager eyes they gaze in one direction. They see at length the far-famed land of liberty. Yes; its name has been wafted even to their ears, and with the longings of captives for freedom they have broken away from slavery and sought the asylum of the oppressed. They land upon our shores. Look, Americans, see before you the fruits of papal education! of papal care of the bodies and minds of its children. Filthy and ragged in body, ignorant in mind, and but too often most debased in morals, they fill your streets with squalid beggary, and your highways with crime; they are such a loathsome picture of degradation, moral and physical, that you turn away in disgust from the sight. But why should this be? They are human beings, although oppression has blotted out their reason and conscience and thought. They are the progeny of Popery; they are the victims of its iron despotism. It is Popery that has reared them up in its own caverns of superstition. They exhibit before you the blighting effects of this scourge of the earth. It is Popery that has filled their minds with puerile fables, closed their mental eyes in the darkness of ignorance, fleeced them of their property by systematic robbery, kept them from the knowledge of their natural rights as men to liberty of conscience, and of opinion, extorted an abject obedience to their fellow-men, to blasphemous usurpers of the prerogatives of Deity. Their ignorance is their lasting, fatal curse; their reason and conscience stifled at their birth, they are cast upon our care mere human machines, for the fell usurpers of God's power have torn out of them their very minds. To think for themselves, that inalienable right of a rational being, is rebellion against their priest; they read not, they understand not our charter of liberty. They love liberty, indeed, but what shape has liberty to men without minds? What perception of light has a sightless eye? Their liberty, is licentiousness, their freedom, strife and debauchery.

And now with what emotions should Protestants look on these suffering, deluded men? In what channel should their sympathies flow? They have already been beaten to the dust by tyranny. Is it for freemen to follow up the cruel blow of foreign tyrants? They have been brutalized by neglect; shall they now be hunted by proscription? Shall no Christian effort be made to light up again in their darkened bosoms the extinguished spark of humanity? They are followed into our habitations; yes, Americans, they are pursued into your own asylum of liberty by their foreign oppressors, who, like hungry wolves, have ventured with unhallowed feet into the very sanctuary of freedom to grasp again their scarcely escaped prey. And have Americans no compassion? Have they no courage? Will they not protect the oppressed? Will they not interpose between them and their priestly oppressors, and say to the latter, "Stand off; this is a land of freedom; these men are now American citizens. They have a right to American education; to republican education; to Bible education. They have a right to the knowledge that they owe no allegiance to priests, that here there are no forbidden books, that knowledge here is not meted out in scanty drops to serve the purposes of power grasping despots, but is spread out before them wide and deep as the ocean; that American laws protect them from ecclesiastical as well as civil proscription, from ecclesiastical as well as civil extortion, that they owe no obligation to pay an arbitrary tax of bishop or priest, that they have a right to know the amount, and the manner of disbursement, of every cent they are called on to contribute in church as well as state."

Will not Americans teach them these truths, and aid them to break the chains with which foreign tyrants have bound them? or will they compel them, by proscription and persecution, or unfeeling neglect, to clan together around their priests, because deserted by those who should, and who alone can, undeceive and enlighten them? In the one case there is hope of incorporating them into the American republican family as useful fellow-citizens. In the other, there is the certainty of perpetuating a distinct foreign and hostile interest in the country, to distract its councils, to sully the peaceful character of its institutions, and finally to aid in the complete destruction of this stronghold, this last hope of Freedom.

---"but once put out thy (light,)
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is the Promethean heat
That can thy light relume."

Like incendiaries at a conflagration, they even cry fire! loudest, and are most ostentatiously busy in seeming to protect that very property which they watch but to make their prey.

What then can be done? Shall Protestants organize themselves into a political union after the manner of the Papists, and the various classes of industry and even of foreigners in the country? Shall they form an Anti-Popery Union, and take their places among this strange medley of conflicting interests? And why should they not? Various parties and classes do now combine and organize for their own interest; and if any class of men are allowed thus to combine to promote their own peculiar interests at the expense of another class, that other class surely has at least an equal right to combine to protect itself against the excess of its antagonist. A denial of this right would certainly come with an ill grace from those who are already formed into separate organizations, as a Working Men's party, as a Trade's Union party, as a Catholic party, as an Irish party, as a German party, yes, even as a French and an Italian party. Footnote: By classing these together at this moment, I do not intend to commit myself as expressing approval or disapproval of the right of each and all of these to organize, but merely to show that such organization does already exist among other classes in the community, and if even foreigners among us are allowed to exercise the right to organize into a separate interest, yes, even as foreigners, can the right with any propriety be refused to American Christians? Having thus stated the case, I am now free to make the passing remark, that excluding from view the three classes first named, the right of foreigners to organize as foreigners for political purposes is at least very questionable; but were their right unquestionably legal through the mildness of our laws, yet the practice is dangerous, indecorous and a palpable abuse of political liberality. The Irish naturalized citizens who should know no other name than Americans, for years have clanned together as Irish, and every means has been used and is still used especially by Catholics, to preserve them distinct from the American family. Recently a portion of the Germans have organized to keep up their distinct nationality, and the French and Italians have just followed the example. [Nov. 1834] To what will all this lead?

And now, on the supposition that such a political organization of Protestants were expedient, (for it resolves itself altogether into a question of expediency) let us see whether any party or interest could show a stronger claim upon the support of the whole nation. Its manifesto might run thus:

Popery is a Political system, despotic in its organization, anti-demoocratic and anti-republican, and cannot therefore coexist with American republicanism.
The ratio of increase of Popery is the exact ratio of decrease of civil liberty.
The dominance of Popery in the United States is the certain destruction of our free institutions.

Popery, by its organization, is wholly under the control of a FOREIGN DESPOTIC SOVEREIGN.

AUSTRIA, one of the Holy Alliance of Sovereigns leagued against the liberties of the world, HAS THE SUPERINTENDENCE OF THE OPERATIONS OF POPERY IN THIS COUNTRY.

The agents of Austria in the United States are Jesuits and priests in the pay of that foreign power, in active correspondence with their employers abroad, not bound by ties of any kind to our government or country, but, on the contrary, impelled by the strongest motives of ambition, to serve the interests of a despotic foreign government; which ambition has already, in one or more instances, been gratified, by promotion of these agents to higher office and wealth in Europe.

Popery is a UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE, nor can Popery exist in this country in that plenitude of power which it claims as a divine right, and which, in the very nature of the system, it must continually strive to obtain, until such a union is consummated.

Popery on this ground, therefore, is destructive to our religious as well as civil liberty.

Popery is more dangerous and more formidable than any power in the United States, on the ground that, through its despotic organization, it can concentrate its efforts for any purpose, with complete effect, and that organization being wholly under foreign control, it can have no real sympathy with any thing American. The funds and intellect, and intriguing experience of all Papal and Despotic Europe, by means of agents, at this moment organized throughout our land, can, at any time, be brought in aid of the enterprises of foreign powers in this country.

These are the grounds upon which an appeal for support might be made to the patriotism, the love of liberty, the hatred of tyranny, temporal and spiritual, which belong in common to the whole Protestant American family.

But is this the plan of opposition to Popery that should be proposed, the plan which ought to be adopted by the Protestant community? No; distinctly and decidedly NO; plausible as it may appear, and perfectly in accordance as it is with the practice of politicians, the Christian community ought not, cannot adopt such an organization. There must not be a Christian party. What! shall Christianity throw aside the keen moral and intellectual arms with which alone it has gained and secured every substantial victory since the commencement of its glorious career; shall it exchange those arms of heavenly temper, "mighty in pulling down strong holds," for the paltry, earthly (I might even say infernal) weapons of party strife? Can Christianity stoop so low? Can it bring itself down from contemplating its great work of revolutionizing the world by bringing moral truth to bear on the conscience and the heart, and narrow its vision to the contracted sphere of party politics? Can it enter, without defilement, into the polluted and polluting arena of political contest? Can it consent to be bargained for by political hucksters, or have the price of its favors hawked in the market by political brokers? Footnote: Both political Parties intrigue for Catholic votes. Let neither political party throw upon its antagonist the exclusive odium of courting this foreign, priest-disciplined band. There are some of both parties who must hide their heads with shame, when real Americans, the patriots of the country, disregarding party name, shall turn their indignant eyes upon this lurking enemy of liberty, and shall apprehend the reality of this foreign conspiracy. Is either political party disposed to upbraid the other with tampering with Popery, or to congratulate itself that it has kept its own garments unspotted front the crime of this indirect treason? If either thus flatters itself, let it be dumb; let guilt stop the utterance of both. Both are deplorably, notoriously guilty. This is a truth that cannot and will not be denied. Both have bargained with these organized vassals of a foreign power. Both in their eager recklessness to triumph over each other, have aided foreign despotism to prostrate at its feet the liberties of their country, the liberties of the world. All parties, religious and political, are suffering, and have yet much more to suffer from the evils al-ready produced by this their blind folly, by their culpable servility to priest-governed foreigners, their cowardly backwardness in not daring to drag into the light this covert treason, because, forsooth, it comes in a sacred garb, their wretchedly loose notions of tolerance, and charity and liberality, their shameful disregard of the consequences of their bargainings.-And is it indeed come to this? A nation of Protestant freemen, nurtured in Protestant principles, the only true principles of liberty, principles wrested from tyranny by the persevering valor of their fathers, the result of the intellectual, aye, and physical combats of centuries, the fruits of obstinately contested struggles with despotism, and superstition, and bigotry, struggles of ages against the united intrigues of kingcraft and priest-craft; Americans, thus emancipated, having enjoyed the peaceful fruits of these blood-earned truths for two centuries, at length grow careless of their treasure; they sport with their liberty as if it were nothing worth; they grow weary of guarding their happiness, they sleep on their posts, they settle down into quiet security. They have ships, and forts, and arms, and brave hearts to defend their shores, and so there is no danger, all is peace, for the battle has long since been won, they can now safely doff their armor, there is no further need of the watchings of the camp. Our enemies, they say, have in truth become our friends; Kings are now Republican, and the Pope, yes the Pope, (his bulls and proclamations to the contrary notwithstanding,) we hope and believe has turned a Protestant Republican, at least in this country.-Let us be generous, say these descendants of ever jealous sires, let us invite our former foes to partake of our hospitality. How noble the sentiment! How will the world applaud! let us show an example of liberality unparalleled. The invitation is accepted, and they flock in countless thousands to our shores; a motley band, the oppressor and the oppressed together, and their relations to each other too unchanged. They have needed no Trojan Horse to hide them from our too credulous eyes, we lead them openly into the midst of us.-They parade our streets with foreign banners, already they flaunt them in our faces in derision. They even threaten us with their vengeance, and we cower beneath their frown. Yes, we plead with them to spare us, we thank them for restraining their rod, we humbly confess the sins of our ancestors, we tell them our fathers were bigotted and fanatical, they were too prejudiced against these our regal and papal friends.

We their children, grown more liberal, will show our freedom from narrow prejudices; we will make amends for past offences; our papal friends shall be received with open arms; we will even urge them to be the umpires in our family quarrels; we will beseech them to educate our children in their foreign principles of passive obedience; we will build for them their fortresses on our own soil, to attack our own strong holds, and then we will trust to their mercy; we shall then have delivered up to them all the keys of our house, and what will remain for us but to bow our necks beneath the foot of the Pope, and asking absolution for our own sins, and our father's sins of long rebellion against his rightful sovereignty, humbly beg a legal charter for our country, and a consecrated king for our throne? Can it consent to compete with Popery in the use of those instruments of intrigue, and trick, and gambling management, in which Popery is perfectly skilled from the hoarded experience of ages? Can Christians present themselves before the country and the world, in this enlightened age and country, as a mere political party? No, no; God forbid, that we should forget the holy character of our cause; let us not be caught in that snare of the enemy. The danger cry of Church and State may safely be left to the people, to trumpet aloud through the land, when the blind infatuation, which now closes their eyes, shall have been removed, and they shall be able to see, what many already see, the secret political manœuverings Footnote: Popish experiment on the Military of the country. The experiments of Popery in various parts of the country on the ignorance or credulity, or apathy of the people, are every day, I might say every hour, more manifest, and they are prosecuted with a boldness, with an audacious defiance of American habits, and the feelings of American Republicanism, truly astonishing. Yet upon reflection, is it so astonishing that a tyranny of such inexhaustible resources of cunning and artifice, backed by the treasures, and the open encouragement of the arbitrary governments of Europe, should be more than ordinarily bold? For if success attends the advance of these arch intriguers against our Protestant habits and institutions, high honors and pecuniary rewards await them at home: if detection at any time overtakes them from the sudden waking of their victim, and his restive efforts to break off the bands that they would spider-like softly bind upon him, they have a retreat from punishment in their own country. A new experiment, another step forward in the march against our freedom, and to all appearances at present, a successful one has been tried at the West, at St. Louis, in the consecration of the Popish cathedral. The account is from a Popish Journal, called the Catholic Telegraph. They shall have the benefit of their own recital.

"The Cathedral of St. Louis is 134 feet long by 84 wide. There are 8 rows of pews. 25 in each row, calculated to contain at least 8000 persons. There are two magnificent colonnades at opposite sides in the body of the church, consisting of five massive pillars, of brick, elegantly marbled, and each four feet in diameter.
"The altar is of stone. It is only temporary, and will soon be superseded by a superb marble altar, which is hourly expected from Italy.

"The church it is said has already cost $42,000. It is presumed that about $18,000 more will be required to finish it, according to the original and magnificent design of its founders; so that the entire cost of the building and its furniture cannot be less than $60,000.

"The consecration took place on the Sabbath Oct. 26, 1834.

"At an early hour, 7, A. M. on the day of consecration, four Bishops, twenty-eight Priests, twelve of whom were from TWELVE different nations-and a considerable number of young aspirants to the holy ministry, making the entire ecclesiastical corps amount to fifty or sixty, were habited in their appropriate dresses. As soon as the procession was organized, the pealing of three large and clear-sounding bells, the thunder of two pieces of artillery raised all hearts, as well as our own to the Great Almighty Being.

"When the HOLY RELICS were moved towards their new habitation, where they shall enjoy an anticipated resurrection-the presence of their God in His holy tabernacle, the guns fired a second salute. We felt as if the SOUL OF ST. LOUIS, Christian, Lawgiver and HERO, was in the sound, and that he again led on his victorious armies in the service of the God of Hosts, for the defence of his religion, his sepulchre, and his people.

"When the solemn moment of the consecration approached, and the Son of the living God was going to descend for the first time, into the new residence of his glory on earth, the drums beat the reville, three of the star-spangled banners were lowered over the balustrade of the sanctuary, the artillery gave a deafening discharge.

"The dedication sermon was preached by the Bishop of Cincinnati. During the Divine Sacrifice, two of the military stood with drawn swords, one at each side of the altar; they belonged to a guard of honor formed expressly for the occasion. Besides whom, there were detachments from the four militia companies of the city, the Marions, the Grays, the Riflemen, and the Cannoneers from Jefferson Barracks, stationed at convenient distances around the church.

"Well and eloquently did the Rev. Mr. Abell, pastor of Louisville, observe in the evening discourse, alluding to his own and the impressions of the clergy and laity, who were witnesses to the scene ; 'Fellow-Christians and Fellow-citizens! I have seen the flag of my country proudly floating at the mast-head of our richly freighted merchantmen; I have seen it fluttering in the breeze at the head of our armies, but never, never did my heart exult, as when I this day behold it, for the first time, bow before its God! Breathing from infancy the air which our artillery had purified from the infectious spirit of bigotry and persecution, it would be the pride of my soul, to take the brave men by the hand, by whom these cannons were served. But for these cannons, there would be no home for the free, no asylum for the persecuted."

What are the reflections of an American on an occurrence like this? What must they be to one who has ever felt his pride of country stir within him, when in foreign lands he has beheld the degraded slaves of despotism bow in like manner before the altars and idols of heathenish superstition, awed into seeming reverence by the military array which always accompanies the imposing ceremonial of the Popish church? But the military were only a guard of honor! Yes; this is the soft name given to this despotic chain, the musical sound to charm us away from scrutinizing it, and it will be sufficient, doubtless, to drown its harsher clanking in our torpid ears. The guard of honor, that universal appendage of kings and sacred despots, is a serviceable band. It not only helps to swell a procession by its numbers, but with the glitter of its arms, and accoutrements, and gay banners, it adds splendor to the pageant of a heathen ritual. But, reader, it has an essential duty to perform. Its duty is to enforce the ceremonies of worship upon all present. Do you doubt this duty of the guard of honor? The writer will give his own experience of the duties of the guard of honor. I was a stranger in Rome, and recovering from the debility of a slight fever, I was walking for air and gentle exercise in the Corso, on the day of the celebration of the Corpus Domini. From the houses on each side of the street were hung rich tapestries and gold embroidered damasks, and towards me slowly advanced a long procession, decked out with all the heathenish paraphernalia of this self-styled church. In a part of the procession a lofty baldechino, or canopy, borne by men, was held above the idol, the host, before which, as it passed, all heads were uncovered, and every knee bent but mine. Ignorant of the customs of heathenism, I turned my back upon the procession, and close to the side of the houses in the crowd, (as I supposed unobserved,) I was noting in my tablets the order of the assemblage. I was suddenly aroused from my occupation, and staggered by a blow upon the head from the gun and bayonet of a soldier, which struck off my hat far into the crowd. Upon recovering from the shock, the soldier, with the expression of a demon, and his mouth pouring forth a torrent of Italian oaths, in which il diavolo had a prominent place, stood with his bayonet against my breast. I could make no resistance, I could only ask him why he struck me, and receive in answer his fresh volley of unintelligible imprecations, which having delivered, he resumed his place in the guard of honor, by the side of the officiating cardinal.

Americans will not fail to observe in the precious extract of the discourse in which the priest gives vent to his feelings of exultation upon seeing our national flag, the star-spangled banner, humbled in the dust before the Pope, that with the cunning of his craft he flatters the soldiery, and in a sermon professedly to the God of Peace, and in dedicating a temple to his name, he is inspired with no loftier feelings of soul than this, "it would be the pride of my soul, to take the brave men by the hand, by whom these cannons were served." Why? Is it such a brave act to touch off a cannon? Or was the imagination of the priest revelling in the dream of seeing the military power of the country, at a future day, at the beck and service of the Pope, and his Austrian master? of a sect whose very existence depends upon a Union of Church and State. No; let American Christianity proclaim anew to all the world that it can never be wooed to any such unholy alliance. It will keep its garments unspotted from the crimes of the State. It will take none of the responsibilities of the political errors of the age, nor father any of the evils which the unprincipled politicians of the day may bring upon the country and the world as the effect of their political bargainings.

Now is the time for this Christian Republic to show her moral energy. Europe is an anxious spectator of our contests, and is watching the success of this new trial of the strength of our boasted institutions. Oh! what a lesson, what an impressive lesson might free America now read to Europe! what an example of the power of moral over physical government, can she give to the world if she will but rouse herself in her moral might, to the grand effort which the occasion demands? How would the petty jealousies of the different Protestant sects be swallowed up in the magnitude of the one great enterprise? How would every sect rather cheer the others on in their united march against a common foe, and make a common rejoicing of the success of any and every corps, as of a victorious regiment in the same great army?

Will American Christians prepare themselves for this enterprise? Will each sect awake to the feeling of its being a corps of the great Christian army, marching under the command of no earthly leader, fighting with no earthly weapons, and against no earthly foe. Will they wake to the perception of the great truth, that while their great Captain allows each to act separately and independently with-in certain limits, it is he that commands in chief and now orders all his soldiers, under whatever earthly banner enrolled, in united phalanx to go forward, forward in his single service. Which corps will first marshall itself for action? Which will be first in the field? Which will press forward with most zeal for the honor of the advance, for the post of danger? Which in the battle will be most in earn-est to carry forward the standards of truth and plant them upon the battlements of papal darkness? Will any shrink back for fear? Will any be deterred from unholy jealousy of its neighbor? Will any indulge in unchristian, ignoble suspicion of its breth-ren? What cause have any for fear, or jealousy, or suspicion? This enterprise asks no sacrifice of sectarian principle; it demands no surrender of conscientious predilection of each to its own modes and forms; but it does ask the sacrifice of petty prejudice; it does demand the surrender of those miserable jealousies and envyings which more or less belong to some of every sect, when they learn the greater success of another, as if the victory of one were not the victory of all. And what are the weapons of this warfare? The Bible, the Tract, the Infant school, the Sunday school, the common school for all classes, the academy for all classes, the college and university for all classes, a free press for the discussion of all questions. These, all these, are weapons of Protestantism, weapons unknown to Popery! Yes, all unknown to genuine Popery! Let no one be deceived by the Popish apings of Protestant institutions. The Popish seminary has little in common with the Protestant seminary but the name. It is but the sheep's skin that covers the wolfs back; the teeth and the claws are not even well concealed beneath. With the weapons we have named, and with our Education societies, Theological seminaries, and Missionary societies, we need no new organization, no Anti-Popery union. But we must use our arms, and not rest satisfied with the possession of them. They must be furbished anew, and we must prepare ourselves for a vigorous warfare. We must be stirring, if we mean indeed to be victorious. Not a moment is to be lost. The enemy knows well the importance of the present instant. Hear what he says, "We must make haste, the moments are precious.- IF THE PROTESTANT SECTS ARE BEFOREHAND WITH US, IT WILL BE DIFFICULT TO DESTROY THEIR INFLUENCE." Ought not this acknowledgment of the enemy to quicken and encourage to instant effort. And again writes a Catholic Missionary, "zeal for error is always hot, particularly among the Methodists, whom nothing can turn from their track, and who heap absurdity upon absurdity. I should despair, if I should see this sect building a church in my neighborhood." Will not our Methodist brethren take this hint?

CHAPTER XII.

The political duty of American citizens at this crisis.

IN my last number I deemed it a duty to warn the Christian community against the temptation to which they were exposed, in guarding against the political dangers arising from Popery, of leaving their proper sphere of action, and degrading themselves to a common political interest. This is a snare into which they might easily fall, and into which, if Popery could invite or force them, it might keep a jubilee, for its triumph would be sure. The propensity to resist by unlawful means the encroachments of an enemy, because that enemy uses such means against us, belongs to human nature. We are very apt to think, in the irritation of being attacked, that we may lawfully hurl back the darts of a foe, whatever may be their character; that we may "fight the Devil with fire," instead of the milder, yet more effective weapon of "the Lord rebuke thee." The same spirit of Christianity which forbids us to return railing for railing, and persecution for persecution, forbids the use of unlawful or even of doubtful means of defence, merely because an enemy uses them to attack us. If Popery, (as is unblushingly the case,) organizes itself at our elections, if it interferes politically and sells itself to this or that political demagogue or party, it should be remembered, that this is notoriously the true character of Popery. It is its nature. It cannot act otherwise. Intrigue is its appropriate business. But all this is foreign to Christianity. Christianity must not enter the political arena with Popery, nor be mailed in Popish armor. The weapons and stratagems of Popery suit not with the simplicity and frankness of Christianity. Like David with the armor of Saul, it would sink beneath the ill fitting covering, before the Philistine. Yes! Popery will be an overmatch for any Christian who fights behind any other shield than that of Faith, or uses any other sword than the sword of the spirit of Truth.

But whilst deprecating a union of religious sects to act politically against Popery, I must not be misunderstood as recommending no political opposition to Popery by the American community. I have endeavored to rouse Protestants to a renewed and more vigorous use of their religious weapons in their moral war with Popery, but I am not unmindful of another duty, the political duty, which the double character of Popery makes it necessary to urge upon Amercan citizens, with equal force,-the imperious duty of defending the distinctive principles of our civil government. It must be sufficiently manifest to every republican citizen that the civil po-lity of Popery is in direct opposition to all which he deems sacred in government. He must perceive that Popery cannot from its very nature tolerate any of those civil rights which are the peculiar boast of Americans. Should Popery increase but for a little time longer in this country with the alarming rapid-ity with which, as authentic statistics testify, it is advancing at the present time, (and it must not be forgotten that despotism in Europe, in its desperate struggles for existence, is lending its powerful aid to the enterprise,) we may even in this generation learn by sad experience what common sagacity and ordinary research might now teach, in time to arrest the evil, that Popery cannot tolerate our form of government in any of its essential principles.

Popery does not acknowledge the right of the people to govern; but claims for itself the supreme right to govern all people and all rulers by divine right.
It does not tolerate the Liberty of the Press; it takes advantage indeed of our liberty of the press to use its own press against our liberty; but it proclaims in the thunders of the Vatican, and with a voice which it pronounces infallible and unchangeable, that it is a liberty "never sufficiently to be execrated and detested."
It does not tolerate liberty of conscience nor liberty of opinion. The one is denounced by the Sovereign Pontiff as "a most pestilential error," and the other, "a pest of all others most to be dreaded in a state."

It is not responsible to the people in its financial matters. It taxes at will, and is accountable to none but itself.

Now these are political tenets held by Papists in close union with their religious belief, yet these are not religious but civil tenets; they belong to despotic government. Conscience cannot be pleaded against our dealing politically with them. They are separable from religious belief; and if Papists will separate them, and repudiate these noxious principles, and teach and act accordingly, the political duty of exposing and opposing Papists, on the ground of the enmity of their political tenets to our republican government, will cease. But can they do it? If they can, it behoves them to do it without delay. If they cannot, or will not, let them not complain of religious persecution, or of religious intolerance, if this republican people, when it shall wake to a sense of the danger that threatens its blood-bought institutions, shall rally to their defence with some show of indignation. Let them not whine about religious oppression, if the democracy turns its searching eye upon this secret treason to the state, and shall in future scrutinize with something of suspicion, the professions of those foreign friends, who are so ready to rush to a fraternal embrace. Let them not raise the cry of religious proscription, if American republicans shall stamp an indelible brand upon the liveried slaves of a foreign despot, the servile adorers of their "good Emperor," the Austrian conspirators, who now sheltered behind the shield of our religious liberty, dream of security, while sapping the foundations of our civil government. Let no foreign Holy Alliance presume, or congratulate itself, upon the hitherto unsuspicious and generous toleration of its secret agents in this country. America may, for a time, sleep soundly, as innocence is wont to sleep, unsuspicious of hostile attack; but if any foreign power, jealous of the increasing strength of the embryo giant, sends its serpents to lurk within his cradle, let such presumption be assured that the waking energies of the infant are not to be despised, that once having grasped his foes, he will neither be tempted from his hold by admiration of their painted and gilded covering, nor by fear of the fatal embrace of their treacherous folds.

THE MASK THROWN ASIDE.

A charge of hostility to American institutions, against any sect or class in the community, is a very serious one, and only requires evidence to support it, to draw upon all its doings the watchful eye of American freemen. Is it asked, what evidence should you think sufficiently strong to substantiate the charge? I answer, the general principles of the sect would be sufficient, but its own declarations of hostility would certainly substantiate the charge. If a Presbyterian journal, in commenting on the trial of the rioters at Charlestown, should make remarks like the following, the evidence would doubtless be considered complete:

"A system of government which admits a feeling of alarm in the execution of the laws from the vengeance of the mob, which Mr. Austin" (the prosecuting attorney,) "distinctly allows to be the case-a vengeance exhibited by letters to the public officers and threats to the public authorities-may be very fine in theory, very fit for imitation on the part of those who seek the power of the mob in contradistinction to justice and the public interest, but it is not of a nature to invite the reflecting part of the world, and shows at least that it has evils. A public officer in England, who would publicly avow such a fear of executing his duty and carrying into effect the law of the realm, ought and would be thrust out of office by public opinion. This one fact is condemnation OF THE SYSTEM OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS, confirmed lately by numerous other proofs."

Now, could hostility to our institutions be more strongly expressed? and were Presbyterians or any other Protestant sect, thus boldly to avow its political antipathies, every political journal would seize upon this evidence of treason, and trumpet it through the whole country. Why then are they now silent? This treason is actually uttered, nor is it less humiliating, or less dangerous that it is flung in our faces by a set of foreigners in the employment and pay of a foreign government, instead of native citizens. The very words I have quoted are from the Catholic Telegraph, a Roman Catholic journal, edited and published at Cincinnati. Let it be borne in mind too, that a Catholic journal is under the supervision of the Bishops, who exercise a rigid censorship over it, that it speaks the authorized sentiments of the sect, and we shall then perceive something of the importance to be attached to these anti-republican declarations. They are indeed a precious, an invaluable testimonial to the People, of the duplicity of their professed friends. Every where in the land hitherto, Papists have been loudest in professions of attachment to American republican institutions. They have now thrown off the mask. They unblushingly declare, that "our system of government, though very fine in theory, is not of a nature to invite the reflecting part of the world," in short, that it is an experiment that has failed: that "American institutions stand condemned by a single fact in the trial in Boston, and by numerous other proofs." And what has brought out this precious confession; what has occurred to make it a fit time to lay aside the disguise in which they have till now deceived the democracy of the country? What has produced this sudden revolution in their opinion of our form of government? Let us look into this matter.

A body of native citizens is excited to indignation by rumors, (whether true or false alters not the case,) that an act of foul play, such as the history of those nuisances, (convents,) in all countries have abundantly furnished, had occurred in the Charlestown nunnery. This mob, instead of being met with efforts to appease it by immediate explanation, as would have been the case in any Protestant seminary in the land, (for Protestants have no secret mysteries in their discipline,) this mob, I say, is kept for days in an excited state by mysterious manœuvering, on the part of the Catholics, and by irritating threats from the Superior of the Convent, that, 20,000 foreigners under the orders of the Bishop would take vengeance upon the citizens, if they dared to commit any injury upon the Convent, and this threat was uttered in sight of Bunker's hill. Under this provocation the outrage was committed. And is it a matter of surprise? I know of no one who justifies the illegal violence in burning the Convent, but I unhesitatingly say, that the feeling of indignation which animated the populace, was a just and proper feeling. It was roused by the belief, that a young and helpless female had been illegally and cruelly abducted from her friends, and subjected to a secret tyrannical punishment. The feeling, I say under this belief, was not only honorable to the Charlestownians, but had they viewed such an outrage with indifference, they would have shown themselves unworthy of American citizens. Their error, (and it cannot be defended, however it may be palliated by the gross insult which they received,) consisted in suffering their just indignation to flow in an illegal channel, and instead of rallying round the laws, and strengthening them by a strong expression of public opinion at a special meeting of citizens, they leaped the bounds of law and committed a crime which the Papists are trying every possible means to cause to react in their favor. But allowing that no palliating circumstances attended the act of the rioters, that no excuse could be pleaded for them as acting under the impulse of the most stinging insult that could be given to any people by a foreigner; what have these acts to do with our "system of government," or with "American institutions?" In England, forsooth, they manage things better. There are never riots in England! London, Manchester, Bristol, I suppose were never agitated by riots! Paris, Lyons, Marseilles, Nismes, St. Petersburg, Brussels, Frankfort, Rome, Constantinople, none of these places under various systems of government, are ever witnesses to riots!! But this Popish enemy to our institutions may say, it is not the riot but the threatening letters sent to the prosecuting attorney to intimidate him in his duty, that tells against the government. Indeed, and who wrote the letters? Is it quite certain that they were not the production of some Jesuit to fan an excitement which was so likely to be turned to the advantage of his schemes? Threatening letters are much in use in a certain Catholic country called Ireland, under a monarchical system of government. But suppose these letters were not written by Jesuits, but were the production of some wicked, or thoughtless person, what then? Is our form of government the cause of the writing of anonymous threatening letters? Would any other form of government prevent this evil of so alarming magnitude in the eyes of the Catholic Telegraph? Can it be prevented in England, or in any other form of government in the world? Yes, there is one government which could probably prevent it. It is one in which the Inquisition is established, and by means of which, aided by the confessional, all that is considered necessary for the good of the church, could be brought to light, or rather to the ears of those most interested in knowing all secrets that bear upon their own power. How soon we shall be prepared for such a change of government to suit the designs of these busy, foreign emissaries, depends on the continuance of the character for sagacity, intelligence, and virtue of the American people.

Whatever doubts some may have hitherto had in regard to the existence of a foreign conspiracy in the country, I think the case is now become too plain to need further proof. Indeed so bold are these foreign emissaries in the utterance of their anti-republican dogmas, so unblushing in their attacks upon our institutions, that we are often led to exclaim what does this mean? Are these men fools, or madmen? or are they so strong in their support from abroad, that they feel secure in bearding American freemen in their own homes? The latter supposition alone satisfactorily explains their conduct. Austria is now playing a desperate game against liberty, for the safety of her own throne, and for that of her allies. It is the last hazard, and her object is gained if she can destroy the influence of our prosperity upon the people of Europe, a prosperity the natural result of our popular free institutions; and this latter object is effected if by any means, no matter how, riot and disorder can be produced in this country, to be pointed at as the effect of republican government. Americans! Friends of liberty; Friends of order; examine this subject, and decide with your usual sagacity and discretion. You have a busy, a crafty, a powerful, a dangerous set of foreign leaders, controlling and commanding a foreign population, ignorant and infatuated, intermixed with your own population, and who at a single signal from the Pope or from Metternich when the cause of despotism shall require the deed, can spread disorder and riot through all your borders.

Shrink not, Americans, from looking at the truth. You may boast of your peace and prosperity, you hold them both at this moment, at the mercy of Austria! She has a disciplined band of foreigners in the midst of you, who in any season of excitement, she can make to fill your streets and dwellings with fear and confusion. She may not think it prudent or expedient just now to exercise her power, but she has the power, through Popish priests, who hold in check, at their pleasure, the elements of discord, and whose favor you are compelled humbly to conciliate as the price of your tranquillity. And this power is daily increasing, not merely by foreign immigration, and foreign money, but, with the deepest shame be it spoken, by the assistance, direct and indirect, of Protestant Republican Americans, who, with a facility most marvellous, fall into every snare and pleasant baited trap that Popery spreads for them.

 As the last sheet was printing, an article of intelligence was received, bearing importantly on the subject of this volume. Bishop England, the busy Jesuit, whom I have had occasion before to notice, has just put forth an address to his Diocese, at Charleston, on his return from Europe, from which we make the following extracts

"During my absence I have not been negligent of the concerns of this Diocese. I have endeavored to interest in its behalf several eminent and dignified personages whom 1 had the good fortune to meet; and have continued to impress with a conviction of the propriety of continuing their generous aid, the administration of those societies from which it has previously received valuable succor. In Paris and at Lyons I have conversed with those excellent men who manage the affairs of the Association for propagating the Faith. This year their grant to this Diocese has been larger than usual. I have also had opportunities of communication with some of the Council which administers the Austrian Association; they continue to feel an interest in our concerns. The Propaganda in Rome, though greatly embarrassed, owing to the former plunder of its funds by rapacious infidels, has this year contributed to our extraordinary expenditure; as has the holy father himself, in the kindest manner, from the scanty stock which constitutes his private allowance; but which he economizes to the utmost for the purpose of being able to devote the savings to works of piety, of charity, and of literature."

"The prelates of the Church of Ireland, are ready, as far as our hierarchy shall require their co-operation, to give to them their best exertions in selecting and forwarding from amongst the numerous aspirants to the sacred ministry that are found in the island of saints, (Ireland,) a sufficient number of those properly qualified to supply our deficiencies. I have had very many applications, and accepted a few, who, I trust, have been judiciously selected."

We have here additional confirmation, if any were wanted, that in countries where Church and State are closely united, and where consequently every religious association, (totally unlike our reli-gious associations, which have no connection with the government,) is directly connected with politi-cal objects, there is a great and special effort making to effect certain objects in the United States. We have no less than three great societies, all formed to operate on this country. THEY say religiously, but let Americans, who know that Aus-tria makes no movement which is not intended for political effect, judge whether religious benevolence towards this benighted land, or a deeper and more earthly feeling of political self-preservation prompts her "continued feeling of interest in our concerns."

Title: The REAL Controllers of the USA

FACING AMERICANS TODAY!

Issue # 74 // January 13, 2006//editor: Darryl Eberhart
http://www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net/Eber...ollers_usa.html

(Updated: Evening of January 13, 2006 with additional paragraph for Internet posting)

"The Real Controllers of the USA"

(And of Much of the Rest of the Western World)

The questions of the day concerning these very powerful controllers:

(1) Are they "the Jews, Israel, & the Zionists", or are they the Vatican and her Jesuits?
(2) Who really choreographed World War II – was it "the Jews and the Zionists", or was it the Vatican and her Jesuits?

((NOTE: All emphasis throughout this newsletter, unless otherwise noted, is by the editor of "Tackling the Tough Topics (TTT)". Some issues of my TTT newsletters and my "Examining the Tough Issues (ETI)" newsletters can be read on the following three Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net , www.calltodecision.com , and www.libertytothecaptives.net. The last site has a link to the first site.))

WARNING: This issue of the TTT newsletter may seriously "disturb" some folks' "comfort zones". However, TRUTH is more important than any of our "comfort zones".

IMPORTANT NOTE #1: I (the editor of the ETI & TTT newsletters) am not a Roman Catholic; I also most definitely am not anti-Roman Catholic as far as individual Roman Catholics go. My dad and 90% of my relatives are Roman Catholic; my best friend is Roman Catholic; and the majority of my friends are Roman Catholic. I am, however, against the top levels of secret societies (from the hierarchy of the Jesuit Order to the hierarchy of Freemasonry). This is because these secret societies control the leadership of the Roman Catholic Church (through the Jesuit Order and P2 Masonry). These secret societies also control the leadership of most of the larger, non-Catholic, Christian denominations. I am also against any religious hierarchy that tries to place itself equal to or above the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God – or equal to or above God's Holy Word (i.e., the Holy Bible) and His Ten Commandments!

IMPORTANT NOTE #2: We can no longer afford to REMAIN SILENT on these issues for fear of offending any particular group – in this case, Roman Catholics. Please carefully consider this quote by author Dave Hunt: "We are told to love one another as Christ has loved us. Pop psychology trivializes that command by equating it with a 'positive' attitude. Forgotten is the first duty of love: to speak the truth (Ephesians 4:15). Real love does not flatter or soothe when correction is needed but [rather] points out the error which is blinding and harming the loved one. Christ said, 'As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore, and repent' (Revelation 3:19). Instead, the idea is now current that love excludes rebuke, ignores the truth, and seeks unity at any price. Only disaster can result."
Why Am I Writing More & More About Roman Catholicism?

This editor of the ETI and TTT newsletters has been writing more on the Roman Catholic Church's hierarchy, and especially its Jesuit Order, in recent newsletters because I keep uncovering more and more about the deep hatred that the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church has for independent Bible-believing Christians, Protestants, Orthodox Christians, and Jews. We Americans have, for the most part, been largely ignorant of the well-documented history of the Roman Catholic Church in conducting brutal religious genocide (via Inquisition, 'holy' wars, and 'holy' crusades) against all the afore-mentioned groups. (Please see my TTT newsletters entitled "Death by Government and Death by Church" and "Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts" on the following Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net and www.calltodecision.com.) Sadly, many Americans believe the "ecumenical rhetoric" of the Roman Catholic Church's hierarchy – i.e., that she has "changed her ways" and now loves all the "separated brethren". However, my study of the Papacy shows me that this is just a RUSE. (Per Webster's New World Dictionary a "ruse" is: "a stratagem" [which is] "any trick or scheme for achieving some purpose".) The "purpose" is to bring all non-Catholic Christian denominations under the "umbrella" (i.e., the authoritative and totalitarian rule) of the Papacy!

Yes, the Papacy, despite its "ecumenical rhetoric", has not changed a bit over the many centuries in the following categories:

· Its deep hatred of Jews, all independent Bible-believing non-Catholic Christians, Protestants, and Orthodox Christians (as recently as the 1940s we find the Roman Catholic Ustashi in Croatia, led on by priests, monks, and friars, brutally slaughtering from 600,000 to one million Serb Orthodox Christian men, women, elderly, and children);
· Its long-held dream to bring all non-Catholic Christians under its monopolistic, totalitarian, ecclesiastical control;
· Its long-held dream to bring all world leaders – especially those in "Christian" countries – under the temporal power of the pope. (That is, the Papacy would be the top player and "controller" in a one-world government – just like it was the top player and "controller" on the European continent for many centuries! Kings indeed bowed before popes.)

Indeed, power – absolute power – has long been the Vatican's "primary objective". History has recorded the Vatican's deep hatred for religious liberty and freedom of conscience. The U.S. Constitution, with it "Bill of Rights" guaranteeing such liberties, has long been hated by the Vatican. (For a good example of this hatred of religious liberty and freedom of conscience, read the Syllabus of Errors that was issued in 1864 by Pope Pius IX.) I have heard that there is an acronym in use by some Knights of Columbus in America. This acronym is "M.A.C.": "Make America Catholic". America is the last "roadblock" in the way of the Vatican and the rest of the globalist rich and power elite in their dreams for one-world government and one-world religion. Is America scheduled for a religious genocide – another Inquisition – as occurred in the 1940s in Croatia? I believe the danger is very real and possibly quite imminent – and that is why I am writing about the Roman Catholic Church's hierarchy, its long-held dreams for domination, and its well-document history of religious genocide!

DEFINITIONS (Listed, hopefully, alphabetically):

((Please carefully read all these definitions – they are critical to understanding this newsletter.))

"ADL" (per Editor of TTT): The Jewish Anti-Defamation League – a sub-organization of the Jewish Masonic B'nai B'rith organization.

"B'nai B'rith" (per Editor of TTT): A Jewish Masonic organization.

"B'nai B'rith" (per 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia): "(Hebrew [for] 'Sons of the Covenant'): Oldest and largest Jewish service and fraternal organization in the U.S. Founded [in] 1843; membership in this country and Canada, 1950, was 345,000… Lodges also exist in more than a score of foreign countries… National Headquarters are located at Washington, D.C."

"Freemason" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "A member of an international secret society having as its principles brotherliness, charity, and mutual aid."

"Front" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meaning #15): "A person or group used to cover or obscure the activity or objectives of another controlling person or group."

"Illuminati" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "1. People who have, or profess to have, special intellectual or spiritual enlightenment. 2. Any of various societies, usually secret, composed of such people."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: The modern version of the Illuminati was formed on May 1, 1776 by Jesuit-trained Adam Weishaupt, who taught Catholic Canon Law at Jesuit Ingolstadt University in Bavaria (in southern Germany). Weishaupt pretended to leave the Jesuit Order (i.e., he was 'sheep dipped' – see definition of 'sheep dipping' listed later in this newsletter) so that he could set up a front group called the Illuminati (that the Jesuits could use for their own purposes). This Jesuit front group, the Illuminati, fomented and orchestrated the bloody French Revolution of 1789-1799. Thus, by using this "front group", the Jesuit Order was given a great degree of "plausible deniability" as to its role in the French Revolution.))

"Israel" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meanings #5 through #7): "5. Country between the Mediterranean Sea and the country of Jordan: established (1948) by the U. N. as a Jewish state… 6. The Jewish people, as descendents of Jacob. 7. Any group of Christians regarding themselves as chosen by God."

"Jesuit" (per Webster's 1828 Dictionary of the English Language): "One of the Society of Jesus, so called, founded by Ignatius Loyola; a society remarkable for their cunning in propagating their principles."

"Jesuitism" (per Webster's 1828 Dictionary of the English Language): "[1.] The arts, principles and practices of the Jesuits. 2. Cunning; deceit; hypocrisy; prevarication; deceptive practices to effect a purpose."

((IMPORTANT NOTE: Please carefully read the following excerpts about the Jesuit Order.))

"Jesuit Order" or "Jesuits" (Excerpts from the 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia):

"Jesuits, or Society of Jesus: A monastic order of the Roman Catholic Church, founded (1536) in Paris by Ignatius of Loyola. Originally the special function of the order was to care for the sick and to fortify the position of the Pope within the [Roman Catholic] Church. [Ed. Note: The Jesuit Order was primarily founded to counter the Protestant Reformation.] The latter function soon became the principal one of the order and thus it is not surprising that the order was approved by Pope Paul III as early as 1540, the first generalship being vested in the founder. By the time Ignatius died in 1566…his order had increased from 60 to more than 1000 members. The members had to vow not only chastity, poverty, and implicit obedience to authority…but, especially, compliance with the commands of the Pope in going to any country and under any conditions to convert heretics and infidels, especially Moors and Jews.

…Their special obedience to the Pope naturally caused the Jesuits to fight against the greatest danger to the Catholic Church, Protestantism. Through this fight, the Jesuits developed political talents which soon made the members of the order the most versatile representatives of the Catholic Church in worldly affairs. In order to achieve this goal, a complicated organization of the utmost rigidity was developed. The Jesuits received the rights both of mendicant orders and of secular priests. They recognized only the superiority of their general [Ed. Note: the Jesuit Superior General] and the Pope. This gave them great worldly power. Furthermore, from their inception they devoted much interest to education, and early in their history were appointed to many highly important chairs of theology at the leading universities of Europe.
…Associated with all layers of society, from the humble to the powerful, the Jesuits combined great intellectual versatility and a shrewd political apprehension with a deep religious mysticism which was especially connected with the adoration of the Blessed Virgin. A certain soldierly spirit was furthered by the constitution of the order which provided severest punishment for members who did not comply with their vows.
…The Jesuits tried also to restrain nationalistic tendencies everywhere and to emphasize the universality of the Catholic Church. Their missionary branch was no less important. Due to the fact that they [initially] worked principally in the Indies, Japan, China, and Abyssinia, the Jesuits' spiritual work was often connected with the play of power politics. [Ed. Note: And it still is!] Thus they often played, directly or indirectly, a vital role in the political and economic conquest of the countries in which they served. …Flourishing particularly in Spain and Portugal, members of the [Jesuit] order were among the first to set foot on the Spanish and Portuguese colonies in America.
Their remarkable rise in power at European courts [Ed. Note: where they became father confessors to kings (and their mistresses), queens, princes, and other leading figures in the royal court] and among the people led many institutions of learning, their teachers, and the non-Jesuit clergy to fear the Jesuits. It was largely for this reason that the parliament of France resisted the Jesuits in their attempts to obtain a foothold.
…By 1710, the order had more than 19,000 members and more than 22,000 by 1749. Increasingly feared and suspected by many European rulers [Ed. Note: most of whom were Roman Catholic], they were first driven out of Portugal (1759), and other countries followed suit. [Ed. Note: This occurred because the Jesuits had a very nasty habit of fomenting wars and revolutions, and of assassinating heads of State who wouldn't "play ball" with them.] In France…they were finally expelled in 1764. [Ed. Note: The French Revolution was "payback" for that expulsion.] Three years later Spain revoked its approval of the order. [Ed. Note: By 1931, according to Canadian historian J.E.C. Shepherd, the Jesuits had been expelled from 83 countries, city-states, and cities.]

bull, but in 1814, it was restored by Pope Pius VII. [Ed. Note: Pope Pius VII restored the Jesuit Order in exchange for his release from prison, where he had spent five years thinking over his decision to restore the Jesuits.]
…Later in the 19th century, however, the Jesuits were alternately driven out and permitted to exist in various European countries. They had to leave Italy in 1861, but were allowed to return in 1929. They were expelled from Germany in 1872, but permitted to exist there again after the fall of the Empire in 1918. In France the order was frequently expelled and restored after 1830 and finally permitted to return in 1919. England, Ireland, and the U.S., however, never passed any laws against the Jesuits. [Ed. Note: This was not a very smart move!]
At present [Ed. Note: this was written around 1955], the order totals about 25,000 members in 50 'provinces' [Ed. Note: each supervised by a Jesuit Provincial General], several of them in the U.S. Their influence on the hierarchy of the [Roman] Catholic Church has increased continually since about 1860. In the U.S. they possess a large number of educational institutions, the most noteworthy being in New York City; Washington and Georgetown, D.C.; Baltimore; Buffalo, New York; St. Louis, Missouri; New Orleans, Louisiana; Denver, Colorado; Cincinnati and Cleveland, Ohio; Omaha, Nebraska; and San Francisco, California."

"Jew" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "1. A person descended, or regarded as descended, from the ancient Hebrews of Biblical times. 2. A person whose religion is Judaism."

"Knights of Columbus" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "An international fraternal, benevolent, and proselyting society of Roman Catholic men, founded in 1882." [Ed. Note: I have heard that it is also called "the Pope's militia".]

((Ed. Comment concerning the preceding 'definition': Author and publisher Jack T. Chick tells us the following about the Knights of Columbus in his 1983 book Smokescreens: "The legions of Rome are awesome. More than one million practicing Catholics make up the ranks of the Knights of Columbus. They are fraternally pledged to the ideal of bringing America under papal rule. They are powerful, wealthy, [and] loyal."))

"Knights of Malta" (per excerpts from the Order's own historical data as provided to Eric Jon Phelps, author of the well-researched book Vatican Assassins):

"The Order of St. John [Ed. Note: which later became the Knights of Malta] was founded before the taking of Jerusalem in 1099 by the armies of the First Crusade [Ed. Note: by Roman Catholic Crusaders, and in accordance with the proclamation calling for 'Holy Crusade' by Pope Urban II]. It began as a monastic community dedicated to St. John the Baptist, which administered a hospice-infirmary for pilgrims to the Holy Land. Originally connected with the Benedictines, it became, under Blessed Gerard (1120), an independent organization. By the [papal] Bull of 15 February 1113, addressed to Gerard, Pope Pascal II approved the confraternity of the Hospital of St. John, placed it under the protection of the Holy See, and ensured its right of freely electing its heads…without any interference from other ecclesiastical or any lay authority. In virtue of this [papal] Bull and of subsequent Papal acts, the Hospital became an exempt Order of the [Roman Catholic] Church.

Owing to the political situation after the setting up by the Crusaders of the Kingdom of Jerusalem, the Order…was obliged to assume military functions for the protection of the sick, the pilgrims, and the Christian territory which the Crusaders had won back from the Muslims. Accordingly, the Order of the Hospital of St. John acquired the additional character of an Order of Knighthood. The Knights were thus also Religious, bound by the three monastic vows of Obedience, Chastity, and Poverty. It thus became a persona mixta, a religious-military Order.
…In 1291 Acre, the last Christian stronghold in the Holy Land was lost and the Order settled temporarily in Cyprus.
…With the occupation of the island of Rhodes, completed in 1310…the Order acquired territorial sovereignty as well (and the Knights of St. John came to be called Knights of Rhodes).
…The Knights gallantly repulsed numerous Turkish assaults, until the Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent attacked Rhodes… On Christmas Eve of 1522 the Knights were forced to capitulate and, on 1 January 1523, left the island with military honors. For the next seven years the Order, while vested with international sovereignty, was deprived of territory, until the cession by the Emperor Charles V…of the islands of Malta, Gozo, and Comino, as well as Tripoli in North Africa, in sovereign fief.
…The navy of the Order of St. John (or of Malta as it now came to be called) became one of the most powerful in the Mediterranean…
…In 1607 and, again, in 1620, the dignity of Grand Master was conjoined with the title of Prince of the Holy Roman Empire and in 1630 with the style of Eminence.
…In 1798 [Napoleon] Bonaparte, engaged in a campaign against Egypt, occupied the island of Malta and drove out the Order.
…After temporary seats in Messina, Catania, and Ferrara the Order finally established itself in 1834 in Rome, where it holds, extra-territorially, the Malta Palace… From 1805 the Order was ruled by Lieutenants, until in 1879 when Pope Leo XIII restored the Grandmastership and the honors of a Cardinal attaching to it.
…The Order of Malta constitutes the sole unbroken continuation of the Order of the Hospital of St. John recognized in 1113. It alone is a religious Order of the Catholic Church and at the same time a Catholic Order of Knighthood.
…On April 28, 1927 at the special request of…Pope Pius XI, the Supreme Council of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta granted a Constitution (Charter) creating the: American Chapter of the Knights of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta."

((Interesting Note by Editor of TTT: The Hospitallers (later to become the Knights of Malta) were one of three religious-military orders founded in the 12th century – the other two being the Knights Templar (or, the Templars) and the Teutonic Knights.

Concerning the Templars we are told the following by the 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia: “The Templars were founded in Jerusalem… The new order was given lodgings near the so-called Temple of Solomon… It was formally confirmed by Pope Honorius II in 1128. …The order became…the international bankers of their time. They were the predecessors of the great banking families such as the Medici. …The Templars were brought down by [King] Philip IV of France, and Pope Clement V. …The order [i.e., the Knights Templar] was disbanded in 1312, and much of their great wealth was given to the Knights of St. John [which later became the Knights of Malta].” This is indeed very important to remember – that this Roman Catholic Military Order, the Knights of Malta, which is co-located with the Jesuit Superior General in Rome, inherited “much” of the “great wealth” of the Knights Templar! Also quite interestingly, at least three Knights of Malta have headed up the CIA: William “Wild Bill” Donovan, John McCone, and William Casey. Another Knight of Malta, James Jesus Angleton, for many years was the chief of the Counterintelligence Division at the CIA – as well as heading up both the Vatican and Israel “Desks” at the CIA – and, was the CIA liaison to the Warren (“Whitewash”) Commission.))

“Mafia” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): “A secret society of criminals thought [Ed. Note: it has been well proven] to exist in the U.S. and other countries, engaging in blackmail, illicit trade in narcotics, etc.”

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: If you doubt that the Mafia exists, then please read the book Double Cross by Sam and Chuck Giancana. This book reveals connections between “the Mob” and the CIA – especially in the assassination business. It is $10.45 postpaid from “Radio Liberty”. To order a copy by credit card, please call their toll-free order line at 1-800-544-8927.))

“Masonry” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meaning #3): “Same as Freemasonry.”

“Opus Dei” ((per The World Book Dictionary (1989)): “An international religious organization of Roman Catholic laymen and priests, founded in Spain.” ((Ed. Question: Might the primary objective of this organization, which includes in its membership a fair number of wealthy and powerful Roman Catholics, be to advance the New World Order agenda of the Papacy?))

“P2 (or P-2) Masonry” (per John Daniel, author of the book The Grand Design Exposed): “There is a Masonic Propaganda group, number two…known as the ‘P-2 Club’, with its headquarters being in Rome. …The P-2 Club is a propaganda society of the world’s elite which includes high-ranking Roman Catholic prelates and, of course, Jesuits.”

((Ed. Comment to the preceding ‘definition’: P2 Masonry had its fingerprints all over the murder of Pope John Paul I, who was eliminated when he decided to “clean house” at both the Vatican and the Vatican bank – i.e., he had learned that many top-level Roman Catholic prelates, including cardinals, were high-level Masons and he had made plans to remove them from power. If you have trouble believing that Pope John Paul I was murdered, then I suggest that you read the book The Murder of John Paul I by Vance Ferrell. This book is $6.50 postpaid. It provides very strong evidence that Pope John Paul I was murdered by his Masonic enemies inside the Vatican. To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to "Harvestime Books" and mail it to: Harvestime Books // P.O. Box 300 // Altamont, TN 37301. To order a copy by credit card, please call 1-931-692-2777.))

"Papacy" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "1. The position, authority, or rank of the pope. 2. The period of time during which a pope rules. 3. The succession of popes; popes collectively. 4. The government of the Roman Catholic Church, headed by the Pope."

"Red Herring" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): "Something used to divert attention from the basic issue."

"Scapegoat" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): "A person, group, or thing upon whom the blame for the mistakes or crimes of others is thrust."

"Sheep dipping" (per author Craig Roberts in his excellent book The Medusa File):

"An individual who was 'sheep-dipped' was discharged from the military 'on paper', but during his absence his time in grade, promotions, retirement years and other perks continued just as if he had never left the service. After serving with the CIA, the person could return to his regular branch [of military service] and continue just as if he had never left. …During the Cold War, and later Vietnam, it [i.e., sheep dipping] was done to provide the CIA – by now referred to as 'the Company' because of the number of contract agents being handled – with a system of 'Plausible Deniability'."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: The Vatican has done the same thing for centuries through its Jesuit "temporal coadjutors" – i.e., its "Jesuits of the short robe" – men who infiltrate governments, publishing companies, newspapers, other church denominations, other churches' seminaries, revolutionary movements, etc., in order to "steer" (i.e., direct) these governments, organizations, institutions, and movements in the direction that the Vatican (or the Jesuit Superior General) desires! Jesuit-trained Adam Weishaupt (who taught Catholic Canon Law at Jesuit Ingolstadt University in Bavaria) is a classic example of this "Jesuit sheep dipping". Weishaupt, who pretended to leave the Jesuit Order (i.e., he was 'sheep dipped'), set up a front group called the Illuminati on May 1, 1776 that the Jesuits could use for their own nefarious purposes. This Jesuit front group, the Illuminati, fomented and orchestrated the bloody French Revolution of 1789-1799. Thus, the Jesuit Order was given a great degree of "plausible deniability" as to its major role in fomenting & orchestrating this bloody revolution.))

"Smoke screen" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): "Anything said or done to conceal or mislead."

"Tammany Society [a.k.a., Tammany Hall] (per 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia): "A powerful Democratic political organization of New York City, incorporated in 1789 and historically often associated with bossism and other political abuses."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: It has been reported that one cannot run for dog catcher in New York City (and certain other large cities in the USA) without the blessing of the Roman Catholic Knights of Columbus!))

"Vatican" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "1. The papal palace, consisting of a group of buildings in Vatican City. 2. The papal government or authority."

"Vatican City" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): Independent papal state, constituted in 1929 as an enclave in Rome…"

"Zionism" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "A movement formerly for reestablishing, now for supporting, the Jewish national state of Israel."

"Zionist" (per Editor of TTT): "A member of the Zionist movement (i.e., Zionism)."

"Aware that the Rothschilds are an important Jewish family, I looked them up in [the] Encyclopedia Judaica and discovered that they bear the title 'Guardians of the Vatican Treasury'… The appointment of Rothschild gave the Black Papacy [i.e., the hierarchy of the Jesuit Order] absolute financial privacy and secrecy. Who would ever search a family of orthodox Jews for the key to the wealth of the Roman Catholic Church?"
F. Tupper Saussy (Author of the book Rulers of Evil)

"The Rothschilds were Jesuits who used their Jewish background as a façade to cover their sinister activities. The Jesuits, working through Rothschild and [financier Nicholas] Biddle, sought to gain control of the banking system of the United States."
Bill Hughes (Author of The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked)

"The Jesuits function like the Papacy's secret worldwide police. They are very secretive and go to great lengths to keep their operations secret. They tell no one that they are Jesuits. To all outside appearances, they appear as normal people."
Bill Hughes

"…The [Roman Catholic] Church to rule the world; the ['White'] Pope to rule the Church; [and] the Jesuits [Ed. Note: headed by the 'Black Pope', the Jesuit Superior General] to rule the ['White'] Pope – such was and is the program of the Order [i.e., Society] of Jesus [i.e., the Jesuit Order]."

John Daniel (Author of the book The Grand Design Exposed)

"The Jesuit Order at last reached the pinnacle of its power and prestige in the early eighteenth century [i.e., the early 1700s]. It had become more influential and more wealthy than any other organization in the world. It held a position in world affairs that no oath-bound group of men has ever held before or since… 'Nearly all the Kings and Sovereigns of Europe had only Jesuits as directors of their consciences [i.e., as confessor-priests], so that the whole of Europe appeared to be governed by Jesuits only.'" (1927; using a short quote by Jesuit Cordara)
Boyd Barrett (Ex-Jesuit)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: The Jesuits are "back", stronger today than they ever were in the past! And much of their power base is here in the USA (e.g., Georgetown)!))

"There was no disguise they (the Jesuits) could not assume, and therefore, there was no place into which they could not penetrate. They could enter unheard the closet of the Monarch, or the Cabinet of the Statesman. They could sit unseen in convocation or General Assembly, and mingle unsuspected in the deliberations and debates.
There was no tongue they could not speak, and no creed they could not profess, and thus there was no people among whom they might not sojourn, and no church whose membership they might not enter and whose functions they might not discharge. The could execrate [i.e., sharply denounce] the Pope with the Lutheran, and swear the Solemn League with the Covenanter."
J.A. Wylie (Rev.; Author of The History of Protestantism)

"There are other secret and semi-secret organizations such as the International Bankers, the Council on Foreign Relations, the Bilderberger Group, [the] Club of Rome, the Trilateral Commission, the New Age Movement, the Illuminati, and Freemasonry, who are all deeply involved in global politics, and who actively promote the uniting of the people of our planet under a New World Order. However…these all are but mere 'front' organizations, behind which the true source of power [Ed. Note: the Vatican and its Jesuits] hides and uses to distribute and channel its designs. And, as in any conspiracy, secrecy and shifting attention and blame away from itself is paramount to its success."
John Daniel

"The conscious and intelligent manipulation of the organized habits and opinions of the masses is an important element in democratic society. Those who manipulate this unseen mechanism of society constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of our country... I. INTRODUCTION

One of the most important topics of our day that needs to be openly and fully discussed is this: "Who is really running America, and much of the western world, today – who is really at the top of the power elite pyramid? Is it 'the Jewish bankers, Jewish Masonry such as B'nai B'rith and the Anti-Defamation League (ADL), Zionists, Jewish neo-conservatives in the current U.S. Administration, and Israel' (collectively known to some as 'the Jews'), OR is it the Vatican State/Papacy with her Jesuit Order, Opus Dei, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, numerous monastic orders, and large priesthood?" Indeed, surely "inquiring minds" would like to know.

Another very important question that we must ask is this: "Who controls the very powerful top levels of Freemasonry?"

Another very important question that we need to consider: "Where do organized crime and big political machines (such as 'Tammany Hall') fit into the picture of globalist elite control of nations?"

Let's take a brief look at some interesting history (such as the attempts to restore papal authority in England in the 1500s; the bloody French Revolution [1789-1799]; the secret meetings at Vienna, Verona, and Chieri; World War I; and, World War II), and then we will try to ascertain who is running the USA today.
I covered some interesting "territory" concerning World War II in my TTT newsletter entitled "World War II" and in my TTT newsletter entitled "Death by Government and Death by Church". Both of these newsletters can be viewed on these two Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net and www.calltodecision.com.

True history is indeed often "stranger than fiction".

II. ATTEMPTS TO RESTORE PAPAL AUTHORITY IN ENGLAND IN THE 1500s

What happened in England in the 1500s and following centuries actually has a lot to do with what has happened in the history of the United States!

Here is a statement I made in a recent article that I wrote: "Editor of ETI and TTT has come to the following conclusion after studying the history of the Roman Catholic Church and Europe: It is virtually impossible to clearly understand European history from the 16th century to the present time without 'viewing' it through the 'lens' of the 'Reformation-Counter Reformation', Roman Catholic efforts to bring England back under papal authority, and the Jesuit Order."

Indeed, the Vatican tried mightily, especially through her Jesuit Order, to return England under papal authority by force. This "force" included attempts to assassinate various English monarchs, such as Queen Elizabeth I and King James I; attempts to foment revolution and civil war in various parts of Great Britain; and an actual direct "frontal assault" invasion attempt (i.e., the launching of the infamous Spanish Armada in 1588).

Please consider this quote from an article that I wrote on December 28, 2005:

"The Vatican (and especially her Jesuit Order from the mid 1500s) tried to bring England back under papal authority by force and subversion. A number of popes and European monarchs conspired to assassinate British monarchs, to foment revolutions in the British Isles, and to actually land foreign troops on British soil. These attempts to bring England back under the pope's authority by force reached their zenith in 1588 when the 130-ship Spanish Armada, carrying 20,000 troops, sailed for the British Isles. Pope Sixtus V had promised Spanish King Phillip II 200,000 crowns the moment the armada sailed, and another 100,000 crowns when troops were placed on shore in England. Researchers have examined British, French, and Spanish 'State papers' – and Vatican documents, for this era. These State papers and Vatican documents clearly show the Vatican's involvement not only in the planned invasion of England by the Spanish Armada, but also in numerous attempts to assassinate Queen Elizabeth I!

Sadly, Roman Catholic writers, editors, and apologists have made, and continue to make, tremendous efforts to rewrite and revise history and, in the process, whitewash the Vatican and her Jesuit Order's frequent involvement in court intrigues, assassinations and attempted assassinations of heads of State, fomenting of revolutions and wars, infiltration of governments, orchestration of religious genocide, etc. Fortunately, a number of researchers and authors, such as Albert Close, have examined various nations' State papers and/or actual Vatican documents, which substantiate totally the nefarious activities of the Vatican and her Jesuit Order in Britain throughout the past four centuries!"
When the Vatican and her friends amongst the European Catholic monarchs saw that their efforts to bring England back under papal authority through force were not working out, they decided to bring England back under the pope's thumb through massive infiltration of the British government, British publishing interests, churches and seminaries in Great Britain, etc. Where force had failed, infiltration succeeded beyond the Papacy's wildest dreams!

When the Vatican and her friends amongst the European Catholic monarchs saw that their efforts to destroy the American Constitutional Republic (with religious liberty)

through force, they decided to destroy the American Constitutional Republic through massive infiltration of its government, its publishing interests, its churches and seminaries, etc. Where force had failed, infiltration succeeded beyond the Papacy's wildest dreams! ((If you don't believe this, then please check out F. Tupper Saussy's quotes in Section X., A.))

III. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION (1789-1799)

The modern version of the Illuminati "took the heat" for fomenting and orchestrating the bloody French Revolution of 1789-1799. But who were the real culprits, working as they usually do, "behind the scenes"?

Remember how we earlier described Jesuit-trained Adam Weishaupt, founder of the modern version of the Illuminati, as a Jesuit who had been "sheep dipped". In other words, Adam Weishaupt pretended to forsake the Jesuits while continuing to work "under cover" for the Jesuits. (Please see again the definition for "sheep dipping" at the beginning of this newsletter.) By the way, Weishaupt died "in the good graces" of the Roman Catholic Church!

Here are a number of quotes concerning the French Revolution by Bill Hughes, author of the two excellent books The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked:

"[Jesuit Adam] Weishaupt established the [modern version of the] Illuminati specifically to be a front organization behind which the Jesuits could hide. After being [formally] abolished by [Pope] Clement XIV in 1773, the Jesuits used the Illuminati and other organizations to carry out their operations. Thus, the front organizations would be blamed for the trouble caused by the Jesuits."

"Why would the Jesuits use their implacable enemy, the Jews, to further their designs for world dominion? The Jesuits never do anything out in the open where they can be exposed. If they are recognized as the culprits, they will be blamed and suffer the consequences, but if they can use someone else as the 'cause of the world's problems', especially an enemy they can destroy in the process, then they have simultaneously accomplished two of their objectives. The Jewish people are the perfect scapegoat. Since the Rothschilds are Jesuit agents operating under a Jewish cover, using them in forming the Illuminati back in 1776 effectively throws the onus of this conspiracy on the Jews. The Rothschilds are certainly not the only Jesuit agents that operate under a Jewish front.
The following sources [Ed. Note: Bill Hughes lists a number of books at the end of this paragraph] indicate that [Jesuit] Adam Weishaupt and the Rothschilds [Ed. Note: the "Guardians of the Vatican Treasury"] were the brains and the wealth behind the French Revolution."

"The Jesuits, [Jesuit Adam] Weishaupt, and the Rothschilds managed to cast the blame for the French Revolution on their front organization, the Illuminati!"

Front organizations, "sheep dipping", scapegoats, red herrings, and smoke screens – all of these are SOP (standard operating procedures) for the Jesuit Order!

IV. WHO CONTROLS THE TOP LEVELS OF FREEMASONRY?

This is indeed a very important question. I have listed many top-level Freemasons who have served in powerful positions in the U.S. government and in U.S. Intelligence agencies in a number of my TTT newsletters. For example, J. Edgar Hoover, longtime director of the FBI, was a high-level Freemason. Allen Dulles, the CIA director whom JFK fired, was a high-level Freemason. A number of U.S. presidents have also been high-level Freemasons, such as Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, and Gerald Ford. So it is indeed very important that we know who or what controls the top levels of Freemasonry.

Please carefully consider the following quotes:

"…If you trace up Masonry, through all its Orders, till you come to the grand tip-top, head Mason of the World, you will discover that the dread individual and the Chief [i.e., the Black Pope, the Superior General] of the Society of Jesus [i.e., the Jesuits] are one and the same person." – James Parton (American historian)

"This inner and invisible Freemasonry is international in extent, and it is within the Inner Circle that the Jesuits conceal themselves, work, and mastermind the projects that suit their goals." – John Daniel (Author of The Grand Design Exposed)

Now consider the ramifications of this: The Jesuit Superior General, the "Black Pope", not only controls his own Jesuit Order and his powerful Knights of Malta, but also the high-level Freemasons. Considering how many high-level Freemasons and Knights of Malta have been directors and assistant directors at such organizations as the CIA and FBI ought to tip us off as to who often directs and steers "covert operations" and other nefarious activities, such as assassinations, here in the USA!

V. THE SECRET MEETINGS AT VIENNA, VERONA, AND CHIERI

Sadly, many Americans are largely unaware of three very important secret meetings that took place in the 19th century. These meetings took place in:

· Vienna, Austria (1814-15);
· Verona, Italy (1822); and,
· Chieri, Italy (1825).

You see, dear reader, this American "experiment" with religious liberty for all, democratic representative government under a constitutional republic, freedom of speech, etc., greatly disturbed both the Papacy and the Roman Catholic European monarchs. They feared that this "disease" of freedom might, if unchecked, spread to Europe. Thus, the American Constitutional Republic, with its religious liberty (and populated mainly by Protestants), was targeted for destruction soon after the birth of this republic! ((If you doubt this, then please read the Vatican's own words of hatred for religious liberty and for the U.S. Constitution in the next section (i.e., Section VI.)!))

Here is what Bill Hughes, author of the two excellent books The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked, has written about these three important historical meetings:

"These three meetings, at Vienna, [Austria in 1814-15,] Verona, [Italy in 1822,] and Chieri, [Italy in 1825] were held with as much secrecy as possible. However, one man attended the first two meetings that would not be silenced. British foreign minister George Canning contacted the U.S. government to warn them that the monarchs of Europe [Ed. Note: with the encouragement and support of the Papacy and its Jesuits] were planning to destroy the free institutions of America."

"During this Congress [of Verona, Italy in 1822], it was decided that America would be the target of Jesuit emissaries and that America was to be destroyed at all costs. Every principle of the [U.S.] Constitution was to be dissolved and new Jesuitical principles were to be put into place in order to exalt the Papacy to dominion in America."

"[American Secretary of the Navy R.W.] Thompson pinpointed exactly who would be the agents used by the monarchs of Europe to destroy the republic of America, namely, the Jesuits of Rome! Since 1815 there has been a continual assault on America by the Jesuits to try to destroy the constitutional rights of this great nation.
The famous inventor of the Morse code, Samuel B. Morse, also wrote of this sinister plot [of the Jesuits] against the United States."

"The Monroe Doctrine was America's response to the Jesuits' Congresses of Vienna [in 1814-15] and Verona [in 1825]. America would consider it an act of war if any European nation sought colonial expansion in the Western Hemisphere. The Jesuits have been able secretly to attack and infiltrate America to accomplish exactly what the Monroe Doctrine was stated to protect against. They [i.e., the Jesuits] have been able to get away with it because it was done with utmost secrecy and under the façade of being a church.
…The Monroe Doctrine challenged any advance on America by Europe. However, [President] Monroe did not really understand that the crafty Jesuits would not initially use the force of arms to gain their objectives. They [i.e., the Jesuits] would use cunning, craftiness, and utmost secrecy. They would appeal to men's basest points. They would plant their agents in positions of wealth and power [Ed. Note: such as in the U.S.

Congress and in U.S. intelligence agencies] and then use their influence to gain their great prize – the subversion and destruction of every Protestant principle as outlined in the Constitution of the United States."

VI. THE VATICAN'S HATRED OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC

"The unrestrained freedom of thinking and of openly making known one's thoughts is not inherent in the rights of citizens and is by no means worthy of favor and support."
Pope Gregory XVI

"These false and perverse opinions [of democracy and individual freedom] are so much the more detestable, by as much as they…hinder and banish that salutary influence which the [Roman] Catholic Church, by the institution and command of her Divine Author, ought freely to exercise, even to the consummation of the world, not only over individual men, but [over] nations, [over] peoples, and [over] sovereigns." (Quanta Cura; December 8, 1864)
Pope Pius IX (1792-1878; pope: 1846-1878)

"The State has not the right to leave every man free to embrace whatever religion he should deem true.
…The [Roman Catholic] Church has the right to require that the Catholic religion shall be the religion of the State, to the exclusion of all others.
…Cursed be those who assert liberty of conscience and of worship and such that maintain that the [Roman Catholic] Church may not employ force."
The Syllabus of Pope Pius IX (December 1864)

"No man has a right to choose his religion. Catholicism is the most intolerant of creeds. It is intolerance itself. We might as rationally maintain that two and two does not make four as the theory of Religious Liberty. Its impiety is only equaled by its absurdity." (1864)
John Hughes (Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York)

((What now follows is some proof of this hatred of religious liberty, freedom of conscience, and/or representative government that has appeared in several Roman Catholic publications.))

"…We do not accept it [i.e., the Constitutional Republic of the United States of America], or hold it to be any government at all… If the American Republic is to be sustained and preserved at all, it must be by the rejection of the principle of the [Protestant] Reformation, and the acceptance of the Catholic principle…"

Catholic World (August 1871; page 735)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: Let me get this straight: If we want our American Republic "to be sustained and preserved at all", then this can only take place if we reject "the principle of the [Protestant] Reformation" (i.e., religious liberty for all, freedom of conscience, and freedom of the press) and accept "the Catholic principle" (i. e., no religious liberty, ecclesiastical tyranny, and the extermination of all who disagree with the Catholic principle). That's certainly an interesting choice!))

"Fascism is the regime that corresponds most closely to the concepts of the Church of Rome." – Civilta Cattolica (House organ of the Jesuits)

"The [Roman Catholic] church has persecuted. Only a tyro [i.e., novice] in church history will deny that…one hundred and fifty years after [Roman Emperor] Constantine, the Donatists were persecuted and sometimes put to death. …Protestants were persecuted in France and Spain with the full approval of the [Roman Catholic] church authorities. …When she [i.e., the Roman Catholic Church] thinks it good to use physical force, she will use it."
The Western Watchman (A Roman Catholic publication out of St. Louis)

((And here are some more quotes showing the Vatican's hatred of religious liberty and of America's Constitutional Republic.)):

"Have not the popes [e.g., Pope Pius IX in his Syllabus of Errors] publicly and repeatedly anathematized the sacred principle of Liberty of Conscience? Have they not boldly said, in the teeth of the nations of Europe, that Liberty of Conscience must be destroyed – killed at any cost? Has not the whole world heard the sentence of death to liberty coming from the lips of the old man of the Vatican [i.e., the pope]?"
Charles Chiniquy (Ex-Catholic priest; personal friend of President Abraham Lincoln)

"The Constitution of the United States was condemned by the Papacy because it separated church and state and prohibited the establishment of any religion [Ed. Note: as an official State-sponsored religion] by the government. The popes, on the other hand, had long required governments to make Roman Catholicism the official religion and to prohibit the practice of any other." – Dave Hunt (Author of numerous books)

"During a sermon in 1850, [Roman Catholic] Archbishop John Hughes of New York, the nation's leading Vatican spokesman, acknowledged that a conspiracy to subjugate free America did exist after all. The Catholic press was ecstatic. An excerpt from 'Shepherd of the Valley', the official journal of the [Roman Catholic] Bishop of St. Louis, declared, 'If Catholics ever gain a sufficient numerical majority in this country, religious freedom is at an end. So our enemies say, so we believe.' [Catholic Archbishop] Hughes' own paper, the 'New York Freeman' brazenly announced, 'No man has a right to choose his religion.'" – Dr. William P. Grady

"For over 200 years, the goal [of the Jesuits] has been the complete destruction of the United States Constitution.
…In the religious arena, the goal of the Jesuits is to wipe out any trace of Protestantism and other religions, and to restore worldwide domination by the pope."
Bill Hughes (Author of The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked)

VII. "Tammany Hall" and ORGANIZED CRIME

Should anyone find it difficult to believe what follows in this section, then I most highly recommend that such a person obtain the book Double Cross by Sam and Chuck Giancana. This book reveals connections between "the Mob" and the CIA – especially in the assassination business. It can be ordered from "Radio Liberty" for $10.45 postpaid by calling their toll-free order line at 1-800-544-8927.

There are many connections between Organized Crime, the U.S. government (including the Central Intelligence Agency), and the Vatican (such as in the world of banking). The afore-mentioned book describes the relationship between the CIA and the Mob – a relationship that led to cooperation on assassinations (such as the JFK assassination) within the U.S. borders!

Oh yes, we can't forget about "Tammany Hall". Tammany Hall, "a powerful Democratic political organization of New York City", quickly became synonymous with bribery, corruption, and many other forms of criminal activity. Heavy Roman Catholic immigration for decades headed for America's largest cities, such as New York City, Boston, etc. Organized crime quickly developed in these cities. Politicians soon either had to be Roman Catholic to run for any important office – or, if non-Roman Catholic, had to have the endorsement of such Catholic organizations as the Knights of Columbus. Many large cities soon became cesspools of prostitution, racketeering, drugs, etc. Did all of this occur by accident, or was it planned?

Indeed, the ties between the Mafia, the CIA, and the Vatican run deep. By the way, the money generated by CIA-controlled criminal activities helps to fund their "covert operations".

Please consider the following three quotes about Roman Catholic political power:

"The fact is that very few Protestants [Ed. Note: or other non-Catholic Christians] have realized how entirely Rome is a political church, and that she always makes her political advancement her first object." (1896)
M. F. Cusack (Ex-nun of Kenmore; author of the book The Black Pope)

"But we recognize in the Roman Catholic priesthood, and the Jesuit brotherhood, two distinct political organizations, united in purpose and using religion as a mask for political purpose, as they always have done in all ages and countries."

J. Wayne Laurens (American historian; author of the book The Crisis: Or, the Enemies of America Unmasked)

"There is no doubt that the American Catholic hierarchy has entered the political arena, and that it is becoming more and more aggressive in extending the frontiers of Catholic authority into the fields of medicine, education, and foreign policy… As we shall see in this book [Ed. Note: American Freedom and Catholic Power], the Catholic hierarchy in this country [i.e., the USA] has great power as a pressure group, and no editor, politician, publisher, merchant or motion-picture producer can express defiance openly – or publicize documented facts – without risking his future."
Paul Blanchard (Journalist and author) (1949; Quote was taken from his book American Freedom and Catholic Power.)

((Important Ed. Note: Due to newsletter length considerations, I will not get into the Vatican/Jesuit involvement in the U.S. Civil War and in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. Please read my TTT #60, "The Civil War and Abraham Lincoln", that can be found on the first two Internet web sites listed at the beginning of this newsletter. Suffice it to say here, the evidence of the Vatican/Jesuit involvement in the assassination of President Lincoln was so overwhelming that the U.S. government broke all diplomatic relations with the Vatican in 1867, shortly after the trial of one the conspirators, John Harrison Surratt. If you doubt this, then you need to read the two-books-in-one volume concerning the Lincoln assassination that will be listed at the end of this newsletter.))
VIII. WORLD WAR I

The Vatican and her Jesuits were clearly responsible for the carnage that occurred in both World War I and World War II. Please carefully consider the following quote by Edmond Paris:

"The public is practically unaware of the overwhelming responsibility carried by the Vatican and its Jesuits in the starting of two world wars – a situation which may be explained in part by the gigantic finances at the disposition of the Vatican and its Jesuits, giving them power in so many spheres, especially since the last conflict."

Please consider this quote by Pope Pius X (1835-1914; pope: 1903-1914):

"It would certainly have been better if Austria-Hungary had punished the Serbians for all the wrongs they had done." (1913)

of Serbia [made up mostly of Orthodox Christians] as a “threat”. In fact, in late 1913 Prince Schonburg had an audience with Pope Pius X, who told Schonburg the words contained in the preceding quote. In other words, the Roman Catholic pope was letting this Roman Catholic European power (Austria-Hungary) know that it was past time to “take care of” the Serbian “problem”!))

IX. WORLD WAR II

Please carefully consider the following quotations concerning World War II contained in this section:

“Actually, nobody has a right to be more angry at the Rothschild clique than their fellow Jews. The Warburgs, part of the Rothschild empire, helped finance Adolph Hitler. There were few if any Rothschilds or Warburgs in the Nazi prison camps! They sat out the war in luxurious hotels in Paris or emigrated to the United States or England. As a group, Jews have suffered most at the hands of these power seekers. A Rothschild has much more in common with a Rockefeller than he does with a [Jewish] tailor from Budapest or the Bronx.”
Gary Allen (Author of the book None Dare Call It Conspiracy)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: German Roman Catholic Knight of Malta Franz von Papen and the German Roman Catholic Centrum (or, Zentrum) Party in Bavaria helped put Hitler into power. American Knights of Malta (big financiers) helped finance Hitler’s rise to power. And who controls the Knights of Malta? The answer: The Jesuit Superior General controls the Knights of Malta. Thus the Vatican and its Jesuit Order, which for centuries have hated and butchered large numbers of Jews (e.g., during the Crusades), were able to butcher millions more during World War II. Roman Catholic dictators were installed all over Europe prior to and during the early stages of World War II – Hitler in Germany, Mussolini in Italy, Jesuit Monseigneur Tiso in Slovakia, Ante Pavelic in Croatia, etc. Then these Roman Catholic dictators were able to slaughter the Jews, Protestants, and Orthodox Christians in Europe – all favorite and historic targets of the Vatican – with great vigor and great efficiency.))
Eric Jon Phelps, author of the well-researched book VATICAN ASSASSINS: Wounded in the House of My Friends, lets us know the names of the Roman Catholic dictators throughout Europe during World War II (dates shown are born/died dates):

“The Jesuits, in control of [Adolph] Hitler’s occultic and homosexual Third Reich…, installed puppet dictators throughout Europe. They were:

· Bavarian Germany and the Third Reich – [Adolph] Hitler [1889-1945]
· Italy – [Benito] Mussolini [1883-1945]
· ‘Vichy’ France – [Henri Philippe] Petain [1856-1951]

· Spain – [Francisco] Franco
· Austria – Seyss-Inquart
· Poland – Frank
· Slovakia – [Jesuit] Priest [Monseigneur] Tiso
· Croatia – [Ante] Pavelitch ((Ed. Note: alternate spelling: Pavelic))
· Belgium – Degrelle.

All these Roman Catholic, Jesuit-controlled, Jew-hating dictators were loyal to the greatest war criminal of all, Papal Caesar Pius XII and his master, Jesuit [Superior] General Wlodimir Ledochowski."

"The declaration of [Roman Catholic Jesuit] Monseigneur [Ed. Note: French spelling of 'Monsignor'] Tiso, chief of the Slovakian state, stating his intention to build up Slovakia according to a Christian [sic] plan, has the full approval of the Holy See [i.e., the Papacy]."
(June 1940) – Radio Vatican

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: This Jesuit monster (Tiso) was put into power by Hitler's Nazi Germany, with the blessings of the Vatican. Tiso, using his 'Christian' plan, brutally persecuted Protestants and Jews in Slovakia, sending them to concentration camps!))

"I have learnt most of all from the Jesuit Order. …So far, there has been nothing more imposing on earth than the hierarchical organization of the [Roman] Catholic Church. A good part of that organization I have transported direct to my own [Nazi] party. …The Catholic Church must be held up as an example. …I will tell you a secret. I am founding an order [Ed. Note: the Nazi SS]. …In [Heinrich] Himmler [who would become head of the Nazi SS] I see our Ignatius de Loyola [Ed. Note: the founder of the Jesuit Order]."
Adolph Hitler (1889-1945; Nazi leader and chancellor of Germany from 1933-1945)

"In Hitler's Pope, award-winning journalist John Cornwell shows that Eugenio Pacelli, Pope Pius XII, was instrumental in negotiating an accord that helped the Nazis rise to unhindered power – and sealed the fate of the Jews in Europe.
Drawing upon secret Vatican and Jesuit archives to which he had unprecedented access, Cornwell tells the full, tragic story of how narcissism, long-standing personal antipathy for the Jews, and political and 'spiritual' ambition combined to make Pius the most dangerous churchman in history. Not just a firm and final indictment of Pius XII's papacy, Hitler's Pope is also a searing exploration of its lingering consequences for the Catholic Church today."
Hitler's Pope: The Secret History of Pius XII (book by John Cornwall)
Why did I list all of the above quotations? I did so because the Vatican planned, fomented, and orchestrated two world wars in an attempt to achieve Vatican objectives in Europe. The Vatican also planned, fomented, and orchestrated those two bloody world wars in order to slaughter millions of the favorite "targets": Jews, Protestants, and Orthodox Christians! Indeed, the Vatican and her Jesuits have been at the forefront of almost every major bloody war and major bloody revolution in the western world in the past four centuries. Numerous historians have documented this. Please see the section entitled "What Can We Do?" – it will contain a number of books that document this nefarious history of bloodshed and violence.

Questions: If "the Jews" (i.e., Jewish bankers, Zionists, etc.) run the banking in the USA and in Europe, then why in blazes did they finance Hitler, Mussolini, and many other Catholic dictators in Europe during World War II? If "the Jews" have been running the USA and western European countries for ages, then why did they help ensure that millions of Jews would be slaughtered during World War II by supporting Catholic Fascist dictators? The answer is quite simple: It was NOT "the Jews" running the show in Europe during World War II, but rather the Vatican with her Jesuits and her powerful and wealthy Knights of Malta – with the help of a few rich secular Jews who work with the Vatican on such enterprises as world wars.

X. THE USA TODAY – WHO REALLY RUNS THIS COUNTRY?

Here's an interesting quote by author and publisher Jack T. Chick:

"I questioned Dr. [Alberto] Rivera about the briefings he received in the Vatican when he was a Jesuit priest. I asked him if he was briefed on how the Vatican planned to take over the United States. He told me [that] his indoctrination [training as a Jesuit] went back [into American history] to the time of the Pilgrims. Because of the knowledge of the Inquisition and the slaughter of Christians by the Roman Catholic system, the early immigrants in America began passing laws to keep Jesuits out of this country and to outlaw the mass…to protect themselves from a Vatican takeover. These were Christian communities deeply concerned about the 'whore of [found in the book of] Revelation'. Jesuits began arriving in America as early as the second group of Pilgrims. They used different names with identifications. They were followed years later when the Vatican sent multitudes of Catholic families from England, Ireland, and France – posing as Protestants – into the colonies. These were 'plants'. They were holding secret masses in defiance of the laws. In those days, no Roman Catholic was to hold any position in civil government. The Jesuits made sure this part of our history was erased and removed.
The next major move by the Jesuits was to destroy or control all the Christian schools across America. Throughout the years, Jesuits, working undercover, have gotten into special committees on school boards to remove the emphasis of the Bible and replace it with psychology as found in the Spiritual Exercises of Ignatius de Loyola, the founder of the Jesuit Society. Later, Catholic schools and universities sprang up all across the nation under the Jesuits. Today, they probably outnumber all the Christian schools and colleges put together.
The third stage was to move into the courts and legislation…to take over as judges and lawyers in order to manipulate the Constitution in their favor until it could be changed. Once this was accomplished, the thrust was into politics to capture the political parties. Then [the Jesuits moved on to] the military and the newspapers. Even back in the time of Lincoln over half the newspapers in the United States were controlled by the Vatican." ((Ed. Comments to the preceding quote:

(1) If you have any doubts about the above claims by Jack Chick concerning the power and influence of the Papacy, and especially her Jesuit Order, then you need to check out his book Smokescreens, the book A Woman Rides the Beast by Dave Hunt, the book The Secret History of the Jesuits by Edmond Paris, the book 50 Years in the Church of Rome by Charles Chiniquy, and the book Is Alberto for Real? (compiled by Sidney Hunter). These books can all be ordered via credit card by calling 1-909-987-0771.

(2) If you have any doubts about the Vatican's heavy-duty takeover of much of America's newspapers, magazines, etc., then please do some research on such Jesuit-controlled Knights of Malta named William Randolph Hearst and Henry Robinson Luce.))

Here is an interesting quote by Felix Frankfurter (1882-1965; a Supreme Court justice):

"The Order's working and involvement in America is immense. The real rulers in Washington [D.C.] are invisible and exercise power from behind the scenes."

And another quote by John F. Hylan (Mayor of New York City from 1918-1925):

"The real menace of our Republic is this invisible government which like a giant octopus sprawls its slimy legs over our cities, states, and nation.

A. The U.S. Congress

Please consider the following quotations by F. Tupper Saussy, which were taken from his book RULERS OF EVIL: Useful Knowledge About Governing Bodies, along with some of my editorial comments:

"What [Professor Carol A.] Brown [of the University of Massachusetts] had learned from Carl Bernstein, I [i.e., F. Tupper Saussy] had discovered for myself over several years of private investigation: the papacy really does run United States foreign policy… Yes, [Carl] Bernstein noted that the leading American players behind the Reagan/Vatican conspiracy, to a man, were 'devout Roman Catholics' – namely,
· William Casey – Director, CIA [Ed. Note: And a Knight of Malta]; · Richard Allen – National Security Advisor;
· Judge William Clark – National Security Advisor;
· Alexander Haig – Secretary of State [Ed. Note: And a Knight of Malta]; · Vernon Walters – Ambassador-at-Large; and,

· William Wilson – Ambassador to the Vatican State.

But the reporter neglected to mention that the entire Senate Foreign Relations committee was governed by Roman Catholics as well. Specifically, Senators · Joseph Biden – Subcommittee on European Affairs;
· Paul Sarbanes – International Economic Policy, Trade, Oceans, and Environment;
· Daniel P. Moynihan – Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs; · John Kerry – Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Communications; and, · Christopher Dodd – Western Hemisphere and Peace Corps Affairs."

((Ed. Comments to the previous quote:
(1) Please consider also that there are 18 Jesuit colleges and universities in the United States. One of them, Georgetown University, is famous for educating many U.S. diplomats and Foreign Service personnel. A Jesuit priest and professor at Georgetown University, 'Father' Edmund Walsh (who founded the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University), in 1922 led the "Relief Mission" to the Soviet Union after the Bolsheviks had seized power.

(2) The Knights of Malta is headquartered with, and subordinate to, the Jesuit Superior General in Rome. Powerful Knights of Malta have held key positions in the U.S. government, in U.S. intelligence agencies (e.g., William Casey, James Jesus Angleton, William Donovan, and John McCone), in publishing (e.g., William Randolph Hearst and Henry Robinson Luce), etc.

(3) Senator John Kerry, during his presidential run, revealed his Jewish background.))

"In fact, when the 'Holy Alliance' story hit the stands [in 1992], there was virtually no arena of federal legislative activity, according to 'The 1992 World Almanac of US Politics', that was not directly controlled by a Roman Catholic senator or representative. The committees and subcommittees of the United States Senate and House of Representatives governing commerce, communications and telecommunications, energy, medicine, health, education and welfare, human services, consumer protection, finance and financial institutions, transportation, labor and unemployment, hazardous materials, taxation, bank regulation, currency and monetary policy, oversight of the Federal Reserve System, commodity prices, rents services, small business administration, urban affairs, European affairs, Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, terrorism/narcotics/international communications, international economic/trade/oceans/ environ-mental policy, insurance, housing, community development, federal loan guarantees, economic stabilization measures (including wage and price controls), gold and precious metals transactions, agriculture, animal and forestry industries, rural issues, nutrition, price supports, Food for Peace, agricultural exports, soil conservation, irrigation, stream channelization, flood control, minority enterprise, environment and pollution, appropriations, defense, foreign operations, vaccines, drug labeling and packaging, drug and alcohol abuse, inspection and certification of fish and processed food, use of vitamins and saccharin, national health insurance proposals, human services, legal services, family relations, the arts and humanities, the handicapped, and aging – in other words, virtually every aspect of secular life in America – came under the chairmanship of one of these Roman Catholic laypersons:

Frank Annunzio Edward Kennedy Daniel Moynihan
Joseph Biden John Kerry John Murtha
Silvio Conte John LaFalce Mary Rose Oakar
Kika De la Garza Patrick Leahy David Obey
John Dingell Charles Luken Claiborne Pell
Christopher Dodd Edward Madigan Charles Rangel
Vic Fazio Edward Markey Dan Rostenkowski
James Florio Joseph McDade Edward Roybal
Henry Gonzalez Barbara Mikulski
Thomas Harkin George Miller

Vatican Council II's 'Constitution on the Church' (1964) instructs [Roman Catholic] politicians to use their secular offices to advance the cause of Roman Catholicism."
((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: Senator John Kerry, during his presidential run, revealed his Jewish background.))

"An updating of this list will not reflect a significant change in the presence of Roman Catholic laypersons in the higher legislative reaches. According to the 'Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities', in the 106th Congress there are 40 'Jesuit alumni' who graduated from 17 Jesuit institutions [of higher learning]. There are 5 alumni in the U.S. Senate and 35 alumni in the House of Representatives. Out of these 40 alumni, 23 received graduate or professional degrees from Jesuit universities. [Jesuit] Georgetown University has the most graduates, boasting 15 alumni in the U.S. Congress."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: Please remember that these folks are graduates of Jesuit institutes of higher learning. There are other Roman Catholic institutes of higher learning that do not belong to the Jesuit Order. Many Roman Catholic laypersons that have served in the U.S. Congress have come from non-Jesuit Roman Catholic colleges and universities.))

Please also consider these two quotes by Avro Manhattan, taken from his book Murder in the Vatican:

"The Vatican is a superpower – on a par with the USA and Soviet Russia. Indeed, since at times it can act as a formulator of the policies of both, it can be reckoned as the paramount superpower of our times.
Its adherents, a massive portion of mankind, nearing a billion [Ed. Note: it's now over a billion], can be made to operate in every corner of the world. [There are] sixty million [Roman Catholics] within the USA herself.

…Therefore the Vatican is a superpower in its own right. Indeed, because of its duality as a political and as a religious center, it can outbid the other two [superpowers]."

((Ed. Comments to the preceding quote:

(1) The Vatican today needs no standing armies of her own. Why is this so? It is because she can mobilize the armies of other nations to do her bidding. This happened on a massive scale during World War II – a war that was fomented and largely orchestrated by the Vatican.

(2) The Vatican is often able to "steer" (i.e., direct) the foreign policy of other nations through her many agents that she infiltrates into foreign policy-making governmental committees and organizations – and, into the most powerful intelligence agencies in the World, such as the CIA. In the USA, the Vatican is able to draw upon her powerful Jesuits, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, Opus Dei, etc. – many of whom hold positions of great power in the U.S. government! Sadly, many of these powerful individuals give a far greater degree of their loyalty to the Pope and/or to the Jesuit Superior General than they do to the U.S. Constitution and to the American people!

(3) There were 60 million Roman Catholics in the USA in 1985 (when Manhattan's book was written). However, when one adds to this number the normal growth in population of 20 more years, PLUS all the illegal immigrants coming into the USA (the vast majority of whom are Roman Catholic), the number of Catholics in America today is probably closer to 100 million.))

"Thus, whereas the USA has a mere 250 million citizens [Ed. Note: Remember, this was written in 1985] and the Soviet Union about 300 million, the Vatican, via the [Roman] Catholic Church, can influence between 800 and 1000 million [i.e., one billion] Catholics.
These [now over one billion Roman Catholics], unlike the citizens of the other two superpowers (who are strictly confined within physical and political barriers), have no frontiers whatsoever. They are posted within the USA, Soviet Russia, and within hundreds of other countries, and can be made to operate independently of their own administrations, governments or regimes.
A Catholic citizen, therefore, owing to the fact that he is a member of the Catholic Church, can and often is influenced in his social and ideological attitudes by those taken by the Vatican, acting as the political facet of the Catholic Church.
It cannot be otherwise, since [Roman] Catholics, notwithstanding their disclaimer, are affected directly, tangently, by the Vatican's political stance in the belief that such a stance is that of the Catholic Church."

And please consider this quote by Jeremiah J. Crowley (Irishman; ex-priest in the Roman Catholic Church; author of the book Romanism: Menace to the Nation):

"Today they [i.e., the Jesuits] are stronger in the United States than they ever were in any of the countries of Europe which expelled them as a menace to the government." (1912)

B. The Mainstream Media and Press

I would like to repeat journalist Paul Blanchard's quote again:

"There is no doubt that the American Catholic hierarchy has entered the political arena, and that it is becoming more and more aggressive in extending the frontiers of Catholic authority into the fields of medicine, education, and foreign policy… As we shall see in this book [Ed. Note: American Freedom and Catholic Power], the Catholic hierarchy in this country [i.e., the USA] has great power as a pressure group, and no editor, politician, publisher, merchant or motion-picture producer can express defiance openly – or publicize documented facts – without risking his future." (1949; Quote was taken from his book American Freedom and Catholic Power.)

Please remember that this quote was made in 1949. The power of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the USA has not diminished from that time, but has, in fact, grown. Many powerful Knights of Malta (under the control of the Roman Catholic Jesuit Order) have held key positions in the media (e.g., Henry Robinson Luce and William Randolph Hearst), in U.S. Intelligence (e.g., CIA chiefs William Donovan, John McCone, and William Casey), in banking, in the U.S. government, etc. Top-level Knights of Columbus (e.g., Senator Ted Kennedy) have held, and continue to hold, key positions in the U.S. government. Many of these men do NOT have the best interests of the American people at heart – rather, they serve the interests of the globalist rich and power elite and the Vatican. These men share the goals of the Vatican for one-world government and one-world religion under the leadership of the papacy!

Here are some interesting quotes about America's controlled mainstream media (which is probably the most controlled media in the western world):

"In March 1915, the J.P. Morgan interests [Ed. Note: controlled by the Rockefellers]… got together 12 men high up in the newspaper world and employed them to select the most influential newspapers in the U.S. and [a] sufficient number of them to CONTROL generally the policy of the daily press of the United States. These 12 men worked the problem out by selecting 179 newspapers, and then began, by an elimination process to retain only those necessary for the purpose of CONTROLLING. They found it was necessary to purchase CONTROL of 25 of the greatest [news] papers. The 25 [news] papers were agreed upon; emissaries were sent to purchase the policy, national and international, of these papers. An agreement was reached; the policy of the papers was bought, to be paid for by the month; an editor was furnished for each paper to properly SUPERVISE and EDIT information regarding the questions of preparedness, militarism, financial policies, and other things of national and international nature considered vital to the INTERESTS of the PURCHASERS… This policy also included the SUPPRESSION of everything in opposition to the wishes of the INTERESTS SERVED." (Statement placed in the Congressional Record in 1917)

Oscar Callaway (U.S. Congressman)

"There is probably no important magazine or newspaper in the country [Ed. Note: the USA] that is not COMMUNIST-penetrated to some degree."
Whittaker Chambers (1901-1961; American journalist; ex-member of the Communist Party of the United States)

((Ed. Comment to preceding quote: The communists are merely "front men" for more powerful forces working "behind the scenes" – controlled by secret societies, such as the Jesuits.))

Authors Texe Marrs and Dr. Cathy Burns, and other writers, have reported that such "Protestant" evangelical leaders, such as Billy Graham and Pat Robertson (both of whom are high-level Masons), were financed and set up ("puffed" in the press as they started their religious careers) by such Roman Catholic Knights of Malta as Henry Robinson Luce and William Randolph Hearst. Isn't that very interesting – "Protestant" leaders (who are Masons) being set up by Roman Catholic Knights of Malta?

Who really controls America's mainstream media? Some allege that it is "the Jews" running America's mainstream media. If that is so, then how do these powerful Roman Catholic Knights of Malta achieve such mighty positions in the world of publishing and electronic media? If "the Jews" run America's press and publishing houses, then how does a Roman Catholic pope get to be named "man of the year" in major U.S. newsmagazines? If "the Jews" run our television networks, then how does a masterful piece of propaganda on Roman Catholic Pope John Paul II get to be aired on American television? If "the Jews" run America's media, then why in blazes do popes and other Catholic prelates get wonderful press in this country? ((Remember, no one has hated and slaughtered Jews like the Vatican has! If you doubt this, please see my TTT newsletter entitled "Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts" that is posted on the first two Internet web sites listed at the beginning of this newsletter.))

XI. RED HERRINGS, SCAPEGOATS, & SMOKESCREENS

I would like to repeat a statement I made earlier in this newsletter:

Front organizations, "sheep dipping", scapegoats, red herrings, and smoke screens – all of these are SOP (standard operating procedures) for the Jesuit Order!

One of the favorite "red herrings" [i.e., something used to divert attention from the basic issue] used by the Jesuit Order is that "such-and-such a person is a Jew". You can find various web sites that will tell you that Hitler was a Jew – or Stalin was a Jew. First of all, let's get a few things straight from the beginning here:

· Adolph Hitler was a practicing Roman Catholic who was never excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church. (Neither was Mussolini!) He was put into power by German Roman Catholic Knight of Malta Franz von Papen and the Roman Catholic Centrum (or, Zentrum) Party in Bavaria. And, Hitler signed a Concordat with the Vatican.
· Joe Stalin was trained by the Jesuits at the Jesuit Tiflis Seminary in Soviet Georgia.

Again, this is "standard operating procedures" for the Jesuit Order. That is, after the dastardly deeds are done, then accuse every powerful individual who was involved – usually after he is dead – of being a Jew.

Something else to consider: The Jews settled extensively throughout much of Europe, and despite warnings to the contrary, did intermarry amongst the surrounding Gentiles. Thus many Europeans probably have at least a little Jewish blood from somewhere on the "family tree". It has been reported that Adam Weishaupt was born a Jew. Even if true, so what? Adam Weishaupt was Jesuit-trained, and he taught Roman Catholic Canon Law at a Jesuit university in Catholic Bavaria (i.e., at Jesuit Ingolstadt University). Weishaupt, as already mentioned, died in the good graces of the Catholic Church (after being "sheep dipped" for a period of time). Likewise, Stalin was Jesuit-trained.

Something else to consider: I have read in several books that at one time a Jew was found in the Jesuit Order and was immediately put out of the Order – and that a rule was made that no [real] Jew could be a Jesuit. Do the Jesuits use some Jews as front men? It would certainly appear that they do.

The main point here is: It does not matter what one is born (whether Jew, Christian, Moslem, etc.), but rather whom does one serve! We can take a look at World War II and see that history recorded in great detail that the monsters who fomented, choreographed, and conducted this bloody world war were Roman Catholics who had the full support of the Vatican. And they carried out the Vatican's agenda in World War II. Take a good, close look again at the Eric Jon Phelps' quote in the World War II section that lists those Roman Catholic dictators.

As far as scapegoats go, the Vatican has for centuries used "the Jews" as their favorite "scapegoat". Again, please read my TTT newsletter entitled "Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts" for some historical examples of this use of the Jews as a scapegoat by the Vatican. The Jesuits certainly use "the Jews" quite often as a "smoke screen" to cover their own nefarious activities!
XII. SUMMARY

History has shown us quite clearly that the Vatican hates religious liberty and loves ecclesiastical tyranny. It also shows us that she hates the Constitutional Republic of the United States of America (where religious liberty has flourished) and loves Fascist regimes.

The plans to destroy America and her Constitutional Republic were made quite early in American history. Roman Catholic monarchs and the highest levels of the Roman Catholic Church's hierarchy (to include a number of popes) CONSPIRED to destroy religious liberty and representative government. Top Catholic leaders gathered in at least three largely secret meetings to discuss how to squash religious liberty and representative government wherever and whenever they appeared – whether on the European continent or in the United States of America.

These three meetings were:

· The Congress of Vienna [Austria] from 1814 through 1815;
· The secret meeting at Verona, Italy in 1822; and,
· The secret meeting at Chieri, Italy in 1825.

Indeed, plans were carefully laid out at these meetings for the takeover of the United States through infiltration of our government, our education system, our press and media, and even our non-Catholic Christian churches and seminaries. The same plans had earlier been used quite successfully in England. The degree to which most Americans are totally unaware of these three secret meetings (Vienna, Verona, and Chieri), Vatican and Jesuit involvement in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, the Vatican's involvement in fomenting both World War I and World War II, the Vatican's support of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy (and other Fascist states in Europe) during World War II, etc., speak volumes about how successful their takeover of America's history books, publishing industry, press, and media has been!

The primary "weapon" against religious liberty, the Protestant Reformation, representative government, etc., of the Vatican for the past four plus centuries has been the infamous Jesuit Order (with its powerful Knights of Malta and its control of the top levels of Freemasonry). The primary "tool" of the Jesuit Order has been INFILTRATION. Wherever the Jesuit Order has been allowed to flourish, political intrigue, revolutions, civil wars, assassinations of heads of State, etc., have been the fruit of this den of vipers.

XIII. FINAL THOUGHTS

Question: After having read this newsletter, who do you think is the greatest threat to our Constitutional Republic and our religious liberty – the Vatican & Jesuits OR "the Jews"?

((The following paragraph is an addition for the "electronic version" of this issue of TTT that will soon, D.v., be posted on the Internet. I asked the same question as immediately above in a January 6, 2006 piece I wrote entitled "New Year's Thoughts". I think the information is worth repeating in this section of this newsletter.))

"For heaven's sake, there are 18 million Jews in the world, and over one BILLION Roman Catholics (that the Vatican State can draw on). The Vatican State not only has diplomatic relations with many nations of the world, but also has the largest (by far) and most efficient intelligence-gathering network in the world (especially through her numerous monastic orders, large priesthood, and the Confessional)! The Vatican has a well-documented history of over 1000 years of religious genocide on a massive scale ((against Jews; against Christian groups such as the Albigenses and Waldenses; against Protestants (the French Huguenots, Irish Protestants, Bohemians, etc.); and against Orthodox Christians (as recently as the 1940s)). The Vatican has a well-documented history of Inquisition (especially against Jews and Christians), and of the most brutal torture. (The Office of Inquisition STILL exists – now called the 'Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith' – and the Catholic Church has never repudiated its 'right' to use force, torture, and extermination of all who oppose her doctrines and practices! The Vatican has a well-documented history of infiltrating governments and royal courts with her Jesuits, papal knights, etc. The Vatican's Jesuit Order has a well-documented history of infiltrating other Christian denominations and seminaries, of assassinating heads of State, of fomenting revolutions and wars, and of carrying out many other nefarious activities. The Vatican has a well-documented history of loving Fascist regimes (such as Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy in World War II) and of hating religious liberty. The Vatican also loves ecclesiastical monopoly, and regularly persecutes other religions whenever and wherever she has the power and opportunity to do so (e.g., Croatia in World War II)! Now, in view of what was stated in this paragraph, I ask you, dear reader:

Who is the greatest threat to religious liberty and conscience, and to the American Republic – "the Jews" or the Papacy/Vatican/Jesuits?"

((End of added paragraph for "electronic version" to be posted, D.v., on the Internet))

America is at the brink of destruction. And that destruction has been carefully planned. We – none of us – can afford to remain "silent" for fear of offending anyone or any institution.

Please carefully consider these quotes concerning "silence":

"Truth is violated by falsehood, but it is outraged by silence."
Henri-Frederic Amiel (1821-1881; Swiss writer and philosopher)

"When freedom is at stake, silence is not golden – it is yellow [i.e., cowardly]."

Tom Anderson (Writer)

Indeed, many of us have Roman Catholic relatives and friends. We don't do them – or ourselves – any favors by remaining "silent" concerning the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church and its well-documented history of:

· Hating religious liberty and freedom of conscience;
· Plotting the overthrow of the U.S. Constitution and our most basic God-given Rights;
· Assassinating heads of State, such as President Abraham Lincoln;
· Fomenting and orchestrating revolutions and wars, such as World War I and World War II;
· Planning and carrying out religious genocide on a mass scale against such groups as: Jews, Bible-believing Christians such as the Albigenses and Waldenses, Protestants such as the Irish Protestants and French Huguenots, and Orthodox Christians (as recently as the 1940s in Croatia); and,
· Planning and working to be at the very top of a one-world religion and a one-world government.

If we are worried about offending our Catholic relatives and friends, then we ought to consider this following quote by the Greek philosopher Aristotle (384-322 B.C.): "…Piety requires us to honor truth above our friends."

Some commentators continue their main focus on "the Jewish bankers, the Masonic Jews, the Jewish neo-conservatives in the U.S. Administration, the Zionists, and Israel" – sometimes lumping them all together as "the Jews". Those individuals who do so, while largely ignoring the much greater threat from the geopolitical/financial/religious powerhouse made up of the Vatican State with her Jesuits, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, Opus Dei, numerous monastic orders, a large priesthood, plus control of the top levels of Freemasonry, etc., are doing the following:

· Focusing on two "growling Chihuahuas" (what they call "the Jews" and Israel) while largely ignoring ten "Bengal (Romish) Tigers" (Vatican State, Jesuits, Opus Dei, papal knights, etc.).
· Pointing out to us an "infantry squad" attacking in the middle of the battlefield while missing the "ten armored divisions" quickly enveloping us on one of our flanks.

By doing this, I believe that they are, perhaps without knowing it, aiding and abetting the most powerful enemies of our Republic and of our liberties. And everyone who remains SILENT about this great threat to our Republic and our liberties is also aiding and abetting those who desire to destroy everything we hold dear!

We can go on pretending that there is no real threat from the Vatican's designs for world domination – to be at the head of one-world government and one-world religion, or we can do some research and study to find out the truth about the Vatican and her hatred of our most precious liberties. Which brings us to the section entitled, “What Can We Do?”

XIV. WHAT CAN WE DO?

1. If you think that this issue of the TTT newsletter contains important information, then please make copies of it and give them away free-of-charge to others.

2. Please check out these two Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net and www.calltodecision.com. Please read some of my TTT and ETI newsletters, especially “Death by Government and Death by Church” and “Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts” that deal with religious genocide (to include Inquisition, papal crusades against Christians, ‘holy’ wars, etc.). Please also check out my TTT newsletters on “The Jesuits” (parts I through IV), and the series of TTT newsletters that I did on wars in which American troops fought. If you find that any of these newsletters contain important information, then please make copies of them to give to others. Also, please tell as many folks as you can about the above-listed web sites.

3. Please purchase good books that will tell you the truth about religious genocide, Inquisition, assassinations of heads of State, etc. Here are some that everyone should read:

(b.) The Vatican’s Holocaust by Avro Manhattan; 236 pages; 1986; Publisher: Ozark Books; $9.95 postpaid: This book deals with the Roman Catholic clergy-led religious genocide against Serb Orthodox Christian peasants and farmers in Croatia during World War II, and includes photographs of both the victims and perpetrators of this barbaric genocide. To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to “Ozark Book Publishers”, and mail it to: Ozark Book Publishers // P.O. Box 3703 // Springfield, MO 65808.

(c.) A Woman Rides the Beast by Dave Hunt; 550 pages; 1994; Publisher: Harvest

House Publishers; ISBN 1-56507-199-9: This book is $16.20 postpaid. It has chapters on the Croatian Holocaust of World War II, the Vatican Ratlines that helped Nazi and Fascist war criminals escape punishment at the end of World War II, and much more. To order, make check or money order payable to “Chick Publications” and mail it to: Chick Publications // P.O. Box 3500 // Ontario, CA 91761-1019. For credit card orders, please call 1-909-987-0771.

(d.) Smokescreens by Jack Chick; 95 pages; 1983; Publisher: Chick Publications; ISBN 0-937958-14-X; $6.75 postpaid: This book has an excellent chapter entitled “A 20th Century Inquisition” that exposes the horrors of the Vatican’s Holocaust in Croatia during World War II, and includes photographs of both the victims and perpetrators of this barbaric genocide. It also has a chapter dealing with other mass murders and massacres carried out on the orders of the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church. For credit card orders, please call 1-909-987-0771. Or, make check or money order payable to “Chick Publications” and mail it to: Chick Publications // P.O. Box 3500 // Ontario, CA 91761-1019.

(e.) The Secret History of the Jesuits by Edmond Paris; 206 pages; Publisher: Chick Publications; ISBN 0-937958-10-7; $10.75 postpaid: This book covers the history of the Jesuit Order from its founding in 1534 through World War II. The author exposes the Jesuit-controlled Vatican’s involvement in world politics, intrigues, and the fomenting of wars. This book reveals the involvement of the Vatican in helping to foment both World War I and World War II, and its involvement in supporting Nazi and Fascist regimes in Europe during World War II. Much of the slaughter that occurred in World War II can be laid at the feet of the Vatican and her Jesuits. To order a copy, make check or money order payable to “Chick Publications” and mail it to: Chick Publications // P.O. Box 3500 // Ontario, CA 91761-1019. To order by credit card, please call 1-909-987-0771.

(f.) The Grand Design Exposed by John Daniel; 411 pages; 1999; Publisher: CHJ Publishing; ISBN 0-927022-41-9; $20 postpaid: This book is a well-documented exposé about Jesuit control of Freemasonry. It also fills in many “historical gaps” concerning the sinister activities of the Jesuit Order. This book provides evidence of some heavy-duty Jesuit involvement in fomenting the bloody French Revolution (1789-1799). (This book also deals with some very important aspects of Bible prophecy!) To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to “American Sentry Books” and mail it to: American Sentry Books // P.O. Box 14 // Crawley, WV 24931. ((If you have any questions on bulk orders, please call 1-304-392-6155.))

(g.) The Secret Terrorists by Bill Hughes; 150 pages; 2002; Publisher: Truth Triumphant; $5 postpaid: This book deals with the assassination of a number of U.S. presidents (Harrison, Taylor, Buchanan, Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, and JFK), and exposes those who had the motive for assassinating these men. It also reveals some fascinating facts about the sinister activities of the Jesuit Order. To order this book, please make check or money order payable to “Truth Triumphant” and mail it to: Truth

Triumphant // P.O. Box 1417 // Eustis, FL 32727-1417. ((You can obtain this book and Bill Hughes' follow-on book "The Enemy Unmasked" for $9 postpaid – and save a $1 – each book is $5 if ordered separately.))

(h.) The Enemy Unmasked by Bill Hughes; 160 pages; 2004; Publisher: Truth Triumphant; $5 postpaid: This book exposes the Jesuit Order, the Illuminati, and treasonous activities during America's history. To order, please make check or money order payable to "Truth Triumphant" and mail it to: Truth Triumphant // P.O. Box 1417 // Eustis, FL 32727-1417. ((You can obtain this book and Bill Hughes' first book "The Secret Terrorists" for $9 postpaid – and save a $1 – each book is $5 if ordered separately.))

(i.) Rome's Responsibility for the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln by Brigadier General Thomas M. Harris AND The Suppressed Truth about the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln by Burke McCarty (Two books in one volume); 270 pages; available through Ozark Books; $14.00 postpaid: Here are two books that provide proof of Jesuit involvement in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to "Ozark Book Publishers", and mail it to: Ozark Book Publishers // P.O. Box 3703 // Springfield, MO 65808.

XV. CLOSING QUOTES TO PONDER:

"It is my opinion that if the liberties of this country – the United States of America – are destroyed, it will be by the subtlety of the Roman Catholic Jesuit priests, for they are the most crafty, dangerous enemies to civil and religious liberty. They have instigated most of the wars of Europe."
Marquis de LaFayette (1757-1834; French statesman and general; served in the Continental Army under General George Washington)
"If the American people could learn what I know of the fierce hatred of the priests of Rome against our institutions, our schools, our most sacred rights, and our so dearly bought liberties, they would drive them out as traitors."
Abraham Lincoln (1809-1865; 16th President of the United States)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: While the above statement has certainly not applied to all Roman Catholic priests residing in America, either past or present, it surely does apply to the top levels of the Roman Catholic hierarchical system. A number of popes and other top-level Catholic prelates have condemned freedom of religion, conscience, and the press in the strongest possible words. For a good example of this hatred of liberty, please read Pope Pius IX's Syllabus of Errors of 1864.))

"Let America again be forewarned as to Rome's intention 'to make America Catholic'."
Larry Harrison (Publisher)

"Popes have been consistent in their declarations that freedom of religion should NOT exist, and that the Church of Rome represents the only true faith and therefore should alone be allowed to spread its doctrines."
Larry Harrison

"…The Church of Rome, with its sixteen [Ed. Note: now approaching 17] centuries of intrigue, plans fifty or a hundred years ahead. The ultimate goal of the GREAT SCHEME is to throw the 'lever of time' back by restoring the Pope as the 'universal arbiter' from whom all the rulers of the earth must receive their authority to rule, as [occurred] during the Dark Ages."
Burke McCarty (Author of the book The Suppressed Truth about the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln)

"Persecution of non-Catholics in Catholic-controlled countries should warn Americans as to what will happen here if the pope ever gains full control of this country. Rome never changes." (March 16, 1960)
Raywood Frazier

"Now more than any other time since the 16th century Reformation, God is looking for Christians to stand in the gap, to be watchmen, courageous enough to pay, as [Jan] Hus did, the flaming death of martyrdom. Remember: there is a battle to be fought (Ephesians 6:16-20). There is an enemy to be overcome (1 Peter 5:8, 9). There is a watch to maintain (Jude 3,4, [and] 17-23)." – Bartholomew F. Brewer (Ex-Roman Catholic priest of the Discalced Carmelite Order)

"Who will rise up for me against the evildoers, or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?" – Psalm 94:16

BALANCED VIEW OF POPES

possible series, Part One

By Sherman H. Skolnick

http://www.cloakanddagger.de/media/S_284_S...0OF%20POPES.htm

Having financial hang-ups, the spy-riddled, oil-soaked, heavily tax-cheating Monopoly Press cannot bring you a balanced view of any subject. If you are well informed, you certainly know that.

So, some will like what they read here. Others will not.

Before he became Pope, he was Papal Nuncio in Berlin. Some contend he was supportive of the rise of Adolf Hitler. For some years before, during, and after World War Two, he was Pope Pius 12th.

Some authors accused him of being pro-Nazi.

["The Deputy" by Rolf Hochhuth. "Hitler's Pope: The Secret History of Pius XII", by John Cornwell,1999.]

It is beyond dispute that after World War Two, Pius assisted wanted war-criminal Nazis to escape down the "Rat-lines" to the U.S. South America, and Croatia.

["Aftermath" by Ladislas Farago.]

As a young man, he was a theater expert and actor. During his later career, was he just acting as well? During World War Two, he held a position in a facility of I.G. Farben, the Nazi poison gas factory, part of a chemical cartel.

[For background, "The Crime and Punishment of I.G. Farben" by Joseph Borkin.]

Karol Wojtyla was a sort of chief assistant to the Bishop of Krakow, who being pro-Nazi, controlled fellow Poles with an iron fist and kept them submissive and docile for the benefit of the German occupation forces. Later, far too many Poles claimed they knew nothing of the round-up of the Jews from the ghettoes and transporting them to concentration camp for slave labor for I.G. Farben.

Millions of Jews, labor leaders, and other "enemies of the State" were worked to death while being starved. Elderly and disabled Jews were quickly disposed of; they were of no use in the Nazi war factories.

Most Poles later either denied knowing of this when it was happening or claimed they did not participate in the crimes against humanity. Presumably, Wojtyla took the same position as his fellow Poles. In his later career, did anyone in the Monopoly Press ever dare ask him?

Then there is the story of another one. In 1978, in their secret Conclave, the Cardinals selected another Italian to be Pope, John Paul 1st. But, soon it became evident from a geopolitical and religious standpoint, they most likely made a wrong selection.

He soon enough let it be known that he was for modifying the Vatican position of absolute prohibition for Catholics to use birth control. In simple terms, he was against birthing more children than a couple could financially take care of. It was a reasonable, humane position to non-Catholics.

Furthermore, he was determined to put an end to the traditional Sicilian and Italian Mafia, jointly with certain corrupt Archbishops, and the American CIA, in using the Vatican Bank as a money laundry for stolen gold treasuries, dope money, illicit weapons deals, assassination funds, and superior counterfeit currency dealings, among other dirty, bloody business.

Some Italian editors dared demand that Pope John Paul 1st, do something about the Continental Bank of Chicago, the majority owners jointly being the Vatican and the Queen of England. The bank, some Italian editors stated, was a laundry for the Mafia.

[As we dared point out publicly, the Chief Judge of the Chicago Federal Appeals Court, Walter Cummings, Jr., was a "man of trust" for the Vatican, and held a large block of shares, as nominee and front man for the Pope. Judge Cummings, a banker-judge, did NOT disqualify himself when his Continental Bank and their major clients were litigants in his tribunal. Guess who won in his crooked Court?]

[As predicted accurately by this writer, Continental Bank collapsed in 1984 and was taken over later by Bank of America owned jointly by the Jesuits and the Japanese underworld, the Yakuza.]

Thirty-three days after taking office, Pope John Paul 1st was poisoned with a cup of tea. It was a symbolic warning and death warrant by the Free Masons, the Jesuits, and Opus Dei, the super-fascist, super-secret group (by 2005, Opus Dei occupying their own large building in New York city).

Thereafter, the Vatican secret Conclave of Cardinals put together a scheme, with the urging of the American CIA, to topple the Soviet government.

To understand the rationale, you have to have a good understanding of history. The Anglo-American Aristocracy financed the rise of the Nazis and Adolf Hitler, as a bulwark against the Soviets.

In the beginning, the Prussian/German Aristocracy was reluctant to finance Hitler. [See, "Who Financed Hitler" by Susan Poole.]

With his background with the pro-Nazi Polish Bishop of Krakow, Wojtyla was a suitable and forceful Anti-Communist.

But he lacked humanity for Italians. In 1979, there was a terrible earthquake in the historically impoverished southern part of Italy. The destitute Italians demanded that John Paul 2nd, the new Pontiff, relieve some of their suffering, by sending them financial aid from his Mafia/American CIA controlled Vatican Bank. The Pope refused.

John Paul 2nd kept censored, as best he could, through his helpers, Vatican Intelligence, of the growing scandal of international swindler Michele Sindona operating through the Vatican Bank and the Vatican-owned Continental Bank of Chicago.

[See "St. Peter's Banker" by Luigi DiFonzo.]

Starting about 1980, the American CIA jointly with a deal with the bosses of Time Magazine, arranged tremendous secret financing for their paid-for Polish provocateur, Lech Walesa. As a leader of the Polish Solidarity Movement, Walesa stirred up the workers at the Lenin Shipyards at Gdansk.

As the Soviets understood it, Pope John Paul 2nd, by his statements and speeches, jointly with Western paid-for provocateur Lech Walesa, was stirring up fellow Poles in rebellion against the Moscow government. To the Soviets, Wojtyla was a rotten intermeddler, considering how many Soviet lives were lost in freeing Poland from the Germans.

In May 1981, a deranged supposed left-wing Turk, was grabbed after reportedly being the "lone assassin" attempting to kill Pope John Paul 2nd by shooting him in the abdomen right in Vatican Square.

Thereafter, two opposing spy shops released supposed details that the other side instigated the would-be assassin. The American CIA planted a flood of apparently phony details that the Bulgarian Secret Police were accomplices of the Turk in Italy and maybe even right in Vatican Square.

Various international inquiries tended to show the CIA stories had no basis.

On the other hand, the Soviets planted stories that seemed to have "legs". The Soviets made a compelling case that the supposed deranged Turk was part of a RIGHT-wing Military group in Turkey financed by the American CIA.

These two versions tended to cancel each other out. Left unanswered were questions that the Polish Solidarity Movement was reportedly not receiving the funding promised them by the West.

So wounding Wojtyla right on the grounds of the Vatican, was perceived by savvy folks as a way of reminding the West to send more money to the Solidarity Movement. Or, maybe it was just a leftover warning for the Pope to be sure to keep covered up the Sindona scandal. After all, some claimed Sindona's main efforts in accounting were to whisk huge Italian business funds out of Italy to escape the tax collectors.

Or, wounding the Pope was a way for the southern Italians and the Sicilians to remind the Pontiff not to be so stingy refusing earthquake relief funds in 1979.

Compare the following with the position of the murdered Pope John Paul 1st regarding possibly modifying the Church's position on birth control. When Pope John Paul 2nd visited Mexico, implicit in his statements was that he was urging Mexicans to go full speed ahead in fathering children. Yet, Mexico City, for example, is over-populated with more than 32 million inhabitants. The authorities have no funds left for sanitation. So the streets in many poor sections become the toilet and dumping grounds. It makes for a terribly unhealthy situation. The Pope offered no remedy, only being interested in more members for his Church.

Over a number of years, Pope John Paul 2nd made apologies for various historical crimes of his Church.

For example, in 1492, Columbus landed in the new world. Thereafter, the Catholic Church committed terrible crimes against the natives of Mexico and Central America and black and other slaves. Five hundred years later, in 1992, Pope John Paul 2nd visited Central America and made apologies for the crimes of five hundred years previous. To some it was an idle gesture.

And the Pope visited a memorial to the Holocaust in Israel and made apologies there. To some, it was an idle, worthless ceremony.

Seldom mentioned in Pope John Paul 2nd's efforts to topple the Soviet Union, was the more important purpose of the Vatican. That is, to smash, if possible, the Eastern Orthodox Church, a competitor if not enemy of the Vatican for more than a thousand years.

Some people conveniently forget a few things. Such as, Popes up to the beginning of the 19th Century, threatened to throw members out of the Church, excommunicate them, for daring to say the Earth is not flat. That is, the Vatican was the headquarters of the Flat Earth Committee.

Also, did any Pope ever urge scientific progress in medicines, healthcare, transportation, and communications? Or urge progress in laborsaving machinery so human beings would not be just above a pack animal? Why does it seem the Popes have their Church in full reverse gear instead of forward and progressive?

Title: SECRET TREATY OF VERONA

craig-oxley - September 13, 2008 03:56 PM (GMT)

The following text is a copy of a most secret International document of a conspiracy between The Jesuits at the Vatican, Kings, Emperors and the Russian Czar in the year 1822, which is archived at the library of the U.S Congress in Washington D.C.

http://www.theforbiddenknowledge.com/hardt...y_of_verona.htm

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD - SENATE.
64th CONGRESS, 1st SESSION
VOLUME 53, PART 7

25 April 1916

I wish to put in the RECORD the secret treaty of Verona of November 22, 1822, showing what this ancient conflict is between the rule of the few and the rule of the many. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to this treaty because it is the threat of this treaty which was the basis of the Monroe doctrine. It throws a powerful white light upon the conflict between monarchial government and government by the people. The Holy Alliance under the influence of Metternich, the Premier of Austria, in 1822, issued this remarkable secret document :

SECRET TREATY OF VERONA

The undersigned, specially authorized to make some additions to the treaty of the Holy Alliance, after having exchanged their respective credentials, have agreed as follows :

ARTICLE 1. The high contracting powers being convinced that the system of representative government is equally as incompatible with the monarchial principles as the maxim of the sovereignty of the people with the high divine right, engage mutually in the most solemn manner, to use all their efforts to put an end to the system of representative governments, in whatever country it may exist in Europe, and to prevent its being introduced in those countries where it is not yet known.

ART. 2. As it can not be doubted that the liberty of the press is the most powerful means used by the pretended supporters of the rights of nations to the detriment of those princes, the high contracting parties promise reciprocally to adopt all proper measures to suppress it, not only in their own states but also in the rest of Europe.

ART. 3. Convinced that the principles of religion contribute most powerfully to keep nations in the state of passive obedience which they owe to their princes, the high contracting parties declare it to be their intention to sustain in their respective States those measures which the clergy may adopt, with the aim of ameliorating their own interests, so intimately connected with the preservation of the authority of the princes ; and the contracting powers join in offering their thanks to the Pope for what he has already done for them, and solicit his constant cooperation in their views of submitting the nations.

ART. 4. The situation of Spain and Portugal unite unhappily all the circumstances to which this treaty has particular reference. The high contracting parties, in confiding to France the care of putting an end to them, engaged to assist her in the manner which may the least compromit them with their own people and the people of France by means of a subsidy on the part of the two empires of 20,000,000 of francs every year from the date of the signature of this treaty to the end of the war.

ART. 5. In order to establish in the Peninsula the order of things which existed before the revolution of Cadiz, and to insure the entire execution of the articles of the present treaty, the high contracting parties give to each other the reciprocal assurance that as long as their views are not fulfilled, rejecting all other ideas of utility or other measure to be taken, they will address themselves with the shortest possible delay to all the authorities existing in their States and to all their agents in foreign countries, with the view to establish connections tending toward the accomplishment of the objects proposed by this treaty.

ART. 6. This treaty shall be renewed with such changes as new circumstances may give occasion for, either at a new congress or at the court of one of the contracting parties, as soon as the war with Spain shall be terminated.

ART. 7. The present treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged at Paris within the space of six months.

Made at Verona the 22d November, 1822.

For Austria :----------METTERNICH.

For France :----------CHATEAUBRIAND.

For Prussia :----------BERNSTET.

For Russia :----------NESSELRODE.

I ask to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD this secret treaty, because I think it ought to be called now to the attention of the people of the United States and of the world. This evidence of the conflict between the rule of the few verses popular government should be emphasized on the minds of the people of the United States, that the conflict now waging throughout the world may be more clearly understood, for after all said the great pending war springs from the weakness and frailty of government by the few, where human error is far more probable than the error of the many where aggressive war is only permitted upon the authorizing vote of those whose lives are jeopardized in the trenches of modern war.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I should like to have the senator state whether in that treaty there was not a coalition formed between the powerful countries of Europe to reestablish the sovereignty of Spain in the Republics of South and Central America?

Mr. OWEN. I was just going to comment upon that, and I am going to take but a few moments to do so because I realize the pressure of other matters. This Holy Alliance, having put a Bourbon prince upon the throne of France by force, then used France to suppress the constitution of Spain immediately afterwards, and by this very treaty gave her a subsidy of 20,000,000 francs annually to enable her to wage war upon the people of Spain and to prevent their exercise of any measure of the right of self-government. The Holy Alliance immediately did the same thing in Italy, by sending Austrian troops to Italy, where the people there attempted to exercise a like measure of liberal constitutional self-government ; and it was not until the printing press, which the Holy Alliance so stoutly opposed, taught the people of Europe the value of liberty that finally one country after another seized a greater and greater right of self government, until now it may be fairly said that nearly all the nations of Europe have a very large measure of self government. However, I wish to call the attention of the Senate and the country to this important history in the growth of constitutional popular self-government. The Holy Alliance made its powers felt by the wholesale drastic suppression of the press in Europe, by universal censorship, by killing free speech and all ideas of popular rights, and by the complete suppression of popular government. The Holy Alliance having destroyed popular government in Spain and in Italy, had well-laid plans also to destroy popular government in the American colonies which had revolted from Spain and Portugal in Central and South America under the influence of the successful example of the United States. It was because of this conspiracy against the American Republics by the European monarchies that the great English statesman, Canning, called the attention of our government to it, and our statesmen then, including Thomas Jefferson, took an active part to bring about the declaration by President Monroe in his next annual message to the Congress of the United States that the United States should regard it as an act of hostility to the government of the United States and an unfriendly act if this coalition or if any power of Europe ever undertook to establish upon the American Continent any control of any American Republic or to acquire any territorial rights. This is the so-called Monroe doctrine. The threat under the secret treaty of Verona to suppress popular governments in the American Republics is the basis of the Monroe doctrine. This secret treaty sets forth clearly the conflict between monarchial government and popular government and the government of the few as against the government of the many. It is a part, in reality, of developing popular sovereignty when we demand for women equal rights to life, to liberty, to the possession of property, to an equal voice in the making of the laws and the administration of the laws. This demand on the part of the women is made by men, and it ought to be made by men as well as by thinking, progressive women, as it will promote human liberty and human happiness. I sympathize with it, and I hope that all parties will in the national conventions give their approval to this larger measure of liberty to the better half of the human race.

Secret Instructions of the Jesuits

The Secret Instructions were first discovered during the 30 Years' War when the Duke of Brunswick plundered the Jesuit's college at Paderborn in Westphalia and made a present of their library to the Capuchins of the same town. Soon after reprints and translations appeared all over Europe.

The text of the Secret Instructions of the Society of Jesus reproduced here was found beneath the pallet on an adobe bed in a cottage in the Andes Mountains of Peru about a century ago. Students of the Incas recall that prior to the expedition of the National Geographic Magazine under Hiram Gingham, in 1911, archeologists from European countries probed the ruins of this people, one of the greatest civilizations in history.

In 1870 a French archeologist slipped unobtrusively into the office of the Secretary of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in San Francisco, California. He had been sent into the remote recesses of the Andes, where Pizarro and his army had conquered the Incas more than three centuries before. He had rented a room in a tiny village. This he used as a base of his operations. To this spot he returned periodically to rest from the dangerously high altitudes and to write his reports for shipment back to France. While he was away, the family frequently rented the same room to overnight guests. One of these happened to be a Jesuit official. On his departure he forgot a little book which he had hidden under the mattress. The French archeologist accidentally found it. It was the Secret Instructions of the Society of Jesus—the top classified manual of procedure for the trusted leaders of the Jesuit Order. It was in Latin and bore the seal, signature and attestation of the General and Secretary of the Order in Rome.

For the next few days the Frenchman labored furiously translating the work in stenographic notes into French. He then replaced the book and left. The Jesuit returned in a few days inquiring nervously about his little black packet. He also wanted to know if anyone had occupied the room since his departure. On learning of the archeologist he began a search so relentless that the Frenchman had to leave Peru. He finally reached San Francisco and entrusted his precious but dangerous burden to Edwin A. Sherman, the Secretary of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in California. Mr. Sherman included the Secret Instructions in his book The Engineer Corps of Hell published in 1882. For several years Edwin Sherman was the Masonic Historian of California. He was highly esteemed for his great accuracy and dependability.

CHAPTER I

THE MANNER OF PROCEDURE WITH WHICH THE SOCIETY MUST BE CONDUCTED WHEN CONSIDERING THE COMMENCING OF SOME FOUNDATION.

1. To capture the will of the inhabitants of a country, it is very important to manifest the intent of the Society, in the manner prescribed in the regulations in which it is said, that the Society must labor with such ardor and force for the salvation of their neighbor as for themselves. For the better inducement of this idea, the most opportunely that we practice the most humble offices, visiting the poor, the afflicted, and the imprisoned. It is very convenient to confess with much promptness, and to hear the confessions, showing indifference, without teasing the penitents; for this, the most notable inhabitants will admire our fathers and esteem them; for the great charity they have for all, and the novelty of the subject.

2. To have in mind that it is necessary to ask with religious modesty, the means for exercising the duties of the Society, and that it is needful to procure and acquire benevolence, principally of the secular ecclesiastics, and of persons of authority, that may be conceived necessary.

3. When called to go to the most distant places, where alms are to be received, they are to be accepted, no matter how small they may be, after having marked out the necessities of ourselves. Notwithstanding, it will be very convenient at the moment to give those alms to the poor, for the edification of those who do not have an exact understanding of the Society; and, but we must in advance be more liberal with ourselves.

4. All must labor as if we were inspired by the same spirit; and each one must study to acquire the same styles, with the object of uniformity among so great a number of persons, edifying the whole; those who do the contrary must be expelled as pernicious.

5. In a beginning it is not convenient to purchase property; but in case they can be found, some good sites may be bought, saying that they are to belong to other persons, using the names of some faithful friends, who will guard the secret. The better to make our poverty apparent, the property nearest our college must belong to colleges the most distant, that we can prevent the princes and magistrates from ever knowing that the income of the Society has a fixed point.

6. We must not ourselves go out to reside to form colleges, except to the rich cities; for in this we must imitate Christ, who remained in Jerusalem; and as he alone, passed by the less considerable populations.

7. We must obtain and acquire of the widows all the money that we can, presenting ourselves at repeated times to their sight our extreme necessity.

8. The Superior over each province is the one to whom we must account with certainty, the income of the same; but the amount to the treasurer at Rome, it is, and must always be, an impenetrable mystery.

9. It is for us to preach and say in all parts and in all conversations, that we have come to teach the young and aid the people; and this without interest in any single species and without exception of persons, and that we are not so onerous to the people as other religious orders.

CHAPTER II

THE MANNER WITH WHICH THE FATHERS OF THE ORDER MUST CONDUCT THEMSELVES TO ACQUIRE AND PRESERVE THE FAMILIARITY OF PRINCES, MAGNATES AND POWERFUL AND RICH PERSONS.

1. It is necessary to do all that is possible to gain completely the attentions and affections of princes and persons of the most consideration; for that, who, being on the outside, but in advance, all of them will be constituted our defenders.

2. As we have learned by experience that princes and potentates are generally inclined to the favor of the ecclesiastics, when these disseminate their odious actions, and when they give an interpretation that they favor, as is to be noted among the married, contract with their relations or allies; or in other similar things; assembling much with them, to animate those who may be found in this case, saying to them that we confide in the assurance of the exemptions, that by intervention of us fathers, which the Pope will concede, if he is made to see the causes, and will present other examples of similar things, exhibiting at the same time the sentiments that we favor, under the pretext of the common good and THE GREATER GLORY OF GOD that is the object of the Society.

3. If at this same assembly the prince treats of doing something, that will not be agreeable to all the great men, for which we are to stir up and investigate, meanwhile, counseling others to conform with the prince, without ever descending to treat of particulars, for fear there may not be a successful issue of the matter, for which the Society will be imputed blame; and for this, if this action shall be disapproved, there will be advertences presented to the contrary that may be absolutely prohibited and put in jeopardy, the authority of some of the fathers, of whom it can be said with certainty, that they have not had notice of the Secret Instructions; for that, it can be affirmed with an oath, that the calumny to the Society, is not true in respect to that which is imputed to it.

4. To gain the good will of Princes, it will be very convenient to insinuate with skill; and for third persons, that we fathers, are a means to discharge honorable and favorable duties in the courts of other kings and princes, and more than any one else in that of the Pope. By this means we can recommend ourselves and the Society; for the same, no one must be charged with this commission but the most zealous persons and well versed in our institute.

5. Aiming especially to bring over the will of the favorites of princes and of their servants, by means of presents and pious offices, that they may give faithful notice to us fathers of the character and inclinations of the princes and great men. Of this manner the Society can gain with facility as much to one as to others.

6. The experience we have had, has made us acquainted with the many advantages that have been taken by the Society of its intervention in the marriages of the House of Austria, and of those which have been effected in other kingdoms, France, Poland, and in various duchies. Forasmuch assembling, proposing with prudence, selecting choice persons who may be friends and families of the relatives, and of the friends of the Society.

7. It will be easy to gain the princesses, making use of their valets; by that, coming to feed and nourish with relations of friendship, by being located at the entrance in all parts, and thus become acquainted with the most intimate secrets of the familiars.

8. In regard to the direction of the consciences of great men, we confessors must follow the writers who concede the greater liberty of conscience. The contrary of this is to appear too religious; for that they will decide to leave others and submit entirely to our direction and counsels.

9. It is necessary to make reference to all the merits of the Society; to the princes and prelates, and to as many as can lend much aid to the Society, after having shown the transcendency of its great privileges.

10. Also, it will be useful to demonstrate, with prudence and skill, such ample power which the Society has, to absolve, even in the reserved cases, compared with that of other pastors and priests; also, that of dispensing with the fasts, and of the rights which they must ask and pay, in the impediments of marriage, by which means many persons will recur to us, whom it will be our duty to make agreeable.

11. It is not the less useful to invite them to our sermons, assemblies, harangues, declamations, etc., composing odes in their honor, dedicating literary works or conclusions; and if we can for the future, give dinners and greetings of divers modes.

12. It will be very convenient to take to our care the reconciliation of the great, in the quarrels and enmities that divide them; then by this method we can enter, little by little, into the acquaintance of their most intimate friends and secrets; and we can serve ourselves to that party which will be most in favor of that which we present.

13. If there should be some one at the service of a monarch or prince, and he were an enemy of our Society, it is necessary to procure well for ourselves better than for others, making him a friend, employing promises, favors, and advances, which shall be in proportion to the same monarch or prince.

14. No one shall recommend to a prince any one, nor make advances to any who have gone out from us, being outside of our Society, and in particular to those who voluntarily verified, for yet when they dissimulate they will always maintain an inextiguishable hatred to the Society.

In fine, each one must procure and search for methods to increase the affection and favor of princes, of the powerful, and of the magistrates of each population, that whenever occasion is offered to support, we can do much with efficacy and good faith, in benefiting ourselves, though contrary to their relations, allies and friends.

CHAPTER III

HOW THE SOCIETY MUST BE CONDUCTED WITH THE GREAT AUTHORITIES IN THE STATE, AND IN CASE THEY ARE NOT RICH WE MUST LEND OURSELVES TO OTHERS.

1. The care consigned to us, that we must do all that is possible, for to conquer the great; but it is also necessary to gain their favor to combat our enemies.

2. It is very conducive to value their authority, prudence and counsels, and induce them to despise wealth, at the same time that we procure gain and employ those that can redeem the Society; tacitly valuing their names, for acquisition of temporal goods if they inspire sufficient confidence

3. It is also necessary to employ the ascendant of the powerful, to temper the malevolence of the persons of a lower sphere and of the rabble against our Society.

4. It is necessary to utilize, whenever we can, the bishops, prelates and other superior ecclesiastics, according to the diversity of reason, and the inclination we manifest.

5. In some points it will be sufficient to obtain of the prelates and curates, that which it is possible to do, that their subjects respect the society; and that obstructing the exercise of its functions among those who have the greatest power, as in Germany, Poland, etc. It will be necessary to exhibit the most distinguished attentions for that, mediating its authority and that of the princes, monasteries, parishes, priorates, patronates, the foundations of the churches and the pious places, can come to our power. Because we can with more facility where the Catholics will be found mixed with heretics. It is necessary to make such prelates see the utility and merit that we have in all this, and that never will they have so much valuation from the priests, friars, and for the future from the faithful. If making these changes, it is necessary to publicly praise their zeal, although written, and to perpetuate the memory of their actions.

6. For this it is necessary to labor, to the end, that the prelates will place in the hands of us fathers, as confessors and counsellors; and if they aspire to more elevated positions in the Court of Rome, we must unite in their favor and aid their pretensions with all our forces, and by means of our influence.

7. We must be watchful that when the bishops are instituting principal colleges arid parochial churches, that the faculties are taken from the Society, and placed in both vicarious establishments, with the charge of cures, and that the Superior of the Society to be, that all the government of these churches shall pertain to us, and that the parishioners shall be our subjects, of the method that all can be placed in them.

8. Where there are those of the academies who have been driven out from us, and are contrary; where the Catholics or the heretics obstruct our installation, we will compound with the prelates, and make ourselves the owners of the first cathedrals; for thus shall we make them to know the necessities of the Society.

9. Over all, we must be very certain to procure the protection and affection of the prelates of the Church, for the cases of beatification or canonization of ourselves; in whose subjects convened further, to obtain letters from the powerful and of the princes, that the decisions may be promptly attained in the Catholic Court.

10. If it shall be accounted that the prelates or magnates should send commissioned representatives, we must put forth all ardor, that no other priests, who are in dispute with us, shall be sent; for the reason, that they shall not communicate their animadversion, discrediting us in the cities and provinces we inhabit; and that if they pass by other provinces and cities, where there are colleges, they will be received with affection and kindness, and be so splendidly treated as a religious modesty will permit.

CHAPTER IV

OF THAT WHICH WE MUST CHARGE THE PREACHERS AND CONFESSORS OF THE GREAT OF THE EARTH.

1. Those of us who may be directed to the princes and illustrious men, of the manner in which we must appear before them, with inclination unitedly to the greater glory of God, obtaining—with its austerity of conscience, that the same princes are persuaded of it; for this direction we must not travel in a principle to the exterior or political government, but gradually and imperceptibly.

2. Forasmuch there will be opportunity and conducive notices at repeated times, that the distribution of honors and dignities in the Republic is an act of justice; and that in a great manner it will be offending God, if the princes do not examine themselves and cease carrying their passions, protesting to the same with frequency and severity, that we do not desire to mix in the administration of the State; but when it shall become necessary to so express ourselves thus, to have your weight to fill the mission that is recommended. Directly that the sovereigns are well convinced of this, it will be very convenient to give an idea of the virtues that may be found to adorn those that are selected for the dignities and principal public changes; procuring then and recommending the true friends of the Society; notwithstanding, we must not make it openly for ourselves, but by means of our friends who have intimacy with the prince that it is not for us to talk him into the disposition of making them.

3. For this watchfulness our friends must instruct the confessors and preachers of the Society near the persons capable of discharging any duty, that over all, they must be generous to the Society; they must also keep their names, that they may insinuate with skill, and upon opportune occasions to princes, well for themselves or by means of others.

4. The preachers and confessors will always present themselves so that they must comport with the princes, lovable and affectionate, without ever shocking them in sermons, nor in particular conversations, presenting that which rejects all fear, and exhorting them in particular to faith, hope and justice.

5. Never receive gifts made to any one in particular, but that for the contrary; but picture the distress in which the Society or college may be found, as all are alike; having to be satisfied with assigning each one a room in the house, modestly furnished; and noticing that your garb is not over nice; and assist with promptness to the aid and counsel of the most miserable persons of the palace; but that you do not say it of them, but only those who have agreed to serve the powerful.

6. Whenever the death occurs of any one employed in the palace, we must take care of speaking with anticipation, that they fail in the nomination of a successor, in their affection for the Society; but giving no appearance to cause suspicion that it was the intent of usurping the government of the prince; for which, it must not be from us that it is said; take a part direct; but assembling of faithful or influential friends who may be found in a position of rousing the hate of one and another until they become inflamed.

CHAPIER V

OF THE MODE OF CONDUCTING THE SOCIETY WITH RESPECT TO OTHER ECCLESIASTICS WHO HAVE THE SAME DUTIES AS OURSELVES IN THE CHURCH.

1. It is necessary to help with valor these persons, and manifest in their due time to the princes and lords that are always ours, and being constituted in power, that our Society contains essentially the perfection of all the other orders, with the exception of singing and manifesting an exterior of austerity in the mode of life and in dress; and that if in some points they excel the communities of the Society, this shines with greater splendor in the Church of God.

2. We must inquire into and note the *defects of the other fathers [/i](non-Jesuit priests), and when we find them, we must divulge them among our faithful friends, as [i]condoling over them; we must show that such fathers do not discharge with certainty, that we do ourselves the functions, that some and others recommend.

3. It is necessary that the fathers of our Society oppose with all their power the other fathers who intend to found houses of education to instruct the youths among the populations where ours are found teaching with acceptation and approval; and it will be very convenient to indicate our projects to princes and magistrates, that such people will excite disturbances and commotions if they are not prohibited from teaching; and that in the last result, the damage will fall upon the educated, by being instructed by a bad method, without any necessity; posting them that the Society is sufficient to teach the youth. In case the fathers bear letters of the Pontificate, or recommendations from the Cardinals, we must work in opposition to them, making the princes and great men to point out to the Pope the merits of the Society and its intelligence for the pacific instruction of the youths, to which end, we must have and obtain certifications of the authorities upon our good conduct and sufficiency.

4. Having notwithstanding to form duties, our fathers in displaying singular proofs of our virtue and erudition, making them to exercise the alumni (graduates) in their studies in methods of functions, scholars of diversion, capable of drawing applause, making for supposition, these representations in the presence of the great magistrates and concurrence of other classes.

CHAPTER VI

OF THE MODE OF ATTRACTING RICH WIDOWS.

1. We must elect effective fathers already advanced in years, of lively complexion and conversation, agreeable to visit these ladies, and whence they can promptly note in them appreciation or affection for our Society; making offerings of good works and the merits of the same; that, if they accept them, and succeed in having them frequent our temples, we must assign to them a confessor, who will be able of guiding them in the ways that are proper, in the state of widowhood, making the enumeration and praises of satisfaction that should accompany such a state; making them believe and yet with certainty that they who serve as such, is a merit for eternal life, being efficacious to relieve them from the pains of purgatory.

2. The same confessor will propose to them to make and adorn a little chapel or oratory in their own house, to confirm their religious exercises, because by this method we can shorten the communication, more easily hindering those who visit others; although if they have a particular chaplain, and will content to go to him to celebrate the mass, making opportune advertencies to her who confesses, to the effect and treating her as being left to be overpowered by said Chaplain.

3. We must endeavor skillfully but gently to cause them to change respectively to the Order and to the method of the House, and to conform as the circumstances of the person will permit, to whom they are directed, their propensities, their piety, and yet to the place and situation of the edifice.

4. We must not omit to have removed, little by little, the servants of the house that are not of the same mind with ourselves, proposing that they be replaced by those persons who are dependent on us, or who desire to be of the Society; for by this method we can be placed in the channel of communication of whatever passes in the family.

5. The constant watch of the confessor will have to be, that the widow shall be disposed to depend on him totally, representing that her advances in grace are necessarily bound to this submission.

6. We are to induce her to the frequency of the sacraments, and especially that of penitency, making her to give account of her deeper thoughts and intentions; inviting her to listen to her confessor, when he is to preach particular promising orations; recommending equally the recitation each day of the litanies and the examination of conscience.

7. It will be very necessary in the case of a general confession, to enter extensively into all of her inclinations; for that it will be to determine her, although she may be found in the hands of others.

8. Insist upon the advantages of widowhood, and the inconvenience of marriage; in particular that of a repeated one, and the dangers to which she will be exposed, relatively to her particular businesses into which we are desirous of penetrating.

9. We must cause her to talk of men whom she dislikes, and to see if she takes notice of anyone who is agreeable, and represent to her that he is a man of bad life; procuring by these means disgust of one and another, and repugnant to unite with anyone.

10. When the confessor has become convinced that she has decided to follow the life of widowhood, he must then proceed to counsel her to dedicate herself to a spiritual life, but not to a monastic one, whose lack of accommodations will show how they live; in a word, we must proceed to speak of the spiritual life of Pauline and of Eustace, &c. The confessor will conduct her at last, that having devoted the widow to chastity, to not less than for two or three years, she will then be made to renounce a second nuptial forever.

In this case she will be found to have discarded all sorts of relations with men, and even the diversions between her relatives and acquaintances, we must protest that she must unite more closely to God. With regard to the ecclesiastics who visit her, or to whom she goes out to visit, when we cannot keep her separate and apart from all others, we must labor that those with whom she treats shall be recommended by ourselves or by those who are devoted to us.

11. In this state, we must inspire her to give alms, under the direction, as she will suppose, or her spiritual father; then it is of great importance that they shall be employed with utility; more, being careful that there shall be discretion in counsel, causing her to see that inconsiderate alms are the frequent causes of many sins, or serve to foment at last, that they are not the fruit, nor the merit which produced them.

CHAPTER VII

SYSTEM WHICH MUST BE EMPLOYED WITH WIDOWS AND METHODS OF DISPOSING OF THEIR PROPERTY.

1. It will be necessary to inspire her to continue to persevere in her devotion and the exercise of good works and of disposition, in not permitting a week to pass, to give away some part of her overplus, in honor of Jesus Christ, of the Holy Virgin and of the Saint she has chosen for her patron; giving this to the poor of the Society or for the ornamenting of its churches, until she has absolutely disposed of the first fruits of her property as in other times did the Egyptians.

2. When the widows, the more generally to practice their alms, must be given to know with perseverance, their liberality in favor of the Society; and they are to be assured that they are participants in all the merits of the same, and of the particular indulgences of the Provincial; and if they are persons of much consideration, of the General of the Order.

3. The widows who having made vows of chastity, it will be necessary for them to renew them twice per annum, conforming to the custom that we have established; but permitting them notwithstanding, that day some honest freedom from restraint by our fathers.

4. They must be frequently visited, treating them agreeably; referring them to spiritual and diverting histories, conformable to the character and inclination of each one.

5. But that they may not abate, we must not use too much rigor with them in the confessional; that it may not be, that they by having empowered others of their benevolence, that we do not lose confidence of recovering their adhesion, having to proceed in all cases with great skill and caution, being aware of the inconstancy natural to woman.

6. It is necessary to have them do away with the habit of frequenting other churches, in particular those of convents; for which it is necessary to often remind them, that in our Order there are possessed many indulgences that are to be obtained only partially by all the other religious corporations.

7. To those who may be found in the case of the garb of mourning, they will be counselled to dress a little more agreeable, that they may at the same time, unite the aspect of mourning with that of adornment, to draw them away from the idea of being found directed by a man who has become a stranger to the world. Also with such, that they may not be very much endangered, or particularly exposed to volubility, we can concede to them, as if they maintained their consequence and liberality, for and with the Society, that which drives sensuality away from them, being with moderation and without scandal.

8. We must manage that in the houses of the widows there shall be honorable young ladies, of rich and noble families; that little by little they become accustomed to our direction and mode of life; and that they are given a director elected and established by the confessor of the family, to be permanently and always subject to all the reprehensions and habits of the Society; and if any do not wish to submit to all they must be sent to the houses of their fathers, or to those from which they were brought, accusing them directly of extravagance and of glaring and stained character.

9. The care of the health of the widows, and to proportion some amusement, it is not the least important that we should care for their salvation; and so, if they complain of some indisposition, we must prohibit the fast, the hair cloth girdle, and the discipline, without permitting them to go to church; further continue the direction, cautiously and secretly with such, that they may be examined in their houses; if they are given admission into the garden, and edifice of the college, with secrecy; and if they consent to converse and secretly entertain with those that they prefer.

10. To the end that we may obtain, that the widows employ their utmost obsequiousness to the Society, it is the duty to represent to them the perfection of the life of the holy, who have renounced the world, estranged themselves from their relations, and despising their fortunes, consecrating themselves to the service of the Supreme Being with entire resignation and content. It will be necessary to produce the same effect, that those who turn away to the Constitutions of the Society, and their relative examination to the abandonment of all things. We must cite examples of the widows who have reached holiness in a very short time; giving hopes of their being canonized, if their perseverance does not decay; and promising for their cases our influence with the Holy Father.

11. We must impress in their souls the persuasion that, if they desire to enjoy complete tranquillity of conscience it will be necessary for them to follow without repugnance, without murmuring, nor tiring, the direction of the confessor, so in the spiritual, as in the eternal, that she may be found destined to the same God, by their guidance.

12. Also we must direct with opportunity, that the Lord does not desire that they should give alms, nor yet to fathers of an exemplary life, known and approved, without consulting beforehand with their confessor, and regulating the dictation of the same.

13. The confessors must take the greatest care, that the widows and their daughters of the confessional, do not go to see other fathers (i.e. non-Jesuit priests) under any pretext, nor with them. For this, we must praise our Society as the Order most illustrious of them all; of greater utility in the Church, and of greater authority with the Pope and with the princes; perfection in itself; then dismiss the dream of them, and menace them, that we can, and that we are no correspondents to them, we can say, that we do not consent to froth and do as among other monks who count in their convents many ignorant, stupid loungers who are indolent in regard to the other life, and intriguers in that to disorder, &c.

14. The confessors must propose and persuade the widows to assign ordinary pensions and other annual quotas to the colleges and houses of profession for their sustenance with especially to the professed house at Rome; and not forgetting to remind them of the restoration of the ornaments of the temples and replenishing of the wax, the wine, and other necessaries for the celebration of the mass.

15. If they do not make relinquishment of their property to the Society, it will be made manifest to them, on apparent occasion in particular, when they are found to be sick, or in danger of death; that there are many colleges to be founded; and that they may be excited with sweetness and disinterestedness, to make some disbursements as merit for God, and in that they can found his eternal glory.

16. In the same manner, we must proceed with regard to princes and other well doers, making them to see that such foundations will be made to perpetuate their memory in this world, and gain eternal happiness, and if some malevolent persons adduce the example of Jesus Christ, saying, that then he had no place to recline his head, the Society bearing his name should be poor in imitation of himself, we must make it known and imprint it in the imagination of those, and of all the world, that the Church has varied, and that in this day we have become a State; and we must show authority and grand measures against its enemies that are very powerful, or like that little stone prognosticated by the prophet, that, divided, came to be a great mountain. Inculcate constantly to the widows who dedicate their alms and ornaments to the temples, that the greater perfection is in disposing of the affection and earthly things, ceding their possession to Jesus Christ and his companions.

17. Being very little, that which we must promise to the widows, who dedicate and educate their children for the world, we must apply some remedy to it.

CHAPTER XIV

UPON RESERVED CASES AND MOTIVES THAT NECESSITATE EXPULSION FROM SOCIETY.

1. To most of the cases expressed in the Constitutions, and of which only the Superior or the ordinary confessor, with permission of this, can absolve them, where there is sodomy, unseats crime, fornication, adultery, of the unchaste touch of a man, or of a woman; also if under the pretext of zeal, or whatever motive, they have done some grave thing against the Society; against its honors and its gains; these will be just causes for reason of the expulsion of the guilty.

2. If anyone confesses in the confessional of having committed some similar act, he will not be promised absolution, until he has promised to reveal to the Superior, outside of the confessional, the same or by his confessor. The Superior will operate the better for it, in the general interests of the Society; further, if there is founded hope of the careful hiding of the crime, it will be necessary to impose upon the guilty a convenient punishment; if otherwise be can be expelled much before. With all the care that is possible, the confessor will give the penitent to understand that he runs the danger of being expelled.

3. If any one of our confessors, having heard a strange person say, that he had committed a shameful thing with one of the Society, he will not absolve such a person, without his having said, outside of his confession, the name of the one with whom he has sinned; and if he so says, he will be made to swear that he will not divulge the same, without the consent of the Society.

4. If two of ourselves have sinned carnally, he who first avows it will be retained in the Society; and the other will be expelled; but he who remains permanent, will be after such mortification and bad treatment, of sorrow, and by his impatience, and if we have occasion for his expulsion, it will be necessary for the future of it that it be done directly.

5. The Society being a noble corporation and preeminent in the Church, it can dismiss those that will not be apt for the execution of our object, although giving satisfaction in the beginning; and the opportunity does not delay in presenting itself; if it procures continuous maltreatment; and if he is obliged to do contrary to his inclination; if they are gathered under the orders of gloomy Superiors; if he is separated from his studies and from the honorable functions, &c., &c., until he gets to murmuring.

6. In no manner must we retain in the Society, those that openly reveal against their Superiors, or that will complain publicly, or reservedly, of their companions, or particularly if they make them to strangers; nor to those who are among ourselves, or among persons who are on the outside, censure the conduct of the Society in regard to the acquisition or administration of temporal properties, or whatever acts of the same; for example, of crushing or oppressing many of those whom we do not wish well, or that they the same having been expelled, &c., &c. Nor yet those, that in conversation, who tolerate, or defend the Venetians, the French and others, that have driven the Society away from the territories, or that have occasioned great prejudices.

7. Before the expulsion of any we must vex and harass them in the extreme; depriving them of the functions that they have been accustomed to discharge, dedicating them to others. Although they may do well, it will be necessary to censure them, and with this pretext, apply them to another thing. Imposing by a trifling fault that they have committed the most severe penalties, that they blush in public, until they have lost all patience; and at last will be expelled as pernicious to all, for which a future opportunity will present itself when they will think less.

8. When some one of the Society has a certain hope of obtaining a bishopric, or whatever other ecclesiastical dignity, to most of the ordinary vows of the Society he will be obliged to take another; and that is, that he will always preserve good sentiments towards the Society; that he will always speak favorably of it; that he will not have a confessor that will not be to its bosom; that he will do nothing of entity without having heard the justice of the same. Because in consequence of not having observed this, the Cardinal Tolet the Society had obtained of the Holy See, that no swinish descendants of Jews or Mahometans were admitted, that he did not desire to take such vows; and that for celebrity that is out, he was expelled as a firm enemy of the Society.

CHAPTER XV

HOW THE SOCIETY MUST BE CONDUCTED WITH THE MONKS AND NUNS.

1. The confessors and preachers must guard well against offending the nuns and occasioning temptations contrary to their vocation; but on the contrary, having conciliated the love of the Lady Superiors, that we obtain to hear, when less, their extraordinary confessions, and that it is predicted that we may hope soon to receive some gratitude from them; because the abbesses, principally the rich and noble, can be of much utility to the Society, by themselves, and by their relatives and friends; of the manner with which we treat with them and influence of the principal monasteries, the Society will little by little arrive to obtain the knowledge of an the corporation and increase its friendship.

2. It will be necessary, notwithstanding, to prohibit our nuns from frequenting the monasteries of women, for fear that their mode of life may be more agreeable, and that the Society will see itself frustrated in the hopes of possessing all their properties. We must induce them to take the vow of chastity and obedience, at the hands of their confessors; and to show them that this mode of life will conform with the uses of the Primitive Church, placed as a light to shine in the house, and that it cannot be hidden under a measure, without the edification of their neighbor, and without fruit for the souls; furthermore, that in imitation of the widows of the Gospel, doing well by giving themselves to Jesus Christ and to his Society. If they were to know how evil it can possibly be, of the life of the cloisters; but these instructions must be given under the seal of inviolable secrecy that they do not come to the ears of the monks.

CHAPTER XVI

HOW WE MUST MAKE PROFESSION OF DESPISING RICHES.*

1. With the end of preventing the seculars from directing attention to our itching for riches, it will be useful to repel at times alms of little amount, by which we can allow them to do services for our Society; though we must accept the smallest amounts from people attached to us, for fear that we may be accused of avarice, if we only receive those that are most numerous.

2. We must refuse sepulture to persons of the lowest class in our churches, though they may have been very attached to our Society; for we do not believe that we must seek riches by the number of interments, and we must hold firmly the gains that we have made with the dead.

3. In regard to the widows and other persons who have left their properties to the Society, we must labor with resolution and greater vigor than with the others; things being equal, and not to be made apparent, that we favor some more than others, in consideration of their temporal properties. The same must be observed with those that pertain to the Society, after that they have made cession of their property; and if it be necessary to expel them from the Society, it must be done with discretion, to the end that they leave to the Society a part for the less of that which they have given, or that which they have bequeathed at the time of their death.

* "How we must pretend to despise wealth."

CHAPTER XVII

METHODS TO EXALT THE COMPANY

1. Treating principally all, though in things of little consequence, we must have the same opinion, or at least exterior dignity; for by this manner we may augment and strengthen the Society more and more; to overthrow the barrier we have overcome in the business of the world.

2. Thus strengthening all, it will shine by its wisdom and good example, that we shall excel all the other fathers, and particularly the pastors, &c., &c., until the people desire us to all. Publicly divulging that the pastors do not need to possess so much knowledge; with such they can discharge well their duties, stating that they can assist them with the counsels of the Society; that for this motive they can dedicate themselves to all classes of studies.

3. We must inculcate this doctrine with kings and princes, THAT THE CATHOLIC FAITH CANNOT SUBSIST IN THE PRESENT STATE, WITHOUT POLITICS; but that in this, it is necessary to proceed with much certainty. Of this mode, we must share the affection of the great, and BE ADMITTED TO THE MOST SECRET COUNSELS.

4. We must entertain their good will, by writing from all parts interesting facts and notices.

5. It will be no little advantage that will result, by secretly and prudently fomenting dissensions between the great, ruining or augmenting their power. But if we perceive some appearance of reconciliation between them, then we of the Society will treat and act as pacificators; that it shall not be that any others shall anticipate to obtain it.

6. As much to the magnates as to the people, we must persuade them by all possible means, that the Society has not been, but by especial Divine Providence, conforming to the prophecies of the Abbot Joachim, for to return and raise up the Church, humbled by the heretics.

7. Having acquired the favor of the great and of the bishops, it will be an entire necessity, of empowering the curates and prebendaries to more exactly reform the clergy, that in other times lived under certain rule with the bishops, and tending to perfection; also it will be necessary to inspire the abbeys and prelacies; the which it will not be difficult to obtain; calling attention to the indolence and stupidity of the monks as if they were cattle; because it will be very advantageous for the Church, if all the bishoprics were occupied by members of the Society; and yet, as if it was the same apostolic chair, particularly if the Pope should return as temporal prince of all the properties; for as much as it is very necessary to extend little by little, with much secrecy and skill, the temporalities of the Society; and not having any doubt that the world will enter the golden age,1 to enjoy a perfect universal peace, for following the divine benediction that will descend upon the Church.

8. But if we do not hope that we can obtain this, supposing that it is necessary that scandals shall come in the world, WE MUST BE CAREFUL TO CHANGE OUR POLITICS, CONFORMING TO THE TIMES, AND EXCITE THE PRINCES, FRIENDS OF OURS TO mutually make terrible wars THAT EVERYWHERE THE MEDIATION OF THE SOCIETY WILL BE IMPLORED; that we may be employed in the public reconciliation, for it will be the cause of the common good and we shall be recompensed by the PRINCIPAL ECCLESIASTICAL DIGNITIES; and the BETTER BENEFICIARIES.

9. In fine, that the Society afterwards can yet count upon the favor and authority of the princes, procuring THAT THOSE WHO DO NOT LOVE US SHALL FEAR US.

Editor's Note

1. The ultimate goal of the Jesuits is to bring in a golden age or millennium with the entire world under the Pope. They are behind all those Utopian schemes, whether it is Hitler's Third Reich or the Communists' workers paradise. The Bible says that the golden age began with the First Coming of Christ and will end with His Second Coming. This is the ONLY age that men and women can become children of God by faith alone in Jesus Christ! When Christ returns it will be the end of time and the end of this present universe. . . .Thank God this Jesuit golden age will be very short lived.

INDUCTION AND EXTREME OATH OF THE JESUITS

When a Jesuit novice is about to be inducted into the higher levels of the Order, he kneels on a red cross before the Superior of the Order. Before him are two flags, the familiar yellow and white flag of the papacy, and the black flag with a dagger and red cross above a skull and crossbones, the flag of the Jesuit Order. On the Jesuit flag is written the words, IUSTUM, NECAR, REGES, IMPIOS. (It is just to exterminate or annihilate impious or heretical kings, governments, or rulers.) The Superior of the Order hands the novice a small black crucifix which he presses to his heart, and the Superior then presents to the novice a dagger. The novice grasps the bare blade and presses the point to his heart. The Superior, still holding the hilt of the dagger then speaks to the novice.

Superior
My son, heretofore you have been taught to act the dissembler: among Roman Catholics to be a Roman Catholic, and to spy even among your own brethren; to believe no man, to trust no man. Among the Reformers, to be a Reformer; among the Huguenots, to be a Huguenot; among the Calvinists, to be a Calvinist; among the Protestants, generally to be a Protestant; and obtaining their confidence to seek even to preach from their pulpits and to denounce with all the vehemence in your nature our Holy Religion and the Pope; and to descend so low as to become a Jew among the Jews, that you might be enabled to gather together all information for your Order as a faithful soldier of the Pope.

You have been taught to insidiously plant the seeds of jealousy and hatred between communities, provinces and states that were at peace, and incite them to deeds of blood, involving them in war with each other, and to create revolutions and civil wars in countries that were independent and prosperous, cultivating the arts and sciences and enjoying the blessings of peace. To take sides with the combatants and to act secretly in concert with your brother Jesuit, who may be engaged on the other side, but openly opposed to that with which you might be connected; only that the Church might be the gainer in the end, in the conditions fixed in the treaties for peace and that the end justifies the means.

You have been taught your duty as a spy, to gather all statistics, facts and information in your power from every source; to ingratiate yourself into the confidence of the family circle of Protestants and heretics of every class and character, as well as that of the merchant, the banker, the lawyer, among the schools and universities, in parliaments and legislatures, and in the judiciaries councils of state, and to "be all things to all men," for the Pope's sake, whose servants we are unto death.

You have received all your instructions heretofore as a novice, a neophyte, and have served as a coadjutor, confessor and priest, but you have not been invested with all that is necessary to command in the Army of Loyola in the service of the Pope. You must serve the proper time as the instrument and executioner as directed by your superiors; for none can command here who has not consecrated his labors with the blood of the heretic; for "without the shedding of blood no man can be saved." Therefore, to fit yourself for your work, and make your own salvation sure, you will, in addition to your former oath of obedience to your Order and your allegiance to the Pope, repeat after me.

I, M---------- N----------, Now, in the presence of Almighty God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, the blessed Michael the Archangel, the blessed St. John the Baptist, the holy Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul and all the saints and the sacred hosts of heaven, and to you, my ghostly father, the Superior general of the Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius of Loyola, in the Pontificate of Paul the Third, and continued to the present, do by the womb of the Virgin, the matrix of God, and the rod of Jesus Christ, declare and swear, that his holiness the Pope is Christ's Viceregent and is the true and only Head of the Catholic or Universal Church throughout the earth; and that by virtue of the keys of binding and loosing, given to his Holiness by my Saviour, Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical kings, princes, states, commonwealths and governments, all being illegal without his sacred confirmation and that they may safely be destroyed.

Therefore, to the utmost of my power, I shall and will defend this doctrine and his Holiness' right and custom against all usurpers of the heretical or Protestant authority, and all adherents in the regard that they be usurped and heretical, opposing the sacred Mother Church of Rome.

I do now renounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince or state named Protestants or Liberals or obedience to any of their laws, magistrates or officers. I do further declare that the doctrines of the churches of England and Scotland, of the Calvinists, Huguenots and others of the name Protestants or Liberals to be damnable, and they themselves damned and to be damned who will not forsake the same.

I do further declare that I will help, assist and advise all or any of his Holiness' agents in any place wherever I shall be, in any other kingdom or territory I shall come to, and do my uttermost to extirpate the heretical Protestants or Liberals' doctrines and to destroy all their pretended powers, regal or otherwise.

I do further promise and declare, that notwithstanding I am dispensed with, to assume any religion heretical, for the propagating of the Mother Church's interest, to keep secret and private all her agents counsels' from time to time, as they may entrust me, and not to divulge, directly or indirectly, by word, writing or circumstance whatever; but to execute all that shall be proposed, given in charge or discovered unto me, by you, my ghostly father, or any of this sacred convent.

I do further promise and declare, that I will have no opinion or will of my own, or any mental reservation whatever, even as a corpse or cadaver, (perinde ac cadaver,) but will unhesitatingly obey each and every command that I may receive from my superiors in the Militia of the Pope and Jesus Christ. That I will go to any part of the world whithersoever I may be sent, without murmuring or repining, and will be submissive in all things commanded to me.

I furthermore promise and declare that I will, when opportunity presents, make and wage relentless war, secretly or openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Liberals, as I am directed to do, to extirpate and exterminate them from the face of the whole earth; and that I will spare neither age, nor sex or condition; and that I will hang, burn, waste, spoil, flay, strangle, and bury alive these infamous heretics, rip up the stomachs and wombs of their women and crush their infants' heads against the walls, in order to annihilate forever their execrable race.

That when the same cannot be done openly, I will secretly use the poisoned cup, the strangulating cord, the steel of the poinard or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honor, rank, dignity, or authority of the person or persons, whatever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed to do so by any agent of the Pope or Superior of the Brotherhood of the Holy Faith, of the Society of Jesus.

In confirmation of which, I hereby dedicate my life, soul, and all of my coporeal powers, and with this dagger which I now receive, I will subscribe my name written in my own blood, in testimony thereof; and should I prove false or weaken in my determination, may my brethren and fellow soldiers of the Militia of the Pope cut off my hands and feet, and my throat from ear to ear, my belly opened and sulphur burned therein, with all the punishment that can be inflicted upon me on earth, and my soul to be tortured by demons in an eternal hell forever.

All of which I, M------ N------, do swear by the blessed Trinity and blessed Sacrament, which I am about to receive, to perform and on my part to receive inviolably; and do call all of the heavenly and glorious host of heaven to witness these my real intentions to keep this my oath.

In testimony hereof I take this most holy and blessed sacrament of the Eucharist, and witness the same further, with my name written with the point of this dagger dipped in my own blood and sealed in the face of this holy convent.

Superior

You will now rise to your feet and I will instruct you in the Catechism necessary to make yourself known to any member of the Society of Jesus belonging to this rank.

In the first place, you, as a Brother Jesuit, will with another make the ordinary sign of the cross as any Roman Catholic would; then one crosses his wrists, the palms of his hands open, the other crosses his feet, one above the other; the first points with forefinger of the right hand to the center of the palm of the left, the other with the forefinger of the left hand points to the center of the palm of the right; the first then with his right hand makes a circle around his head, touching it; the other then with the forefinger of his left hand touches the left side of his body just below his heart; then the first with his right hand draws it across the throat of the other, and the latter then with his right hand makes the motion of cutting with a dagger down the stomach and abdomen of the first.

The first then says Iustum; the other answers Necar; the first then says Reges. The other answers Impios. The first will then present a small piece of paper folded in a peculiar manner, four times, which the other will cut longitudinally and on opening the name JESU will be found written upon the head and arms of a cross three times. You will then give and receive with him the following questions and answers.

Q: From where do you come?
A: From the bends of the Jordan, from Calvary, from the Holy Sepulchre, and lastly from Rome.

Q: Whom do you serve?
A: The Holy Father at Rome, the Pope, and the Roman Catholic Church Universal throughout the world.

Q: Who commands you?
A: The successor of St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus or the Soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Q: Who received you?
A: A venerable man with white hair.

Q: How?
A: With a naked dagger, I kneeling on a cross beneath the banners of the Pope and of our sacred Order.

Q: Did you take an oath?
A: I did, to destroy heretics and their governments and rulers, and to spare neither age, sex or condition. To be as a corpse without any opinion or will of my own, but to implicitly obey my superiors in all things without hesitation or murmuring.

Q: Will you do that?
A: I will.

Q: How do you travel?
A: In the bark of Peter the fisherman.

Q: Whither do you travel?

A: To the four quarters of the globe.

Q: For what purpose?
A: To obey the orders of my General and Superiors and execute the will of the Pope and faithfully fulfill the conditions of my oath.

Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Viceregent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated.

The Jesuit Oath Exposed

http://www.ianpaisley.org/article.asp?jesuit

"Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Vice-Regent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated."
Professor Arthur Noble

[The following is the text of the Jesuit Extreme Oath of Induction as recorded in the Journals of the 62nd Congress, 3rd Session, of the United States Congressional Record (House Calendar No. 397, Report No. 1523, 15 February, 1913, pp. 3215-3216), from which it was subsequently torn out. The Oath is also quoted by Charles Didier in his book Subterranean Rome (New York, 1843), translated from the French original. Dr. Alberto Rivera, who escaped from the Jesuit Order in 1967, confirms that the induction ceremony and the text of the Jesuit Oath which he took were identical to what we have cited below. – A. N.]

When a Jesuit of the minor rank is to be elevated to command, he is conducted into the Chapel of the Convent of the Order, where there are only three others present, the principal or Superior standing in front of the altar. On either side stands a monk, one of whom holds a banner of yellow and white, which are the Papal colours, and the other a black banner with a dagger and red cross above a skull and crossbones, with the word INRI, and below them the words IUSTUM NECAR REGES IMPIUS. The meaning of which is: It is just to exterminate or annihilate impious or heretical Kings, Governments, or Rulers.

Upon the floor is a red cross at which the postulant or candidate kneels. The Superior hands him a small black crucifix, which he takes in his left hand and presses to his heart, and the Superior at the same time presents to him a dagger, which he grasps by the blade and holds the point against his heart, the Superior still holding it by the hilt, and thus addresses the postulant:

(The Superior speaks:)

My son, heretofore you have been taught to act the dissembler: among Roman Catholics to be a Roman Catholic, and to be a spy even among your own brethren; to believe no man, to trust no man. Among the Reformers, to be a Reformer; among the Huguenots, to be a Huguenot; among the Calvinists, to be a Calvinist; among other Protestants, generally to be a Protestant; and obtaining their confidence, to seek even to preach from their pulpits, and to denounce with all the vehemence in your nature our Holy Religion and the Pope; and even to descend so low as to become a Jew among Jews, that you might be enabled to gather together all information for the benefit of your Order as a faithful soldier of the Pope. You have been taught to plant insidiously the seeds of jealousy and hatred between communities, provinces, states that were at peace, and to incite them to deeds of blood, involving them in war with each other, and to create revolutions and civil wars in countries that were independent and prosperous, cultivating the arts and the sciences and enjoying the blessings of peace; to take sides with the combatants and to act secretly with your brother Jesuit, who might be engaged on the other side, but openly opposed to that with which you might be connected, only that the Church might be the gainer in the end, in the conditions fixed in the treaties for peace and that the end justifies the means. You have been taught your duty as a spy, to gather all statistics, facts and information in your power from every source; to ingratiate yourself into the confidence of the family circle of Protestants and heretics of every class and character, as well as that of the merchant, the banker, the lawyer, among the schools and universities, in parliaments and legislatures, and the judiciaries and councils of state, and to be all things to all men, for the Pope's sake, whose servants we are unto death. You have received all your instructions heretofore as a novice, a neophyte, and have served as co-adjurer, confessor and priest, but you have not yet been invested with all that is necessary to command in the Army of Loyola in the service of the Pope. You must serve the proper time as the instrument and executioner as directed by your superiors; for none can command here who has not consecrated his labours with the blood of the heretic; for "without the shedding of blood no man can be saved". Therefore, to fit yourself for your work and make your own salvation sure, you will, in addition to your former oath of obedience to your order and allegiance to the Pope, repeat after me:

(Text of the Oath:)

I_____ , now in the presence of Almighty God, the blessed Virgin Mary, the blessed St. John the Baptist, the Holy Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul, and all the saints, sacred host of Heaven, and to you, my Ghostly Father, the superior general of the Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius Loyola, in the pontification of Paul the Third, and continued to the present, do by the womb of the Virgin, the matrix of God, and the rod of Jesus Christ, declare and swear that His Holiness, the Pope, is Christ's Vice-Regent and is the true and only head of the Catholic or Universal Church throughout the earth; and that by the virtue of the keys of binding and loosing given to His Holiness by my Saviour, Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical Kings, Princes, States, Commonwealths, and Governments, and they may be safely destroyed. Therefore to the utmost of my power I will defend this doctrine and His Holiness's right and custom against all usurpers of the heretical or Protestant authority whatever, especially the Lutheran Church of Germany, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, and the now pretended authority and Churches of England and Scotland, and the branches of same now established in Ireland and on the continent of America and elsewhere and all adherents in regard that they may be usurped and heretical, opposing the sacred Mother Church of Rome. I do now denounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince or State, named Protestant or Liberal, or obedience to any of their laws, magistrates or officers. I do further declare the doctrine of the Churches of England and Scotland of the Calvinists, Huguenots, and others of the name of Protestants or Masons to be damnable, and they themselves to be damned who will not forsake the same. I do further declare that I will help, assist, and advise all or any of His Holiness's agents, in any place where I should be, in Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Ireland or America, or in any other kingdom or territory I shall come to, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant or Masonic doctrines and to destroy all their pretended powers, legal or otherwise. I do further promise and declare that, notwithstanding, I am dispensed with to assume any religion heretical for the propagation of the Mother Church's interest; to keep secret and private all her agents' counsels from time to time, as they entrust me, and not to divulge, directly or indirectly, by word, writing or circumstances whatever; but to execute all that should be proposed, given in charge, or discovered unto me by you, my Ghostly Father, or any of this sacred order. I do further promise and declare that I will have no opinion or will of my own or any mental reservation whatever, even as a corpse or cadaver (perinde ac cadaver), but will unhesitatingly obey each and every command that I may receive from my superiors in the militia of the Pope and of Jesus Christ. That I will go to any part of the world whithersoever I may be sent, to the frozen regions north, jungles of India, to the centres of civilisation of Europe, or to the wild haunts of the barbarous savages of America without murmuring or repining, and will be submissive in all things, whatsoever is communicated to me. I do further promise and declare that I will, when opportunity presents, make and wage relentless war, secretly and openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Masons, as I am directed to do, to extirpate them from the face of the whole earth; and that I will spare neither age, sex nor condition, and that will hang, burn, waste, boil, flay, strangle, and bury alive these infamous heretics; rip up the stomachs and wombs of their women, and crush their infants' heads against the walls in order to annihilate their execrable race. That when the same cannot be done openly I will secretly use the poisonous cup, the strangulation cord, the steel of the poniard, or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honour, rank, dignity or authority of the persons, whatever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed so to do by any agents of the Pope or Superior of the Brotherhood of the Holy Father of the Society of Jesus. In confirmation of which I hereby dedicate my life, soul, and all corporal powers, and with the dagger which I now receive I will subscribe my name written in my blood in testimony thereof; and should I prove false, or weaken in my determination, may my brethren and fellow soldiers of the militia of the Pope cut off my hands and feet and my throat from ear to ear, my belly be opened and sulphur burned therein with all the punishment that can be inflicted upon me on earth, and my soul shall be tortured by demons in eternal hell forever. That I will in voting always vote for a Knight of Columbus in preference to a Protestant, especially a Mason, and that I will leave my party so to do; that if two Catholics are on the ticket I will satisfy myself which is the better supporter of Mother Church and vote accordingly. That I will not deal with or employ a Protestant if in my power to deal with or employ a Catholic. That I will place Catholic girls in Protestant families that a weekly report may be made of the inner movements of the heretics. That I will provide myself with arms and ammunition that I may be in readiness when the word is passed, or I am commanded to defend the Church either as an individual or with the militia of the Pope. All of which I,_____, do swear by the blessed Trinity and blessed sacrament which I am now to receive to perform and on part to keep this my oath. In testimony hereof, I take this most holy and blessed sacrament of the Eucharist and witness the same further with my name written with the point of this dagger dipped in my own blood and seal in the face of this holy sacrament.

Whither do you travel? Answer: To the four quarters of the globe.

For what purpose? Answer: To obey the orders of my General and Superiors and execute the will of the Pope and faithfully fulfil the conditions of my oaths.

Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Vice-Regent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated.

THE JESUIT ORDER

This is The EXTREME OATH of The JESUIT ORDER

"I _____, now in the presence of Almighty God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Blessed Michael the Archangel, the Blessed St. John the Baptist, the Holy Apostles, Peter and Paul, and all the Saints, sacred hosts of Heaven, and to you, my ghostly Father, the Superior General of the Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius Loyola, in the Pontification of Paul the Third, and continued to the present, do by the womb of the virgin, the matrix of God, and the rod of Jesus Christ, declare and swear that his holiness, the Pope, is Christ's Vice-regent, and is the true and only head of the Catholic or Universal Church throughout the earth; and that by the virtue of the keys of binding and loosing, given to his Holiness by my Savior, Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical kings, princes, states, commonwealths and governments, all being illegal without his sacred confirmation, and that they may be safely destroyed.

"I do further declare, that I will help and assist and advise all or any of his Holiness' agents in any place wherever I shall be, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant or Liberal doctrines and to destroy all their pretended powers, legal or otherwise.

"I do further promise and declare, that notwithstanding I am dispensed with to assume any religion heretical, for the propagating of the Mother Church's interest, to keep secret and private all her agents' counsels, from time to time as they may instruct me, and not to divulge directly or indirectly, by word, writing, or circumstances whatever; but to execute all that shall be proposed given in charge or discovered unto me, by you, my ghostly father. . . . . .

"I do further promise and declare, that I will have no opinion or will of my own, or any mental reservation whatever, even as a corpse or cadaver (perinde ac cadaver) but unhesitatingly obey each and every command that I may receive from my superiors in the Militia of the Pope and Jesus Christ.

"That I will go to any part of the world, whatsoever, without murmuring and will be submissive in all things whatsoever communicated to me. . . . . I do further promise and declare, that I will, when opportunity presents, make and wage relentless war, secretly or openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Liberals, as I am directed to do to extirpate and exterminate them from the face of the whole earth, and that I will spare neither sex, age nor condition, and that I will hang, waste, boil, flay, strangle and bury alive these infamous heretics; rip up the stomachs and wombs of their women and crush their infants' heads against the wall, in order to annihilate forever their execrable race.

"That when the same cannot be done openly, I will secretly use the poison cup, the strangulation cord, the steel of the poniard, or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honor, rank, dignity or authority of the person or persons whatsoever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed so to do by any agent of the Pope or superior of the Brotherhood of the Holy Faith of the Society of Jesus."

I.N.R.I. The JESUIT Cross. According to the Word of God the words at the top of Jesus' Cross were "This is Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews" - John 19:19. But on the Jesuit cross you'll see these letters "I.N.R.I." which stands for IUSTUM NECAR REGES IMPIOS which is Classical Latin for : "It is okay to EXTERMINATE, DESTROY, and ASSASINATE Protestant Kings, GOVERNMENTS and PRESIDENTS !

Cardinal gives thanks for 'unique' Jesuits

4 December 2003

Cardinal Cormac Murphy O'Connor has praised the 'unique' role played by the British Jesuits since the days of the Counter Reformation.

He was speaking at the end of a Mass held at Farm Street Church, London, to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the Restoration of the British Province of the Society of Jesus. The congregation of over 800, made up of around 50 Jesuits, with their supporters, friends and co-workers, also heard the British Provincial encourage the members of the Province in the vital work of evangelisation.

The Cardinal told the congregation that the Jesuits had been part of the history of this country 'in quite a unique way'. He continued: 'The whole Catholic community of England and Wales, our bishops, priests and people, are grateful for the particular contribution the Jesuit community has made to evangelisation in our countries. 'These are difficult times and the Church has to be innovative and brave and confident when it looks to the future in spite of all the challenges it faces. Together we must evangelise our country.'

'The contribution that the Catholic Church makes to our country, to this nation, is crucial,' Cardinal Cormac continued. 'Within the Church, the particular charism of the Society of Jesus is valued. For that I give thanks today.'

In his homily, the British Provincial, Fr David Smolira SJ, looked back over the past 200 years since Pope Pius VII had restored the Society of Jesus in this country. He reflected on the work done 'in the service of the Church in Britain', in schools, colleges, parishes, in spiritual guidance and among the poor - 'work which, I am delighted to say, continues with vigour today!'

Fr Smolira concluded by quoting from Pope John Paul's 1995 address to the Jesuits, and reminded his fellow Jesuits of the Holy Father's mandate 'to engage in the task of evangelisation with a 'missionary outreach and the promotion of a dynamic communion that extends into ecumenism, directs inter-religious dialogue, and inspires the service of human rights and peace as foundations of a civilisation of love'.'

CHAPTER 1 - DIVINE HAND OVER THE UNITED STATES

The United States of America is at the brink of total collapse. Once a great and powerful nation, the United States is now in a free fall to disaster from which she will never recover. A few more steps in its decline and it will be ruined. These are not easy words for a patriotic American to read, but, nevertheless, they are absolutely true. Tragically, it need not have come to this.

As one looks at the history of nations, from Babylon to Rome to America, it is evident that a Divine hand was protecting and guiding America. This country began as a few colonies on the Eastern seaboard of this vast land and became a great nation.

Alexis de Tocqueville, a young French philosopher of the last century, came to our shores to discover what magical quality enabled a handful of people to defeat the mighty British Empire twice in 35 years. He looked for the greatness of America in her fertile soil, her limitless forests and natural resources. He examined America's schools, her Congress and her unique Constitution without fully understanding the source of America's strength.
I was not, he said later, until he went to the churches of America and found congregations 'aflame with righteousness' that he began to comprehend the secret of this power. Upon his return to France, de Tocqueville wrote; "America is great because America is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great." -- Des Griffin, Descent into Slavery?, Emissary Publications, p. 267.

In her youth, the United States was very good. On her money, her trust in God was proclaimed, and the great blessing of God rested upon this nation. As the United States grew to greatness, she gradually abandoned the principles that made her great until today she is approaching a very tragic end. The process of the decline of America is similar to the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. Let us examine a little of the history of ancient Rome and notice the parallels.

As the early Roman Empire was beginning to develop, it was building on the solid premise that the family unit was the cornerstone of society. Morality and discipline were the cornerstones of the family unit. As the empire developed, liberalism crept in, and the morality and discipline that protected society began to disappear. By the beginning of the 2nd century AD, most families had given into the liberal trends, and their children were allowed to do pretty much as they pleased.

Having given up the habit of controlling their children, they let their children govern them, and took pleasure in bleeding themselves white to gratify the expensive whims of their offspring. The result was that they were succeeded by a generation of idlers and wastrels, who had grown accustomed to luxury and lost all sense of discipline. --Jerome Carcopino, Daily Life in Ancient Rome, Yale University Press, pp. 78, 79.

While this was going on, Rome witnessed "an epidemic of divorces." (ibid. p.97) From the same author, we find that a strong women's rights movement developed in Roman society.

Some [wives] evaded the duties of maternity for fear of losing their good looks, some took pride in being behind their husbands in no sphere of activity, and vied with them in tests of strength which their sex would seem to forbid: some were not content to live their lives by their husband's side, but carried on another life without him.... It is obvious that unhappy marriages must have been innumerable.--ibid. pp. 90, 93, 95.

Roman schools were in disarray.

They undermined Instead of strengthened the children's morals, they mishandled the children's bodies instead of developing them, and if they succeeded in furnishing their minds with a certain amount of information, they were not calculated to perform any loftier or nobler task.
The pupils left school with the heavy luggage of a few practical and commonplace notions laboriously acquired and of so little value that in the fourth century Vegetius [A Roman writer who wrote about the Roman military system.] could not take for granted that new recruits for the army would be literate enough to keep the books for the corps.--ibid. pp. 106,107.

This kind of education led to a continual decline in morality and descipline and also resulted in decreasing patriotism.

The Roman virtues -- honesty, candor, frugality and patriotism -- withered and died. What was left was a people whom neither the vices of the rulers nor the increasingly bold attacks of foreign enemies could shake out of their apathy....In all the great cities of the provinces, the theater held the same place of bad preeminence in the social life of the inhabitants.

The Roman stage was gross and immoral. It was one of the main agencies to which must be attributed the undermining of the originally sound moral life of Roman society.

So absorbed did the people become in the indecent representations on the stage, that they lost all thought and care for the affairs of real life. --Philip Myers, Rome; Its Rise and Fall, Ginn & Company, pp. 515,516.

Another leading factor in the demise of Rome was that is became a welfare country. People were encouraged to be idle and receive money from the government rather than work to make their own way. The welfare system was a leading fact of Roman life. The evils that resulted from this misdirected state charity can hardly be overstated. Idleness and all its accompanying vices were fostered to such a degree that we shall probably not be wrong in enumerating the practice as one of the chief causes of the demoralization of society. --ibid. p.523.

It is obvious that the moral fabric of America today is where the morality of the Roman Empire was nearly 2,000 years ago. Do we not see the breakdown of the home, a strong women's rights movement, a deterioration in the school system, moral decay as espoused by the news and entertainment media and the schools, and welfare eating the heart out of the American economy? With regard to these problems, how are we any different from the Roman Empire during its decay? Why are these things happening in America? But, that's the wrong question. The question should be: Who has brought America to the brink of destruction?

As mentioned earlier, Providence had its eye on the United States. America was the land of opportunity. It was the place where those who were being persecuted for their faith could come and worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience. It was a land without a king where one could come and breathe the air of civil liberty. It was the place where one could come and earn a good living for himself and his family. America was the place where dreams came true. There once was a Divine Hand Over America.

In 1759, twenty-five years, more or less, stood between the thirteen colonies and freedom from the British. Twenty-five years and the greatest Protestant nation to ever exist in the history of nations would fly its flag. Twenty-five years and the groundwork for the Constitution -- republicanism, inalienable rights, and a government of the people, by the people, and for the people -- was in sight. An experiment in government never before tried in history was to become the greatest nation the world had ever seen.

Many said such a government would not work. The Roman Catholic Church had ruled the world under her dictatorial control. She was, and till is, deathly afraid of such an experiment. For over 200 year, the Protestant Reformation had challenged the papacy's authority. The papacy gradually began losing her power. An experiment like America was certainly not in the plans of the Catholic Church; no nation would be allowed to espoused principles that would bring the papacy

What of the monarchs of Europe? They ruled by permission of the papacy and had wielded tyrannical control for ages with no one to oppose them. Were they now ready to watch the development of a government of the people, by the people, and for the people? A clearer rationale would be that they would unite with Rome to stop this American experiment with every weapon at their fingertips.

By the 1550s the Reformation had become so extensive in Europe that the papacy began to realize that they must do something to try to stop it. They realized that if it were not stopped, it would eventually undermine the position of the Catholic Church and destroy the absolute political power they had achieved. In order to accomplish the destruction of the Reformation, a new secret organization was formed within the Vatican called the Jesuits.

One of the major purposes of the Jesuits was to destroy every trace of Protestantism and its principles, including religious freedom, republicanism, representative government, and an economy built around a strong middle class. Another purpose of the Jesuits was to greatly expand the power and control of the papacy throughout the entire world.

I cannot too much impress upon the minds of my readers that the Jesuits, by their very calling, by the very essence of the institution, are bound to seek, by every means, right or wrong, the destruction of Protestantism. This is the condition of their existence, the duty they must fulfill, or cease to be Jesuits. Accordingly, we find them in this evil dilemma. Either the Jesuits fulfill the duties of their calling, or not. In the first instance, they must be considered as the bitterest enemies of the Protestant faith; in the second, as bad and unworthy priests; and in both cases, therefore, to be equally regarded with aversion and distrust. -- G.B. Nicolini, History of the Jesuits: Their Origin, Progress, Doctrine, and Design, Henry G. Bohn, preface, [emphasis added}.

The first triumphs of the Reformation past, Rome summoned new forces, hoping to accomplish its destruction. At this time the order of the Jesuits was created; the most cruel, unscrupulous, and powerful of all the champions of popery....There was no crime to great for them to commit, no deception too base for them to practice, no disguise to difficult for them to assume. Vowed to perpetual poverty and humility, it was their studied aim to secure wealth and power, to be devoted to the overthrow of Protestantism, and the re-establishment of the papal supremacy. – E.G. White, The Great Controversy, Review and Herald, p. 234, [emphasis added].

From their very beginning in the 1540s, the Jesuits did just that. They used any means they could devise to destroy Protestantism, including assassination to kill leaders who tried to bring freedom to their people. Two examples are William of Orange in 1584 and Henry IV in 1610. Both were slain by Jesuit assassins.

The Jesuits used deception in the extreme to bring about the St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre in 1572, where 70,000 Protestant Huguenots, including women and children, were slain in one night. They also created the 30 Years War from 1618-1648 in order to destroy the Lutherans of Europe. The blood that reddened European soil for centuries can all be traced back to the murderous Jesuits.

Starting in the 1600s, the Jesuits created a communist regime in Paraguay that eventually brought the Jesuits demise in the 1700s.

The Jesuits, as is well known, held very large regions of Paraguay under missionary control from 1650 to 1750. More than a quarter million natives worked under their direction, and no payment was made directly to them.... They were educated, trained, housed, clothed, fed and, to some extent, amused, but what became of the surplus profits of their labours, and of the extensive trading that was carried on? Over two thousand boats are said to have been engaged in carrying merchandise and goods on the Parana River; and the economic value of the Reductions was beyond doubt very great: so great in deed as to have awakened the envy of Spanish and Portuguese traders. Robertson [contemporary historian] estimated that the reductions represented at least $25,000,000 capital for the Society. – Boyd Barrett, The Jesuit Enigma, New York: Boni & Liveright, p. 211.

The Reductions were communist communes set up as manufacturing facilities using the Guarani Indians as slave laborers. The products they produced were sold in Europe and greatly enriched the Jesuit order.

The Reductions produced herbs, hides, tallow, clocks, and other goods, which the Jesuits traded in Europe with their huge fleet of ships. The profits were used to finance wars against the Protestant nations they had sworn to destroy. But all this wealth and power was acquired in secret, as the kings of Portugal and Spain knew nothing about the Reductions. – Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halycon Unified Services, p. 189.

By the middle of the 1700s, the Jesuit Order had become the powerhouse of Europe. According to Barret,

.... the Jesuit Order at last reached the pinnacle of its power and prestige in the early eighteenth century. It had become more influential and wealthier than any other organization in the world. It held a position in world affairs that no oath-bound group of man has ever held before of since... nearly all the Kings and Sovereigns of Europe had only Jesuits as directors of their consciences, so that the whole of Europe appeared to be governed by Jesuits only. – Boyd Barrett, The Jesuit Enigma, New York: Boni & Liveright, p. 209.

The Jesuits ruled the world. The monarchs of Europe, and the pope himself had Jesuits as their confessors. The plans and plots were all alike known to them. Besides this, they were amassing a vast amount of wealth that allowed the Jesuits to do whatever they chose. With them controlling the world, how could the little colonies of America have had a chance to stand against the Jesuit controlled monarchs of Europe? In an instant, the Jesuits could utilize any army at its disposal and crush the colonies. It was at this juncture in 1759 that some-thing strangely divine began to happen. It began in Portugal. The Portuguese king, Joseph I, banished the Jesuits from his realm.

In Portugal the culmination point was reached by an attempt to assassinate the king.... the deed had been incited by the Jesuits, who had impressed ignorant and fanatical minds with the idea that no wrong was committed by killing a heretical king; that is one who did not submit to their dictation....Hence, as a measure absolutely essential to the life of the nation, the king issued a decree of banishment against the Jesuits as traitors, rebels, enemies to, and aggressors on, his person, his States, and the public peace and the general good of the people. The Jesuits were then seized, transported to the States of the Church (Italy).... – Richard Thompson, The Footprints of the Jesuits, Hunt & Eaton, p. 217, 218, [emphasis supplied].

King Joseph’s Portugal was the first Catholic kingdom of Europe to banish the Jesuits from their realm. With this first banishment, the dominoes began to fall rather quickly. Catholic France banished them in 1762. The decree of Louis XV and the French Parliament reads as follows:

Whereupon, the investigation into the constitution and statutes of the society [of Jesuits] ...resulted in the enactment of a Parliamentary decree which shows the odium then attached to the society in France. It denounced their doctrines and practices ‘as perverse, destructive of every principle of religion, and even of probity; as injurious to morality, pernicious to civil society, seditious, dangerous to rights of the persons of the sovereigns; as fit to excite the greatest troubles in States, to form and maintain the most profound corruption in the hearts of men...that the institutions of the Jesuits should forever cease to exist throughout the whole extent of the kingdom.'—ibid. p. 219

The third sovereign to drive the Jesuits from their realm was King Charles III of Spain. He banished the Jesuits in 1767.

His [Charles III] greatest work, the expulsion of the Jesuits, would never have been carried out if he had not been persuaded of its political necessity. The [Jesuit] order had already been driven out by Pombal from Portugal and by Choiseul from France when Charles III was convinced that a riot in Madrid...had been promoted by the Jesuits. – Encyclopedia Britannica, The Werner company, vol. XVII, p. 341.

One year later, yet another nation banished this evil brood from their realm. Under the leadership of Fra Manuel Pinto de Fonseca, the Jesuits were forced to leave the island of Malta in 1768. Of this, we read:

In 1768 the Jesuits, having given much trouble, were expelled and their property confiscated. – ibid, vol. XV, p. 343.

The mightiest Catholic nations of Europe had banished the Jesuits from their realms. These Catholic monarchs demanded that the Catholic Church abolish the society forever. Clement XIII, the pope at that time, resisted the pressure of the European monarchs, but finally capitulated. The night before he planned to abolish the Jesuits, he was poisoned to death.

During the night preceding the day appointed for the public ceremony of announcing the abolition of the Jesuits, Clement XIII was suddenly seized with convulsions and died, leaving the act unperformed, and the Jesuits victorious. Cormenin...records this event in the terse and expressive words: 'The Jesuits had poisoned him.'

The Catholic Monarchies of Europe, however, insisted that the Jesuits be disbanded and threatened the Pope.

Clement XIII, after endless indecision, postponements, and unconvincing delays, finally decided to do what he had been advised he should do. He capitulated.

He made ready a proclamation announcing the suppression of the Jesuit order. It was said that the document was written and was waiting for the day when it was to be made public. To the surprise of all, however, the Pope was suddenly attacked by a mysterious illness. He died on the 12th February (a coincidence in dates) 1769 with agonizing, unexplained convulsions.

Rumors had it that he had been poisoned. The suddenness of his affliction and the convulsions both pointed to it. The suspicions, however, were never proved. It was suggested by those in the know that the Pope had been made to die before he could publish the announcement of the official suppression of the Jesuit order. – Avro Manhattan, Murder in the Vatican, Ozark Books, p. 74.

Four years later in 1773, three years before the Declaration of Independence, mark it well, Pope Clement XIV wrote an order, the purpose of which was to abolish the Jesuits forever. (Unfortunately, a later pope reestablished them in 1814.) Of this, we read:

Again, in July 1773, Pope Clement XIV wrote an order dissolving the Society of Jesus. This bull, Dominus ac Redemptor, was published 16th of August of that year. After issuing it, however, the Pope relented, in fear of the consequences, and tried to withdraw it. Too late. The Spanish ambassador had already dispatched the document by special courier direct to Madrid.

The papal brief annihilated the Jesuit order throughout the world, closed its schools and cancelled its statues. Its houses were occupied and its general and other dignitaries were imprisoned. – ibid., pp. 74.75.

In a 14-year period, from 1759-1773, the Catholic monarchs of Europe and the pope, himself, were preoccupied with abolishing the Jesuits. Emmett McLaughlin's tremendous book, An Inquiry into the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln, summarizes these events very succinctly with these words.

Even their own Catholic countries finally became surfeited with Jesuit political intrigue and financial avarice and, in self-preservation, were forced to expel them, Portugal, Angola, Goa, and Brazil took the lead in 1759. France followed in 1754. Several Italian states such as Parma, Sicily and Naples followed suit. By sealed imperial orders sent to her colonies around the world, Spain threw out all Jesuits in 1767, This decree suppressed them in the Philippines, Argentina, New Granada (Columbia), Peru, Chile, Ecuador, Guatemala, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Mexico, New Mexico and Arizona. Austria did the same in 1773.

abolishing the Jesuit Order altogether, listing eleven popes that tried to curb their excesses. Among them were Benedict XIV, Innocent XI, Innocent XIII and Clement XIII.

He cited the Jesuits for opposition to “other religious orders,” for “revolts and intestine troubles in some of the Catholic states,” and “persecutions against the church in Europe and Asia. There remained no other remedy to so great evils...and this step was necessary in order to prevent the Christians from rising one against the other and from massacring each other in the very bosom of our common mother, the holy church.” Therefore, he wrote, “after a mature deliberation, we do out of our certain knowledge and the fullness of our apostolic power, suppress and abolish the said company.” – Emmett McLaughlin, An Inquiry into the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln, Lyle Stuart, Inc., pp. 84, 85.

The timing of these events in Europe in fascinating. Catholic Europe was in disarray. The Catholic monarchs were pre-occupied with taking care of the problems with the Jesuit Order. The Jesuits were reeling as one Catholic country after another drove them from their realms. While Europe was shaking, thirteen colonies across the Atlantic were looking at the very real possibility of war with England. The thirteen colonies were instituting principles of government never before heard in the annals of human history. Documents would soon be written that would codify such things as inalienable rights, government of the people, by the people, and for the people, free exercise of religion, and the right to keep and bear arms. These documents would soon be the hope of mankind throughout the would longing to be free.

What if the Catholic monarchs were no distracted by their dealings with Jesuits? What if the Jesuits were not reeling by their banishment from Europe? The monarchs and the Jesuits would have utilized their wealth and military power to smash the American colonies in the New World, and the Protestant dream in America would have never been a reality. Without a doubt, there was a Divine Hand Over America!

Chapter 2
The Illuminati-Jewish Front
There are many books and treatises on the conspiracy theory of the history. It is very difficult to find any two of them that agree. Some say the perpetrators behind the scenes are the Illuminati, and others say the Jews. The list of the conspiratorial organizations blamed includes the Communists, the Bilderbergers, the Trilateral Commission, the Council on Foreign Relations, the Committee of 300, the Mafia, the Round Table, the Club of Rome, the Free Masons, the CIA-FBI-Mossad, and other secret societies. Of course the New World Order, and European Union, and the International Bankers must be included in this list also. Because of all the organizations accused of conspiracy, most people tend to disbelieve the conspiracy theory of history. If they do believe it, they tend to be thoroughly confused as to which organization is responsible.

The “head” conspirators are behind each one of the organizations mentioned, and they control all of them, and more. Let us investigate this and look at the evidence that shows that statement to be correct. Of course the real conspirators do not want you to realize who they are. They do not want you to realize that they are the real power behind all of these conspiratorial organizations.

Dr. Koryagina is the economic advisor to Russian president, Vladimir Putin. In a radio interview with Rick Wiles of American Freedom News, Dr. Koryagina declared:

Everybody knows about organized crime and the Mafia. Also people have known for a long time

about secret societies and so forth. During my research, I started to notice that those structures can be put together and joined. And I realized that right now, we have a criminal monster, a hybrid of organized crime, Mafia and secret societies that have merged together. (Aired Dec. 6, 2001)

All of these groups, according to this Russian economist and advisor, have merged together. All of these groups have one visible human head. The Illuminati, the Jews, and all the rest of them take their marching orders from the same mastermind, the same human leader. While some say, and very convincingly, that the Illuminati and/or the Jews are calling the shots, this chapter will show conclusively who the human leader of all these groups really is.

As we saw in chapter 1, the Catholic monarchs and the pope, himself, were trying to ban the Jesuit Order throughout the entire world in 1773. In order to survive, the Jesuits were forced to either go underground or travel to three countries where they were still permitted to operate: England, Prussia (Germany), and Russia.

It is an unshakeable fact that the founder of the modern Bavarian Illuminati was a trained Jesuit named Adam Weishaupt from Ingolstadt University, which was the center of the Jesuit counter-reformation. (See Encyclopedia Britannica, Volume 12, page 251.)

Ingolstadt was the center where the Jesuits were flourishing in 1556. (See History of Protestantism by Wylie, Volume 2, p. 413.)

Can we really believe that Weishaupt would have been allowed to continue his professorship in a Jesuit controlled University if he had deserted them? No way! All evidence suggests that he continued to work for the Jesuits, establishing the order of the Illuminati for them. – Sydney Hunter, Is Alberto for Real, Chick Publications, pp. 21,22.

The Apostle of Lucifer, Adam Weishaupt was born a Jew, converted to Catholicism, then turned to Witchcraft, there he became an expert, and founded another sect of the Illuminati. This sect of Illuminati was founded May 1st, 1776. – William Josiah Sutton, The New Age Movement and The Illuminati 66, The Institute of Religious Knowledge, p. 173.

On May 1, 1776, the Order of the Illuminati was officially founded in the old Jesuit stronghold of Bavaria from which the Sons of Loyola had ignited the Thirty Years' War. – Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halycon Unified Services, page 214.

From the Jesuit College at Ingolstadt is said to have issued the sect known as 'the Illuminati of Bavaria' founded by Adam Weishaupt; its nominal founder, however, seems to have played a subordinate though conspicuous role in the organization of this sect. – Lady Queensborough, Occult Theocrasy, Emissary Publication, p.313.

The organization...is a secret society founded in Babaria in 1776. Its founder, Adam Weishaupt, a professor of canon law at the University of Ingolstadt, labeled it the Illuminati Order. – Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications Publishers, p. 26.

Canon law was the result of the infamous Council of Trent, which met from 1545-1563. This law revealed the Catholic Church's stand against the Protestant Reformation and is known as the Catholic Counter-Reformation. This council not only revealed the church's hostility toward the Reformation, but also how she would attack and destroy it.

Weishaupt established the Illuminati specifically to be a front organization behind which the Jesuits could hide. After being abolished by Clement XIV in 1773, the Jesuits used the Illuminati and other organizations to carry out their operations. Thus the front organizations would be blamed for the trouble caused by the Jesuits. Having so many front organizations would also confuse the people so that it would be virtually impossible to know who is actually manipulating the wars, policies, politics, and trouble caused by the Jesuits. The methods of many of these front organizations such as the Illuminati are carbon copies of the Jesuits methods and techniques.

This passage exactly describes the methods laid down by Weishaupt for his 'Insinuating Brothers'—the necessity of proceeding with caution in the enlisting of adepts, of not revealing to the novice doctrines that might be likely to revolt him, of 'speaking sometimes in one way, sometimes in another, so that one's real purpose should remain impenetrable' to members of the inferior grades.

How did these oriental methods penetrate to the Bavarian professor? According to certain writers, through the Jesuits. The fact that Weishaupt had been brought up by this Order has provided the enemies of the Jesuits with the argument that they were the secret inspirers of the Illuminati.... That

Weishaupt did, however, draw to a certain extent on Jesuit methods of training is recognized even by Barruel, himself a Jesuit, who, quoting Mirabeau, says that Weishaupt 'admired above all those laws, that regime of the Jesuits, which, under one head, made men dispersed over the universe land towards the same goal....—Nesta Webster, Secret Societies and Subversive Movements, Emissary Publications, p. 197, 198.

Here is what we have learned so far about Adam Weishaupt and the Illuminati.
1. Modern Illuminism founded May 1, 1776.
2. Originated in Bavaria, Germany, a Jesuit stronghold.
3. Illuminati organization is a carbon copy of the Jesuit order.
4. Weishaupt was brought up and trained by Jesuits.
5. He taught Catholic canon law at a Jesuit College, Ingolstadt University.

During the Order's suppression from 1773 to 1824 by Pope Clement XIV, General Ricci [the head of the Jesuits] created the Illuminati with his soldier, Adam Weishaupt, the Father of modern Communism, who, with his Jacobins, conducted the French Revolution.... For the Sons of Loyola punished all their enemies including the Dominican priests, perfected the inner workings between themselves and Freemasonry, created an alliance between the House of Rothschild in establishing the Illuminati.... The Jesuit General was in control of Scottish Rite Freemasonry an now sought an alliance with the Masonic Baron of the House of Rothschild. To accomplish this he chose a Jesuit who was a German Gentile (not a Jew) by race and Freemason by association-Adam Weishaupt.... Weishaupt established the Illuminati in 1776 and joined the Grand Orient Masonic Lodge in 1777. He united the magnificent financial empire of the Masonic Jewish House of Rothschild with the opulence of the international and secret, anti-Jewish Race, Gentile Society of Jesus. –Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halcyon United Services, pp. 206, 205, 213, 215.

The House of Rothschild financed Weishaupt In his creation of the Illuminati. Phelps alluded to this several times in the preceding paragraph. He is not alone in his assertion that the Jewish House of Rothschild worked hand in hand with the Jesuits in creating and funding the Illuminati.

After he [Weishaupt] formed his organization with financial backing from the House of Rothschild, he adopted the name Illuminati.... It was on May 1, 1776 that Adam Weishaupt backed and led by the House of Rothschild, formed the International Revolutionary force called the Illuminati, which later became known as Communism. –William Sutton, The New Age Movement and The Illuminati 666, Institute of Religious Knowledge, p. 175, 231.

Aware that the Rothschilds are an important Jewish family. I looked them up in Encyclopedia Judaica and discovered that they bear the title “Guardians of the Vatican Treasury....” The appointment of Rothschild gave the black papacy absolute financial privacy and secrecy. Who would ever search a family of orthodox Jews for the key to the wealth of the Roman Catholic Church? -- F. Tupper Saussy, Rulers of Evil, Harper Collins Publishers,, pp. 160, 161.

With the financial power of the Rothschilds behind Weishaupt’s Illuminati, the Jesuit and the Catholic Church have an almost perfect cover to hide their operations from the view of the public. When investigators try to trace the roots of certain events, the Illuminati is a perfect shield behind which the Jesuits can hide, and behind which investigators cannot penetrate. The implications of this are enormous. We will briefly consider two items here but will examine them in greater detail in following chapters.

The book, Descent into Slavery, shows that there was a plan for both world wars and even a third world war.

This plan was outlined in graphic detail by Albert Pike, the sovereign Grand Commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry and the top Illuminist in America, in a letter to Giusseppe Mazzini dated August 15, 1871. [Knowing what we know about the Illuminati, Albert Pike was speaking as one who understood the Jesuits plan for world dominion to bring everything back into the pope’s hands. Pike was the top Illuminist/Jesuit in America.] Pike stated that the First World War was to be formented in order to destroy Czarist Russia and to place that vast land under the direct control of Illuminati agents. Russia was then to be used as a ‘bogey man’ to further the aims of the

Illuminati worldwide. [In other words, the Jesuits gained control of Russia near the end of WWI.]

World War II was to be fomented through manipulation of the differences that existed between the German Nationalists and the Political Zionists. This was to result in an expansion of Russian influence and the establishment of a state of Israel in Palestine. [In both instances, Pike's plan for world wars has been precisely carried out. These plans existed 40 to 60 years before the wars took place.]

The Third World War was planned to result from the differences stirred up by Illuminati agents between the Zionists and the Arabs. The conflict was planned to spread worldwide. -- Des Griffin, Descent into Slavery, Emissary Publications, pp.38, 39.

Pike shows in that quote that the Jesuits are planning for a third world war between the Zionists and the Arabs. Zionists are those who are pro Israel like the United States and Great Britain. The so-called war on terror is part of the preparation for that war using Arabs such as Al Qaeda, Saddam Hussein of Iraq, and others against the Zionists of America and Great Britain. The Jesuits are stirring up this conflict by their lies and deception, such as the false claim that Saddam Hussein was stock-piling weapons of mass destruction. This lie was simply a ploy to convince the American people that we had no choice but to invade Iraq. As will be shown later, George Bush is working closely with the Jesuits to carry out their policies to the letter. The current conflict was planned over 130 years ago.

The Illuminati/Jesuit connection also impacts us in another way. In Fritz Springmeier's book, Bloodlines of the

Illuminati, we read that the two Bush Presidents were members of the Skull and Bones Order at Yale. The Skull and Bones Order is an entry point into the Illuminati. It is made to appear as just another exclusive fraternity, but in actuality a member of the Skull and Bones order is also a member of the Illuminati. We have seen that this means that the two Bush presidents are also member of the Jesuit Order and are carrying out their wishes. Springmeier also points out that the Bush family has been tied up with the Harriman family since the 1920s. The Harrimans have been intimately connected with the Skull and Bones Order/Illuminati/Jesuits for decades. (See Fritz Springmeier, Bloodlines of the Illuminati, Ambassador House, pages 63, 320)

It is a most sobering thought to realize that the Jesuit Order controls the President of the United States. It is also a most sobering thought to think that this great Protestant nation is under the control of a man who is willingly carrying out the dictates of an Order whose stated objective is the destruction of every Protestant principle for which this nation stands. If permitted, this President would shred the Constitution. He is passing laws such as the USA Patriot Act and the Homeland Security Act, which totally ignore the restrictions on such laws in the Constitution.

This President has been told to engage in war in the Middle East. He has done so knowing that many lives of America's youth would be lost. This is nothing but a deliberate act of Treason! When will Americans wake up and see what is being done to them?

Let us now examine the claim that the Jews are really the bad people who are behind the scenes manipulating the world. The propaganda in the media today tries desperately to convict the Jews as the real instigators of the trouble in the world. The Jewish belief that Christ will one day come and rule the world causes the Vatican to shudder.

The Vatican believes that if hatred for the Jews can be fomented as took place in Hitler's Germany. Then Jews will be ruthlessly eliminated. The Vatican believes that if all Jews are killed, Christ will not come, and the Vatican's aim to rule the world would remain intact. Avro Manhattan says it this way:

It is important, although it may be difficult for some to recognize the religious nature of the Communist/Zionist/Catholic political configuration. Although deliberately muted in public pronouncements, behind the Zionist banner there was to be found the ancient Messianic hope for the coming a global theocracy, as predicted by all the seers and prophets of Zion. It was to be a theocracy in which Jehovah, not Christ, was to be King.

The spectre of the creation of such a theocracy has haunted the inner chambers of the Catholic church from her earliest inception, and still is a dominant fear.

In Vatican eyes, therefore, the millenarian yearning for a global Hebrew theocracy, represents a deadly threat to the eschatological teachings of the Catholic church. When translated into concrete political terms, such a view spells not only rivalry, but implacable enmity. -- Avro Manhattan, The Vatican Moscow Washington Alliance, chick Publications, pp. 169, 170.

Why would the Jesuits use their implacable enemy, the Jews, to further their designs for world dominion? The Jesuits never do anything out in the open where they can be exposed. If they are recognized as the culprits, they will be blamed and suffer the consequences, but if they can use someone else as the cause of the world's problems, especially an enemy they can destroy in the process, then they have simultaneously accomplished two of their objectives. The Jewish people are the perfect scapegoat. Since the Rothschilds are Jesuit agents operating under a Jewish cover, using them in forming the Illuminati back in 1776 effectively throws the onus of this conspiracy on the Jews. The Rothschilds are certainly not the only Jesuit agents that operate under a Jewish front.

The following sources indicate that Adam Weishaupt and the Rothschilds were the brains and the wealth behind the French revolution.

History books will tell us that the French Revolution first began in 1787 or 1789, depending on which book you read. However, it was actually planned by Dr. Adam Weishaupt and the House of Rothschild almost 20 years before the Revolution took place. -- William Sutton, The New Age Movement and The Illuminati 666, Institute of Religious Knowledge, pp. 172, 73.

For the main purpose of Baruel's book is to show that not only had Illuminism and Grand Orient Masonry contributed largely to the French Revolution, but that three years after that first explosion they were still as active as ever. -- Nesta Webster, Secret Societies and Subversive Movement, Emissary Publications, p 255.

The (the Jesuits) have son constantly mixed themselves up in court and state intrigues that they must, in justice, be reproached with striving after world dominion. They cost kings their lives, not on the scaffold, but by assassination, and equally hurtful as the society of Illuminati; they were the foremost among the crowd, at all event, who applauded the murder scenes in Paris.... -- Hector Macpherson, The Jesuits in History, Ozark Book Publishers, pp. 126, 127.

The Jesuits, Weishaupt and the Rothschilds, managed to cast the blame for the French Revolution on their front organization, the Illuminati!

The Communistic ideals that came from the Reductions in Paraguay and that were exalted in France had their fruition in the writings of Karl Marx.

The ideas Lenin developed were directly from Karl Marx's Communist Manifesto, and ideas founded in the Communist Manifesto were directly from the writings of Dr. Adam Weishaupt, who took his orders from the House of Rothschild. -- William Sutton, The New Age Movement and The Illuminati 666, Institute of Religious Knowledge, p. 193.

Karl Marx was hired by a mysterious group who called themselves 'The Leagure of Just Men' to write the Communist Manifesto as demagogic boob-bait to appeal to the mob. In actual fact the Communist Manifesto was in circulation for amny years before Marx' name was widely enough recognized to establish his authorship for this revolutionary hadbook. All Karl Marx did was update and codify the very same revolutionary plans and principles set down seventy years earlier by Adam Weishaupt, the founder of the Order of the Illuminati in Bavaria. And, it is widely acknowledged by serious scholars of this subject that the League of the Jest Men was simply an extension of the Illuminati... -- Gary Allan, None Dare Call it Conspiracy, Concord Press, p. 25.

Karl Marx, 'the Father of Modern Communism... was privately tutored by Jesuits in the huge Reading Room of the British Museum while writing The Communist Manifesto based upon the ten maxims of 'planks' the Order had perfected on its Paraguayan Reductions.... A Jew was chosen for this task; for, the Order anticipated blaming all the evils of the Communist Inquisition on the Jewish Race. -- Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halcyon Unified Services, p. 293.

Adam Weishaupt and the Rothschild family created the Illuminati. Then both Weishaupt and the Rothschilds united their efforts to foment the French Revolution and the roots of Communism. The Jesuits next used Karl Marx to write the Communist Manifesto, which codified the Illuminati's plans. The teachings of Marx were then passed to Lenin, Stalin, and Trotsky. The financiers of all these men were the Rothschilds or Rothschild agents such as Paul Warburg, the first chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank, Jacob Schiff and Armand Hammer. Each one of these men, being Jesuits, were Jews and operated under a Jewish front. Is it any wonder that the Jews are usually blamed for all the conspiracies?

Other Jesuits who operate under a Jewish front include the chairman of the Federal Reserve bank, Alan Greenspan, Arlen Specter, and Henry Kissinger.

The Jesuit Order has very effectively used traitorous Jews as their agents to carry out awful crimes against humanity. So many things have been done by Jews who were being used by the Jesuits. When the whistle is blown and someone cries foul, the Jew is left holding the bag and is blamed, while the Jesuit Order walks away clean. This has been the case time after time through the last 400 years.

The Illuminati and traitorous Jews have been used by the Jesuits and have taken the blame for many crimes that really were the Jesuits responsibility. We have seen many such examples in this chapter. In the Jesuits relentless pursuit to destroy America, she would use the Jewish House of Rothschild to gain control of the American banking system. To this, we will turn in the next chapter.

Chapter 3
Blackmailing Banker Bandits
Because Pope Clement XIV and the Catholic emperors across Europe were busy abolishing the Jesuits, they were not able to cooperate with each other well enough to stop the Protestant American experiment. If a Divine Hand had not intervened to protect the 13 colonies, there would never have been a United States with its God-given Constitution!

The Jesuits were greatly troubled because of their expulsions around the world, and they were forced to go underground. We have seen that they used their agent, Adam Weishaupt, to create the Illuminati and used the Jesuit House of Rothschild to finance it. It was not just here, however, where Rothschild wealth was very helpful. America was becoming a giant of financial affluence and prosperity. Already, the Rothschild were involved in extensive trading in the Americas. Besides their financial and mercantile empires, the Rothschilds were utilizing their wealth to gain political and religious dominance in order to further the ends of the Jesuits in destroying Protestantism worldwide.

Aware that the Rothschilds are an important Jewish family, I looked them up in Encyclopedia Judaica and discovered that they bear the title 'Guardians of the Vatican Treasury.'... -33-
Saussy, Rulers of Evil, Harper-Collins, pp. 160,161.

The Jesuits used all their resources in their attempt to destroy America. They used the powerful financial empire of the Rothschilds to obtain control through money. Biographer Frederick Morton concluded that through the effective use of money the Rothschilds had successfully conquered the world more thoroughly, more cunningly, and much more lastingly than all the Ceasars before or all the Hitlers after them. -- Frederic Morton, The Rothschilds: A Family Portrait, Atheneum, p. 14.

The Rothschilds believed that if they could control a nation's money, then they could control that country. This is clearly pointed out in the following statement from biographer Derek Wilson.

The banking community had always constituted a 'fifth estate' whose members were able, by heir control of royal purse strings, to affect important events. But the house of Rothschild was immensely more powerful than any financial empire that had ever preceded it. It commanded vast wealth. It was international. It was independent. Royal governments were nervous of it because they could not control it. Popular governments hated it because it was not answerable to the people. -- Derek Wilson, Rothschild: The Wealth and Power of a Dynasty, Charles Scribner's Sons, pp. 79, 98, 99.

Using the vast wealth of the Rothschilds, the Jesuits equipped armies to destroy countries that would not do what they dictated. They could buy politicians and through them change the very laws of a nation. This is exactly what they did in America and are still doing today! The Jesuits have been using the Rothschild wealth to control major events behind the scenes worldwide for the last few centuries. This was true when they first started, but today they have the central banks in each country including the Federal Reserve Bank to supply them with funds. To illustrate how the Jesuits and the Rothschilds have used countries and events to gain domination over nations and financial markets, we must look at the battle of Waterloo between France and England on June 19, 1815.

There were vast fortunes to be made, and lost, on the outcome of the Battle of Waterloo. The Stock Exchange in London was at fever pitch as traders awaited news of the outcome of this battle of the giants. If Britain lost, English consuls would plummet to unprecedented depths. If Britain was victorious, the value of the consul would leap to new dizzying heights.

As the two huge armies closed in for the battle to the death, Nathan Rothschild had his agents working feverishly on both sides of the line to gather the most accurate possible information as the battle proceeded. Additional Rothschild agents were on hand to carry the intelligence bulletins to a Rothschild command post strategically located nearby.

Late on the afternoon of June 19, 1815, a Rothschild representative jumped on board a specially chartered boat and headed out into the channel in a hurried dash for the English coast. In his possession was a top secret report from Rothschilds secret service agents on the progress of the crucial battle. This intelligence data would prove indispensable to Nathan in making some vital decisions.

The special agent was met a Folkstone the following morning at dawn by Nathan Rothschild himself. After quickly scanning the highlights of the report Rothschild was on his way again, speeding towards London and the Stock Exchange.

Arriving at the Exchange amid frantic speculation on the outcome of the battle, Nathan took up his usual position beside the famous 'Rothschild Pillar'. Without a sign of emotion, without the slightest change of facial expression the stony-faced, flint eyed chief of the House of Rothschild gave a predetermined signal to his agents who were stationed nearby.

Rothschild agents immediately began to dump consuls on the market. As hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of consuls poured onto the market their value started to slide. Then they began to plummet.

Nathan continued to lean against 'his' pillar, emotionless, expressionless. He continued to sell, and sell and sell. Consuls kept on falling. Word began to sweep through the Stock Exchange: 'Rothschild knows.' 'Rothschild knows.' 'Wellington has lost at Waterloo.'

The selling turned into a panic as people rushed to unload their 'worthless' consuls or paper money for gold and silver in the hope of retaining at least part of their wealth. Consuls continued their nosedive towards oblivion. After several hours of feverish trading the consul lay in ruins. It was selling for about five cents on the dollar.

Nathan Rothschild, emotionless and expressionless as ever, still leaned against his pillar. He continued to give subtle signals. But these signals

were different. They were so subtly different that only the highly trained Rothschild agents could detect the change. On the cue from their boss dozens of Rothschild agents made their way to the order desks around the Exchange and bought every consul in sight for just a 'song'.

A short time later the 'official' news arrived in the British capital. England was now the master of the European scene. Within seconds the consul skyrocketed to above its original value. As the significance of the British victory began to sink into the public consciousness, the value of the consuls rose ever higher.

Napoleon had 'met his Waterloo.' Nathan had bought control of the British economy. Overnight his already vast fortune was multiplied twenty times over. -- Des Griffin, Descent into Slavery, Emissary Publications, pp. 27, 28.

By 1815, the Jesuits had complete control over England. If a leader did not do as he was told, money would be used to kill, smear, destroy, blackmail, or just drive the person from office. Later chapters will show that this procedure is being used today to control people like George Bush and Tony Blair. What was done in England is being done in many countries today.

As the new nation of America began to spread its wings, it would need a sound financial base from which to operate. It needed a bank, all right, but the back used America instead of America using the bank. Financial genius and opportunist, Robert Morris organized the first bank. He and his associates believed that the bank should be modeled after the Bank of England. While the first bank in North America was not as ruthless as the central banks of today, it performed many of the operations of a modern central bank. ‘Secret’ investors put up $400,000 to start this bank. This attempt failed after two short years. We will identify the ‘secret investors’ in following paragraphs.

Please understand that the central banks being established by the Jesuits and the Rothschilds are in no way similar to the neighborhood banks that we all use to manage our money. Let us take a closer look at the central bank and see why it is so dangerous. We will use the Federal Reserve Bank as an example. Here is a very simplified scenario that pretty much explains one of the operations of the Federal Reserve Bank.

It is necessary to understand that the Federal Reserve Bank is not owned by the United States government as many believe. The central bank, the Federal Reserve Bank has a total, government-enforced monopoly in money. Before we had the central bank, each individual bank competed with other banks; the customers, the consumers, got the best deal. Not any more.

We all know that today the United States government borrows money and operates under astronomical debt. Why is this? Common sense dictates that a policy of such enormous debt will sooner or later destroy the organization that practices it, because the interest on its debt must increase beyond its income, making payoff impossible.

Now to our scenario. Here, roughly, is how the operation proceeds. Suppose the United States government wants to borrow a billion dollars. The government issues a bond for this amount, much as a water company does when it wants to raise money for a new pipeline or a new dam. The government delivers this bond for the billion dollars to the Federal Reserve Bank. The Federal Reserve Bank takes the bond and writes an order to the Department of Printing and Engraving to print the billion dollars' worth of bills. After about two weeks or so, when the bills are printed, the Department of Printing and Engraving ships the bills to the Federal Reserve Bank, which then writes a check for about two thousand dollars to pay for printing the billion dollars' worth of bills. The Federal Reserve Bank then takes the billion dollars and lends the billion dollars to the United States government, and the people of the country pay interest at an exorbitant rate each year on this money, which came out of nothing. The owners of the Federal Reserve Bank put up nothing for this money.

We see, therefore, that when the United States government goes into debt one dollar, a dollar plus the interest goes into the pockets of the owners of the Federal Reserve Bank. This is the largest, the most colossal theft ever perpetrated in the history of mankind, and it is so slick, so subtle, and so obfuscated by propaganda from the news media that the victims are not even aware of what is happening. You can see why the Jesuits want to keep this operation secret.

The Constitution of the United States gives to Congress the power to coin money. If Congress coined it own money as the Constitution directs, it would not have to pay the hundreds of billions of dollars of interest that it now pays each year to the bankers for the national debt, for money that came out of nothing. Money coined by Congress would be debt free. All the central banks in other countries operate the way the Federal Reserve does.

Secretary of the Treasury, Alexander Hamilton, submitted a proposal to Congress in 1790 for a central bank. Interestingly enough, Hamilton had been an aide of Robert Morris in the initial experience of central banking in North America. Surprisingly, during the Constitutional convention of 1787,

Hamilton had been a strong supporter of sound money. That Hamilton completely shifted within three years and proposed a central bank, which could generate money as the Federal Reserve Bank does, shows that Hamilton's loyalty was compromised by the Jesuits.

This is hard to reconcile, and one must suspect that, even the most well intentioned of men can become corrupted by the temptations of wealth and power. -- G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 328.

Note carefully Griffin's conclusion. For Alexander Hamilton to have shifted so drastically within a few short years would lead us to believe that he had been bribed or blackmailed by the 'secret investors'; either that , or joined them. Thomas Jefferson clearly saw what a central bank would do to America. He declared,

A private central bank issuing the public currency is a greater menace to the liberties of the people than a standing army. -- The Writings of Thomas Jefferson, Volume X, G. P. Putnam & Sons, page 31.

Jefferson realized that if a central bank was ever set up in America, the bankers would have virtually unlimited amounts of money to control how lawmakers voted, and to control the media and what they said. Within a short time, these bankers would essentially rewrite the Constitution and the Bill of Rights by the unconstitutional laws that they would pass. Thomas Jefferson was completely correct, for today we have enough laws, such as the USA Patriotic Act and the Homeland Security Act, to literally convert the United States in a police state, when all the provisions of these acts are implemented.

Just like the old Bank of North America, the new Bank of the United States had eighty percent of its initial funding capital provide by ‘secret’ investors, and the government put up only twenty percent. Whoever these ‘secret’ investors were, they had tremendous power in America because they had control of the money in America. Many books written about this time period tell us who these people were.

Under the surface, the Rothschilds long had a powerful influence in dictating American financial laws. The law records show that they were the power in the old Bank of the United States. -- Gustavus Myers, History of the Great American Fortunes, Random House, p. 556 [emphasis added].

Over the years since N.M. [Nathan Rothschild], the Manchester textile manufacturer, had bought cotton from the Southern states, Rothschilds had developed heavy American commitments. Nathan... had made loans to various states of the Union, had been, for a time, the official European banker for US government and was a pledged supporter of the Bank of the United States. -- Derek Wilson, Rothschild: The Wealth and Power of a Dynasty, Charles Scribner’s Sons, p. 178.

The Rothschilds and the Jesuits have been using their vast wealth to take over the United States through traitorous politicians for a great many years.

During the time of the Rothschilds in Victorian England, Benjamin Disraeli was the Prime Minister for many years. In 1844, he wrote a political novel entitled Coningsby. One of the key characters in the book was a very powerful merchant and banker by the name of Sidonia. It is apparent from the events chronicled, that Sidonia is really Nathan Rothschild of England. In the book, Disraeli declares, Europe did require money, and Sidonia [Nathan Rothschild] was ready to lend it to Europe. France wanted some, Austria more; Prussia a little; Russia a few millions. Sidonia could furnish them all.

It is not difficult to conceive that, after having pursued the career we have intimated for about ten years, Sidonia [Nathan Rothschild] had become one of the most considerable personages in Europe. He had established a brother, or a near relative, in whom he could confide, in most of the principal capitals. He was lord and master of the money market of the world, and of course virtually lord and master of everything else. He literally held the revenues of Southern Italy in pawn; and monarchs and ministers of all countries courted his advice and were guided by his suggestions. -- Benjamin Disraeli, Coningsby, Alfred A. Knopf, p. 225 [emphasis added].

The Jesuits and the Rothschilds would settle for nothing less.

After the Hamilton Central Bank failed, the Jesuits were able to establish a third central bank using Nicholas Biddle as their agent in 1816. The charter for this bank ran until 1826. Biddle made an attempt to renew the charter of this third bank during the Presidential campaign of 1832. Biddle believed that Andrew Jackson would not dare to risk his second term in office by opposing him, so Biddle felt this was the perfect time to renew the bank's charter. Andrew Jackson understood the dangers of the central bank and vetoed the bill to renew the bank's charter. Jackson's argument was simple.

Is there no danger to our liberty and independence in a bank that in its nature has so little to bind it to our country?...[Is there not] cause to tremble for the purity of our elections in peace and for the independence of our country in war?...Of the course which would be pursued by a bank almost wholly owned by the subjects of a foreign power, and managed by those whose interests, if not affections, would run in the same direction there can be no doubt...Controlling our currency, receiving our public monies, and holding thousands of our citizens in dependence, it would be more formidable and dangerous than a naval and military power of the enemy. -- Herman E. Kross, Documentary History of Banking and Currency in the United States, Chelsea House, pp. 26, 27.

Jackson feared that the foreigners, who wanted to dominate and control America, would use the central bank to destroy her. The Rothschilds and the Jesuits have been doing just that for many years. The following quote shows how Nicholas Biddle manipulated the Congress.

Biddle had one powerful advantage over his adversary. For all practical purposes, Congress was is his pocket. Or, more accurately, the product of his generosity was in the pockets of Congressmen. Following the Rothschild Formula, Biddle had been careful to reward compliant politicians with success in the business world. Few of them would bite the hand that fed them. Even the great Senator, Daniel Webster, found himself kneeling at Biddle's throne.

-- G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 351.

By the early 1830s the Biddle-Rothschild-Jesuit plan was working perfectly. They controlled the Congress of the United States by giving them money to become successful in the business world. As long as the Congressmen voted as they were told, their businesses did well, but if they disobeyed the bankers, their money and other resources were withheld, and their businesses failed.

Biddle was not without resources. In keeping with his belief that banking was the ultimate source of power, he had regularly advanced funds to members of Congress when delay on appropriations bills had held up their pay. Daniel Webster was, at various times, a director of the Bank and on retainer as its counsel. "I believe my retainer has not been renewed or refreshed as usual. If it be wished that my relation to the Bank be continued, it may be well to send me the usual retainers." Numerous other men of distinction had been accommodated, including members of the press. -- John Kenneth Galbraith, Money: Whence it Came, Where it Went, Houghton Mifflin, page 80.

Webster's record in Congress had previously been in behalf of sound money. When Biddle bought Webster with money and other enticements, he succumbed and became a supporter of the corrupt banking objectives of Biddle. Webster became one of the central banks most avid supporters. How tragic that Daniel Webster did not have the moral courage to withstand Biddle's bribes! In the early 1830s, Congress had many Jesuits seeking to secretly undermine the great principles of our Constitution.

When Andrew Jackson finally ousted Nicholas Biddle and the central bank, he had to face other things such as Jesuit assassins.

With these accomplishments close on the heels of his victory over the Bank, the President had earned the undying hatred of monetary scientists, both in America and abroad. It is not surprising, therefore. that on January 30, 1835, an assassination attempt was made against him. Miraculously, both pistols of the assailant misfired, and Jackson was spared by a quirk of fate. It was the first such attempt to be made against the life of a President of the United States. The would-be assassin was Richard Lawrence who either was truly insane or who pretended to be insane to escape harsh punishment. At any rate, Lawrence was found not guilty due to insanity. Later, he boasted to friends that he had been in touch with powerful people in Europe who had promised to protect him from punishment should he be caught. -- G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 357.

The Rothschild-Jesuit conspirators are ruthless, sick individuals who will stop at nothing until Protestantism and the United States are destroyed, and the papacy rules the world again.

The Rothschilds and the Jesuits needed to regroup. For the next 20 years, the name of the game was assassination as two presidents were poisoned and one was almost killed by poisoning. Then, the guns of war were heard in America as the Civil War reddened American soil. According to German -45-

Chancellor, Otto von Bismarck, all this was carefully planned.

The division of the United States in federations of equal force was decided long before the Civil War by the high financial powers of Europe. These bankers were afraid that the United States, if they remained in one block and as one nation, would attain economic and financial independence, which would upset their financial domination over Europe and the world. Of course, in the 'inner circle' of Finance, the voice of the Rothschilds prevailed. They saw an opportunity for prodigious booty if they could substitute two feeble democracies, burdened with debt to the financiers,...in place of a vigorous Republic sufficient unto herself. Therefore, they sent their emissaries into the field to exploit the question of slavery and to drive a wedge between the tow parts of the Union...The rupture between the North and the South became inevitable; the masters of European finance employed all their forces to bring it about and to turn it their advantage. -- [Quoted in] G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 374.

The Rothschilds and Jesuits used the Civil War to divide the United States into two contending countries. This would make America weak and much easier to control. It would result in political and constitutional control, along with material wealth in America, and would facilitate America becoming enslaved to the Jesuits of Rome. In spite of the fact that the Civil War failed to accomplish the destruction of the United States, the Jesuits achieved much of their goal anyway, as conditions in the United States plainly show today.

President Lincoln understood the insidious hand of the Rothschilds and the Jesuit schemers in the Civil War. He knew that they were relentless in their pursuit of the destruction of the United States. Lincoln greatly feared for the survival of America and did everything he could to defeat their purposes. He said,

The money power [the Rothschilds and the Jesuits] preys upon the nation in times of peace and conspires against it in times of adversity. It is more despotic than monarchy, more insolent than autocracy, more selfish than bureaucracy. I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. Corporations have been enthroned, an era of corruption will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people, until the wealth is aggregated in a few hands, and the republic is destroyed. -- Archer Shaw, ed., The Lincoln Encyclopedia: The Spoken and Written Words of A. Lincoln, Macmillan, p. 40.

How prophetic; that is exactly what has happened.

Abraham Lincoln was that the Rothschild-Jesuit scheme was compromising the leaders of America. By utilizing their endless supplies of money, these evil men controlled many political leaders at the highest levels of the American government, and that was in the mid 1800s. Today the situation is much worse. American politicians are selling their country to the Jesuits for the chance to be wealthy and influential. We saw that even the great Daniel Webster was a pawn in their hands. In a speech in 2837, Lincoln declared,

No foreign power or combination of foreign powers could by force take a drink from the Ohio or make a track on the Blue Ridge. At what point, then, is the approach of danger to be expected? If it ever reaches us, it must spring from among us, it cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of freedom, we must live through all time or die of suicide. -- Joan Veon, The United Nations' Global Straightjacket, Hearthstone Publishing, p. 64.

Greed, selfishness, and financial gain are used to compromise politicians to pass laws defeating the purpose of the Constitution, and to take America down a path never intended by our Founding Fathers. These politicians adopt governing principles like those of communism and the French Revolution. Following the awful bloodbath called the Civil War the nation was bleeding, and things were in disarray. The country was quite vulnerable to more Jesuit mischief, and they took good advantage of it.

THADDEUS STEVENS AND THE TRASHING OF THE CONSTITUTION

Anyone who saw the Congress of the 1860s would declare that Thaddeus Stevens was undeniably in charge.

His tremendous power as a party leader lay in the biting bitterness of his tongue and the dominating arrogance of his manner, before which weaker men shriveled. When a colleague dared question the wisdom of his policy, he relied with studied contempt that he did not 'propose either to take his counsel, recognize his authority, or believe a word he says.' His flings were consuming flame, his invective terrible to withstand.... One who observed him well thought that 'the intensity of his hatred was almost next to infernal.' There were no neutral tones in his vocabulary.... He had no sympathy with failure. Thus there was a hardness about him that made men dread him. Time and again he was to enter a party caucus with sentiment against him to tongue-lash his followers into line. It was easier to follow than to cross him. He had all the domineering arrogance of the traditional boss. He brooked no opposition. Schurz [A colleague of Stevens] noted even in his conversation, 'a certain absolutism of opinion with contemptuous scorn for adverse argument.' He was a dictator who handed down his decrees and woe to the rebel who would reject him.... And he could not compromise - that was a once his strength and weakness. It made him a leader while he lived, and a failure in the perspective of the years. He held no council, heeded no advice, hearkened to no warning, and with an iron will he pushed forward as his instinct bade, defying, if need be, the opinion of his time, and turning it by sheer force to his purpose. A striking figure on the canvas of history - stern, arrogant, intense, with a threatening light in his eye, and something between a sneer and a Voltairian smile upon his thin, hard lips. Such was the greatest party and congressional leader of his time. -- Claude Bowers, The Tragic Era, AMS Press, pp. 74, 84.

He was in his sixties at the time, slowing due to age and illness, but his mind had lost none of its invective. He was not a particularly brilliant man. He made sure that everyone knew exactly where he stood, and he expected everyone to stand with him. If they did not, he made sure that they knew he was very unhappy about it. This radical, Thaddeus Stevens, controlled the Congress and applied all his overbearing and caustic manner to bring about one of the greatest revolutions in American since 1776. By his influence, certain hidden changes were implemented into the Reconstruction Amendments that did so much more than provide freedom and equality for the slaves, but rather attacked the very rationale for the Bill of Rights.

We have seen that the banished Jesuit Order used the wealth of the Rothschild to finance Adam Weishaupt in founding the Illuminati on May 1 1776. We have also seen that the principles laid out by the Jesuits and Weishaupt were carried out in the French Revolution. Two years after the Constitution of the United States was ratified, the Jesuits carried out their principles of government in the French Revolution. These two antagonistic forms of government were laid open for all the world to see. The Constitution guaranteed Republican government where the government was founded on law, and every citizen was equal before the law. In France, however, the great cry was for democracy.

At that time (1789) France was the richest and most populous nation on the continent of Europe; and it was here that the 'Great Experiment in Democracy' began. The battle cry was 'liberty, equality, and fraternity.' The vehicle was Socialism. -- Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications Publishers, p. 34.

The United States of America is not a democracy. It is a republic, and there is a big difference between the two. A pure democracy is based solely on the majority without any restrictions on what the majority can do. An excellent example of a democracy is a lynch mob. The majority wants to hang the person, and the minority, the person to be hanged, does not want to be hanged. They have a vote, and then hang the person. In a pure democracy, the minority is the victim of the majority.

In contrast, a Republic is founded on a set of laws that govern what the majority can and cannot do. The law on which the United States; Republic is founded is the Constitution. For instance, the Constitution says,

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. -- First amendment to the Constitution.

If a law was proposed in Congress to set up a national religion, and everyone in Congress voted for it, it still cannot be done, because the Constitution prohibits this type of law. The Constitution says that the government is not permitted to pass any law concerning religion. During the Dark Ages, over 150 million Christians were put to death because they would not abide by the universal religion at that time. The same thing would happen in America if America were a pure democracy.

The word democracy cannot be found in the Constitution or in the Declaration of Independence, or in any of the state's constitutions. Many of the Founders of the United States tried to warn about the dangers of a pure democracy.

Democracies have ever been spectacles of turbulence and contention; have ever been found incompatible with personal security or the rights of property; and have in general been as short in their lives as they have been violent in their death. -- James Madison, Federalist Paper #10.

Remember, democracy never lasts long. It soon, exhausts, and murders itself. There never was a democracy yet that did not commit suicide. -- John Adams, The Works of John Adams, Vol. 6, New Library Press, p. 484.

If America had been established as a pure democracy, it would have long since ceased to exist.

What we learn to-day from the study of the Great

Revolution [French Revolution]... is that it was the source and origin of all the present communist, anarchist, and socialist conceptions.... up till now, modern socialism has added absolutely nothing to the ideas that were circulating among the French people between 1789 and 1794.... Modern socialism has only systematized those ideas and found arguments in their favor. -- Nesta Webster, The French Revolution, Noontide Press, p. 5.

The French Revolution was a source for communist, anarchist, and socialist conceptions; conceptions that, when carried to conclusion, resulted in the necessity of installing drainage systems to carry away the torrents of blood that flowed from French guillotines. These same 'conceptions' applied during the twentieth century have resulted in the murder of well over one hundred million human beings. There is much to learn from the Great Revolution. -- Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications, p. 35.

At the same time anarchy is seeking to sweep away all law, not only divine, but human. The centralizing of wealth and power; the vast combinations for the enriching of the few at the expense of the many; the combinations of the poorer classes for the defense of their interests and claims; the spirit of unrest, of riot and bloodshed; the world-wide dissemination of the same teachings that led to the French Revolution - all are tending to involve the whole world in a struggle similar to that which convulsed France. -- E.G. White, Education, Pacific Press Publishing Association, p. 228.

The principles of democracy or mob rule have filled this world with blood. Thaddeus Stevens was most instrumental in bringing the ideals of the French Revolution to America under the guise of bringing freedoms to the downtrodden slaves.

As we have seen, the ideas of Karl Marx were nothing new. He simply took the ideas of the Jesuits and Weishaupt and codified them into the Communist Manifesto.

In actual fact the Communist Manifesto was in circulation for many years before Marx' name was widely enough recognized to establish his authorship for this revolutionary handbook. All Karl Marx really did was update and codify the very same revolutionary plans and principles set down seventy years earlier by Adam Weishaupt, the founder of the Order of the Illuminati in Bavaria. And, it is widely acknowledged by serious scholars of this subject that the League of the Just Men was simply an extension of the Illuminati. -- Gary Allen, None Dare Call it Conspiracy, Concord, p. 25.

The principles of democracy, communism, and the French Revolution, codified by Karl Marx, are seen in countless countries in the twentieth century. From the purges in Russia by Josef Stalin, to Mao Tse Tung's Reign of Terror in China, to Pol Pot in Cambodia and numerous others, the results of Jesuitism have filled this world with misery, pain, suffering, and death. Will the United States, the greatest bastion of Republican government, fall as well?

After the Civil War, America was in shambles. The South had to start all over again. Over three million slaves, who had only known the cotton fields and hard labor, were now free. Carpetbaggers were pillaging an already depleted South. Abraham Lincoln, the man who guided America through the bloody Civil War, was dead from a Jesuit assassin's bullet. Great struggles faced the war-torn nation.

Lincoln, like Andrew Johnson after him, wanted to allow the seceded Southern states back in the Union, but a group in Congress called the Radical Red Republicans objected. They wanted some things changed before they would allow that. They were instrumental in having the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments placed into the Constitution. The amendments, in part, are stated below and on the surface look very good. However, as after declarations were made, it became clear that freedom and equality for the Afro-American free man was used to create an entirely new citizenship, which broadened the powers of the national government and attacked the Bill of Rights. This was the same method used in France; the peasants were struggling under horrible difficulties, so the reign of terror granted them liberty and equality. Hidden beneath this was a drive to expand the power of the government and entrench the peasants in bondage still.

Notice the following statements from Justices of the Supreme Court and actual cases where these amendments were interpreted. These amendments were interpreted far beyond freedom and equality for the black man.

The following statement is from the Slaughterhouse Cases of 1872. Notice how the Supreme Court interpreted the case in light of the 14th Amendment.

We are of the opinion that the rights claimed by these plaintiffs in error [fundamental common-law rights] if they have any existence are not privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States within the meaning of the clause of the 14th Amendment under consideration. -- Slaughter-House Cases, 83 US 36, 80 (1872)

According to the first Supreme Court case in which the 14th Amendment was considered, it was interpreted to mean that the Bill of Rights would not be considered as privileges and immunities of 14th Amendment U.S.

citizenship. This stance of the Supreme Court continued and was spelled out very clearly in subsequent cases.

The right of trial by jury in civil cases, guaranteed by the 7th Amendment... and the right to bear arms, guaranteed by the 2nd Amendment, have been distinctly held not to be privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States, guaranteed by the 14th Amendment... the decision rested upon the ground that this clause of the 14th Amendment did not forbid the states to abridge the personal rights enumerated in the first eight Amendments, because those rights were not within the meaning of the clause 'privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States. -- Twining v. New Jersey, 211 US 97, 105, 106, (1908)

Many people, who lived during that time, recognized that the Constitution was under attack by Thaddeus Stevens and his followers. That the Constitution was under direct attack after the Civil War is apparent from the books written about that era, from the news papers, and from the speeches made by president Andrew Johnson.

Never have American public men in responsible positions, directing the destiny of the Nation, been so brutal, hypocritical and corrupt. The Constitution was treated as a doormat on which politicians and army officers wiped their feet after wading in the muck... So appalling is the picture of these revolutionary years that even historians have preferred to overlook many essential things. Thus, Andrew Johnson, who fought the bravest battle for constitutional liberty and for the preservation of our institutions ever waged by an Executive, until recently was left in the pillory to which unscrupulous gamblers for power consigned him... and the London 'Times' was commenting that 'it is the Constitution rather than Mr. Johnson that is in danger." – Claude Bowers, The Tragic Era, AMS Press, emphasis supplied, p. 157.

The Constitution was a doormat for politicians to walk on with their muddy feet! The Constitution was in grave danger of being trashed!! These are appalling statements in the light of the glorious, Protestant principles that that document represents. It is very clear, that following the Civil War; the Constitution came under furious attack from 'American' politicians who were bent on bringing America under the sway of the Principles of Communism/Illuminism/Jesuitism, And they would use the good and noble, which was freeing of the slaves, in order to diabolically undermine the Bill of Rights. Is this not still happening today? We hear so much about 'defending freedom', which sounds great, while American liberties are trampled in the dust by Patriot Acts I and II.

Here are some excerpts from speeches made by President Andrew Johnson. While reading these, remember that Andrew Johnson was almost removed from office because he refused to go along with the Radical Red Republicans.

I love the Constitution: I intend to plant myself, with the confident hope and belief that if the Union remains together, in less than four years the now triumphant party will be overthrown. -- ibid. p. 33.

The best efforts of my life have been exerted for the maintenance of the Constitution, the enforcement of the laws, and the preservation of the Union of the States. -- ibid. p. 162.

Greeted cordially at Baltimore, he had said he Would rather be a free citizen than be inaugurated President ‘over the ruins of the Constitution,’ and ‘rather be a free man than be President and be a slave.’ – ibid, p. 241.

“The President stands squarely against Congress and the people.” Wrote the indignant Julian. “Neither Jefferson nor Jackson… ever asserted with such fearless fidelity and ringing emphasis the fundamental principles of civil liberty,” said the New York World. – ibid, p. 102.

It has been my fate for the last five years to fight those who have been opposed to the Union... I intend to fight all opponents of the Constitution... to fight the enemies of this glorious Union forever and forever. – ibid, p. 132.

According to Constitutional scholar, George P. Fletcher, Cardazo Professor of Jurisprudence at Columbia University:

The Civil War called forth a new constitutional order. At the heart of this postbellum legal order lay the Reconstruction Amendments-the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments, ratified in the years 1865 to 1870. The principles of this new legal regime are so radically different from our original Constitution, drafted in 1787, that they deserve to be recognized as a second American constitution. The new constitution established, in fact a second American Republic. The first Constitution was based on the principles of peoplehood as a voluntary association, individual freedom, and republican elitism. The guiding premises of the second constitution were, in contrast, organic nationhood, equality of all persons, and popular democracy. These are

Principles radically opposed to each other. – George P. Fletcher, Our Secret Constitution, Oxford University Press, p. 2.

This professor at Columbia University recognized that the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments brought about a completely different constitution that the one established in 1787. He declared that these amendments created a new constitution. As we have seen from subsequent court cases after the passing of those Amendments, it is clear that that is exactly what Stevens and Rome wanted to do.

Summing it up, by 1868 the Jesuits, with their radicals Thaddeus Stevens and Charles Sumner, had forced the Fourteenth Amendment on the peoples of the States, North and South. They had created a new nation as a result of a new citizenship. By 1872 the Jesuits, with ther radicals on the Supreme Court, had made the powers of both the Federal and State governments absolute, limited only by decisions of their respective King's benches- the Federal and State Supreme Courts. The transition from a Presbyterian form of government to a Roman Catholic form of government had been accomplished. And how did they do it? By declaring that the Bill of Rights were not privileges and immunities of Fourteenth Amendment citizenship, thereby overthrowing the ancient liberties. – Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halycon Unified Services, p. 327.

We are at a loss for words in describing the dismal, diabolical and demoralizing depravity of this singular man... he was the great tool of the Jesuits in creating their socialist-communist monster of the Twentieth Century, Fourteenth Amendment America. He was called a 'traitor' by

President Johnson while he 'destroyed the government of the Old Union, changed its form and spirit, and made a new Union with new theories and new powers.' Horace Greeley, one of Stevens' masters, adds, 'We have brought all laborers to a common level... by reducing the whole working population, white and black, to a condition of serfdom.' On his deathbed this old communist 'commoner' was baptized into the Roman Catholic Institution for a job well done in obedience to the Papal Caesar's tyrannical Holy Alliance and the Black Pope's evil Council of Trent. –ibid, p. 331.

In light of the heinous and destructive work of Thaddeus Stevens and the Radical Republicans, it is easy to conclude that they were the tools of Rome in destroying the great Protestant Constitution. No more wicked and diabolical men ever walked the land of the free and the home of the brave. Further insights into the life of Thaddeus Stevens add more and more evidence of Rome's vicious involvement in the undermining of the constitution done in the name of freedom and equality.

Early in his life, Stevens was very poor. As a result, he always held a manifest contempt for the aristocrats and the wealthy. He always held that the wealthy were made that way because they had exploited the poor. Throughout his political career, Stevens always sided with the poor. However, in the famous conflict between Andrew Jackson and Nicholas Biddle, Stevens did a very strange thing. Jackson was siding with the common man in America, fighting against the Biddle-Rothschild-Jesuit front that sought to enslave America. One would think that Stevens would automatically side with Jackson and the common people. However, this was not the case.

Against the Jacksonian Democracy, and fought with fervor for the moneyed aristocracy represented by Nicholas Biddle and the Bank. In his earlier years he had been as fervent in the support of the Hamiltonian aristocracy. It is these marked contradictions in his character that make him so difficult of analysis. – Claude Bowers, The Tragic Era, AMS Press p. 68.

The contradictions in Stevens can be readily understood in light of his involvement with the Jesuits-Rothschilds. Naturally, Stevens stood with common people, but when his masters told him otherwise, then he would throw out his principles and do as he was told. How else would one explain the flagrant contradictions in this man?

Steven had no religious convictions. He never attended church. However, one very interesting note about his religious life surfaces from the book by Claude Bowers.

He attended no church, which, within itself, would have colored the general impression of his character in the community in which he lived. For the Baptists he had a certain sentimental regard due to the fact that it was the church of his mother, but he was probably a free thinker... 'That his mind was a howling wilderness, so far as his sense of his obligation to God was concerned,' was the opinion of Jeremiah Black; and Senator Grimes disliked him as 'a debauchee in morals.' Even so, one of his best friends was a Catholic priest in Lancaster, with whom he liked to talk and walk; and he was tenderly fond of children, and extremely sensitive to the appeals of the poor, to whom he was unvaryingly generous. – ibid. p. 78, 79, emphasis supplied.

In the light of the devilish route that Stevens took America and the beloved Bill of Rights, his close association with this Catholic priest would lead one to conclude that this priest had great influence over Stevens mind and served as his mentor in delineating to him exactly what path he was to pursue. That Stevens sought to undermine the Protestant Constitution declares that Stevens got the ideas from somewhere and his close association with this priest could certainly be one of the paths through which the Jesuit Order got to Stevens and twisted his willing mind!!

The other great influence in Stevens' life from the Catholic Church came from his maid and then live-in-lover of many years; namely on Lydia Smith.

In the rear of his house in Lancaster, among the fruit trees, stood a little house, occupied by Lydia Smith and her husband, a very black negro barber, with their two children, likewise black. Mrs. Smith was mulatto, and was engaged as housekeeper for the bachelor lawyer. [Stevens] After a time the husband died, and the widow moved into the master's house, and there she lived for many years. When Stevens went to Washington, she accompanied him there. Wherever he was, there she was also... That she was devoted to Stevens was evident to all. In time, as he grew feeble, she became indispensable, acting as a buffer between him and those who would unnecessarily sap his strength... This assumption that she was Steven's mistress was not confined, however to undertone gossip, which is never impressive. It was current in the press, and in no instance was the publisher rebuked or threatened with a libel suit.... The housekeeper [Smith] lived with her husband until his death, and many years later was buried by his side in the Catholic cemetery in Lancaster... Many ascribed his deep-seated hatred for the Southern whites to the influence of Lydia. His fondness for her is shown in the fact that there is in Lancaster to day a portrait of this comely mulatto from the brush of Esholtz, a prominent painter who also did a portrait of Stevens. – ibid. pp. 80, 81, 83.

At Stevens deathbed, we read

There were Lydia Smith and the two Sisters, Loretta and Genevieve. As he was sinking rapidly, the doctor asked him how he felt. 'Very mean, Doctor.' Then Sister Loretta asked permission to baptize him in the Catholic faith. Lydia Smith was kneeling at the foot of the bed; the two Sisters were on their knees reading the prayers for the dying. And this Thaddeus Stevens passed to eternity. At the moment, his hand was in that of Sister Loretta, his breast heaved, he pressed her hand, and thus the end came. A year before he had said that when sick, he would rather send a hundred miles to have her with him at the end than most ministers he knew. – ibid. p. 222.

From these statements by Bowers, we can glean many things. Stevens was very attached to Smith and obviously was living in an illicit relationship with her. Smith was a devout Roman Catholic and had a tremendous influence on Stevens. At Stevens' deathbed, he was baptized by two Catholic nuns into the Catholic faith for the great service that Stevens had performed in behalf of the Catholic Church. It is clear that the influence of the Catholic priest of Lancaster and Lydia Smith were both instrumental in bringing Thaddeus Stevens to the mind-set of swinging America from Protestantism to Catholicism. Only in the light of eternity will the heinous crimes of these people be fully realized.

TIGHTENING THE NOOSE
After the Jesuits' attempts to destroy the fledgling United States, they concentrated on another goal that had eluded them for many years. They had desperately tried to establish a central bank under Robert Morris, Alexander Hamilton, and Nicholas Biddle, but each attempt had failed. During the devastating Civil War, Augustus Belmont, a rabid Jesuit and Rothschild agent, tried to coerce Lincoln into establishing a central bank, but Lincoln understood the damage a central bank would cause to the country, and he refused.

With new gusto and a different approach, the Jesuits and the Rothschilds tried again. They realized, as Lenin had that the establishment of a central bank was 90% of communizing a nation. – Fritz Springmeier, Bloodlines of the Illuminati, Ambassador House, p. 268.

In the mid 1750s, the Rothschilds and the Schiffs moved into the same residence, a large duplex house in Frankfurt, Germany, where their families lived together.

He [The father Rothschild] had five daughters and five sons.... He moved from his old house, the “Haus Zur Interfann,” to a new one, “Green Shield....” when he started making more money. Green Shield was a dual residency and the other half was occupied by the Schiff family who were to

Play an important role later on as agents of the Rothschilds. – ibid, p. 244.

About 100 years after the two families lived together in Frankfurt, Germany, Jacob Schiff was born. He was a wizard at finances and developed the underhanded shrewdness of the Rothschilds. In 1865, as the Civil War is ending, young 18-year-old Jacob left Germany and came to America.

Ten years later he became the partner of the Illuminati firm Kuhn, Loeb & Company. Ten years after that he became its president. [It was here that Schiff was] directing Rothschild and Illuminati affairs from this seat of authority.

Jacob Schiff was also on the board of directors of Central Trust Company, Western Union, and Wells Fargo Company. – ibid, p. 268.

Between the end of the Civil War and 1914, their main agents in the United States were Kuhn, Loeb and Co. and the J.P. Morgan Co.

A brief history of Kuhn, Loeb and Co. appeared in Newsweek magazine on February 1, 1936: “Abraham Kuhn and Solomon Loeb were general merchandise merchants in Lafayette, Indiana, in 1850. As usual in newly settled regions, most transactions were on credit. They soon found out that they were bankers... In 1867, they established Kuhn, Loeb and Co., bankers, in New Your City, and took in a young German immigrant, Jacob Schiff, as partner. Young Schiff had important financial connections in Europe. After ten years, Jacob Schiff was head of Kuhn, Loeb and Co., Kuhn having died and Loeb retired. Under Schiff's guidance, the house

brought European capital into contact with American industry."

Schiff's 'important financial connections in Europe' were the Rothschilds and their German representatives, the M.M. Warburg Company of Hamburg Amsterdam. Within twenty years the Rothschilds, through their Warburg-Schiff connection, had provided the capital that enabled John D. Rockefeller to greatly expand his Standard Oil empire. They also financed the activities of Edward Harriman (Railroads) and Andrew Carnegie (Steel). – Des Griffin, Descent into Slavery, Emissary Publications, pp. 36, 37.

Couple that with this statement:

J.P. Morgan was brought into banking by his father, Junius Morgan, in England. The Morgans were friendly competitors with the Rothschilds and became socially close to them. Morgan's London-based firm was saved from financial ruin in 1857 by the Bank of England over which the Rothschilds held great influence. Thereafter, Morgan appears to have served as a Rothschild financial agent and went to great length to appear totally American. – G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 209.

Again, in the mid 1800's another German Illuminist was sent on a mission from the house of Rothschild to accomplish a goal of this New Order For the Ages. His name was Jacob Henry Schiff (1847-1920). He came to New York first for the sole purpose of getting control of the United States monetary system. He eventually became the head of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Company. He bought Kuhn & Loeb out later with Rothschild money.

Using charity as a front to hide his Illuminati One World Government activities, Jacob Schiff became one of the most important successors of Albert Pike in leading the United States toward anarchy. As stated by Lenin earlier, one of the first goals of the communists is to get control of all monetary systems of the world. And this was to be Jacob Schiff's first achievement. – William Sutton, The New Age Movement and Illuminati 666, Institute of Religious Knowledge, pp. 234, 235.

Thus, we see that the Jesuits-Rothschilds sent Jacob Sciff to the United States at the end of the Civil War to gain enough control over the American financial system that it would be impossible for America to refuse a central bank. Schiff used Jesuit-Rothschild money to finance J.P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, Edward Harriman, and Andrew Carnegie. Through the companies owned by these four individuals, shipping, energy, oil, transportation, railroads, import, exports, and steel with its associate businesses, would be involved. These financial giants branched off into so many other business enterprises that it simply boggles the mind. To say the least, the financial power gained by Schiff by 1900 was absolutely staggering! We must keep in mind the statement of F. Tupper Saussy, which says:

Aware that the Rothschilds are an important Jewish family, I looked them up in Encyclopedia Judaica and discovered that they bear the title “Guardians of the Vatican Treasurey... Theappointment of Rothschild gave the black papacy absolute financial privacy and secrecy. Who would ever

search a family of orthodox Jews for the key to the wealth of the Roman Catholic Church? – F. Tupper Saussy, Rulers of Evil, Osprey Bookmakers, pp. 160, 161.

Saussy’s reference to the “black papacy” is a reference to the Jesuits. The head Jesuit, the Jesuit general, is referred to quite frequently as the black pope.

In their relentless drive to abolish freedom in America without firing a shot, the Jesuits used their financial agents to so dominate American business and the banking system that they were able to push a central bank on the unsuspecting American people. This time, the central bank did not fail.

While Schiff was constantly increasing in wealth, influence, and power, the Jesuits-Rothschilds sent yet another agent to complete the goal of establishing a central bank in America. Their man was Paul Warburg.

At the turn of the century the Rothschilds, not satisfied with the progress being made by their American operations, sent one of their top experts, Paul Moritz Warburg, over to New York to take direct charge of their assault upon the only true champion of individual liberty and prosperity – the United States.

At a hearing of the House Committee on Banking and Currency in 1913, Warburg revealed that he was ‘a member of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Co. I came to this country in 1902, having been born and educated in the banking in Hamburg, Germany, and studied banking in London and Paris, and have gone all around the world...’

At the end of the last century people didn’t ‘study

banking in London and Paris' and go 'all around the world unless they had a special mission to perform!

Early in 1907, Jacob Schiff, the Rothschild-owned boss of Kuhn, Loeb and Co., in a speech to the New York Chamber of Commerce, warned that 'unless we have a Central Bank with adequate control of credit resources, this country is going to undergo the most severe and far reaching money panic in its history.'

Shortly thereafter, the United States plunged into a monetary crisis that had all the earmarks of a skillfully planned Rothschild 'job.' The ensuing panic financially ruined tens of thousands of innocent people across the country, and made billions for the banking elite. The purpose for the 'crisis' was two-fold:

1. To make a financial 'killing' for the Insiders, and
2. To impress on the American people the 'great need' for a central bank.

Paul Warburg told the Banking and Currency Committee: "In the Panic of 1907, the first suggestion I made was, 'let us have a national clearing house" [Central Bank]. The Aldrich Plan [for a Central Bank] contains many things that are simply fundamental rules of banking. – Des Griffin, Decent Into Slavery, Emissary Publications, p. 37.

The [Jesuit] Illuminati interests wanted to create a Central Bank in America. They wanted to build the Federal Reserve. First, they needed a bunch of banking crisis' that would push public opinion towards a Federal Reserve system. These were provided by the Illuminati, including J.P. Morgan's Knickerbocker Panic of 1907. Second, they needed a favorable U.S. president in office.

Rothschild agent Colonel House provided this by getting Woodrow Wilson elected. -- Fritz Springmeier, Bloodlines of the Illuminati, Ambassador House, p. 273.

The engineered banking panic of 1907 did just what the Jesuits and the Rothschilds wanted it to do. It was made to appear that the only way to avoid another depression was to have a central bank.

To convince Congress and the public that the establishment of a banking cartel was, somehow, a measure to protect the public, the Jekyll Island strategists laid down the following plan of action:

1. Do not call it a cartel nor even a central bank.
2. Make it look like a government agency.
3. Establish regional branches to create the appearance of decentralization, not dominated by Wall Street banks.

4. Begin with a conservative structure including many sound banking principles, knowing that the provisions can be quietly altered or removed in subsequent years.
5. Use the anger caused by recent panics and bank failures to create popular demand for monetary reform.
6. Employ university professors to give the plan the appearance of academic approval.
– G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jeckyll Island, American Opinion, pp. 438.

Under these pretenses, the American people were ready for the Federal Reserve Bank. The name sounds very official as if it were an entity of the American government. If people understood how the Federal Reserve Bank was going to operate, and that it would be controlled by a few of the richest bankers, they would not have tolerated its creation. The dream the Jesuits had of a central bank in America took shape at Jekyll Island. The operators and controllers of this bank are from the same groups as those who were behind the central bank in the 18th and 19th century: the Jesuits and the Rothschilds!

Only one step remained to complete the project. The Jesuits needed certain men in the White House and the government to pass the Federal Reserve Act. By 1912, they had their man in the White House, Woodrow Wilson. Since Jacob Schiff was already deeply into the financial scam, the Jesuits needed another man whose expertise was politics. The man they found was Edward Mandel House. It was he who controlled Wilson in the White House.

Col. Edward Mandel House, of the Illuminati and whose father Thomas W. House was a Rothschild agent who got rich off the Civil War, wrote in his book Philip Dru, Administrator... that “Cynical Europe said that the North would have it appear that a war had been fought for human freedom, whereas it was fought for money.” It’s an interesting concept to see appear in a book by a secret Illuminati member.... Another man who appears to be connected to the Rothschilds was Thomas House, who also made his fortune slipping supplies past the U.S. naval blockade of the South. His son, Col. Edward M. House, was one of the main Illuminati figures to control America during the early 20th century. – Fritz Springmeier, Bloodlines of the Illuminati, Ambassador House, pp. 145, 273.

One of the most influential men behind the scenes at this time was Colonel Edward Mandell House, personal adviser to Woodrow Wilson and, later, to F.D.R. House had close contacts with both J.P. Morgan and the old banking families of Europe. He had received several years of his schooling in England and, in later years, surrounded himself with prominent members of the Fabian Society. Furthermore, he was a man of great personal wealth, most of it acquired during the War Between the States. His father, Thomas William House, had acted as the confidential American agent of unknown banking interests in London. It was commonly believed he represented the Rothschilds. – G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, pp. 239, 240.

These two quotes show that Edward M. House was a key agent for the Illuminati and the Rothschilds. Since the Illuminati is a front for the Jesuits, House was a key Jesuit agent seeking to destroy Protestantism and to establish papal supremacy in America.

Two more insights into the life of Edward M. House come from Dee Zahner.

In 1902, a novel was published that had been written by Edward Mandel House. This novel, entitled Philip Dru: Administrator, called for “Socialism as dreamed of by Karl Marx.”.... It should be remembered that the influence behind Wilson throughout his career as president was Colonel Edward Mandel House, the Marxist (Communist) who founded the Council of Foreign Relations, and the man whom

Wilson called his “alter ego.” – Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications, pp. 90, 112.

House hoped to see the teachings of Karl Marx become a living reality in America. Remember that the teachings of Marx were the codified writings of Adam Weishaupt, the Illuminist and Jesuit agent. According to Woodrow Wilson’s own words, he was dominated by House while he was president! How deceitful that the man sitting in the White House portrayed himself to the American people as a loyal American, when in fact, he did the bidding of America’s greatest enemy – the Jesuits of Rome! Several books reveal the control that House had over Wilson while he was in the Oval Office.

Woodrow Wilson was the sole property of Jacob Schiff and J.P. Morgan and other internationalist bankers, But the man who was really running things in the White House was the mysterious ‘Col.’ Edward Mandel House during Wilson’s term in office....

It was House and the internationalist bankers who promoted Wilson as the Presidential candidate.... But is was House who converted Wilson to accept the principles of the centralization of the U.S. Monetary System, It was House that helped promote the Presidential candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt. -- William Sutton, The New Age Movement and the Illuminati 666, Institute of Religious Knowledge, p. 240.

It is widely acknowledged that Colonel House was the man who selected Wilson as a presidential candidate and who secured his nomination. He became Wilson's constant companion, and the President admitted publicly that he depended on him greatly for instruction and guidance. Many of Wilson's important appointive posts in government were had selected by House. He and Wilson even went so far as to develop a private code so they could communicate freely over the telephone. The President himself had written: "Mr. House is my second personality. He is my independent self. His thoughts and mine are one." – G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 240.

A key individual of the New York Archbishop's control of the Democratic Party through Tammany Hall, Colonel House, known as 'the holy monk', was directly involved in making Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt presidents of the American empire. As Wilson's advisor and 'alter ego', he pressed for the passage of Morgan's Federal Reserve Act. – Eric John Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halycon, p. 447.

In their efforts to create a Jesuit empire in America, Jacob Schiff, J.P. Morgan , the Rockefellers, and Edward House were their agents. So many books refer to them as Illuminists, international bankers, or as Marxists, but we have seen that all of these organizations were being used as fronts for the Jesuits, and all of them do the bidding of the Black Pope, the Jesuit general!

The early 1900s were very busy years indeed. The Federal Reserve Act and a central bank, World War One, and the sinking of the Titanic were just a few of the events transpiring at that time. Two other unfortunate events were the toppling of Czarist Russia and the attempt to establish a League of Nations.

When the Czar of Russia, Alexander I, rejected the Jesuits' effort to create a League of Nations in Europe, the Jesuits wanted to destroy him and the system of government he represented. Coupled with this, the Czar had always been the protector of the Russian Orthodox Church, which was the Vatican's implacable enemy ever since 1054. Thus, the Jesuits felt that if the Czar could be eliminated and a new government established, they would accomplish two important goals: the Czar would be eliminated, and the Orthodox Church in Russia would be destroyed.

The leaders of the Revolutionary forces in Russia were Leon Trotsky, Nicolai Lenin, and Joseph Stalin. These three men were avowed Marxists and communists. Since Marxism and Communism can be traced back to the Illuminati and ultimately to the Jesuits through their agent, Adam Weishaupt, it should not surprise anyone that western financiers like Jacob Schiff and the international bankers were the ones who financed the Russian Revolution. The revolutionaries were Jesuits of Rome, and they were financed by western bankers, who were Jesuits of Rome.

Jacob Schiff, head of the New York based Kuhn, Loeb and Co., spent $20 million on the revolution. Federal Reserve Director, William Boyce Thompson, gave the Bolsheviks $1 million. In the summer of 1917, fifteen Wall Street financiers and attorneys, led by Thompson, went to Petrograd, the center of revolutionary activity...

After the Revolution in Russia was successful, many American businessmen who supported it went into business with the Soviets. Averill Harriman formed a joint shipping firm with the Soviets. The Rockefeller family became involved in the oil business with Soviets. From the 1920's the Rockefeller's Chase Bank financed business in the Soviet Union. Today the Rockefeller's Chase Manhattan Bank maintains a branch office at 1 Karl Marx Square in Moscow. – Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications, p. 93.

It was confirmed by the New York Journal American of February 3, 1949, that Jacob Schiff gave 20 million in gold to help the final triumph of Bolshevism in Russia. – William Sutton, The New Age Movement and the Illuminati 666, Institute of Religious Knowledge, p.239.

Jacob Schiff was head of the New York investment firm, Kuhn, Loeb and Co. He was one of the principal backers of the principal backers of the Bolshevik revolution and personally financed Trotsky's trip from New York to Russia. He was a major contributor to Woodrow Wilson's presidential campaign and an advocate for passage of the Federal Reserve Act. – G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 210.

There are numerous other references to thses facts that we could quote. These people were American citizens, and most of them took an oath swearing allegiance to the Constitution. Their acts in supporting a government whose principles are diametrically opposed to the is treason. How could these people do this? How could Woodrow Wilson and FDR support Communist Russia? They were all Jesuits working to destroy the United States. They worked together and supported each other because their masters in the Vatican told them to do this. A brief chart may be of help here to see the shape of world control.

THE JESUITS
Illuminism-Weishaupt (French Revolution)
Communism-Marx (Codified Communistic Ideas)
International Bankers-Sciff (Financed it all)

The establishment of the League of Nations after World War One was very important for the Jesuits. They had been trying to establish the League ever since the early 1800s.

The first attempt in the 20th century to unite the whole world into a One World Luciferian slave unit was tried in history by these super-rich conspirators at the close of World War I. President Woodrow Wilson on January 8th, 1918 laid out a 14 point plan to Congress for lasting peace. Within this package of world peace was neatly hidden a plan for these conspirators to get all nations of the world to give up their sovereignty. It was labeled as 'The League of Nations.'

There modern money changers used World War I to make tons of money and as a toll to frighten the war-torn people of the world at that time into believing if all the governments of the world would unite into a One World Government, this would stop all wars between nations, and would achieve world peace and security.

The League of Nations headquarters was in Geneva, Switzerland, and it was during World War I that our own President Woodrow Wilson in 1918 began to draw the United States citizens, along with the rest of the world, into accepting this sham. Eventually, with the help of 'Col.' Edward Mandel House, 63 nations joined the League, although the total membership at one time never exceeded 58. However, President Wilson was dumbfounded when he was unable to obtain the two-thirds vote in the US Senate required for ratification of a treaty, and the 10 Nations. The Second World War was necessary to convince the people of the world that they needed the United Nations in order to guarantee peace in the world. The following chapter will expose the unpublicized underhanded purposes of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Chapter 6
The CFR: Another Jesuit Front
When Woodrow Wilson, under the direction of Jesuit agent, Edward Mandel House, failed to convince the American people and the United States Senate that they should join the League of Nations, the Jesuits realized that they had to make sure this refusal never happened again. For fifty years the Jesuits had been planning World War Two. This next war was planned to make sure that America would join their next League of Nations. This time it would be called the United Nations. In order to accomplish this, the Jesuits knew that they had to have greater control of the mass media outlets, more Congressmen in their pocket, more businesses had to be dominated, and the office of the President had to be controlled. When these things were accomplished, the Jesuits knew that they would have no trouble convincing a blinded and deluded American people into eventually surrendering their sovereignty to the United Nations. In order to accomplish these things, the Jesuits created the Council on Foreign Relations. This was to be another front behind which they would hide while accomplishing their subversion in America. In England they created a similar sister organization called the Royal Institute of International Affairs.

The Council on Foreign Relations was a spin-off from the failure of the world's leaders at the end of World War I to embrace the League of Nations as a true world government. It became clear to the master planners that they had been unrealistic in their expectations for rapid acceptance. – G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 273.

The agents of the Jesuits created the Council on Foreign Relations. The locations would be in the two most powerful Roman Catholic Dioceses in the American Empire, New York and Chicago. The CFR would control the Empire's finance, government, industry, religion, education, and press. No one could be elected to the Presidency of the United States without the Council's consent, as the office would be a tool for the Archbishop of New York subject to 'the Vicar of Christ' [the pope] in Rome. (One of the founders of the CFR also aided in the creation of the Federal Reserve Bank. He was the 'holy monk', a Shriner Freemason and agent of the Jesuit General. Edward M. House.) Its purpose was to return the world to the Pope's Dark Ages with an economically socialist world police state. – Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halcyon Unified Services, p. 464, 465.

And it was Edward M. House, under the watchful eye of Jacob Schiff, who was under the watchful eye of the HEAD of this international conspiracy {the House of Rothschild of London and Paris}, that established in 1921 what their earlier comrades established, to overthrow the governments of France and Russia. Called the Jacobin Clubs in France in the 18th century, this aristocratic revolutionary movement today in America is called THE COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS, INC. and its offshoot is the TRILATERAL COMMISSION. The Council on Foreign Relations, Inc. is the political side of the Illuminati today. They have produced Congressmen, Senators and even Presidents, that they have used Senators and even Presidents, that they have used to pass laws that have little by little led America into becoming a Socialist country... Now when the Conspirators saw that their One World Government couldn't be achieved using the name The League of Nations, Col. House, under the direction of Jacob Schiff, formed an aristocratic secret organization called the Council on Foreign Relations, Inc. This private Secret Society is to produce enough Congressmen, Senators, and Statesmen, etc. so the next attempt to incorporate the US into a One World Government will not fail, because of the voting power they hope to have. But reader, remember, this is not a United States Government run establishment. – William Sutton, The New Age Movement and the Illuminati 666, The Institute of Religious Knowledge, pp. 240-242.

Phelps showed that the Jesuits created the Council on Foreign Relations. Therefore, the Council on Foreign Relations is yet another front organization of the Jesuit Order. The following chart shows the various Jesuit front organizations and the people in control of them.

The Jesuits:
*The Illuminati – Adam Weishaupt

*House of Rothschild –
Jacob Schiff; J.P. Morgan; Rockefellers

*Communism –
Lenin; Stalin; Mao Tse Tung

*Council on Foreign Relations –
Edward Mandel House; J.P. Morgan; Rockefellers

The Council on Foreign Relations is extremely powerful and has been very effective in carrying out the subversive goals of the Jesuits. This organization is so secretive that most people are not aware of their existence. The Council on Foreign Relations was instrumental in coercing America into the United Nations after World War II. Following the war, there was a concentrated barrage of propaganda from the news media to convince the people of America that the only way to have peace was to join the United Nations. Today, America is a member of this international governing body. Incidentally, instead of having the United Nations in Europe as they did with the League of Nations, they even managed to house the United Nations in New York City so that it would be a greater malicious influence in this country. Also, the United Nations charter is very similar to communist Russia's constitution. The charter guarantees absolutely no freedoms, although the wording sounds as if it does.

Instead of its headquarters being located in Geneva, Switzerland, this time the conspirators place it in New York City. Who donated the money to buy the land and the building materials to unite the nations? It was John D. Rockefeller who sank 18.5 million as a gift to the UN, to buy 18 acres of land along the East River in New York, where it is located today. – The World Book Encyclopedia, Volume 20, page 40.

At least FORTY-SEVEN C.F.R [Council on Foreign Relations, Inc.} members were among the American delegates to the founding of the United Nations in San Francisco in 1945. Members of the CFR group included Harold Stassen, John J. McCloy, Owen Lattimore {called by the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee a 'conscious articulate instrument of the Soviet conspiracy'}, Alger Hiss {Communist spy}, Philip Jessup, Harry Dexter White {Communist spy}, Philip Jessup, Harry Dexter White {Communist agent}, Nelson Rockefeller, John Foster Dulles, John Carter Vincent {security risk}, and Dean Acheson. – Gary Allen, None Dare Call It Conspiracy, Concord Press, p. 86.

For many years, David Rockefeller was the Chairman of the Board of this organization. All of these men, claiming to be loyal to the American people and its constitution, made sure that America joined this organization, whose one great intention was to destroy the sovereignty of America and all other nations. These men all held positions of influence and power in the American government; all of them were considered to be seeking America's best, when in reality, they were all members of the CFR, an organization created by Jesuit agents with the sole intent of destroying America. This was their first great goal and it succeeded only too well. Consider some of their methods for subverting America.

In order to bring America into this conspiratorial body, the CFR had to maintain the utmost secrecy. The public was not aware of the existence of the CFR.

To guard against exposure, and to mold public opinion, as far back as 1915 the powerful men in America working in world government set out to control the news media. They accomplished this by employing 12 leading men in the newspaper field to find out what was necessary to control the general policy of the daily press throughout the country. It was decided that this could be accomplished by purchasing control of 25 of the greatest papers. Thus, while the Council on Foreign Relations was working to remake the world, for the first 35 years of its existence, no feature article about it appeared in the news media. It was not until the 1960s that this near total control of the media began to be circumvented.

For decades many top officials of the United States Government have been members of the Council on Foreign Relations. This includes many presidents, fourteen secretaries of state, fourteen treasury secretaries, eleven defense secretaries, and scores of other federal department heads. – Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications Publishers, p. 91.

Most Americans have never heard of the Council on Foreign Relations. Although unseen and unknown, it has exerted tremendous power and control over the decision making process in America throughout most of the 20th century. Some of the media organizations that show up repeatedly as being run and controlled by CFR members include NBC, CBS, New York Times, Washington Post, Des Moines Register, Los Angeles Times, Time magazine, Newsweek, Fortune, Business Week, U.S. News and World Report, the news services such as Associated Press, and many of the large, influential television stations. At least, 170 journalists are controlled by the CFR. The influence of these media giants on public opinion is phenomenal, and it is done in such a subtle way that the people are not aware that they are being conditioned what to think. The people generally believe that they are independent thinkers.

John Swinton, Chief of Staff for the New York Times, who was considered to be the dean of his profession, made a most revealing statement in 1953. At a New York Press Club dinner, Swinton declared,

There is no such thing, at this date of the world's history, in America, as an independent press. You know it, and I know it. There is not one of you who dares to write your honest opinions, and if you did, you know beforehand that it would never appear in print. I am paid weekly for keeping my honest opinion out of the paper I am connected with. Others of you are paid similar salaries for similar things, and any of you who would be so foolish as to write honest opinions would be out on the streets looking for another job. If I allowed my honest opinions to appear in one issue of my newspaper, before twenty-four hours my occupation would be gone. The business of the journalists is to destroy the truth; to lie outright; to pervert; to vilify; to fawn at the feet of mammon, and to sell his country and his race for his daily bread. You know it, and I know it and what folly is this toasting an independent press? We are the tools and vassals of rich men behind the scenes. We are the jumping jacks; they pull the strings and we dance. Our talents, our possibilities and our lives are all the property of other men. We are intellectual prostitutes. – Multiple contributors, A U.S. Police Action: Operation Vampire Killer, The American Citizens and Laumen Association, pp. 18,19.

Swinton was honest enough to admit that he and most other journalists are told to write the things that are in harmony with the plans and purposes of the CFR. Ultimately, the world's wealthy; like the Rothschilds, Rockefellers, and Morgans, who founded and run the CFR, are under the control of the black pope, the Jesuit General. The Jesuits are using the media to prepare the world to receive the pope as the great man of peace, to receive the pope as the ruler of the world from Jerusalem, to accept the destruction of the U.S. Constitution, and to bring the world back to the feudalism of the Dark Ages.

You can see that most of what we are told about the topics and situations today are complete lies. We were emphatically told by the CFR and the Jesuit controlled politicians that the North American Free Trade Agreement, NAFTA, was in the best interests of the American people, Instead, NAFTA has destroyed thousands of middle class jobs in America and moved those jobs to Mexico and Red China. NAFTA is devastating the industrial manufacturing base in the United States. We have seen that the Jesuits are behind the effort to destroy the middle class in America and return to the structure that existed during the Dark Ages. The Jesuits want to undo everything that Protestantism and freedom has done for America, and NAFTA is part of that process.

The Jesuit run CFR has accomplished two of its goals by coercing America in the United Nations and gaining control of mass media. Another goal of the CFR was to gain control over many U.S. corporations that would help in furthering ongoing and future projects. The following are just a few of the corporations that are controlled by the CFR and the Jesuits: Ford Motor Company, Boeing Corp., Pepsi-Cola, Heinz Co., Lockheed-

Martin, Time-Warner, and Chevron. This very abbreviated list of companies makes it clear that powerful forces are being applied through the CFR to destroy America and its Constitution. Monies from these corporations and the Federal Reserve have been used to finance the Bolshevik Revolution, the rise of Adolf Hitler and the restoration of Germany, the taking over of Cuba by Fidel Castro, and the taking over of China by Mao Tse Tung, as well as the destruction of free government in Nicaragua.

President Truman sent his Secretary of State, George Marshall, to China to pressure Chiang to form a coalition government with Mao's Communists. Marshall even wanted to send U.S. officers to train Communist guerillas. This plan was blocked by Congress. Marshall later placed an embargo on military aid to the Nationalists. Although Congress appropriated $125 million for military aid to Chiang, the Truman administration ran such interference that only a small portion of it ever reached Chiang and it proved to be too little and too late. Chiang wrote in his diary that Marshall continues to try to accommodate the Communists in every possible way and force us to make concessions. He doesn't seem to care whether China survives or perishes. This indeed is a most painful situation.' Marshall was a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. – Dee Zahner, The Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications Publishers, p. 125.

Why did Harry Truman and George Marshall support the Communists butchers? Communist ideology is totally opposite to the American Republic established by the Constitution. Harry Truman and George Marshall were sympathetic with Mao Tse Tung because they were controlled by the same masters, the Jesuits of Rome, working through their front organization, the CFR.

The following quote shows one more example of how the Jesuits use the CFR-pro Communist fronts operating in America to destroy free governments in other countries.

Nicaragua was a model for Latin American countries with freedom of the press, freedom of religion, private ownership of property, a free market economy, and open borders. Of all the Latin American countries, Nicaragua was among the top in human rights and living standards. Its political system was fashioned after the United States with a constitution and an electoral system based on two parties. Anyone over the age 18 could vote... The events that were to change Nicaragua from a free country to a slave state began one week after the inauguration of James Earl Carter as President of the United States in January 1977.... High officials in the State Department who went along with Carter's destruction of Nicaragua were: Secretary of State and CFR member Cyrus Vance, Deputy Secretary of state and CFR member Warren Christopher, Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights and CFR member Patricia Derian, and Ambassador to Nicaragua Lawrence Pezzulo also a member of the CFR. Jimmy Carter also became a CFR member after he left the White House.

Ignoring the murder of millions by the Communists, Communists that the CFR had put into power, the battle cry against Somoza was 'human rights.' A greater example of hypocrisy would be hard to find in the annals of history.

The Scenario against Somoza was played out as usual, beginning with a massive smear campaign by the CFR-controlled media in the United States to condition the American people to accept a Communist take over of Nicaragua. – Dee Zahner, the Secret Side of History, LTAA Communications Publishers, pp. 131-133.

Using the CFR, the Jesuits placed their agents in high places in the U.S. government to destroy the freedom loving Nicaraguan people and to place in power the Communist-Jesuit, Daniel Ortega. It was from Nicaragua that Jesuit agents and CFR members, Bill Clinton and George Bush Sr., made millions of dollars through the drugs that were brought from Nicaragua to America. These Jesuit-CFR agents in the U.S. government have been working around the world destroying freedom loving republics and replacing them with Communistic regimes that are in harmony with the goals of the Jesuits to restore temporal dominion to the pope.

The final goal of the CFR front organization of the Jesuits was to place Jesuit agents into high places in the American government. That this goal has been accomplished is obvious.

The CFR, which was initially dominated by J.P. Morgan and later by the Rockefellers, is the most powerful group in America today. It is even more powerful than the federal government, because almost all of the key positions in government are held by its members. In other words, it is the United States government. – G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, p. 283, emphasis supplied.

Thus, the CFR-Jesuits run the United States today! How can it be anything else since we are continually bombarded by propaganda from the controlled press and politicians? For example, they try to convince Americans to exchange their constitutional freedoms for security, as per the USA Patriot Act? How can it be anything else when continual attempts are made to support governments around the world that are anti-constitutional oligarchies? How can it be anything else when attempts are made to destroy the middle class in America?

Here are a few of the American officials who have sold their souls and America to ruin. These are the Benedict Arnolds of the 20th and 21th century. This is not a complete list by any means.

PRESIDENTS:
Dwight D. Eisenhower, Jimmy Carter, George Bush Sr., William Clinton, George Bush Jr.

CONGRESSMEN:
Newt Gingrich, Richard Gephardt, John Kerry, Joseph Lieberman, Thomas Foley, John Chafee

SUPREME COURT JUSTICES:
Sandra Day, O'Conner, Ruth Ginsburg, Steven Breyer

OTHERS:
Alan Greenspan, Hubert Humphrey, George McGovern, Henry Kissinger, Tom Brokaw, Colin Powell, Dick Cheney
==========

What are the ramifications of having Americans in these high positions, working for a foreign power, who wants to destroy this nation and everything for which it stands? They have almost accomplished the destruction of the United States.

During elections, we are given a list of candidates for which to vote. The Jesuits make sure that all these candidates are either Jesuits of sympathizers. Actually, the Jesuits control both major political parties in this country. In other words, no matter who gets into office, the CFR-Jesuits will carry out their policy through their candidates, and it makes no difference which party the candidate chooses of which candidate is elected. This means that elections are a huge scam that is practiced on the American people in each election! From Barry Goldwater's book, we read,

When a new President comes on board, there is a great turnover in personnel, but no change in policy. Example: During the Nixon [A Republican] years Henry Kissinger, CFR member and Nelson Rockefeller's protégé, was in charge of foreign policy. When Jimmy Carter [A Democrat] was elected, Kissinger was replaced by Zbigniew Brzezinski, CFR member and David Rockefeller's protégé. – Barry Goldwater, With No Apologies, William Morrow & Company, p. 279.

The CFR-Jesuits have gained such control of America that their policy will be put into effect regardless of who is in office!

The Nixon-Carter situation is a perfect example. Both men are/were CFR members (Nixon passed away). After Watergate and Nixon back in the early 70's, America was fed up with corruption in government. Therefore, CFR member Nixon was replaced by CFR member Gerald Ford, and corruption in government continued as before. After Ford, another insider, with the title, born-again and Bible-believing, was picked to continue the corruption, CFR member Jimmy Carter. Always new people, but no change in policy. The CFR-Jesuits still run the show!

=====
The CFR-Jesuits have been doing the same thing for the past several years. Many Americans were sickened by the Democrat, CFR, lying, immoral Bill Clinton. Next, they put into office a Republican CFR, moral, upstanding, born-again George Bush. Both men are controlled by the same people, the Jesuits, and are carrying out the policy of the Jesuits. What a scam! To the unsuspecting American public, it all looks like business as usual.

Chapter 7
Vietnam: Why Did We Go?
The Tragedy of America's horrible experience in Vietnam has left us with many bitter memories. Many suffer terrible bouts of depression over their experiences in Vietnam. After 40 years, many cannot hold down jobs because of the psychological trauma they experienced. The Vietnam wall in Washington, D.C. is a grim reminder that 58,000 Americans were killed in that totally unnecessary war. Why did we go?

The word that caused so much hard feelings, disgust and hatred. Vietnam. Some call it a disgrace, some a police action. When soldiers came back battered, they were looked down upon, humiliated. The U.S. lost face in the sight of all the world. Why bring up the subject again? Because Vietnam was actually a religious war... Avro Manhattan, world authority on Vatican politics, has blown the cover on the real reason our boys suffered and died in Vietnam. He traces their death to the Vatican's passionate desire to make Asia Roman Catholic. Vatican agents hatched and plotted the Vietnam War. American soldiers were serving the Vatican in their desperate struggle to survive the jungles, the hell of warfare, pain death and destruction. It was all engineered by the whore and her Jesuits. – Avro Manhattan, Vietnam: why did we go? Chick Publications, publisher's foreward.

has been described with millions of written and spoken words. Yet, nothing has been said about one of the most significant forces which contributed to its promotion, namely, the role played by religion, which in this case, means the part played by the Catholic Church, and by her diplomatic counterpart, the Vatican.

Their active participation is not mere speculation. It is an historical fact as concrete as the presence of the U.S., or the massive guerilla resistance of Asian communism. The activities of the last two have been scrutinized by thousands of books, but the former has never been assessed, not even in a summarized form.

The Catholic Church must be considered as a main promoter in the origin, escalation and prosecution of the Vietnamese conflict. From the very beginning this religious motivation helped set in motion the avalanche that was to cause endless agonies in the Asiatic and American continents...

The tragedy of Vietnam will go down in history as one of the most pernicious deeds of the contemporary alliance between politics and organized religion. -- ibid. p. 13.

Avro Manhattan was a world-renowned authority on the Roman Catholic Church and the almost total control they have of politics throughout the world. He was a writer for the British Broadcasting Corporation. He has laid the blame for the Vietnam War directly at the feet of the Jesuits and the papacy.

Let us look at some background information for the Vietnam War. Bo Dai, a French puppet, controlled all of Vietnam. By the early 1940s, a strong nationalism was developing throughout Vietnam. The Vietnamese wanted their country back. They wanted to get rid of the French and have total independence from all outside forces. By 1945, the freedom fighters, who were trying to drive this French puppet out of Vietnam, controlled a large part of the country. Unfortunately, the supposed freedom fighters were the Viet Minh, a very brutal communist front for Chinese and Russian communism. At the end of 1945, Bo Dai resigned, and all Vietnam managed to do was trade French control for Communist control. The Viet Minh was a group that was headed by Ho Chi Minh. Since Communism was a creation of the Jesuits, the Catholic Church felt right at home with the rule of Ho Chi Minh. However, the Catholics in Vietnam were in a minority because the religion of Buddhism held a strong majority.

As Ho Chi Minh gained control of the entire area of North Vietnam, he appointed many Roman Catholics to key positions in his government. When World War II finally ended, however, France tried to step back into Vietnam again, specifically into South Vietnam. As France tried to come back into the picture after World War II, war broke out between the Ho Chi Minh controlled North Vietnamese, and the French controlled South Vietnamese.

By 1950, Harry Truman, United States president, declared that America would finance the French in fighting the North Vietnamese. By 1954, nine countries met in Geneva, Switzerland to try to resolve the conflict. They passed an agreement stating that in two years, in 1956, general elections would be held over all of Vietnam, and whoever was elected would control the country. Neither the United States nor Bao Dai signed this agreement. Ho Chi Minh was very popular. If general elections were held, Ho Chi Minh would win. In fact, Dwight Eisenhower, United States president from 1952 to 1960, made a statement in which he said, “If we hold elections in Vietnam, Ho Chi Minh would get 80% of the vote.” The monipulators in the American government realized that

Ho Chi Minh would take over the country if elections were held. This would mean communist control of all of Vietnam. It would also mean the Buddhism would remain the most powerful religion.

The elections were never held. The agreement to hold elections that was made in Geneva was simply ignored. Who did not want the elections to take place and why? Why were the elections stopped?

The military and above all the Catholic lobbyists in Washington set to work, determined to persuade the United States government to prevent the election. Pope Pius XII gave full support to their efforts. Cardinal Spellman, the Washington-Vatican go-between, was the principal spokesman from both. The policy of Pope Pius XII and John Foster Dulles eventually was accepted, and implemented, notwithstanding widespread misgivings in the U.S. and in Europe. – Avro Manhattan, Vietnam: Why did we go? Chick Publications, p. 17.

Truman, Eisenhower, and John Foster Dulles, all members of the Jesuit controlled CFR, pushed the policy of the papacy in spite of the fact that all Vietnam looked upon Ho Chi Minh as an independent leader, and they wanted to have was their own autonomous government. The Catholics wanted to be the dominant religion in Vietnam and eventually in Southeast Asia. Thus, the Buddhists had to be subdued. In the mid 1950s it was becoming painfully evident who was dictating Vietnam policy from Washington. Most of the leaders who love the Constitution and the American republic were forced out, and Jesuits were put in place to carry out the policies of the papacy!

The fact of the matter is that the leaders in Washington such as John Foster Dulles, the Secretary of State, and the powerful Catholic lobbyists, greatly influenced the decision-making process of the United States.

To the Vatican, Vietnam was another exercise for the planting of Catholic authoritarianism in an alien land against the wishes of the majority of the population. The Vatican is a master at using political and military opportunities to further its own religious policies, which ultimately means the expansion of the Catholic Church, which it represents. – ibid. p. 122.

While the papacy and the Jesuit controlled CFR members in America refused to allow free elections, they already had a simple plan ready as an alternative.

It [the Jesuit's plan] was divided into three principal sub sections: the prevention of the elections, the setting up of a man who could rule with an iron gist, and the swift Catholicization of South Vietnam.

One of the first moves was the selection of a man fit for the task. This was ready at hand. His name was Ngo Dinh Diem. Diem had been carefully groomed by the Catholic establishment, was an ardently religious person... and a ruthless religious and political dogmatist...

Diem was a genuine believer, considered the Catholic religion the only true religion, and had dedicated his life to its maintenance and propagation. He was so religious from his earliest childhood, that at one time, he wanted to become a Catholic priest, indeed a monk. Curiously enough, he did not enter the priesthood because the life of a priest was too soft. At fifteen he spent some time in a monastery. He prayed two whole hours every day and attended mass regularly...

Diem had convinced himself that he had been chosen by God to fulfill a definite task, and that a day would come when he would be ready to carry out his mission. – ibid. pp. 55, 57.

President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam was a practicing Catholic who ruled South Vietnam with an iron fist. He was a genuine believer in the evil of communism and the uniqueness of the Catholic Church. He had originally been 'planted' into the presidency by Cardinal Spellman and Pope Pius XII. He transformed the presidency into a virtual Catholic dictatorship, ruthlessly crushing his religious and political opponents. Buddhist monks committed suicide by fire, burning themselves alive in protest against his religious persecutions. His discriminatory persecution of non-Catholics, particularly Buddhists, caused the disruption of the government and mass desertions in the army. – ibid. p. 56.

Manhattan has thoroughly exposed Diem and the Catholics in Vietnam. What specifically did Diem do to create Catholic tyranny in South Vietnam?

The next year, October 26, 1956, he promulgated a new Constitution. Imitating Mussolini, Hitler and also Ante Pavelich of Catholic Croatia... he inserted an article, Article 98, which gave him full dictatorial powers. During the first legislative term, the president (that is Diem) may decree a temporary suspension of ... (there followed almost all the civil liberties of the nation) to meet the legitimate demands of public security, etc. – ibid. p. 77.

Have we heard that recently? This mistaken idea of giving up civil liberties in order to be secure is becoming very popular. After the destruction of New York's Twin Towers in 2001, and after the bombing at Oklahoma City in 1995, the cry that was made by Bill Clinton in 1995 and by George Bush in 2001 has been this: in order for there to be security in America, we need to give up some of our liberties. Both presidents have passed laws and issued executive orders, Clinton in 1995 and Bush in 2001. Clinton's was the Omnibus Anti terrorism Bill. George Bush's was the USA Patriot Act, and both of them stated exactly what Diem said. Why? Because Diem, Clinton, and Bush are being directed to do what they do by the same power, the Jesuits of the Catholic Church.

The article [Article 98 from the previous quote.] should have expired in April, 1961, but it was maintained indefinitely. But even more dangerously ominous was a decree that Diem had issued before that. In January, 1956, he had already promulgated a personal presidential order, which was already portending the shape of things to come. The Order 46, read as follows: 'Individuals considered dangerous to the national defense and common security may be confined by executive order to a concentration camp. – ibid. p. 77, 79.

An obvious word was left out of that order: terrorism. That word had not yet become popular in 1956. Today he would probably have said, "Anyone suspected of being a terrorist and a threat to the national defense and common security may be confined by executive order to a concentration camp?" We could, of course, not only be talking about Diem, but also about the current President of the United States.

Diem took the teaching of these popes literally. For instance, he firmly held,... that it is an error to believe that: the church is not a true and perfect society. For the Church to be perfect, the state must be integrated with her so that the two become as one, because quoting again Pius IX 'it is an error to believe that: the church ought to be separated from the State and the State from the church' a principle, which went totally against the Constitution of the U.S., his sponsor. – ibid. p. 82, 83.

going directly contrary to the principles of our Constitution? The politicians in the United States were directly manipulating things in Vietnam. Eisenhower was telling Diem what he must do. The Catholic Church through American officials such as Eisenhower and Dulles was covertly manipulating things in Vietnam. The Catholic Church and Cardinal Spellman were the real problems in Vietnam.

Elements preventing such union [union of church and state], therefore, had to be eliminated. This meant the Protestants, at that time numbering about 50,000, mostly Baptists and Seventh Day Adventists. Diem had planned to eliminate them chiefly via legislation by prohibiting their missions, closing their schools, and refusing licenses to preach, or have religious meetings. This he would have done legally in accordance with the future concordat to be signed with the Vatican, modeled upon that of Franco's Spain. Such anti-Protestant legislation would have been enforced once the war was over and a Catholic state had been firmly established. – ibid. p. 83.

Diem's policies brought immediate persecution.

The jails were soon bursting with prisoners. The mass arrests became so numerous that finally it was necessary to open detention camps followed by additional ones euphemistically called internment camps...

There followed massacres within and outside such detention sites, like those which took place at Mocay. Thanhphu, Soctrang, Cangiuoc, Dailoc, Duyxuyen, to mention only a few. Religious sects and racial minorities were persecuted, arrested and whenever possible eliminated. To save themselves from arrest of even death many detainees had to accept the religion, language and customs of the new South Vietnam, as did the minority of Chinese and Khmer, whose schools were closed down. Minor groups were exterminated or accepted the Catholic Church to save their lives. –ibid. p. 81.

Are we reading what happened in Vietnam of the Dark Ages? Do we recognize that the same power that sought to annihilate all opposition to the papacy during the Dark Ages is in virtual control in America today? The same detention facilities, internment camps, etc. that Diem set up in Vietnam are already in place for when similar controls are instituted in the United States.

Blatant violations of civil liberties, of personal freedom, multiplied by the thousands. Dissenters, of all ages and political or religious persuasion, were hauled off to jail or to concentration camps. To better check the dissatisfied, every peasant was compelled to carry an identification card. -- ibid. p. 88.

Diem was convinced that he had been raised up by God to force the Catholic religion down the throats of every person in South Vietnam. And if that succeeded in South Vietnam, Diem would then take his policies into the North and throughout all Asia. Many opposed him, especially the Buddhists. Several pictures in Manhattan's book show Buddhist monks at Diem's Palace in Saigon in 1962, and prior to that, 1956 and 1957. The Buddhists realized what was going on, and they tried to stop it by reasoning with Diem.

They first went to Diem and tried to work with him to help him understand their plight. That didn't work, and arrests followed. Diem's policies resulted in riots, demonstrations, and severe persecution. Catholic schools were attacked. Finally, some of the Buddhist priests decided that they would make the ultimate sacrifice. They would get a large gathering together, and in the center of this large group they would pour gasoline over their bodies and ignite themselves. That is called self-immolation. Many pictures were taken of Buddhist monks and priests that immolated themselves in protest to what Diem was doing in South Vietnam.

For people to be driven to such an extent in their protest that they would take their own lives, shows the depths of anger and frustration these faithful Buddhist priests were experiencing under the ruthless, Catholic puppet, Diem!

The Catholic State machinery of suppression became so overpowering and ruthless that even the U.S. had to protest, privately and officially, the bear faced religious character of Diem's Catholic policy. The sel-immolation of Buddhist monks and nuns helped to revive the religiosity of millions of Buddhists, who became determined to resist the unjust laws of the Diem government. The Catholic Church never expressed and sorrow or admiration for these Buddhist martyrs. -- p. 117.

More Buddhist demonstrations followed, all in vain. Finally, an elderly Buddhist monk, Superior Thich Quang Duc, sent a message to President Diem. The message: enforce a policy of religious equality." Thereupon, having calmly sat down in a main street of Saigon, poured gasoline on himself and burned himself to death. It was June 2, 1963. The self-immolation caused enormous reaction within and outside South Vietnam. The world at large could not understand what was going on, the media having knowingly or unknowingly given muddled and contradictory reports about the true state of affairs. -- ibid. p. 113.

We see that the CFR-Jesuit controlled media was lying to Americans about the true situation in Vietnam. They were not telling Americans that America was funding a war in Vietnam to set up a ruthless Catholic dictator, who was trying to impose Catholicism on the country.

In spite of all the self-immolations of Buddhist priests, Diem did not change his policy in the least. This policy continued for several more months through October of 1963.

It is to the credit of many Americans in the civil and military administrations, that they expressed their horror at what they were witnessing with their own eyes. Most of them, although confused as to the basic issues of the religious-political conflict, nevertheless were highly shocked at the ruthlessness of the Diem regime. At Washington, the feelings were no less deep. There were recriminations and criticism. The South Vietnam religious persecutions were threatening the domestic peace within the U.S. itself. Besides, the rest of the world was beginning to take notice of the events by openly asking awkward questions as to the real objectives of the U.S. presence in Southeast Asia. -- ibid. p. 115.

The man in the White House, John Kennedy, who had been instrumental in bringing Diem to power, and like Diem, a roman Catholic, began to assert his authority. Kennedy saw the deplorable situation and realized that decisions had to be made. If Kennedy acted against the orders of his masters, the Jesuits, there would be definite consequences, but he went ahead and acted anyway.

Finally the U.S. issued a declaration, '...it appears that the government... of Vietnam, has instituted serious repressive measures against the Vietnamese Buddhist leaders... The U.S. deplores repressive actions of this nature.'

Not withstanding this, and the worldwide publicity, the media of America remained strangely silent about the whole issue. When they were forced to report the news of the religious persecutions of the Buddhists by the Catholic Diem, either they gave them the smallest coverage, or minimized the whole issue when not slanting the news altogether. -- ibid. p. 115.

John Kennedy was the only President in the 20th century who bucked the Jesuit Order, and he paid the ultimate price for doing what was right. He not only verbally chided South Vietnam and Diem, but he took definite action.

Subsidies to the Vietnam Special Forces were suspended. Secret directives were given to various branches closely connected with the inner links between the U.S. and the Diem regime. Finally, on October 4th, 1963, John Richardson, the head of the CIA in Vietnam, was abruptly dismissed and recalled to Washington. -- ibid. p. 128.

President Kennedy began a slow, but steady withdrawal of aid from Diem. Shortly thereafter Diem and his brother were slain on November 3, 1963.

Another Catholic leader died a short time after Diem. On November 22, 1963, John Kennedy was shot by multiple shooters in Dealey Plaza, Dallas, Texas. Kennedy was shot by Jesuit agents because he dared to do the right thing in Vietnam.

Memorandum for the President. Subject: report of McNamara-Taylor mission to South Vietnam. With this report in hand, President Kennedy had what he wanted. it contained the essence of decisions he had to make. He had to get reelected to finished programs set in motion during his first term. He had to get Americans out of Vietnam.... On November 22, 1963, the government of United States was taken over by this superpower group that wanted an escalation of the warfare in Indochina and a continuing military buildup for generations to come. -- Fletcher Prouty, JFK, the CIA, Vietnam and the Plot to Assassinate John F. Kennedy, Carol Publishing Group, pp. 264, 257.

As Kennedy began to pull Americans out of Vietnam, the superpower group was greatly angered. The plotted Kennedy's assassination, and immediately after Kennedy died, the U.S. re-escalated the awful war in Southeast Asia. It continued for another 10 years at enormous cost! Who was the superpower group that so desperately wanted America to remain in Vietnam? From the evidence we have considered, this could only be the papacy.

At 8:30 a.m., Saturday, the 23rd of November, 1963, the limousine carrying CIA director John McCone pulled into the White House.... He was also there to transact one piece of business prior to becoming involved in all the details entailed in a presidential transition, and the signing of National Security Memorandum 278, a classified document which immediately reversed John Kennedy's decision to withdraw from the war in Vietnam. The effect of memorandum 278 would give the Central Intelligence Agency carte blanche to proceed with a full-scale war in the Far East... -- Robert Morrow, First Hand Knowledge, Shapolsky Publishers, pp. 249.

This war eventually involved over half a million Americans in a life-and-death struggle without the Constitutional requirement of congressional approval. So President Kennedy began pulling troops from South Vietnam. The Catholic church strongly objected to this, and President Kennedy was gunned down. The very next day, Memorandum 278 was signed, which reversed Kennedy's decision to deescalate the war in South Vietnam.

Vietnam was a Jesuit war designed to create a Catholic superpower in Southeast Asia. The only way this could occur was by the bitter persecution of a religious giant already in the area, the Buddhists. Ngo Dinh Diem, a tyrannical Catholic dictator, was put into power. The Jesuit controlled American press said almost nothing about the terrible religious persecutions taking place in Southeast Asia. John Kennedy began pulling America out of Vietnam but was gunned down by Jesuit assassins before he could accomplish much, and the no-win war went on for another 10 years, ending in ignominious defeat for America. What remains is a winding wall in Washington, D.C., listing 58,000 Americans that lost their lives there and millions of others not listed who have lived retarded lives as a result of wounds and afflictions received in this religious war.

Jesuit wars to destroy religious enemies continue today. Next we will look at the Middle East and why do so many die near the city of peace, Jerusalem?

Chapter 8
Won't They Ever Stop Fighting?
During the last two generations, there has been continual conflict in the Middle East. The six-day Israeli-Egyptian war of 1967, and the Yom Kippur Arab-Israeli war of 1973 are more prominent that the others. The bombing, bloodshed, crying, and the misery of war never seem to stop. Why do they continue fighting? What is the purpose of continuing this senseless killing?

The land of Israel lies at the center of an area that is completely hostile to it. Israel is of great religious and historical significance because the Messiah, Jesus Christ, walked the land of Israel for three and a half years of public ministry.

Alberto Rivera was a Jesuit who escaped the order and revealed a tremendous amount of information about them. He has written extensively about the Jesuits and their operation in the Middle East. The Jesuits greatly maligned him because of the information he provided. This information cost him dearly. He died from poison administered by a Jesuit assassin. All of Alberto's information has proven to be true.

A Jesuit cardinal named Augustine Bea showed us how desperately the Roman Catholics wanted Jerusalem at the end of the third century. Because of its religious history and its strategic location, the Holy City was considered a priceless treasure. A scheme had to be developed to make Jerusalem a roman Catholic city.

The great untapped source of manpower that could do this job was the children of Ishmael. The poor Arabs fell victim to one of the most clever plans ever devised by the powers of darkness....

The Vatican desperately wanted Jerusalem because of its religious significance, but was blocked by the Jews. Another problem was the true Christians in North Africa preaching the gospel. Roman Catholicism was growing in power and would not tolerate any opposition. Somehow the Vatican had to create a weapon to eliminate both the Jews and the true Christian believers who refused to accept Roman Catholicism. Looking to North Africa, they saw the multitudes of Arabs as a source of manpower to do their dirty work....

The Vatican wanted to create a messiah for the Arabs, someone they could raise up as a great leader, a man with charisma who they could train, and eventually unite all the non-Catholic Arabs behind him... creating a mighty army that would ultimately capture Jerusalem for the pope. -- Jack Chick, The Prophet, Alberto part 6, Chick Publications, pp. 5, 18.

Here we see that the Catholic Church desperately wanted control of Jerusalem because of its location and its great religious significance. The wanted to use the Arabs to grind the Jews and Christians into the dust so they could take over Jerusalem. The Vatican also invented a ‘messiah’ figure from among the Arabs around whom the Arab world would unite.

A wealthy Arabian lady, who was a faithful follower of the pope, played a tremendous part in this drama. She was a widow named Khadijah.... Her job was to find a brilliant young man who could be used by the Vatican to create a new religion and become the messiah for the children of Ishmael.

She soon found young Muhammad, and they were married.... Under orders from the Vatican, Roman Catholic Arabs across North Africa began spreading the story of a great one... who was about to rise up among the people and be chosen one of their god. -- ibid. pp. 19,20.

Islam and the rise of Muhammad was an invention of the Catholic Church. The purpose for this new religion was the destruction of Jews and the followers of Christ in order to gain the Middle East, and especially Jerusalem for the pope.

By the time Muhammad died, the religion of Islam was exploding. The nomadic Arab tribes were joining forces in the name of Allah and his prophet, Muhammad. In their 'holy book, the Koran, Jesus is regarded as only a prophet. If the pope was His representative on earth, then he also must be a prophet of God... which caused the followers of Muhammad to fear and respect the pope as another 'holy man.' The pope moved quickly, and issued bulls granting the Arab generals permission to invade and conquer the nations of North Africa. The Vatican helped to finance the building of these massive Islamic armies in exchange for three special favors:

1. Eliminate the Jews and Christian [which they call infidels].
2. Protect the Augustinian monks and Roman Catholics.
3. Conquer Jerusalem for 'his holiness' in the Vatican.

As time passed, the power of Islam became tremendous.... Jews and Christians were slaughtered, and Jerusalem fell into their hands.... It was time for the pay-off.... The pope asked for Jerusalem. But by now, the Arab generals felt the exhilaration of victory everywhere they went. They felt nothing could stand in their way. The pope's carefully laid plans began to backfire, and then crumbled before his eyes. -- ibid. pp. 21, 22.

The pope's plans failed miserably. Instead of giving Jerusalem to the pope, the Moslems built their sacred building, Dome of the Rock, in Jerusalem on the very site of the old Jewish temple, thus making Jerusalem the second most holy place, nest to Mecca, in the whole Islamic world. There was no way that the victorious and powerful Arab armies would give Jerusalem to the pope. Now the Arab leaders turned to new lands to conquer.

The Muslim general were determined to conquer the world for Allah... so they turned their eyes towards Europe. The Islamic ambassadors approached 'His Holiness' in the Vatican and asked for papal bulls to give them permission to invade European countries. The Vatican was outraged. War was inevitable. Temporal power and control of the world was considered the basic right of the pope. He wouldn't think of sharing it with what he considered heathens. The pope raised up his armies and called them crusades to hold back the children of Ishmael from grabbing Catholic Europe. The wars continued for centuries... and Jerusalem slipped out of the pope's grasp. -- ibid. p. 23, emphasis supplied.

The pope said no, and wars ensued. These wars, called crusades, went on for centuries throughout Europe and the Middle East. The papacy wanted, not only to keep the Arabs out of Europe, but also to wrench Jerusalem out of the hands of the Arabs. Is it possible that the statement made by George Bush on September 17, 2001, had any historical reference? Bush declared that America was fighting a crusade against terrorism. Is it possible that the president realized that one of the key objectives in this current war on terrorism is to regain Jerusalem for the pope? In light of Bush's track record of obedience to Rome, it should be obvious!

U.S. News and World Report of April 8, 2002 has cover title that reads, "The Crusades.... The Truth About the Epic clash Between Christianity and Islam." The article shows that Catholicism and Islam clashed in the crusades during the Dark Ages. In this issue, when they refer to 'Christianity' they are referring to Catholicism. This issue has a lengthy article that covers the crusades.

It was the fall of 1187, and an emissary from the besieged city of Jerusalem had come to beg Saladin, the sultan of Egypt, for mercy. After barely four days of assaults, the Christian defenders saw that Saladin had them hopelessly outmatched. Waiting in his tent outside the city's walls, the Muslim ruler knew both sides had a lot riding on the outcome of this battle.

For the city's defenders, the prospect of Saladin's wrath loomed. The last time Jerusalem was sacked by an invading army -- a Christian one -- its narrow streets ran red with blood. For Saladin, his honor depended on capturing Jerusalem. All summer his armies had battled their way north through the Christian fiefs like an angry desert wind, with only one goal: recapturing the holy city that had been occupied by European invaders for 88 years. -- The First Holy War, U.S. News And World Report, April 8, 2002, p. 36, emphasis supplied.

For nearly three centuries, the Catholic armies fought the Muslim armies for control of Jerusalem, the so-called city of peace. The Catholic armies wanted to give it to the pope as a gift because the pope wanted to rule the world from Jerusalem. The Arabs wanted it because the Dome of the Rock, their second most holy shrine, was located there. War and bloodshed raged for centuries over this piece of real estate.

Saladin doesn't get much play in Western history books. You're more likely to read about Richard the Lion-Hearted, the leader of the European expedition to retake Jerusalem -- and even he is most often remembered as a peripheral character in robin Hood tales....

The battle between Saladin and Richard marked the high point of the Crusades, the first major clash between Islam and Western Christendom, which lasted more than three centuries.

From their beginnings in 1095, the crusades inspired more passion than anyone expected. The first Crusade was preceded by droughts and famine and heralded by meteor showers. The idea of an expedition to reclaim Jerusalem from the unbelievers seized the imagination of people from all social classes. Led by deeply religious knights like Godfrey of Bouillon and Tancred, armies of 'Latin' Christians [followers of the Catholic Church] from France, Germany, England, and elsewhere marched through what is now Hungary to

Constantinople, the great center of Christianity in the East. -- ibid. p. 38, emphasis supplied.

The First Crusade was really the only one that the papacy won. Blood ran knee-high through the streets of Jerusalem as the Arabs were slaughtered. This, however, would be the only victory for the papacy. Thereafter, the Muslims dominated the fighting.

Following the First Crusade,

It took almost a century before a leader strong enough to unite the Muslim Middle East appeared. When Saladin finally retook Jerusalem, it was Christendom's turn to be shocked. The archbishop of Tyre, a Christian [Catholic] stronghold north of Jerusalem, hurried west to Italy on a black-sailed ship with news of Jerusalem's fall, along with letters begging for help. -- ibid. p. 39.

The letters for help brought to their aid Richard the Lion-Hearted, England's most temperamental sovereign.

He arrived in the Holy Land in 1911 at the age of 33.... For 16 months, Saladin and Richard Battled across the parched plains of the Holy Land. Finally, ill and leading an exhausted army, Richard negotiated a truce with Saladin and headed home. He never returned. -- ibid. p. 39.

The truce permitted the crusaders to occupy a strip of land along the land along the coast and permitted the Muslims to continue to occupy Jerusalem, but allowed Christians to visit Jerusalem.

While the crusades of the Dark Ages failed to obtain control of Jerusalem for the pope, the most recent wars in the last 100 years have brought the papacy closer to her goal than she ever has been.

Marching into a Jerusalem captured from the Turks in 1917, a British general, Sir Edmund Allenby, proudly declared:

'today the wars of the Crusaders are completed,' and the British press celebrated his victory with cartoons of Richard the Lion-Hearted looking down at Jerusalem above the caption 'At last my dream come true.' The colonial powers glorified the Crusaders as their ideological forebears. -- ibid. p. 39.

During WWI, the papacy, still with a strong desire for control of Jerusalem, planned a sequence of events that would finally allow the papacy to take over Jerusalem. Using nations under her control, among whom was Britain, the papacy took control of the Holy Land from the Muslim Turks. This was step 1 in the process.

England was to take Palestine away from the Turks. This resulted in the creation of a national homeland for the Jews with the Balfour Declaration. During World War II, the Jesuits would not allow the trapped European Jews to emigrate to Roosevelt's American Empire, Churchill's Great Britain or Stalin's Russian Empire. Rather, the Order permitted many to enter Palestine while the majority perished in the Death Camps located deep in the woods of Roman Catholic, Jesuit-controlled, Poland... By 1918, the order, financed by its Federal Reserve Bank and

Bank of England, will have completed the first phase of its Second Thirty Years' War -- World War I, including the Great Influenza Pandemic of 1918 having globally killed forty to one hundred million people. During that time the Jesuit General will have used his British Intelligence Service and Lawrence of Arabia to unite the Arabs of Palestine in driving out the Ottoman Turks. He will have used General Allenby to drive the Turkish Moslems out of Jerusalem -- a major accomplishment.

And how would the Company maintain control of Palestine and Jerusalem won by its British sword? Enter the House of Rothschild with the Jewish Masonic Zionists.

In 1918, the Jesuits would cause their Zionists in England to issue the Balfour Declaration declaring Palestine to be the new homeland for 'The Wandering Jew'. Could it be that after nineteen hundred years of Rome's crusades, inquisitions and pogroms the Jewish Race would now have a place to call its own? Or was Zionism a setup for the greatest betrayal the Jewish Race has ever known.... World War I prepared the Land for the People. World War II prepared the People for the Land. -- Eric Phelps, Vatican Assassins, Halycon Unified Services, pp. 464, 512, 514.

Instead of taking a public stand, he [Spellman] would operate behind the scenes by 'personally calling on every South American country to cast their votes for Israel.... There was little doubt that Spellman knew U.N. delegates.... After a bitter struggle, Israel was admitted to the United Nations by a vote of thirty-seven to twelve. The Israelis had turned to a number of men of prominence, including John

Foster Dulles to promote their cause. Many were convinced that Spellman had been the deciding factor. -- John Cooney, The American Pope, Times Books, pp. 186, 187.

We have seen that the Jesuits place great significance on Israel and have fought two major wars and the papacy's great desire to rule the world from Jerusalem, future wars planned by the Jesuits and the Illuminati will be used as further attempts to bring the pope to Jerusalem to rule the world from there.

Their plan is that when the terrorism and killing get bad enough, the Jesuit controlled news media will urge upon the blinded masses the need for a peace maker to come to that troubled area to rule. This peacemaker will be the pope. Once he is enthroned in Jerusalem, the 1,700-year old dream of the papacy will come true.

General Allenby declared upon entering Jerusalem that the wars of the crusades were completed. This was near the end of World War I. General Eisenhower, commander of the Allied forces in Europe during World War two, declared that he was fighting a crusade in Europe. George Bush in 2001 declared that a crusade was being fought against terrorism. In light of Albert Pike's statement requiring three world wars, do you suppose that each of these men recognized the significance of these three wars on regaining Jerusalem for the pope?

Will there ever be peace in Israel? There will probably be peace for a brief interval when the pope is enthroned there. But the pope will soon thereafter start to exercise his authority to force the entire world to become Catholic as he did during the Dark Ages when he controlled the world. This will bring about terrible persecution and destruction throughout the earth. Only those who are in submission to God's control will find safety in that awful time.

CHAPTER 9
TREASON IN HIGH PLACES
We have clearly seen from history that the Illuminati was established by the Jesuit Order as a front organization behind which the Jesuits could operate and continue to conceal their actions in the eyes of humanity. We have clearly seen that the Jesuits have created further organizations as buffer organizations (the Council on Foreign Relations, for example) so that no one detects their existence and role in various heinous and cruel activities.

Another such a group, but on a much smaller scale, is the exclusive fraternity at Yale University called the Skull and Bones Society. While some understand that is an exclusive fraternity, few realize the global implications of being part of such an organization. This society has connections. Watch carefully.

The Taft family (which is also related to George Bush by blood) and the Harriman family are two families that have been intimately connected to the Skull and bones Order (which is an entry point into the Illuminati and on the surface just an exclusive fraternity). -- Fritz Springmeier, Bloodlines of the Illuminati, Ambassador House p. 320.

the Illuminati. The Illuminati, which we have seen, is a front for the Jesuit Order. Anyone, who is working for or a part of the Illuminati, is connected to the Jesuits, the greatest foe of Protestant religious and civil liberty. To be part of the Illuminati and the Jesuits makes it impossible to love the Constitution or to uphold its principles because those groups exist for the destruction of the Constitution. No president or public official in America could ever be part of these groups because it would be impossible to uphold their oath to defend the Constitution because they are part of organizations whose great goal is the abolishment of that great document.

Are you aware of any leaders of Presidents that have ever held office who have been part of the Skull and bones Order of Yale University?

George Bush (father and son) was a Skull and Bonesman.... George Bush also is a descendent of the 13th top Illuminati family -- the family that ties in with British royalty and the Merovingians - ibid. p. 320.

George Bush, the father and George Bush, the son, have both attended Yale University and are both a part of the Skull and Bones Order. Both of these men are part of the Illuminati and the Jesuits. Both of these men, by their entrance into these groups, are disqualified from being President of the United States. Both men are working for the destruction of America and its Constitution rather than to defend the Protestant principles upon which it stands. The men have and do occupy the highest position of trust in America and they are being told by their handlers to slowly, but surely destroy this great land!!! America is in deep trouble.!!!

-118-
Illuminati/Jesuits goes way back.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney married Marie Norton who later married W. Averell Harriman (init. Into Skull & Bones in 1913), the man who helped finance Hitler to power. The Harrimans also helped bring the Bush family from oblivion back in the early 1920's. When Prescott Bush (George Bush's father) lost all his money in the 1929 stock market crash, the Harrimans again came to financially help Prescott Bush back on his feet. During the 1920's, the W. Averell Harriman, Prescott Bush, Fritz Thyssen and Friedrich Flick created several entities to help finance Hitler and to produce the weapons Hitler would need to fight W.W.II. -- ibid. p. 63.

The Bush family has been connected with the people of the Illuminati/Jesuits for the last 85 years. Their influence on this family and the policies both George Bush, father and son, have made since being in the White House have only aided the Illuminati/Jesuits in their ongoing efforts to destroy the blood-bought Protestant freedoms that make America great. We will even discover in the next chapter that the Jesuits/Illuminati has used George Bush to involve America in the awful war in Afghanistan and Iraq. How many courageous, American young men and women have died fighting in wars that the Illuminati/Jesuits have planned for over 100 years; we will look at this in our next chapter.

Before George Bush ever entered the White House in January of 2001, he was already vowing his support for the work of the Catholic Church in America. He showed that his allegiance would not be for the Constitution and the American people, but rather for a man whose position over the last 200 plus years has been opposed to the Protestant Constitution.

In 1960, John Kennedy went from Washington to Texas to assure Protestant preachers that he would not obey the pope. In 2001, George Bush came from Texas up to Washington to assure a group of Catholic Bishops that he would obey the pope. -- Washington Times, April 16, 2001.

The President of the United States is not running the United States; a foreign dictator, whose position pushed for the slaughtering of millions of people, who never changes and who would love to see the destruction of this country, is telling the President of the United States what to do and he is happy to do it!!! That’s a stunning, shocking, and revolting statement.

The pope is the ruler of the world. All the emperors, all the kings, all the princes, all the presidents of the world are as these altar boys of mine. -- Priest Phelan, Western Watchman, June 27, 1912.

Emperors, kings, princes, and Presidents are as altar boys. What does an altar boy do? An alter boy is a willing and obedient servant/slave to the priest. When the priest tells the alter boy to do something, the altar boy carries out exactly what the priest has told him to do. Doesn't ask any questions, but does exactly what he is told. According to this priest, almost 100 years ago, the Presidents of the world are as altar boys of Rome. According to the article in the Washington Times, the president of the United States is an altar boy.

Peter's Voice; this was also quoted in Reuters News service of March 22, 2001. There was a cultural center in Washington DC dedicated to John Paul II. This is what the President declared, "The best way to honor Pope John Paul II, truly one of the great men, is to take his teachings seriously, to listen to his words and put his words and teachings into action here in America." The President of the United States, by those words, has committed the crime for which Benedict Arnold was hung. It is called treason. George Bush, the President of the United States, declared that we need to put the words and teachings of the pope into action here in America, and that is treason. From the very inception of the United States of America, the Catholic church and the Jesuit order has wanted to destroy this nation, and has wanted to abolish the Constitution of the United States. George Bush swore that he would defend and protect the Constitution. By his declaration at the dedication of the cultural center, he has now declared he wants to destroy the Constitution. Treason worse that Benedict Arnold ever dreamed of is being practiced from the highest office in this land!!!

George Bush is not an American. Let me share with you from the book, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, page 284, to show you the contrast between the words of the Constitution and the words of the church of Rome.

The most sacred principle of the United States Constitution is the equality of every citizen before the law. The fundamental principle of the Church of Rome is the denial of that equality. Liberty of conscience is proclaimed by the United States, a most sacred principle which every citizen must uphold... But liberty of conscience is declared by all the popes and councils of Rome, a most godless, unholy, and diabolical thing, which every good Catholic must abhor and destroy at any cost. -- Charles Chiniquy, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Chick Publications, p. 284.

So by George Bush's statements at the dedication of the cultural Center, he would destroy and abolish the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The American Constitution assures the absolute independence of the civil from the ecclesiastical or church power; but the Church of Rome declares through all her pontiffs and councils that such independence is an impiety and revolt against God. -- ibid. p. 284.

The American Constitution assures the separation of the church from the state, but the Catholic Church throughout the dark ages and today has been trying to mesh them together. The result of such a union has always been terrible bloodshed and persecution. Because the Founding Fathers of America realized the evils of church/ state union, they made sure in the Bill of Rights that the church and state would remain separate.

The American Constitution leaves every man free to serve God according to the dictates of his own conscience; but the Church of Rome declares that no man has ever had such a right, and that the pope alone can know and say what man must believe and do. -- ibid. p. 284.

That is absolute insanity that another man believes that he has the right to tell someone what they can believe and what they can do. That is utter blasphemy.

The Constitution of the United States denies the right in anybody to punish any other for differing form him in religion. But the Church of Rome says that she has the right to punish with the confiscation of their goods, or the penalty of death, ibid p. 284.

That is laughable. As you go down through history and how one pope after another differed from previous popes and argued and there were rival popes, two or three at one time, disagreeing with each other, which infallible pope are we to accept? How many beliefs of the pope and of the Church of Rome are even found in the word of God? Is purgatory? Is worship of the Virgin Mary? Is turning the bread in the communion service into the actual body of Christ? This is insanity, and the Chruch of Rome declares that the pope can punish those who don’t go along with him in faith. So for a human being to bow down and receive their faith from a man who doesn’t’ know what he believes is utter insanity!!!

The United States have established schools all over their immense territories, where they invite the people to send their children, that they may cultivate their intelligence and become good and useful citizen. But the Church of Rome has publicly cursed all those schools, and forbidden their children to attend them, under pain of excommunication in this world and damnation in the next. -- ibid. p. 284.

century, this was, indeed, a fact. In the 19th-century in the American public school system, the children were taught that the Bishop [pope] of Rome was to be shunned as evil, and as an evil system that would attack the United States and our freedoms. The educational system in the United States for most of the 19th-century was Protestant. But as Mr. Dewey, and as the Rockefellers began to use their immense wealth to rewrite the textbooks in the American public school system, the American public schools no longer were Protestant, and so in the 20th-century Roman Catholic children in may cases, began attending public schools.

The Constitution of the United States is based on the principle that the people are the primary source of all civil power. (It's a government of the people by the people for the people). But hundreds of times, the Church of Rome has proclaimed that this principle is impious and heretical. She says that 'all government must rest upon the foundation of the Catholic faith; with the pope alone as the legitimate and infallible source and interpreter of the law. -- ibid., p. 284.

If the principles of the Church of Rome, as George Bush has declared he would like to see happen in this country are put into practice in the United States of America, then we are entering another dark age.

We are entering a time in earth's history, when the blood of conscientious Christians will flow across this land as it did throughout Europe during the Dark Ages. George Bush's words at the dedication of the cultural center in March of 2001 will take us to the Dark Ages again.

You say, but they're not Catholics. How could they

be part of the Jesuit Order and they're not even Catholics? All the more reason why the Jesuit order would use them, because no American would suspect somebody who is not Roman Catholic to be carring out exactly what the Jesuits are telling them to do, would they? All the more reason. The only Catholic president that we know about in the 20th century was John F. Kennedy and he was the only president in the 20th-century that refused to submit to the Jesuit Order and he was the one that was killed. Every other president from Roosevelt in the early 1900s, all the way down to today, has behaved as altar boys of the Roman Catholic church.

How about after September 11? Did George Bush stand up as a strong American president defending the Constitution? We with he had. But we find that George Bush's response to the terrorist attack of September 11 was his USA Patriot Act of 2001, which was proposed five days after the attacks, and these were George Bush's words. This is taken from Reuters News service. The title of the article is ' Bush Signs Sweeping New Laws to Combat Terrorism'. The article is by Patricia Wilson. If somebody is saying "oh, but you got that off the Internet." George Bush did not sing the USA Patriot Act of 2001 in a dark corner that only the Internet picked up. Go to the Washington Times; go to the Orlando Sentinel; go to the LA Times; go to the New York Times; it's in there too.

President Bush signed new anti-terror laws on Friday, aggressively expanding the US government's power to hold immigrants without charges, eavesdrop on electronic communications, and crack money-laundering schemes.

"Today, we take an essential step in defeating terrorism while protecting the constitutional rights of all Americans," Bush said...

-125-
Crafted in response to the Sept. 11 attacks on the United States, the bill enhances the ability of federal authorities to tap phones, share intelligence information, track Internet usage, e-mails and cell phones and protect U.S. borders." -- Patricia Wilson, Reuters Internet news page, October 26, 2001.

George Bush, Skull and bones/Illuminati/Jesuit puppet endorses an act that would gut the constitutional rights of Americans. He gives federal agencies the right to read your e-mail before you do, to listen in on your phone calls and tap your phone, and then has the audacity to tell Americans, "We are destroying all your liberties, but don't worry, we won't bother your constitutional rights." He thinks we are idiots!!!!

In the same article, we read a quote from the director of the American Civil Liberties Union, "We can not as a nation allow very legitimate public anxiety to immunize the administration and Congress from their obligation to protect the Bill of Rights and the fundamental values that document embodies." The director, Laura Murphy understood that the New Patriot Act would annihilate our basic freedoms.

What else is George Bush capable of doing? He has sold himself and his country to America's greatest enemy and the total destruction of the Constitution is their ultimate goal. George Bush and his controllers will continue to ravage our freedoms all in the name of saving them.

An Associated Press article declared this concerning Bush's New Patriot Act. "Attorney General John Ashcroft freed the FBI to monitor Internet sites, libraries, churches and political organizations, calling restrictions on domestic spying ‘a competitive advantage for terrorists.’” “Civil liberties groups criticized the move. But President Bush said, ‘We intend to honor our constitution and respect the freedoms that we hold so dear.’”

The president is taking away the civil liberties that Americans have had for a long time in the name of terrorism. With all of our freedoms gone, will that somehow make terrorism go away? It sounds so good to be safe from terrorism, but terrorism will not leave when all of our freedoms have disappeared. The New Patriot Act destroys freedom. President Bush is leading this nation to ruin!!!!

In yet another Associated Press article, we read,

Attorney General John Ashcroft ordered Federal prosecutors Friday to use new anti-terrorism powers to track down terrorists by intercepting their Internet and telephone communications and financial trans actions...

Under the new law, prosecutors have more powers to eavesdrop on suspected terrorists, wherever they are and whether they are communicating on the Internet of by phone.

On Thursday, Ashcroft warned would-be terrorists that the government will be closing watching how they act, carefully listening to what they say and secretly reading the words they write.

“He pledged to use the new powers granted by Congress to pursue terrorist suspects relentlessly, intercept their phone calls, read their unopened e-mail and phone messages and throw them in jail for the smallest crimes.” -- Karen Gullo, ‘Feds Vow to Use Anti-Terror Tools’, 10-26-01.

The new patriot act of 2001 was a direct assault on the bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to our Constitution, and it was passed by Illuminist/Jesuit led altar boy, George Bush.

In whose name are all these things being done? Newsweek, March 10, 2003, declared that Faith Changed His Life and Shaped His Presidency; the President is praying on the cover of the magazine. The American people are being told that God is guiding the President as he destroys the Constitution and seeks to bring America back under the umbrella control of Rome. As far as Bush’s domestic programs, like his faith-based initiative and his views on stemcell research and abortion, all reflect the teachings of Rome. The Newsweek magazine relates that the President was aided in these programs by one John Dilulio who tutored him in the philosophy of Catholic social doctrine. -- Newsweek, March 10, 2003, p. 29.

While it is clear that the President is being led by a god, it certainly is not the one in heaven, but rather the god of Rome!!! He promised Catholic bishops that he would obey the pope before ever reaching the White House and he is certainly keeping his word. With the president of the United States obeying Protestant America's greatest enemy, the Constitution and this nation are treading on very dangerous ground!!!

Chapter 10
WAR ON TERROR PLANNED 135 YEARS AGO!
The basis for this entire chapter is a letter that was written August 15, 1871 by Albert Pike to Giusseppe Mazzini quoted in the book Descent Into Slavery.

Having consolidated their financial grip on most of the European nations by the middle of the last century, the International Bankers worked feverishly to extend their sphere of influence to the ends of the earth in preparation for their final assault on the United States- a nation which, through its unique Constitution, remained free.

In the decades that followed it became apparent that, in order to achieve their goal of world domination, they would have to instigate of the old world order in preparation for the construction of the New World Order. This plan was outlined in graphic detail by Albert Pike, the Sovereign Grand Commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry and the top Illuminist in America, in a letter to Giusseppe Mazzini dated August 15, 1871. Pike stated that the First World War was to be fomented in order to destroy Czarist Russia- and to place that vast land under the direct control of Illuminati agents. Russia was then to be used as a 'bogey man' to further the aims of the Illuminati worldwide.

World War II was to be fomented through manipulation of the differences that existed between the German Nationalists and the Political Zionists. This was to result in an expansion of Russian influence and the establishment of a state of Israel in Palestine.

The Third World War was planned to result from the differences stirred up by Illuminati agents between the Zionists and the Arabs. The conflict was planned to spread worldwide. The Illuminati planned to unleash the Nihilists and Atheists and provoke a formidable social cataclysm which in all its horror will show clearly to the nations the effect of absolute atheism, origin of savagery and of the most bloody turmoil. Then everywhere, the citizens, obliged to defend themselves against the world minority of revolutionaries, will exterminate those destroyers of civilization, and the multitude, disillusioned with Christianity, whose deistic spirits will from that moment be without compass [direction], anxious for an ideal, but without knowing where to render its adoration, will receive the true light through the universal manifestation of the pure doctrine of Lucifer, brought finally out in the public view, a manifestation which will result from the general reactionary movement which will follow the destruction of Christianity and atheism, both conquered and exterminated at the same time. -- Des Griffin, Descent Into Slavery, Emissary Publications, pp. 38, 39.

While it is clear that the Illuminati and the International Bankers are one and the same, we need to be very clear that both of these entities are simply front organizations for the Jesuit Order. Again, the Illuminati was founded by Adam Weishaupt in 1776. Weishaupt was teaching Catholic Canon Law in a Jesuit University in the Jesuit stronghold of Germany known as Bavaria. The fundamental principles of the Illuminati are Jesuit inspired and devised. Jesuit General Ricci used Weishaupt to start the Illuminati so that the Jesuits could carry out their evil deeds in the dark so that no one would detect them as the source of evil.

The International Bankers, who funded the Illuminati, were controlled by the Jesuits as well. Saussy's book Rulers of Evil, pages 160, 161 makes it clear that the Rothschilds and the Jesuits are partners in seeking the takeover of the world. So, while Griffin mentions the Illuminati and the International Bankers as the ones palling these wars for world takeover, it is clear that the Jesuits are ultimately the ones seeking this dominion!!

Griffin declares that Albert Pike is the top Illuminist in America. We must understand that as the top Illuminist, Pike is under the control of the Jesuits, doing their bidding, and in on their most secret plans! When Pike speaks of three wars that have been planned; he is revealing the Jesuits plan for the world. As far back as 1871, the Jesuit Order had planned the wars of the 20th century and the current war on terror. How we have been lied to; it wasn't the shooting of the Archduke of Austria that bought World War I; nor was it Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini that brought World War II; nor was it weapons of mass destructions of Saddam Hussein that brought this current war on terror. These wars have been on the Jesuit chalkboard for over 130 years; to them and them alone is the responsibility for these horrors. The visible leaders that are paraded before the world are mere puppets whose strings are being pulled by their masters!!!

Pike declared that the First World War would be used to destroy Czarist Russia and then to place that land under the control of Illuminati agents. That Czarist Russia was destroyed in WWI is a fact of history. Czar Nicholas and his wife, Alexandra, along with their many children, were all slain while posing for a picture in 1917. The reasons why Czarist Russia was targeted are more skewed elements in history. The Czars of Russia had for well over 100 years been a thorn in the side of the Jesuits.

The Russian emperor, Alexander, was currently compelled to issue a royal decree in 1816, by which he expelled them [the Jesuits] from St. Petersburg and Moscow. This proving ineffectual, he issued another in 1820, excluding them entirely from the Russian dominions. -- R.W. Thompson, The Footprints of the Jesuits, Hunt and Eaton, pp. 245, 246.

Five years later, Alexander was poisoned to death. He wasn't the only czar to oppose the Jesuits.

Alexander II had progressed well with his great reforms and had attached his signature to a Constitution to be adopted by Russia. The next day a bomb was thrown at his carriage, which killed and woulded a number of Cossacks, who accompanied the carriage. The Emperor in deep sympathy left the carriage to look at the dying man, when a second bomb blew him to pieces. -- Amo Gaebelien, Conflict of the Ages, The Exhorters, p. 85.

This same czar, who had the audacity to bring a constitution to the Russian people, also did something else for which the Jesuits would not forgive him. At the height of the Civil War, when the balance of the war could go either way, Alexander II came to the aid of Abraham Lincoln.

It was a masterful move that possibly could have won the game had not an unexpected event tipped the scale against it. Tsar Alexander II- who, incidentally- had never allowed a central bank to be established in Russia- notified Lincoln that he stood ready to militarily align with the North.... The presence of the Russian Navy helped the Union enforce a devastating naval blockade against the Southern states which denied them access to critical supplies from Europe.... The fact that neither France nor England at that time wanted to risk becoming involved in an open war with the United States and Russia led them to be extremely cautious with overt military aid to the South. Throughout the entire conflict, they found it expedient to remain officially neutral. Without the inhibiting effect of the presence of the Russian fleet, the course of the war could have been significantly different. -- G. Edward Griffin, The Creature from Jekyll Island, American Opinion, pp. 377, 378.

By driving the Jesuits from Russia, refusing to establish a central bank, planning a constitution, and aiding the North during the Civil War, the czars of Russia had incurred the undying wrath of the Jesuit Order. Payback was imminent. The other no-no of the czars was their protection of the Russian Orthodox Church, the implacable enemy of Rome for over 1000 years.

The overthrow of the Czarist system therefore, brought with it the inevitable overthrow of the established Orthodox Church. To the Vatican, which had waged war against the Orthodox Church since the eleventh century, the downfall of her millenarian rival was too good to be true. -- Avro Manhattan, The Vatican Billions, Chick Publications, pp. 120, 121.

Not only was the czarist system in Russia to be destroyed, but the Orthodox Church would be toppled as well. Pike revealed that Illuminati agents would then be put into positions of power in Russia. Illuminati agents, acting as a front for the evil deeds of the Jesuits, would bring an awful reign of terror to that great land for several generations. Starting with Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin, the Jesuits used them to have millions of Russians obliterated for the next 30 odd years. Kruschev and Breshnev continued the onslaught to a lesser degree for several more years. All of this was done in the name of Communism, but in truth, the Jesuits used the Communism front to carry out heinous crimes in Russia.

In order to bring America into this conflict across the Atlantic and thus violate the famed Monroe doctrine, which stated that Europe could fight her own wars and America would stay out of them, there was a planned ‘terrorist’ attack that caused the loss of many Americans lives and thus, brought America into the war.

The terrorist attack that was carried out against innocent Americans was the torpedoing of the Lusitania.

The Lusitania was built to military specifications and was registered with the British Admiralty as an armed auxiliary cruiser. She carried passengers as a cover to conceal her real mission, which was to bring contraband war materials from the United States. This fact was known to Wilson and others in his administration, but they did nothing to stop it. When the German embassy tried to publish a warning to American passengers, the State Department intervened and prevented newspapers from printing it. When the Lusitania left New York harbor on her final voyage, she was virtually a floating ammunition depot.

The British knew that to draw the United States into the war would mean the difference between defeat and victory, and anything that could accomplish that was proper-even the coldly calculated sacrifice of one of her great ships with Englishmen abroad. But the trick was to have Americans on board also in order to create the proper emotional climate in the United States. As the Lusitania moved into hostile waters, where a German U-boat was known to be operating, first Lord of the Admiralty, Winston Churchhill, ordered her destroyer to abandon her. This, plus the fact that she had been ordered to travel at reduced speed, made her an easy target. After the impact of one well placed torpedo, a mighty second explosion from within ripped her apart, and the ship that many believed could not be sunk, gurgled to the bottom in less than eighteen minutes.

The deed had been done, and it set in motion great waves of revulsion against the Germans. These waves eventually flooded through Washington and swept the United States into war. -- G.

Edward Griffin, The Creature From Jekyll Island, American Opinion, pp. 260, 261, emphasis added.

Does that sound familiar? Is the author talking about WWI, or WWII at Pearl Harbor, or about September II and the war on terror? In every case, the situation has been nearly identical. Create a fervor of anger against a foreign power and America goes to war and it was all planned that way!!! The Jesuits, who pre-planned the war, planned for the terrorist attacks in order to bring America into the battle!!!

What about Pearl Harbor? Did ‘American’ leaders, who were doing the bidding of the Jesuits, have any idea that Japan would attack? Did ‘American’ leaders do anything to stir up the Japanese to bring on the terrorist attack at Pearl Harbor and bring America into war? In a book written by Congressman Hamilton Fish, we read, President Roosevelt’s responsibility for goading the Japanese into war by sending a war ultimatum on November 26, 1941, demanding that the Japanese withdraw all troops from Indo-china, and China (Manchuria) is an historic fact, although a closely-guarded secret.

FDR’s war ultimatum was deliberately withheld from Congress until after Pearl Harbor... all agreed that the ultimatum left Japan no alternative but war...

The Japanese would have done almost anything to avoid war with America...

Prince Kenoye, the prime minister, who was very peacefully inclined, repeatedly requested to come to Washington or Honolulu to meet with President Roosevelt. He was willing to agree to our terms to keep out of war on a modus vivendi but FDR refused to talk with the Japanese prime minister simply because he was determined to get into war with Japan, and through that, with Germany. The American ambassador in Tokyo, Joseph Grew, knew how much the Japanese wanted to maintain peaceful relations and urged such a conference. But FDR and his fellow ardent interventionists used ruses, dodges and tricks to involve us in a totally unnecessary war. -- Hamilton Fish, FDR- The Other Side of the Coin, Vantage Press, pp. 132-134.

Fish believed that Roosevelt's deception of the American people was an immoral and infamous act. This shrewd and astute politician covered his tracks by shouting from the housetops and denouncing the attack on Pearl Harbor as a day of infamy, blaming it entirely on the Japanese. While Roosevelt was trying to bring America into war with Japan, he was telling Americans, "While I am talking to you mothers and fathers, I give you one more assurance. I have said this before, and I shall say it again and again: Your boys are not going to be sent into any foreign wars." -- ibid. p. 29.

In both cases, with WWI and WWII, Wilson and Roosevelt assured Americans that their sons would not be going into any war, and while they were lying, they were preparing plans to get American to fight in the war. Both of these men were made out by the Jesuit controlled press as God fearing men who would not lie. In both cases, America lost so many lives and their blood will be on the hands of those lying, wicked, and heartless politicians who were following their masters and not standing up for the rights of Americans!!!

We have watched this same scenario played out twice. In both Jesuit planned wars America was brought into war because of a terrorist attack by some foreign power. Then, the president in office, who was looked upon as a God-fearing man, and who was working to bring America into the conflict, told Americans that in order to defend freedom we must go to war. Does this sound familiar? Does George Bush meet this same mold of am I just seeing things?

Let us notice the emerging pattern that has been played out several time in America.

Illuminist-Jesuit Pike declared that the second war would result in an expansion of Russian influence and the creation of a state of Israel in Palestine. Did the Second World War do those things? The influence of Russia world wide was certainly seen following the Second World War. Due to the war, Russian expansion was certainly seen as the Russian government brought under her wings several satellite countries and even the control of East Berlin. The Second world War also brought about the creation of Israel in Palestine. The Jews were given the strip of land along the eastern shores of the Mediterranean Sea. Albert Pike is batting 1.000%. Are we listening?

According to Pike, the third war would be stirred up by Illuminati agents between the Zionists and the Arabs. Since the Illuminati is a front organization for the Jesuits, the Jesuits created the current war on terror. What event was is that ignited the involvement of America in this conflict? It was the tragic events of September 11, 2001. Could it be that the World Trade Center attacks, just like the Lusitania and Pearl Harbor, were orchestrated to bring America into this conflict? To think anything else but this is ludicrous!! None of the newscasters have said this. None of the newspapers have stated this. None of our ministers have said this. The magazines haven't declared this. Is it possible that all of these outlets are controlled by the Jesuits and they naturally would not betray their hidden masters?

This conflict was to originate between the Zionists and the Arabs. Who are Zionists? They are Jews or those who are pro-Israel. In the current war on terror, who is fighting? The Americans and the English, the two most pro-Israeli nations on the earth, are at war against the Arabs of Afghanistan and Iraq. The conflict, according to Pike, was planned to extend worldwide. After a time of death and devastation, the world would become so fed up with the horrors of war that they would welcome anything. At that moment, the 'pure doctrine of Lucifer' would be manifest in the earth.

What is the pure doctrine of Lucifer? Lucifer is the name that originally was given to the angel that was closest to God in heaven. After a time, Lucifer, the bearer of light, became so proud of his powers, given to him by his Creator, that he rebelled and tried to bring all the angels to his side. Eventually, there was war in heaven (Revelation 12:7-9) and Lucifer, now the devil, was cast to the earth. He devilishly sought to bring all created beings to his side. He sought the worship that belonged to God and God alone!! For finite beings that had cast off their allegiance to their Creator, the devil had the perfect and most ready object for men to adore and worship. He obviously chose the most powerful thing in man's visible universe, the sun. Through Nimrod, the great grandson of Noah, sun worship was introduced. As generations passed, the devil's sun worshippers began to make monuments in honor of the sun. Stonehenge in England and the Parthenon in Rome were just a few of the memorials in the sun's honor. After millennia, the building of St. Peter's basilica in Rome was shaped in the form of the sundial in honor of the sun.

Towards the end of the war on terror, there would be a universal manifestation of Lucifer's doctrine of sun worship; it will be seen in the honoring of the day that honors the sun. It is called Sunday. Laws to worship on the day of the sun will spread all over the earth because the devil wants everyone to worship him. Most of the earth will choose to honor this day- the day that is steeped in devil worship.

There are so many dear, dear people who have no idea that by worshipping on the day of the sun that they are honoring the devil's counterfeit. They have done this in ignorance for so many years, even all of their lives, because that is what they have been taught and seen practiced by their parents and grandparents. Nevertheless, the sun-day worship has no basis except in the mind of the devil for he is bent on turning all mankind away from honoring their Maker and Redeemer and to deceive them into honoring him.

This universal manifestation will be brought out in the public view, on full display, before all of mankind. All the world will be brought to decide to honor the doctrine of Lucifer/the devil by honoring Sunday or to honor the one command that reveals God as the only One who deserves worship. Throughout the Bible, it is clear that worship of God is due Him because He is the Creator.

O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the LORD our maker. (Psalms 95:6) Know ye that the LORD he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture. (Psalms 100:3)

Only one commandment reveals God as the Creator.

Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work: But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: For in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the

Sabbath day, and hallowed it. (Exodus 20:8-11)

The seventh day Sabbath, that we call Saturday, reveals God as the Creator and thus, as we honor His day of rest, we are acknowledging that He alone deserves our worship.

As we rest on the Sabbath day, we are reminded of God's great power in the creating of the world. As we behold God's mighty and majestic power as wrought in creation, it cheers our hearts to know that the same Creator can speak peace, hope, and joy to our troubled, restless, and weary hearts and minds. For the same Creator/Redeemer is just as willing to manifest His creative power in our own lives, to make us new creatures. So, while the Sabbath speaks of Christ's great power in creation, it also speaks to us of His wonderful strength to restore in us His gracious character.

As the devil brings forth his sun-day worship to all the world, the great men of the earth who have given their lives into his hands, the world's wealthy who have allowed their money to be their god, the famous who have coveted the homage and worship of the masses, but who have used their talents to glorify themselves, will array themselves under the banner of the devil and will urge the inhabitants of the earth to follow the sunday. The media moguls who have fed us lies for so long, who have sold their race and their nation to deception and lies, will use all their deceptive cunning to convince the masses to honor sun-day, and will pour foul remarks on those who choose to honor the Creator/Redeemer. The religious leaders who have taught their followers to disregard the plain teachings of the Bible and to resist the warnings of God's faithful people, will use their utmost energy to turn their people away from the truth for this time. Inspite of the terrific odds against the small group of God's faithful people, they will stand unflinchingly for the right thou the heavens fall.

May the God of Heaven help us to valiantly fight this battle that will surely come and stand faithful to the truth no matter what the cost!!!

Chapter 11
THE HAND THAT STILL INTERVENES
It may be surprising to learn that even the Bible talks about much of the subject matter we have covered so far. It has considerable information about the papacy, its associates, and what the papacy will be able to accomplish in the near future in their efforts to regain their extensive political power that they enjoyed during the Dark Ages.

On e of the problems people have with the Bible and especially the books of Daniel and Revelation is that it uses many symbols. This is not a problem, however, because the Bible, itself, explains what all of these symbols mean. When you understand the symbols, you can read the Bible as clearly as if reading plain text. In the following discussion, all the symbols used will be made perfectly clear.

Starting with Revelation, chapter 17, and verse 1 (Usually written as Revelation 17:1) we read: "...I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters." Here we have the first two symbols that we must consider: the great whore and waters. The Bible uses the symbol of a woman to represent a church. A pure woman represents God's true church, and an impure woman, a whore, as we just read, represents on of the many false or counterfeit churches. Watch carefully as the Bible interprets itself. Isaiah 1:1,21 says, "The vision of Isaiah... which he saw concerning Judah and Jerusalem... How is the faithful city become an harlot: it was full of judgment; righteousness lodged in it; but now murderers." Verse two indicates that what Isaiah wrote here is a statement from God. Jerusalem in this verse represents God's true church, and God said they had become a harlot because His professed people had fallen deep into sin.

Jeremiah says the same thing. "...Hast thou seen that which backsliding Israel hath done? She is gone up upon every high mountain and under every green tree, and there hath played the harlot." (Jeremiah 3:6). Israel, God's people, in the days of Josiah the king, had grievously departed from God's law and were worshiping the gods of the heathen around them. In their backslidden condition, Jeremiah was impressed by God to rebuke His people; in so doing, Jeremiah said they were acting like a harlot. Here again, as in Isaiah, when God's professed people fallen into sin, they were referred to as a harlot.

Ezekiel says the same thing. "Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations.... But thou didst trust in thine own beauty, and playedst the harlot because of thy renown, and pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by." (Ezekiel 16:2,15). This was a very common thing in Israel. His people, His church, would forsake Him, and God used one of His prophets to call His people a harlot or a whore.

Finally, another prophet, Hosea, was asked to do a very strange thing. As an object lesson to illustrate the unfaithfulness of God's people, Hosea was told to marry Gomer, a prostitute. Hosea represented God, and Gomer represented Israel, God's people. Hosea was to marry Gomer to show God's tender, loving regard for His erring people. "...Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms: for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the Lord." (Hosea 1:2).

The symbols of a whore, harlot, and prostitute represent a church that has forsaken God's law. Revelation 17:1 declared, "...I will shew unto thee the judgments of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters." This passage also declares that this apostate church sits upon many waters. Revelation 17:15 tells us, "...The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, are people, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." Thus, this apostate church dwells in a heavily populated area of the world, in the heavily populated areas of Europe. Can you think of a church in apostasy that rose up in Europe?

Revelation 17:2 states "With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication and the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication." The kings of the earth are the leaders, the presidents, the prime ministers, and the dictators of the world. Verse two tells us that the leaders of the world are connected to this false church. Can you think of a church that has for a long time connected itself to governments and leaders? This church demands that the church and state be tied together so that she can control the leaders. This church believes that it rules all leaders by divine right, meaning that all rulers govern with the church's permission. Can you think of the church that rose up in Europe and demands control of the leaders of our world by divine right?

Revelation 18:24 gives us more information on this whore or apostate church. "And in her [this apostate church] was found the blood of prophets, and of the saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth." This apostate church is responsible for the blood shed in our world. Knowing that and the fact that this church controls the leaders of nations, who then is responsible for persecution, war and terrorism? The Al Quaida, the Taliban, Osama bin Ladan, Saddam Hussein? No. Revelation 17 and 18 says that the responsibility for war and terrorism lies at the door of this apostate church.

We have seen that this apostate church

1. rises in the area of Europe,

2. controls the leaders of our world,

-144-
3. controls them because she believes that she is Christ's earthly representative,
4. has persecuted God's people and prophets,
5. is responsible for wars, terror attacks, and all manner of bloodshed.

This great whore of Revelation can only be the Roman Catholic Church. She alone meets all the specifications of this prophecy. Since the Bible declares that she controls the leaders of our world, and is responsible for the blood shed in our world, then -- Who runs the White House?
Who was behind September 11?
Who is behind the war on terror?
Who controls Tony Blair?
Who controls Saddam Hussein?
Who was responsible for Vietnam?
Who controls Fidel Castro?
Who is responsible for the wars of the last 15 centuries?
Who controls the drug trade?

A book by Dr. L.A. Lehman entitled Behind the Dictators has a cover picture of four leaders in Europe during World War II. Connected to each of them are strings, and a man at the top is dangling their strings, because these leaders are mere puppets. The man at the top pulling the strings in Pope Pius XII who ruled the world from 1939-1958.

According to Revelation 17 and 18, the only correct view of Vietnam is the one given by Avro Manhattan in his book, Vietnam: Why Did We Go? Manhattan shows that the papacy and the Jesuits were the chief instigators of the war. Their intention was to gain a powerful Catholic foothold in Southeast Asia, and to crush the strong Buddhist presence in the Far East. All other reasons given for the Vietnam war are total lies.

The many books written concerning the two World Wars are correct only as they portray the role of the Catholic Church and the Jesuit Order in these conflicts. It is a gross misrepresentation of the facts to claim that Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini, Francisco Franco, Josef Stalin, Winston Churchhill, and Franklin Roosevelt were the chief movers in that war. The Catholic Church controlled an manipulated these leaders.

George Bush, Dick Cheney, Colin Powell, the Taliban, Osama bin Ladan, Saddam Hussein, and others are paraded before our eyes as the key players in the war on terror. We have seen that the Bible reveals a far different scenario. All of these people are doing what they are being told to do by the Jesuits and the papacy. The current war is a religious conflict to further the papacy's design for world take over, when they will rule the world from Jerusalem. This is the only possible conclusion one can draw if we understand what the Bible tells us.

There are two other points from the chapters in Revelation we have been considering that are very important to this discussion. Revelation 18:3 says, "For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication with her, and the merchants or the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies." In this passage, we see another powerful entity in this world that is connected to the great whore. Revelation 18:15 adds this, "The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing..." Who are the merchants? They are the buyers and sellers, merchandizing the commodities of earth. Revelation 18:11-13 lists some of the things that they buy and sell, "...gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and of fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble, and cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men."

According to Revelation 17 and 18, the wealthy of the earth are made so because of their connection to the Jesuits and the papacy. The worldly rich have bowed low before the god of the Vatican and have been given rich rewards in return. We have seen several times that the granddaddy of all the world's wealthy families are the Rothschilds. We have also seen from Saussy's book, Rulers of Evil, pages 160, 161, that the Rothschild's hold the keys to, and are the guardians of, the Vatican's treasures. We have also seen that the Rockefellers, the Morgans, the Carnegies, the Fords, the Stanfords, and the Harrimans have all become rich through their connection to the papacy. Many more names could be added to that list. Cecil B. Rhodes and the Rhodes Scholarship, the Getty tycoons, the Onassis family, and the Kennedys can all be traced right back to the Vatican as the source of their millions.

How certain men and their families became rich overnight are fascinating stories. To show how it works, think of an American family that used to own a few little five and dime stores in Arkansas. That family has five siblings in the top ten chart of the wealthiest people in America. The family is the Waltons of Walmart and Sam's Club fame. A little digging into the way Sam Walton went from small store owner to multi-billionaire is very shocking. The man who financed Walton in his Walmart and Sam's Club enterprises was Jackson Stephens, a multi-billionaire.

The records reveal that Stephens owns many corporations, one of which is a bank in Mena, Arkansas where billions of dollars of drug money were laundered. Stephens and an Indonesian by the name of James Riady used this bank almost exclusively for laundering the Mena-Clinton-Bush drug money that came into the Mena Airport. This money was from the guns for drug sales that were going on between the Reagan-Bush White House and the Sandinistas of Nicaragua.

Clinton, while governor of Arkansas, which is Rockefeller's back yard, got involved with the elite's drug running. Nella and Mena Airports in south-west Arkansas were part of the drug running system that is related to the Iran-Contra scandal. A reporter from a small newspaper in a small Arkansas town asked why Larry Nichols worked for the Arkansas Development Finance Authority. The question seems innocent enough, but the answers began to uncover the whole web of intrigue that involved the drug running and illegal arms shipments to Central America that both Bush and Clinton were involved in. -- Fritz Springmeier, Bloodlines of the Illuminati, Ambassador House, p. 326.

Stephens has used much of this money to finance both Republican George Bush and Democrat bill clinton in their respective presidential compaigns. How Clinton in their respective presidential campaigns. How could Stephens do such a thing? Both Bush and Clinton were working as Jesuit agents. Since Stephens also is a Jesuit agent, he could easily fund men from both parties.

Not only did Stephens use the drug money for presidenial campaigns, but so much money came into Arkansas campaigns, but so much money came into Arkansas that the Attorney General and the then Governor

Bill Clinton, along with Stephens and his company, began putting it into business that had images of being patriotic Americans. Walmart was one of many businesses that benefited. Two other companies, that came into prominence during the reign of Stephens and Clinton in Arkansas, were Hunt Trucking and Tyson Foods. Tyson Foods, which has become known as the chicken king of America, even stooped so low as to stuff chickens with drugs and then send them across America. One of the board members of Walmart for years was Hillary Clinton. She also served as Walmart's chief counsel. Walmart, Tyson Foods, and Hunt Trucking were three companies that have become wealthy, corporate giants because of their unlawful and evil association with Jesuit agents who are working to destroy the great Protestant principles of America!

Revelation 17:5 tells us of another entity that is tied to the papacy and the Jesuits. "And upon her forehead was a name written, MYSTERY BABYLON THE GREAT. THE MOTHER OF HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH." The word "Babylon" means confusion. The name of the great whore, the apostate Roman Catholic Church, is called Babylon the Great because she has brought total confusion into the world, claiming to be following Christ and the Bible, while leading multitudes away from Jesus and the plain teachings of Scripture. In the process of turning people from the Bible, the church claims to be the only gateway to heaven. The Babylon here has nothing to do with the attempted rebuilding of the ancient city of Babylon in the area of Iraq today!

This verse indicates that the Catholic Church is the Mother church, the mother of every abominable and wicked thing that has been foisted on the world in the name of religion. We also see that the Catholic Chruch has many daughters who are harlots as well; for the verse says “BABYLON THE GREAT, THE MOTHER OF HAR-LOTS.” To what could these harlot daughters be referring? To what could these harlot daughters be referring? We have seen that the symbol of an impure woman in Scripture represents an apostate church. (Isaiah 1:21; Jeremiah 3:6; Ezekiel 16:15; Hosea). Plugging these passages back into Revelation 17, we can only arrive at the conclusion that there are other churches that are following in the papacy’s footsteps. These church can only be the ones that once broke away from the mother church, but have since that time been gradually coming back to her. The harlot daughters of the papacy represent the Protestant churches of today that are no longer protesting against Rome’s abuses, but are rather finding harmony in working with her. These apostate Protestant churches of today are the harlot daughters of the mother-Roman Catholic Church!

Alberto Rivera is an ex-Jesuit priest who offers some very valuable insight in to apostasy of the Protestant churches of today. He carried out many evil deeds for the Jesuit Order. However, he responded to the leading of the Holy Spirit and left the Jesuits and became a follower of the Lord, Jesus Christ. While some of his understandings of Scripture were not correct, Rivera was very clear on the role of the Jesuits and the Vatican in history. Eventually, Rivera died a martyr, having been poisoned by the Jesuits. Rivera discussed the Jesuits’ desire to infiltrate and takeover all Protestant churches and lead them to follow the papacy. He stated that a sign would be given to Jesuits worldwide when every Protestant denomination had been successfully infiltrated and overcome by the Jesuits.

The sing was to be when a President of the U.S. took his oath of office facing an obelisk. For the first time in U.S. history, the swearing in ceremonies were moved to the West front of the capitol, and President Ronald Reagan faced the Washing-Monument. This happened January 20, 1981. -- Jack Chick, The Godfathers, Alberto Part Three, Chick Publications, page 26.

Some may think that Alberto does not know what he is talking about. They probably believe that their church has not been taken over by the Jesuits. Consider this:

1. Is your church still protesting against the tyranny of the papacy?
2. Does your church still teach that the papacy is the anti-Christ, or is it, or is it something that your church once taught, but now shies away from because it is not politically correct?
3. Does your church engage in celebration style church services that are more contemporary with the times and have more upbeat music? This was part of the papacy's plan at Vatican II in taking over all the churches.
4. Is your church forgetting their historic teachings and becoming more modern, casting away the old truths as relics of the past?
5. Are your church periodicals finding more and more good things to say about the papacy, even considering the Vatican leaders to be fine Christian people?
6. Is your church willing to join the ecumenical movement, even if it means sacrificing some basic teachings or principles that the church once believed?

If you can answer yes to one or more of these questions, or yes to all of these questions, then Alberto Rivera is right. Are there any major religious bodies or denominations today that don't meet these criteria?

It is interesting that Pope John Paul II agrees with Alberto Rivera. John Paul made a statement in which he declared a major concern of the Vatican. He is concerned about new religious groups that are arising in America that are warning the world about the plans of the papacy to takeover the world. These new groups are telling the world that the papacy is still the anti-christ, and, according to John Paul II, these groups are seriously affecting the plans of the papacy.

The proselytizing activity of the sects and new religious groups of America is a grave hindrance to the work of evangelization.... [what he means is that there are independent religious groups that are hindering the papacy's drive to take over the world.] The success of proselytism by the sects and new religious groups in American cannot be ignored. It demands of the Church on the continent a thorough study, to be carried out in each nation and at the international level.... For the response to the challenge of the sects to be effective, there is a need for an appropriate coordination of initiatives among dioceses, aimed at bringing about a more effective through shared projects which will produce better results. -- Pope John Paul II, The Challenge of the Sects, Exhortation, Article 73.

John Paul did not express concern about denominations that have been around for a century or two. Why? The answer is obvious; those denominations are of no concern to John Paul because they have been infiltrated and taken over by the Jesuits. Those churches have stopped protesting about the evils of the papacy! John Paul is concerned about groups that have arisen in the last few decades, who, in response to the suppression of truth in their mainline churches, have been forced to preach the truth outside of these churches.

According to Revelation 17:5, the Catholic Church has many harlot daughters. According to Alberto Rivera and John Paul II, those harlot daughters include every Protestant denomination today that has forsaken their message, which is their sole purpose for existence! When a denomination refuses to give the straight Biblical truth, that denomination is committing spiritual adultery before God, and is considered to be an harlot.

Revelation 17 supports every principle outlined in this book. It reveals the control of the papacy's Jesuits over the leaders of our world, over the wealthy of the earth, and over the churches today. May God help us to walk humbly before Him, trusting in His grace, that we may rightly represent Him.

Chapter 12
DIVINE HAND OVER THE UNITED STATES REMOVED
The change of the Sabbath is a sign or mark of the authority of the Romish Church. Those who, understanding the claims of the forth commandment, choose to observe the false Sabbath in the place of the true, are thereby paying homage to that power by which alone it is commanded. The mark of the beast is the papal Sabbath, which has been accepted by the world in the place of the day of God's appointment.

There are true Christians in every church, not excepting the Roman Catholic communion. None are condemned until they have had the light and have seen the obligation of the fourth commandment. But when the decree shall go forth enforcing the counterfeit Sabbath, and the loud cry of "the third angel" shall warn men against the worship of the beast and his image, the line will be clearly drawn between the false and the true. Then those who still continue in transgression will receive the mark of the beast.

With rapid steps we are approaching this period. When Protestant churches shall unite with the secular power in sustaining a false religion, for opposing which their ancestors endured the fiercest persecution, then will the papal Sabbath be enforced by the combined authority of church and State. There will be a national apostasy [Apostasy is defined as the abandonment of biblical Truths], which will end in national ruin.

Marvelous in her shrewdness and cunning is the Roman catholic Church. She presents a fair front to the world, coverring with apologies her record of horrible cruelties, and declaring that her spirit of persecution no longer exists. But she is the same as in the days of the Reformation, when men of God stood up at the peril of their lives to expose her iniquity; the same as when she assumed the power to control kings and princes, and claimed the prerogatives of God. She may clothe herself in Christlike garments, the better to carry forward her purposes; but she still retains the venom of the serpent, and her principles are exerting their influence in legislative halls, in churches, and in the hearts of men. Her spirit is no less cruel and despotic now than when it crushed out human liberty, and slew the saints of the Most High.

By compromises and concessions, Protestants have tampered with and patronized popery, giving her vantage-ground which papist themselves are surprised to see and fail to understand. The Protestant world needs to be aroused to resist the advances of this most dangerous foe to civil and religious liberty.
When the State [the United States] shall enforce the decrees and sustain the institutions of the church, then will Protestant America have formed an image of the Papacy. Then the true church will be assailed by persecution as were God's people in ancient times. Almost every century furnishes instances of what human hearts, controlled by rage and malice, can do under a plea of serving God by protecting the right of the church and State. The Protestant churches that have followed in the steps of Rome by forming alliances with worldly powers have manifested a similar desire to restrict liberty of conscience. How many non-conformist ministers have suffered under the power of the Church of England! Persecution always follows a restriction of religious liberty on the part of secular governments. (1)

God has a law which... is designed to govern the inhabitants of this world. Christ died that the human family might be brought back to their allegiance to God. He was their only hope of redemption. He did not suffer and die on Calvary's cross to annul the law, because he would thus be the administrator of sin by perpetuating transgression. If the law of God could have been changed, or one precept of it altered to meet man's fallen condition, then the Son of God need not have come into our world and died. But because the law of God was changeless in its character; because not one principle of it , not even a jot or a tittle(dotting I's or crossing T's), could be dishonored and swept away, God consented to let his Son take upon himself the results of man's transgression of that law, thus making it possible for man to be pardoned, and to become obedient to all God's commandments. It is the righteousness and perfection of his Son, who takes upon himself our sins, our defect, our weaknesses, which God accepts; and through faith in the merits of the blood of a crucified and risen Saviour we are prisoners of hope. Christ's righteousness becomes our righteousness, if we sustain a living connection with him. Then we cease to transgress the holy law of God, and become partakers of the divine nature.

A time is coming when the law of God is, in a special sense, to be made void in our land. The rulers of our nation will, by legislative enactments, enforce the Sunday law, and thus God's people be brought into great peril. When our nation, in its legislative councils, shall enact laws to bind the consciences of men in regard to their religious privileges, enforcing Sunday observance, and bringing oppressive power to bear against those who keep the seventh-day Sabbath [Saturday], the law of God will, to all intents and purposes, be made void in our land; and national apostasy will be followed by national ruin. (2)

The time has come when judgment is fallen in the streets, and equity cannot enter, and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey.... The people of the United States have been a favored people; but when they restrict religious liberty, surrender Protestantism, and give countenance to popery, the measure of their guilt will be full, and "national apostasy" will be registered in the books of heaven. The result of this apostasy will be national ruin. (3)

But the time to receive the mark of the beast, as designated in prophecy, has not yet come. The testing time has not yet come. There are true Christians in every church, not excepting the Roman Catholic communion. None are condemned until they have had the light and have seen the obligation of the fourth commandment. But when the decree shall go forth enforcing the counterfeit Sabbath, and when the loud cry of the third angel shall warn men against the worship of the beast and his image, the line will be clearly drawn between the false and the true. Then those who still continue in transgression will receive the mark of the beast in their foreheads or in their hands.
With rapid steps we are approaching this period. When Protestant churches shall unite with the secular power to sustain a false religion, for opposing which their ancestors endured the fiercest persecution, then will the papal Sabbath be enforced by the combined authority of church and state. There will be a national apostasy, which will end only in national ruin. (4)

We are now making our choice, and we shall soon discern between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. Read the fourth chapter of Malachi, and think about it seriously. The day of God is right upon us. The world has converted the church. Both are in harmony, and are acting upon a short-sighted policy. Protestants will work upon the rulers of the land to make laws to restore the lost ascendency of the man of sin, who sits in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. The Roman Catholic principles will be taken under the care and protection of the State. This national apostasy will speedily be followed by national ruin. The protest of Bible truth will be no longer tolerated by those who have made not the law of God their rule of life. Then will the voice be heard from the graves of martyrs, represented by the souls which John saw slain for the word of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ which they held; then the prayer will ascend from every true child of God, "It is time, Lord, for thee to work: for they have made void thy law." (5)

Men are prone to abuse the long suffering of God, and to presume on his forbearance. But there is a point in human iniquity when it is time for God to interfere; and terrible are the issues. "The Lord is slow to anger, and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked. [Nahum 1:3]" The long-suffering of God is wonderful, because he puts constraint on his own attributes; but punishment is none the less certain. Every century of profligacy has treasured up wrath against the day of wrath; and when the time comes, and the iniquity is full, then God will do his strange work. It will be found a terrible thing to have worn out the divine patience; for the wrath of God will fall so signally and strongly that it is represented as being unmixed with mercy; the very earth will be desolated. It is at the time of the national apostasy, when, acting on the policy of Satan, the rulers of the land will rank themselves on the side of the man of sin [the pope] -- it is then the measure of guilt is full; the national apostasy is the signal for national ruin. (6)

Already the doctrine that men are released from obedience to God's requirements has weakened the force of moral obligation, and opened the flood-gates of iniquity upon the world. Lawlessness, dissipation, and corruption are sweeping in upon us like an overwhelming tide. In the family, Satan is at work. His banner waves, even in professedly Christian households. There is envy, evil surmising, hypocrisy; estrangement, emulation, strife, betrayal of sacred trusts, indulgence of lust. The whole system of religious principles and doctrines, which should form the foundation and framework of social life, seems to be a tottering mass, ready to fall to ruin. The vilest of criminals, when thrown into prison for their offenses, are often made the recipients of gifts and attentions, as if they had attained an enviable distinction. The greatest publicity is given to their character and crimes. The papers publish the revolting details of vice, thus initiating others into the practise of fraud, robbery, and murder; and Satan exults in the success of his hellish schemes. The infatuation of vice, the wanton taking of life, the terrible increase of intemperance and iniquity of every order and degree, should arouse all who fear God to inquire what can be done to stay the tide of evil. {ST, July 4, 1899 par. 9}

Courts of justice are corrupt. Rulers are actuated by desire for gain, and love of sensual pleasure. Intemperance has beclouded the faculties of many, so that Satan has almost complete control of them. Jurists are perverted, bribed, deluded. Drunkenness and revelry, passion envy, dishonesty of every sort, are represented among those who administer the laws. "Justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter.[Isaiah 59:14]" {ST, July 4, 1899 par. 10}

Our land is in jeopardy. The time is drawing on when its legislators shall so abjure the principles of Protestantism as to give countenance to Romish [Catholic] apostasy. The people for whom God has so marvelously wrought, strengthening them to throw off the galling yoke of popery, will, by a national act, give vigor to the corrupt faith of Rome, and thus arouse the tyranny which only waits for a touch to start again into cruelty and despotism. With rapid steps are we already approaching this period. When Protestant churches shall seek the support of the secular power, thus following the example of that apostate church, for opposing which their ancestors endured the fiercest persecution, then will there be a national apostasy which will end only in national ruin. (7)

Title: Rome is the enemy of United States

America Will Soon Lose Its Constitution

by Unknown

http://illuminati-news.com/lose-constitution.htm

Soon the United States must face its most deadly enemy. The Bible clearly identifies this enemy and shows the tragic outcome of this confrontation.

Bible prophecy also shows that the United States will shortly repudiate every principle of its Constitution and will become one of history's worst persecuting powers.

Already we can see the beginning of these sad events in the Waco massacre, where the United States government slaughtered helpless and defenseless women and children with a battle tank and poison gas!
When the New World Order is instituted, freedom will be gone from the earth.

There will be no United States to escape to, no United States Constitution, no Bill of Rights, and no guarantees of freedom of any kind. The whole world will be one vast prison. The freedom we have enjoyed that was so dearly purchased by our founding fathers is now being thrown away by unscrupulous politicians and their sovereignty-destroying treaties.

The preceding paragraphs were written shortly after February 28, 1993, when the Waco massacre occurred. One would have to be blind not to see the many losses of liberty that have occurred since then. The following article will explain how and why we are losing our constitution.

THE MOST DEADLY ENEMY THE UNITED STATES WILL EVER HAVE TO FACE

We are determined . . . to take possession of the United States, and rule them; but we cannot do that without acting secretly and with utmost wisdom.

If our plans become known, they will surely be defeated. - Charles Chiniquy, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, The Wickliffe Press, Protestant truth Society, Wickliffe Avenue, 104 Hendon Lane, Finchley, London, N3, 1885, p. 373.

How sad will their awakening be, when, with our out-numbering votes, we will turn them, for ever, from every position of honor, power and profit! What will those hypocritical and godless sons and daughters of the fanatical Pilgrim Fathers say, when not a single judge, not a single teacher, not a single policeman will be elected if he be not a devoted . . . Roman Catholic? What will those so-called giants think of their matchless shrewdness and ability, when not a single Senator or member of Congress will be chosen, if he be not submitted to our holy father the Pope? What a sad figure those Protestant Yankees will cut when we will not only elect the President, but fill and command the armies, man the navies, and hold the keys of the public treasury?

Then, yes! then, we will rule the United States, and lay them at the feet of the Vicar of Jesus Christ [the pope], that he may put an end to their godless system of education, and sweep away those impious laws of liberty of conscience which are an insult to God and man!

. . . The American people must be very blind indeed, if they do not see that if they do nothing to prevent it, the day is very near when the Jesuits will rule their country, from the magnificent White House at Washington, to the humblest civil and military department of this vast Republic. - ibid, p. 374.

The papacy is the most deadly enemy the United States will ever have to face. Using the utmost secrecy to conceal her plans, the papacy, through her facade of religion, has for many decades been infiltrating the United States in all levels of government. As a result, the United States will soon lose its constitution and become a tyrannical, persecuting power.

As you read the following, keep in mind that they have said it is their goal to take over the United States and trash the Constitution. The American Constitution is thoroughly detested by the papacy, because the freedom safeguards it contains make it impossible for the papacy to take over the United States as long as the Constitution is in force.

Rome is in constant conspiracy against the rights and liberties of man all over the world; but she is particularly so in the United States. Long before I was ordained a priest I knew that my Church was the most implacable enemy of this Republic. My professors of philosophy, history, and theology had been unanimous in telling me that the principles and laws of the Church of Rome were absolutely antagonistic to the laws and principles that are the foundation stones of the Constitution of the United States.

1st. The most sacred principle of the United States Constitution is the equality of every citizen before the law. But the fundamental principle of the Church of Rome is the denial of that equality.

2nd. Liberty of conscience is proclaimed by the United States a most sacred principle, which every citizen must uphold . . . . But liberty of conscience is declared by all the Popes and Councils of Rome, a most godless, unholy, and diabolical thing, which every good Catholic must abhor and destroy at any cost.

3rd. The American Constitution assures the absolute independence of the civil from the ecclesiastical or Church power; but the Church of Rome declares, through all her Pontiffs and Councils, that such independence is an impiety and a revolt against God.

4th. The American Constitution leaves every man free to serve God according to the dictates of his conscience; but the Church of Rome declares that no man has ever had such a right, and that the Pope alone can know and say what man must believe and do. - ibid, p. 375.

And when the papacy takes over there will be bloodshed.

The Church of Rome says that she has a right to punish with the confiscation of their goods, or the penalty of death, those who differ in faith from the Pope. - ibid, p. 376.

America simply has no idea of the terrible trouble and persecution that is coming soon at the hands of the papacy. The people of America have forgotten the wanton cruelty and unrestrained butchery this unholy power demonstrated during the Dark Ages when it slaughtered over 150 million Christians because they wanted to worship God according to the Bible. Hitler's holocaust against the Jews was tiny compared to the papal holocaust against Christians during the Dark Ages, and the Jesuit-controlled news media never mention these atrocities.

Don't misunderstand here. The Catholic Church is NOT a Christian religion.

It is a strange combination of the old pagan religions with a Christian facade. Just because they claim to be a Christian church does not make it so.

Here is a statement from the same book that shows the power these people have already amassed in the United States.

The Jesuits of the United States form one of the richest and most powerful corporations the world ever saw. - ibid, p. 375.

The papacy is by far the wealthiest institution on earth.

Jesus, the founder of Christianity, was the poorest of the poor. Roman Catholicism, which claims to be His church, is the richest of the rich. - Avro Manhattan, The Vatican Billions, Chick Publications, p. 17.

The Catholic church is the biggest financial power, wealth accumulator and property owner in existence. She is a greater possessor of material riches than any other single institution, corporation, bank, giant trust, government or state of the whole globe. - Jack Chick, Smokescreens, Chick Publications, p 73.

Very few people know anything about the Jesuits because of their extreme secrecy. Here is a description of them from the book The Great Controversy that shows the abominable character and deceptiveness of the pope's Jesuits.

Throughout Christendom, Protestantism was menaced by formidable foes. The first triumphs of the Reformation past, Rome summoned new forces, hoping to accomplish its destruction. At this time the order of the Jesuits was created, the most cruel, unscrupulous, and powerful of all the champions of popery. Cut off from earthly ties and human interests, dead to the claims of natural affection, reason and conscience wholly silenced, they knew no rule, no tie, but that of their order, and no duty but to extend its power. The gospel of Christ had enabled its adherents to meet danger and endure suffering, undismayed by cold, hunger, toil, and poverty, to uphold the banner of truth in face of the rack, the dungeon, and the stake. To combat these forces, Jesuitism inspired its followers with a fanaticism that enabled them to endure like dangers, and to oppose to the power of truth all the weapons of deception. There was no crime too great for them to commit, no deception too base for them to practice, no disguise too difficult for them to assume. Vowed to perpetual poverty and humility, it was their studied aim to secure wealth and power, to be devoted to the overthrow of Protestantism, and the re-establishment of the papal supremacy.

When appearing as members of their order, they wore a garb of sanctity, visiting prisons and hospitals, ministering to the sick and the poor, professing to have renounced the world, and bearing the sacred name of Jesus, who went about doing good. But under this blameless exterior the most criminal and deadly purposes were often concealed. It was a fundamental principle of the order that the end justifies the means. By this code, lying, theft, perjury, assassination, were not only pardonable but commendable, when they served the interests of the church. Under various disguises the Jesuits worked their way into offices of state, climbing up to be the counselors of kings, and shaping the policy of nations. They became servants to act as spies upon their masters. They established colleges for the sons of princes and nobles, and schools for the common people; and the children of Protestant parents were drawn into an observance of popish rites. All the outward pomp and display of the Romish worship was brought to bear to confuse the mind and dazzle and captivate the imagination, and thus the liberty for which the fathers had toiled and bled was betrayed by the sons. The Jesuits rapidly spread themselves over Europe, and wherever they went, there followed a revival of popery." - E. G. White, The Great Controversy, pp. 234, 235, 1911, Pacific Press Publishing Assn.

Today the pope's Jesuits are not only entrenched at the highest levels of all branches and departments of the U.S. Government, but they are also entrenched at the highest levels of virtually all the major corporations and industries in the United States. The Jesuits are the major stockholders of many of the largest corporations. They own 51% of the stock in Bank of America for instance. And because the papacy is a so-called church, they pay not one penny of taxes. Because they are a so-called church, they are able to operate internationally outside of the laws and legal proceedings everyone else must follow.

Here are a few of the Jesuit-controlled corporations that totally support their Jesuits in congress and the government: American Airlines, TWA, Anheuser Busch, AT&T, Bell Atlantic, Boeing, Cigna, Coca-Cola, Daimler Chrysler, Exxon, Ford Motor Company, General Electric, Hewlett-Packard, Home Depot, May Company, McDonald's, Motorola, Philip Morris, Price-Waterhouse, Rite Aid, RJR Nabisco, Sony Corp. of America, Texaco, United Parcel Service, Walt Disney Company, and Wells Fargo.

These corporations give their Jesuit senators and congressmen in both the Democratic and Republican parties many thousands of dollars for their election campaigns. These senators and congressmen are the most radical and dangerous this country has ever had. They do everything they can to pass laws and regulations prohibited by our constitution, laws designed to destroy the United States, to eliminate freedom, and to convert the United States into a ruthless tyranny. They lie constantly to deceive the people so the people will go along with the laws and regulations they want to pass.

Everyone in high positions in the government takes a solemn oath to uphold and obey the Constitution, but nearly all of them totally ignore the Constitution. The president issues executive orders that are totally unconstitutional, and Congress passes laws that the Constitution specifically forbids. Our God-given Constitution is the reason the United States has become the greatest country in the world, but it is being thoroughly undermined today by the Jesuits in government as they work to convert the United States into a ruthless police state.

The laws and regulations they pass are designed to export the industrial and manufacturing base of the United States to other countries. They are designed to destroy our energy base by restricting oil prospecting, fuel production, and nuclear power plants. The Jesuits in the House, Senate and regulating agencies restrict the private use of land with nonsensical environmental rules and regulations. They pass laws and regulations about what is "proper" to be taught in schools so that children will grow up being extremely ignorant under the banner of being educated.

The Jesuits are not recognized by the general populace because of their treachery and secrecy. They tell no one that they are Jesuits. They even belong to other churches, other cultures, and other organizations, that they have infiltrated, to hide their identity and to control these organizations.

There are millions and millions of the pope's Jesuits. They are everywhere.

They are into everything. They are into every major organization, and control nearly every political organization and government in the world.

Because of the Jesuits' extreme secrecy, many of these organizations and governments are totally unaware that they are being infiltrated and controlled.

It is easy to identify the Jesuits and the Jesuit puppets in the United States Congress, because they are the ones that continually try to get all kinds of laws passed that require exactly the opposite from what the Constitution says. They continually pass laws that restrict the liberty of the citizens of the country. They continually pass laws to regulate every aspect of life in the United States. They continually pass laws that restrict freedom of speech such as the Campaign Finance Reform Act.

Incidentally, they always use names for these laws that will sound good to the American people, but rarely indicate what is in the law. They use every means they can to deceive the people of the country.

The USA Patriot act of 2001 is in almost total violation of the constitution, requiring many of the regulations Nazi Germany and communist Russia had. When all the requirements of this act are implemented, the citizens of this country will rue the day they ever allowed such a monstrosity to become law. Jesuits in the government were responsible for this act and forced its passage. They forced a vote on this act without giving the congressmen and senators an opportunity to read it! Why didn't the congressmen and senators have the good sense to vote "no" and defeat this act since they were never able to read it?

The Homeland Security Act of 2002 is another act that was passed to take away freedom and security in the United States and is in total violation of the constitution. As all the requirements of these acts become implemented, the people of the country will learn first-hand how it feels to have absolutely no freedom. These and other laws and regulations on the books will, when implemented, convert the United States into a more ruthless police state than was Nazi Germany or communist Russia and Red China.
The Jesuits continually try to pass restrictive gun legislation. The second amendment to the Constitution says, "the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed." Every gun law that congress has ever passed is a direct violation of the United States' Constitution. Because of the crime and terrorism in our country today, and because of the government and media propaganda against guns, people are made to believe that these laws are necessary.

When the citizens of a nation are armed, where their right to own guns is not infringed, the crime rate is extremely low.

Every man in Switzerland, for instance, is required to have guns in his home, including assault rifles. Crime in Switzerland is almost non-existent.

In states and cities in America that allow people to carry guns, the crime rate is extremely low.

During World War Two, Hitler wanted to invade Switzerland. The Swiss told him that he could send his army across the border, but none of his officers would return. Hitler gave the order to invade Switzerland several times, but his officers refused to obey. Switzerland remained safely neutral all during the war because Hitler could not overcome the guns in the hands of Swiss private citizens. No dictator wants to be the dictator of a nation with 200 million guns around.

Christians generally do not want to have anything to do with guns, because a Christian would never take the life of another individual. It is not the USE of the guns that keeps the crime rate low; it is just the fact that the guns are there, and the criminals and would-be dictators know that the guns are there. That knowledge keeps them at bay.

In order to motivate the people of the United States to give up their guns, the Jesuits stage shootings periodically to show how "dangerous" guns are.

These shootings occur in the most emotional places such as schools where children die. But Waco shows what will happen when only the government has guns. Some 86 children died a torturous death at Waco at the hands of the government.

Today, the United States is run and controlled by its most dedicated enemies. If you wonder at the things the government and the people in control of the government do that are so damaging to the United States, it is because they are our enemies and are determined to destroy the United States. Treason is running rampant throughout all levels and branches of the U.S. government today.

A nation can survive its fools, and even the ambitious. But it cannot survive treason from within. An enemy at the gates is less formidable, for he is known and carries his banners openly against the city. But the traitor moves among those within the gates freely, his sly whispers rustling through all the alleys, heard in the very halls of government itself. For the traitor appears no traitor; he speaks in the accents familiar to his victims, and he wears their face and their garments and he appeals to the baseness that lies deep in the hearts of all men. He rots the soul of a nation; he works secretly and unknown in the night to undermine the pillars of a city; he infects the body politic so that it can no longer resist. - Marcus Cicero, speaking to Caesar, Crassus, Pompey and the Roman Senate.

Many wonder today why the Republican party does nothing to defeat the treasonous schemes of the Democrats. It is because the pope's Jesuits have thoroughly infiltrated the Republican party as well as the Democratic party.

Many wonder why the news media lie so much to support and protect the Democrats. It is because the pope's Jesuits have thoroughly infiltrated the news media. The news media and schools and colleges, with their lies and propaganda, have so conditioned the people of the country that they are unable to recognize what has been done to them. Victory for the Jesuits seems very near. The Jesuits are like a cancer that has pervaded nearly every fiber of the society of the United States. We are being defeated by the enemy within.

For many years the Jesuits have prevented the United States from developing additional sources of energy within its own territory. Exploiting the vast oilfields on the Alaskan north slope, that probably contain more oil than the entire middle east, is forbidden. New nuclear power plants, the safest source of electric energy ever discovered, are not permitted. There is no end to the lies people have been made to believe about Nuclear energy. The environment is used as the club to subdue the people of the country into going along with this idiocy. Modern technology is able to develop these sources of power without any damage to the environment. Needless to say, without sufficient energy, the United States will not be able to defend itself. All the papacy has to do is cut off the oil supply from the middle east.

The United States is now starting to feel the pinch of the energy shortage the Jesuits have created. People have experienced blackouts over large areas as power is shut off to stay within the limits of generating capacity.

Today, instead of constructing additional nuclear power plants, some of these plants are being dismantled! Will the people of the United States be able to wake up in time to prevent the coming national tragedy?

Not only in the United States is this treachery being perpetrated by the papacy, but they are secretly at work all over the world to subvert all the nations of the world, as we read earlier from Charles Chiniquy's book.

The papacy's slaughter of Christians continues to this day. Since the papacy is a small country with little military capability, they always beguile other nations to do their fighting for them. Today the United States is their favorite bully. Thus, they are never directly involved, and people do not realize who is behind the wars, the trouble, and the terrorism. Avro Manhattan's book, The Vatican's Holocaust, describes in detail the papacy's continuing slaughter of millions of Christians in the 20th century. At the time of this writing, the complete text of The Vatican's Holocaust is available on the internet for downloading. A link for this book is provided at the bottom of this page.

The slaughter in Bosnia, Kosovo, Serbia, Croatia and others is a direct result of the Vatican's involvement in this area, but you will never hear about it because the Jesuit-controlled news media not only refuse to mention it but they lie about the situation to keep the papacy from being suspected of her true involvement.

The Jesuits seem to have a code that guides their every action. That code is: "Call your enemy what you are and always tell the exact opposite of the truth." This makes it very difficult to counter their lies and explain clearly and understandably what they are actually doing.

And now the world has terrorism to a degree that was unimaginable before the destruction of the World Trade Center's twin towers in New York City where nearly 4,000 people lost their lives. This terrorism is part of the plan the Jesuits are implementing to scare the American people into giving up their freedoms, and it is working. The Bible says in Revelation 18:24 that the papacy is responsible for ". . . the blood of . . . all that were slain upon the earth." Evidence strongly indicates that Muslims highjacked the airliners and flew them into the towers. Thus we have rather strong evidence that the papacy's Jesuits have even been able to infiltrate the Muslims.

Remember that the papacy and the Jesuits have been at this business for many hundreds of years. Remember, also, that we saw that no disguise is too difficult for them to assume.

Let us now consider some of the tactics the papacy is using to subvert the United States. Just because they call themselves a church does not mean that they are honest or honorable. Remember that Satan, the devil, gave the papacy their power and great authority (Revelation 13:2). The Catholics, through their Jesuits, are working to accomplish the exact opposite from what the Catholic Church claims they stand for. For instance, the church claims to be against abortion, but their Jesuits, working in secrecy and masquerading as regular citizens in the government, work to pass laws and make judicial rulings permitting abortion. They have their right hand fighting their left hand to thoroughly confuse the people of the United States and to keep the people from ever connecting this evil conspiracy with them. Here is another example. The pope gets on television and, acting very piously, prays for peace, while his Jesuits are behind the scenes stirring up all kinds of wars, conflicts and terrorism in the world.

The Jesuits are making a dedicated effort in the United States to degrade the morality of the people of the country, to destroy family life, and to destroy all the traditional values that made this country the greatest nation in the world. This is being done by the abominable subjects being taught in government schools and colleges. It is being done by history courses that teach from revisionist history books containing many more lies than the truth. It is being done with pornographic sex education courses in the schools. It is being done with the destruction of religious values and the law of God, the Ten Commandments. It is being done by television programs, where entertainment is watching people break God's law. The natural result is a drastic increase in crime. Acts of the most abominable and shocking character are daily perpetrated within this country. The murder of one and a half million unborn babies in this country each year is one result of the demoralization of this nation.

The Jesuits are also flooding the United States with aliens, most of which are Catholic. Not only are we being defeated by the Jesuit enemy within, we are constantly being invaded by an army of aliens from without. These aliens dilute the traditional American society that understands our Constitution and how it works. This makes it much easier for the Jesuits in congress to pass the unconstitutional laws so damaging to the United States. And, of course, along with these aliens come the people who actually blow up the buildings.

There is talk in Washington of giving illegal aliens amnesty again, and also of converting our southern border into a "regional power block" where the area within 100 miles on either side of the border between Mexico and the United States would be administered jointly by Mexico and the U.S. The Jesuits are working to "eradicate the borders that separate Canada, Mexico, and the United States as part of a larger design to create a regional political and economic bloc duplicating the European Union." - The New America, October 8, 2001.

There is also talk of putting Mexican citizens in Mexico on United States'

Social Security payments. The purpose of this, along with all the wars and police-keeping actions the U.S. military is into and all the welfare the government pays for, is to completely bankrupt the United States.

Pushed by the Mexican government, the Bush administration is working on a Social Security accord that would put tens of thousands of Mexicans [in Mexico] onto the Social Security roster and send hundreds of millions of dollars in benefits south of the border." - Jonathan Weisman, The Washington Post, Dec. 19, 2002.

Since the Jesuits beguiled the United States into giving the Panama Canal to the Red Chinese, there are now over 200,000 Red Chinese in the Canal Zone.

This portends extremely serious problems for both the United States and Panama. A large percentage of Panamanian citizens want the U.S. to come back and restore the Canal Zone as before. Incidentally, the treaty giving the canal to Panama was never properly ratified. There were two versions of the treaty: an English version and a Spanish version. These two versions were not the same. The Senate ratified one version and the Panamanians ratified the other version. And the treason goes on and on.

When America was young, it was the envy of the entire world. In it's youth, America was kind, gracious, and gentle. America was a country of great religious and political liberty available to all under the United States Constitution. America was a nation without a king and it had a church without a pope. On American money the message of her trust in God was proclaimed, and the great blessing of God rested upon this country.

Alexis de Tocqueville, a young French philosopher of the last century, came to our shores to discover what magical quality enabled a handful of people to defeat the mighty British Empire twice in 35 years. He looked for the greatness of America in her fertile soil, her limitless forests and natural resources. He examined America's schools, her Congress and her unique Constitution without fully understanding the source of America's strength.

It was not, he said later, until he went to the churches of America and found congregations aflame with righteousness, that he began to comprehend the secret of this power. Upon his return to France, de Tocqueville wrote:

"America is great because America is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great." - Des Griffin, Descent into Slavery?, Emissary Publications, PMB: 1776, 9205 SE Clackamas Rd., Clackamas, Oregon 97015, 1980, p. 267.

The United States was the champion of liberty and freedom throughout the world. Before this time no nation in history ever had a written constitution that guaranteed the liberty and freedom of its people. But the glorious beginning of this country was to be corrupted in later years. The gentle, gracious, freedom-loving character of the United States in its youth was later used as a facade to hide the character that this country subsequently developed. This facade has successfully kept hidden, even from most of its own citizens, the real character the United States developed in these last days as a result of Jesuit infiltration and subversion.

When the Jesuits are successful in taking over the United States and converting it into a ruthless police state, the people of the country will begin to realize what has happened to them. But then, of course, it will be too late to do anything about it.

The papacy has made colossal fools of untold millions of people down through history, and it is still doing so today.

Please order the book, The Secret Terrorists, to get the whole history of how the Jesuits have been responsible for nearly all the tragedies that have happened to the United States. If enough people understand the contents of this astounding book, it might be possible to defeat the Jesuits before they can complete their destruction of the United States. The British Legal System of Mixed Common and Roman Law has been used to Enslave US(A)

Presented and Edited in Thirteen Parts by Eldon G. Warman

Guess which is the true flag of the People of the United States of America?
THE ANSWER

PROLOGUE
The following brief is believed to have been presented to a Grand Jury in the State of California circa 1982 in an attempt to correct judicial abuse of people involved in patriot and income tax protest movements. Many were being incarcerated as political prisoners of what is apparently a "shadow government" now in control of the USA. These patriots were attempting to educate as many of the general public as would hear their message. Unfortunately, short-sighted self-interest and apathy seem to have prevailed.

This narrative is based upon the American system, however, for Canadian readers, the American system of government and the Canadian system, are but "slips", or more appropriately "suckers" off the same plant, the British limited monarchy. Most of the following is, therefore, also directly applicable to the Canadian dilemma.

Before proceeding, you should know that there is a vast difference between 'British Common Law' and 'Anglo-Saxon Common Law'. To learn which is the true Common Law and which is the hoax; and, which version you may have been attempting to access in attempts to get out of 'admiralty law', go to:

Treason
Learn the facts about the Vatican's and British Crown's continued claimed ownership of the USA; and, their continued collection of 'tribute' from Americans through the Pope's 'Holy Roman Empire'.

Read about this here.

Additional, and VERY IMPORTANT information on this topic is available through LINKS at the end of PART THIRTEEN.

Editors note: Apologies to the original authors of this treatise. When this came to me the authors were anonymous.

New information about the US Constitution has come to light since this paper was written. That information may effect the value of some of the following information. The Constitution was never properly ratified; and, is, therefore, not a proper Common Law constitution. It appears that it is being used as a Roman Law 'operating orders' or 'ship's orders'; as, all bodies politic and corporate are make-believe ships in the Roman system.

The UNITED STATES is a corporation, and Congress is a 'body politic' - both being Roman style incorporations (make-believe ships) under the original creation/ownership of the Pontifex Maximus (Pope) of the (still existent) Holy Roman Empire. All Roman Law documents (so-called constitutions; but, in fact, are 'ship's orders' of make-believe ships), when used as the guide to operate a country under Roman Law, always contain a "notwithstanding" clause. (In the US Constitution, it is the 'general welfare' clause).

This allows the "captain of the ship", the President, or a designated officer (judge or Cabinet member) leave to disregard any provision of such a constitution at his discretion. 'The CAPTAIN may deviate from ANY 'rules or regulations' when he DEEMS it necessary 'for the GOOD of the ship.' That is a basic maxim of the Law of the Sea, and totally within the 'common sense' realm of operating a ship relative to safety and profitability; however, it is devastating to the unalienable rights of an individual free will man or woman living upon the land.

Also, it has recently come to light that the court systems operate their admiralty type law within the confines of a 'contract' in all of the British, and former British Empire. The clerk of the court, the prosecuting attorneys, and the judges proffer the contract, and the defendant blindly and ignorantly accepts the offered contract by acquiescence and obedience to court orders and sentences. A defendant convicted and sentenced, even by a jury (in an admiralty/equity court) only need to inform the judge that he/she refuses the offered contract and/or sentence of the judge. As a contracting party, the defendant does not have to accept a contract by imposition against his/her free will. As has happened, when such a refusal of the contract is made, the judge will use legal trickery and bluster to attempt to get the defendant to accept another contract. The defendant need only to continue with: "I do not accept your sentence." Or, where applicable: "I do not accept your offer of contract." The latter statement may be placed upon served court documents and returned (signed and dated) to the clerk of the court.

INTRODUCTION
We have a problem and we are here to analyze that problem. Why do the courts refuse to admit certain arguments and cites of the United States Constitution? And further, find some in contempt of court if they persist in doing so? Why is there so little justice in our courts today? Our problem is, we have been fighting the wrong thing -- playing the wrong ball game.

We have found that we are not in Common Law under the Constitution -- in fact, we're not in Equity under the Constitution -- we are in Maritime Law (the Law of International Commerce -- Law Merchant, Admiralty Law, Military Law, and Prison or Warden Law).

Editors note: New information about the US Constitution has come to light since this paper was written. That information may effect the value of some of the following information. The Constitution was never properly ratified; and, is, therefore, not a proper Common Law constitution. It appears that it is being used as a Roman Law "operating orders". All such Roman Law documents (so-called constitutions), when used as the guide to operate a country under Roman Law, always contain a "notwithstanding" clause. This allows the "captain of the ship", the President, leave to disregard any provision of such a constitution at his discretion.

Just what is this Law of Admiralty? Admiralty Law encompasses all controversies arising out of acts done upon or relating to the sea, and questions of prize. Prize is that law dealing with war, and the spoils of war -- such as capture of ships, goods, materials, property -- both real and personal, etc.

Another way to understand admiralty law -- it is the command enforcement necessary to maintain the good order and discipline on a ship, especially as a ship was operated in the mid-1700's. As the availability of crewmembers was a finite problem in the middle of the ocean, the enforcement of ship law had more to do with getting wayward crewmembers back into a state of obedience and usefulness, rather than as the imposition of lawful punishments -- the latter being the purpose of law enforcement on the land.

Maritime Law is that system of law that particularly relates to commerce and navigation. Because of this fact, as you will see, you don't have to be on a ship in the middle of the sea to be under Admiralty Jurisdiction. This jurisdiction can attach merely because the subject matter falls within the scope of Maritime Law -- and, bills, notes, cheques and credits are within the scope of Maritime Law.

Admiralty Law grew and developed from the harsh realities and expedient measures required to survive at sea. It has very extensive jurisdiction of maritime cases, both civil and criminal. Because of its genesis, it contains a harsh set of rules and procedures where there is no right to trial by jury, no right to privacy, etc. In other words, there are no rights under this jurisdiction -- only privileges granted by the Captain of the maritime voyage.

For instance: in this jurisdiction there is no such thing as a right not to be compelled to testify against oneself in a criminal case -- the Captain can; however, if he wishes, grant you the privilege against self-incrimination. There's no such thing as a right to use your property on the public highways -- but the Captain may grant you the privilege to do so, if he so chooses. There is no such thing as a right to operate your own business -- only a privilege allowed as long as you perform according to the captain's regulations.

Having identified the symptoms of the problem, we must diagnose the cause to find a solution. We have been fighting the effects too long while the disease rages unabated. Since we have identified the cause, and understand its nature and characteristics, we [hopefully] can build a winning case.

In marshalling our information and facts it is necessary to go back in time. Let us examine the evidence and facts: Back at the time, just before the revolution -- when our Colonies were festering and threatening revolt from the King -- when we had the Common Law of the Colonies. The King's men came over to collect their taxes. They didn't use the Common Law on us, they applied Admiralty Law on us -- arrested people, held Star Chamber proceedings and denied us our common rights as Englishmen.

This, more than any one thing, (sure, taxation without representation was part of it) -- but it was denial of our Common Law rights by putting us under Admiralty Law wherein the King was the Chancellor. His agents deprived us of jury trials, put us on ships, sent us down to ports in the British West Indies -- where many died of fever in the holds of ships -- and very few returned. This was one of the main reasons for the revolution in 1776.

What is the Common Law? Historically, the Common Law came from the Anglo-Saxon Common Law in England. It existed, and controlled and ruled the land of England previous to the reign of William the Conqueror [1066], when the Normans conquered Anglo-Saxon England. In it was the Golden Rule (Rule of Civil Justice) that in the negative form reads: "Do not unto others as you would not have others do unto you." P. S. The positive form deals with Social Justice.

Where did this law come from -- this Anglo-Saxon Common Law? Did it come from Christianity's introduction to England? Apparently not. . . It is on record in the Vatican --- The early Christian missionaries reported that the people of Northern Germany "already have the law". It is suspect that early Hebrew tin traders taught these people the law many years before Christ.

So what has happened? The English people had this simple and pure Common Law of rights and property rights. But there also existed along side of it, even in those days, the law of commerce, which is the Maritime Law. The earliest recorded knowledge we have of Maritime Law is in the Isle of Rhodes, 900 B. C. -- then there's the Laws of Oleron, Laws of the Hanseatic League, Maritime Law, which was part and parcel of their civil law. This is the law of commerce, whereas the Common Law was the law that had to do with the land, and with the people of the land.

William the Conqueror subjugated all the Saxons to his rule except London Town. The merchants controlled the city and their walls held off the invaders. The merchants were able to provision the city by ships and William's soldiers were not able to prevail. Finally, acknowledging that he could not take the City by force, he resorted to compromise. The merchants demanded "the "Lex Mercantoria" [the Maritime Law]. This was granted and remains to this day. The inner City of London has its special law where the Merchant's Law is the law of the City of London.

Protection of their shipping industry was one of the main reasons for the resistance by the merchants of London. The Saxon Common Law had no provision for fictitious persons (companies) or limited liability; but, recognized only natural persons and full liability. The Roman Civil Law was a derivative of the Maritime Law and is the basis of Civil Law in most European countries. Identifying features of Roman Common Law are the usage of precedent and judgement by magistrate(s) in courts of Summary jurisdiction.

At Runnymede, in 1215, the Barons of England forced King John to sign the Magna Carta, one of three primary documents establishing the fundamental rights of the English people to this day, {The others being the revision of the Magna Carta in 1225, the Petition of Rights [1628] and the Bill of Rights [1689]}. The primary objective and content of the Magna Carta was the prohibition of the use of Summary jurisdiction [the Roman or Admiralty Law] as a means of unauthorized taxation and seizure of property without due process of Law or just compensation. The colonists were, on the whole, very well schooled in the Common Law and were quite aware of the wrongs that King and Parliament were committing against them. This eventually forced them to rebel.

The Common Law that we had in our land is parallel to another ancient law. You will find that when our Founding Fathers set up the declaratory trust, known to us as the Declaration of "Independence", Jefferson listed 18 grievances and in each one of these grievances he showed how we were being denied our rights as free-born Englishmen. So, he made an appeal to the nations of the world that the acts being committed against the colonists were acts committed against the Laws of Nations, and it (the Declaration of Independence) became an ordinance, a public trust, within the Law of Nations -- and those Founding Fathers knew that they would have to fight to win the independence that they had so declared.

Editors note: It now appears that Jefferson used George Mason's 'Virginia Declaration of Rights' (June 12, 1776) as the basis for his Declaration of Independence (July 4, 1776); but Jefferson deleted the very specific 'property rights' included by George Mason. Read here.

After the English surrendered at Yorktown, the Articles of Confederation period followed. Then our Founding Fathers implemented the Constitution into this Public Trust, which was the mechanism to provide for us our hopes and aspirations. In the Constitution you will find principles; but, not necessarily those found in the Declaration of Independence.

Editor's note: To learn the reality of the grand deception by the Founding Fathers, read here.

Some of the writers of the Constitution thought it was a little too restrictive. It was generally conceded, for instance, that the people had the right to bear arms, but they also knew that if we ever were placed or allowed ourselves to be brought under Maritime Admiralty Law concerning our persons and property, we would have dire need of a guarantee for our rights -- thus, the ten amendments were added to the Constitution, and that became the substantive part of the Constitution. Article III, Section 2, of the Constitution defines the Maritime Admiralty jurisdiction.

How have we been tricked out of our Common Law rights; and, into the Admiralty courts? How has equity as well as Admiralty been corrupted? How has the Federal Government made it almost impossible for us to receive our constitutional rights -- our substantive rights in the Constitution?

Now, to understand the Constitution -- we must examine the Declaration of Independence and those 56 men who signed it, and pledged their lives, liberty, family, property, and their honor to this sacred trust. All of these men were very knowledgeable and learned in the Common Law -- they knew the law because they studied the law, they may not have had a high school education (many of them). But they could read, and they read and studied law. They were men of the age of reason and they knew and they understood. They knew exactly what the king was doing. They knew the law.

Knowledge is a very important thing. And, as James Madison wrote years ago: "Knowledge will forever govern ignorance, and a people who mean to be their own governors must arm themselves with the power which knowledge gives." Education should never be terminal! The First Amendment to the US Constitution cites "Freedom of Religion" that in actual fact is "Freedom of Education" since the church controlled education, at the time of its writing.

Now, there is a chronological sequence of events that placed us where we are today. We can almost assure you that you will reject, or want to reject, parts of what you are about to see and hear. There is a theory known as the Theory of Cognitive Dissonance (TCD) that holds that the mind involuntarily rejects information not in line with previous thoughts and/or actions. Brace yourself, the following message may be entirely different from anything you heretofore believed to be true. If you are unaware, you are unaware of being unaware

Part Two of the British System

The first step in building any case which has a chance of winning is to analyze the problem. A common pattern for doing this is to recognize a problem that needs answering; analyze the problem by first stating it; reach a satisfactory judgment; and then defend our judgment. In preparing our case, our legal research will be determined entirely by the facts of the case for, without facts, the law is meaningless. In marshalling our facts we need to keep a few guiding principles in mind so we aren't led astray: we must discount preconceptions; postpone judgements; and we must observe for a purpose, know why we are observing and stick to relevant facts about the case. The answers must be based on evidence, premises and inferences.

The Common Law
Let's explore the Common Law in depth; and, its embodiment in our Constitution.

Probably one of the best ways of explaining what this Common Law is, is to explain what it is not -- to compare it to its antithesis. There are, fundamentally, two competing systems of man-made law in the world that are in constant ideological conflict against each other. One is the Common Law and the other is the Civil Law, or Roman Civil Law. For example, the Magna Carta (1215) used the antithesis method. Most articles are statements of normal practise in Roman law -- with a "thou shalt not" added.

A brief study of the philosophic background is presented in order to grasp the significance of the differences in the two systems. A tri-unity of God (or, Supreme Being) concepts, composed of:

1. God Is [the God out there],
2. God Within [God indwelling each individual], and,
3. Within God [the person being a part of God, a cell in the body of God, etc], are the basic building blocks of religious understanding, the basic elements of man's religions and religious institutions. A balanced tri-unity, regardless of concept quality, would make for a harmonious religious and social structure. [Some of the North American Indian tribes achieved such a reasonably balanced plateau in their culture]. However, some socially dominating cultures, such as Judaism, are dominated by # 1, and a bit of # 3. Buddhism calls mostly on # 3 with some #2. Consider where one would place Communism, Oligarchic dominance, American republicanism, the Renaissance?

One can find these concepts ruling ancient civilizations, and extending into the very roots of our current concepts of statehood. The ancient Greek city states developed in two, and opposing directions because their philosophic thought gave some the "God is" concept in isolation to the other two concepts, while the other took the "God within" as their sole concept. One was Oligarchic, the other was Republican. Aristotle was a spokesman of the first, Plato, of the second. The first leads to the final conclusion that man is an evolved animal; and, as such, must be controlled by a (divinely?) appointed chosen few. This thread of belief structure comes down to our current era.

One of the strongest of such belief structures resides within the current humanist mind-set -- the Universe is [supposedly] deteriorating and returning to basic elements, -- so too would man revert to lower forms of animalism, if left on his own, without divinely appointed leaders, the oligarchs, the captain of the ship. The cult of Mother Earth [Environmentalism] falls into this school of thought.

The Republican "God within" society believes in the worth and responsible nature of the individual. In a true Republic, representatives are appointed and given responsibility for the public good as "servants". Democracy is an oligarchic mechanism to appease those people who by nature really are Republican. A Democracy allows the people to choose their "leaders", their slave-masters. The Oligarchs manipulate the economic and social structures so as to create a turmoil to keep their subjects constantly striving for the basic human institutions: self-maintenance, self-perpetuation and self-gratification; and, never allow these to reach a point where Republican thought, creativity and altruism, may become established.

So, with this background, you might better understand the difference between the oligarchic Maritime Law and the Republican enhancing Saxon Common Law. The oligarchic entrepreneur's overthrow of ancient Israel's republican form of government is recorded in 1 Samuel, Chapter 8 [some worthwhile reading].

To consider the value of the "God within" concept to society, study the effect of the results of the Council of Florence [1439] called by the Pope of the Roman Church of that time, at which the Doctrine of "The Filioque" [Christ indwelling] was established (Actually, it was a revival of the teachings of St. Augustine and Philo of Alexandria).

The anti-Philo intrigues surrounding the Nicene Council and its resulting Nicene Creed is a study in itself regarding the imposition of oligarchy and its accompanying Roman dictators type of rule over the Church. Even though it was not accepted by the Eastern [Byzantine] Rite and the Jesuits, it resulted in the Renaissance, the Age of Reason, great artistic expression, and the republican movements in Europe and America.

J. Reuben Clark, a former US Under-Secretary of State and Ambassador to Mexico, succinctly stated the principles and applications of these two systems of law when he wrote: "Briefly, and stated in general terms, the basic concept of these two systems was as opposite as the poles. In the Civil Law, the source of all law is the personal ruler, whether, king, or emperor; he is sovereign. In the Common Law, certainly as developed in America, the source of all law is the people. They, as a whole, are sovereign. During the centuries, these two systems have had an almost deadly rivalry for the control of society, the Civil Law and its fundamental concepts being the instrument through which ambitious men of genius and selfishness have set up and maintained despotisms: the Common Law, with its basic principles, being the instrument through which men of equal genius, but with love of mankind burning in their souls, have established and preserved liberty and free institutions. The Constitution of the United States embodies the loftiest concepts yet framed of this exalted concept."

"Thus, our heritage of freedom is a direct and proximate result of the Common Law, deriving its authority solely from usages and customs of immemorial antiquity. The Common Law is the legal embodiment of practical common sense, and, its guiding star has always been the rule of right and wrong -- the Golden Rule.

The Common Law, as embodied in the US Constitution, for the protection and security of persons and property, is Substantive Common Law -- [substantive right: a right {as of life, liberty, property, or reputation} held to exist for its own sake and to constitute part of the normal legal order of society] -- the intention of the Founding Fathers being the assurance of access to this law by the people.

Evidence will be further presented to show how other parts of the US Constitution dealing with the totally different jurisdictions of Admiralty and Maritime Law, have been used to subvert the people into, or under this jurisdiction, and bar access to the substantive Common Law.

The basic element of the substantive Common Law is you [the individual natural person]. In this jurisdiction, you are the sovereign and the captain of your own ship. The restoration of that exalted concept, and access to the law by which men have established liberty and free institutions -- is the object of this brief. cmlaw2.htm

Chronological Sequence of Events and Relevant Facts

Part Three of the British System

The facts that appear relevant to this case cover a sequence of events beginning with the Declaration of Independence on July 4th 1776. We will introduce and discuss these facts in sequence of occurrence. We will show you, by the facts surrounding these events, and by the law, how our courts have been converted to courts of Admiralty that have no jurisdiction to hear Common Law [Bill of Rights] issues brought before them.

These events are:
a. Declaration Of Independence [1776]
b. US Constitution [1787]
c. Judiciary Act [1789]
d. George Rapp Harmony Society [1805]
e. DeLovio v. Boit [1815]
f. Dr. List's Letters [1825]
g. Swift v. Tyson [1842]
h. Limited Liability Act [1851]
i. Tontine Insurance [1868]
j. Federal Reserve Act [1913]
k. House Joint Resolution 192 [1933]
l. Erie Railroad v. Tompkins [1938]
m. Victory Tax Act [1942]
n. US v. South-Eastern Underwriters Association [1944]
o. McCarren Act [1945]

The facts presented in this sequence will show:
1. That the Declaration of Independence and the US Constitution are ordinances within the Law of Nations.

2. That the primary, and compelling reason for the Declaration of Independence was to eliminate Admiralty Law and Admiralty jurisdiction from the Domestic Law of the colonies.

3. That the Judiciary Act of 1789 clearly recognized a distinct, and separate jurisdiction of Admiralty Law from that of Domestic Law{Common Law}.

4. That the formula and blueprint of the Federal Reserve System is identical, in its essential features, to that of the George Rapp Harmony Society; and, to the Tontine Insurance schemes [which are pure wagering policies; and, are specifically forbidden in the constitutions of several States].

5. That the Federal Reserve is a maritime lender and insurance underwriter to the United States; and, as such, has no risk in the maritime venture as a lender, or as insurer, has no vested interest in the subject matter insured.

6. That the subject matter insured by the Federal Reserve is the Public National Credit System, which is a maritime venture for profit under limited liability for payment of debt.

7. That, for the privilege of limited liability for payment of debt, anyone who benefits from the Public National Credit [provided by the Federal Reserve] has an insurable interest in a maritime voyage -- and is, therefore subject to, and can be required to, make premium payments under the Law of Admiralty and Maritime [the income tax] -- as long as the contract is in force.

8. That all the resources of the USA have been hypothecated, or pledged, to the Federal Reserve as a security for the Public National Credit System.

9. That the House Joint Resolution 192, passed by Congress on June 5, 1933, made it impossible for anyone to pay a debt at law; and, this fact makes anyone who benefits from the Public National Credit System a sole merchant, subject to Admiralty Jurisdiction in all controversies involving said credit.

10. That, because of House Joint Resolution 192, we have lost access to substantive Common Law, we have lost our allodial land titles -- and a foreign jurisdiction of Admiralty Law has been imposed upon our domestic law -- just as occurred a bit over 200 years ago. Naturally, we can expect these facts to generate more questions that must be answered. We will be raising some questions ourselves as we proceed.

Editors note: Another mechanism used to entrap the people of the USA into Admiralty jurisdiction was the Social Security Act of 1933. The Social Security Act, a retirement benefit for residents of Washington, D.C. and employees on Federal Property entraps the free people of the States into Admiralty jurisdiction by assumpsit contract. By the act of a free state citizen taking a Social Security number, a supposed contract is made making that person an assumed Federal citizen and therefore under Admiralty jurisdiction.

As we proceed, we will apply the law to these facts and show:
1. That the maritime venture for profit, by way of the Public National Credit System is based on a false and fraudulent premise that this voyage is a lawful one.

2. That this voyage is, in fact, in direct violation of the Positive Law of the Law of Nations; and, therefore, is, and always was void from its inception.

3. That, because of this fact, no agency of government, and no court in this land has lawful jurisdiction to enforce any claim arising out of, or involving the Public National Credit System.

4. That the de facto jurisdiction currently being exercised by our government agencies [and psuedo-agencies such as the IRS, CIA, and FBI] and especially Federal District Courts will continue being exercised until successfully challenged with relevant facts and issues, in a court of proper jurisdiction.

5. Finally, we will show, by way of these facts and law, just what we have to do to regain access to our substantive Common Law -- and regain our allodial land titles.

Now, we are ready to go into more detail of the relevant facts surrounding this sequence of events:

Declaration of Independence -- July 4, 1776
As previously stated, many reasons impelled the American colonists to separate themselves from Great Britain, but the more obvious reasons were given in the Declaration itself. Written in the style of a formal complaint, or action at law, it contains a Declaration, a Common-Law Bill of Particulars or Counts, and a prayer to the Supreme Judge of the world.

The stated purpose of the declaration was to assume among the powers of the Earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and the Laws of God entitle them, and that, out of respect for the opinions of mankind, they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. For our purposes, we will zero in on the 13th Count where it is stated that: He (King George) has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving assent to their acts of pretended legislation:" The Declaration then goes on to define the foreign jurisdiction referred to as follows:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us for protecting, by mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states:

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world:
For imposing taxes upon us without our consent:
For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefit of trial by jury:
For abolishing the free system of English laws in our neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies:
For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments:
For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever:
What then, was this jurisdiction foreign to their constitution? Every itemized complaint listed in the 13th count falls under the jurisdiction of Admiralty Law and the Law of Nations. Although the colonists were British subjects, they were being treated as if they were a conquered nation -- such treatment, if such were the actual case, being sanctioned in one jurisdiction only -- and that is the Law of Admiralty.

The Declaration goes on to state that (those United Colonies) "as Free and Independent States, they have the full power to levy War, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do."

Thus, upon the signing of the Declaration, they openly declared to all the nations of the world that they were of equal status -- and that, thereby, they were bound by the Law of Nations when dealing with other nations. The Declaration also clearly expressed the intent to ban the Admiralty jurisdiction from within State borders, or from the domestic law of the states -- the main purpose and reason for separation.

An equally significant event is that it broke the hold of English feudalism over colonial land and instantly converted all land title to allodiums. This fact was clearly analyzed by the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania in the case of Wallace V. Harmstad in 1863, when the court said: "I see no way of solving this question, except by determining whether our Pennsylvania titles are allodial or feudal. --" "I venture to suggest that much of the confusion of ideas that prevails on this subject has come from our retaining, since the American Revolution, the feudal nomenclature of estates and tenures, as fee, freehold, heirs, feoffment, and the like." "

Our question, then, narrows itself down to this: is fealty any part of our land tenures? What Pennsylvanian ever obtained his lands by openly and humbly kneeling before his lord, being ungirt, uncovered, and holding up his hands both together between those of the lord, who sat before him, and there professing that he did become his man from that day forth, for life and limb, and certainly honour, and then receiving a kiss from his lord? This was the oath of fealty which was, according to Sir Martin Wright, the essential feudal bond so necessary to the very notion of a feud. "We are then to regard the Revolution and these Acts of Assembly as emancipating every acre of soil of Pennsylvania from the grand characteristics of the feudal system. Even as to the lands held by the proprietaries (city of Philadelphia) themselves, they held them as other citizens held, under the Commonwealth, and that by a title purely allodial."

US Constitution -- 1787
Admiralty jurisdiction of Congress is defined in Article I, Section 8: "The Congress shall have the power to collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts . . .of the United States. . ." To borrow money on the credit of the United States. To regulate Commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes. To establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of Bankruptcies. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the Law of Nations. To declare War, grant letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water. To raise and support armies. . .

To provide and maintain a Navy. To make rules for. . . Land and Naval forces. To provide for calling forth the militia. . . To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia. . .

-- The powers listed here are all within the jurisdiction of Admiralty and Maritime Law and encompass most of the powers granted to Congress.

Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is defined in Article III, Section 2:
"The judicial power shall extend to all cases in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, the Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Minister and Consuls; to all cases of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction; . . . "

The full scope and meaning of Article III, Section 2, was addressed by Justice Story in the case of De Lovio v. Boit in 1815: What is the true interpretation of the clause -- all cases of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction?" If we examine the etymology, or received use of the words "Admiralty" and "Maritime jurisdiction," we shall find, that they include jurisdiction of all things done upon and relating to the sea, or, in other words, all transactions and proceedings relative to commerce and navigation, and to damages or injuries upon the sea.

In all the great maritime nations of Europe, the same "Admiralty jurisdiction" is uniformly applied to the courts exercising jurisdiction over maritime contract and concerns. We shall find the terms just as familiarly known among the jurists of Scotland, France, Holland and Spain as of England, and applied to their own courts, possessing substantially the same jurisdiction, as the English Admiralty in the reign of Edward the Third. "The clause however of the constitution not only confers Admiralty jurisdiction, but the word "Maritime" is superadded, seemingly ex-industria to remove every latent doubt. "Cases of Maritime jurisdiction" must include all maritime contracts, torts and injuries, which are in the understanding of the Common Law, as well as of the Admiralty, . ."

In Article VI, it is stated: "All debts contracted and engagements entered into, before the adoption of this constitution, shall be valid against the United States under this constitution, as under the Confederation. This constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any thing in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

Clearly, the Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction granted to the Congress and the Judiciary is very broad and extensive. So, what provisions were made in the Constitution to prevent the encroachment of this Admiralty jurisdiction into our Domestic law -- the substantive Common Law -- pursuant to the Declaration of Independence? The answer is in Article I, Section 8, and Article I, Section 10, Clause 1 -- but, first, a little background may be helpful: Beginning as long ago as 1690, the colonies had periodically experimented with credit and unbacked paper as a form of public money.

The results were always the same -- gold and silver coin disappeared from circulation, commerce stagnated, unemployment grew by leaps and bounds, etc. The war for independence exhibited a new development in the system of credit, by the reckless disregard of its bounds. In the words of John Adams, `promises of money were scattered over the land alike by the States and by the United States, until "bills became as plenty as oak leaves." The results were recorded by Peletiah Webster as follows: "Paper money polluted the equity of our laws, turned them into engines of oppression, corrupted the justice of our public administration, destroyed the fortunes of thousands who had confidence in it, enervated the trade, husbandry, and manufactures of our country, and went far to destroy the morality of our people."

Question: What had happened to the domestic, substantive, Common Law fought for in the War For Independence -- the Law that establishes and preserves free institutions? Ten years after the Declaration of Independence, shortly before the Constitutional convention, Washington wrote to Madison: "The wheels of government are clogged, and we are descending into the vale of confusion and darkness. No day was ever more clouded than the present." And on February 3, 1787, Washington wrote to Henry Knox: "If any person had told me that there would have been such a formidable rebellion as exists, I would have thought him fit for a madhouse."

The Constitutional Convention was convened in Philadelphia, May 14, 1787 and George Washington was elected President. Randolph, Governor of Virginia, drew attention to paper money in his opening speech by reminding his hearers that the patriotic authors of the confederation did their work "In the infancy of the science of constitutions and of confederacies, when the havoc of paper money had not been foreseen." The eighth clause of the seventh article, in the first draft of the Constitution, was as follows: "The legislature of the United States shall have the power to borrow money and emit bills on the credit of the United States." By refusing the power of issuing bills of credit, the door was shut, but not barred, on paper money by constitutional law. Although Congress was not authorized to issue notes of the United States, the borrowing clause (thought absolutely necessary for emergencies) left a means of borrowing notes of another entity into circulation. (e.g., a private bank).

On the 28th of August, the convention took steps to remedy that situation and, thereby, guarantee a substance for our domestic Common Law to function on matters involving money. The first draft of the constitution had forbidden the states to emit bills of credit without the consent of Congress.

In convention on the 28th, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Sherman moved to insert after the words "coin money" the words "nor emit bills of credit," nor make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts, and in their words, "making these prohibitions absolute." Mr. Sherman went on to say that he "thought this a favorable crises for crushing paper money. If the consent of the legislature could authorize emissions of it, the friends of paper money, would make every exertion to get into the legislature in order to license it." After discussion, Mr. Wilson's and Mr. Sherman's motion was unanimously agreed to by the convention. The result of this action appears in Article I, Section 10, Clause 1. Its most salient feature is "No State shall make any thing but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts."

After the constitutional convention, it took nearly a year for the states to ratify the Constitution -- primarily because they insisted on certain substantive Common Law rights and principles being specified in the Constitution. These rights and principles appear as the first ten Amendments, called the Bill of Rights. Common Law, operating on money of substance, brought quick relief as documented by George Washington: In a letter, dated June 13, 1790, he wrote to Marquis de LaFayette: "You have doubtless been informed, from time to time, of the happy progress of our affairs. The principle difficulties seem in a great measure to have been surmounted." In a letter, dated March 19, 1791, he again wrote to LaFayette: "Our country, my dear sir, is fast progressing in its political importance and social happiness." On July 19, 1791, he wrote to Catherine McCauley: "The United States enjoys a sense of prosperity and tranquillity under the new government that could hardly have been hoped for." And on July 20, 1791, he wrote to David Humphrey, "Tranquility reigns among the people with the disposition towards the general government, which is likely to preserve it. Our public credit stands on that high ground which three years ago it would have been considered as a species of madness to have foretold.

Judiciary Act (1789):

On September 24, 1789, Congress passed the Judiciary Act. Section 9 of this Act dealt with equity, admiralty and maritime jurisdictions of our courts. Congress said that "the forms and modes of proceeding in causes of equity and of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction shall be according to the course of Civil Law."

Section 34 dealt exclusively with the Common Law jurisdiction of the Federal courts wherein Congress said: "That the laws of the several States, except where the Constitution, treaties or statutes of the United States shall otherwise require or provide, shall be regarded as rules of decision in trials at Common Law in the courts of the United States in cases where they apply."

By congressional action in 1792, the form and modes of proceeding in such cases were directed to be "according to the principles, rules and usage, which belong to courts of equity and to courts of Admiralty respectively, as contradistinguished from courts of Common Law."

Thus, in 1792, Congress recognized three separate and distinct jurisdictions of the federal courts; Equity, Admiralty and Common Law. By "jurisdiction" we mean lawful authority to act on the subject matter involved in a controversy, a particular thing within that subject matter, and authority to act against a particular person associated with the subject matter. cmlaw3.htm

There are only Three Jurisdictions -- and No More

Part Four of the British System

All three of these jurisdictions have cognizance over civil matters, as contradistinguished from criminal matters, depending on the subject matter in controversy and nature of the cause.

If, it is an action at Common Law properly brought into a common law court, the court is bound by the principles, rules and procedures of Common Law. If the action is properly brought before an Equity or Admiralty court, the court is bound by the principles, rules and procedures of the civil law dealing with the subject matter.

Equity has no cognizance over criminal matters and, therefore, in criminal cases there are only two jurisdictions -- every criminal case must be prosecuted either in the jurisdiction of Common Law, or that of the Law of Admiralty. In criminal cases, Common Law courts are bound by the principles, rules and procedures of the Common Law. In Admiralty cases, the court is bound by the principles, rules and procedures of Admiralty and Maritime Law.

You will see, subsequently, that State courts have concurrent jurisdiction in both Common Law and Maritime law concerning certain types of cases and subject matter. You also will see that in these cases, if the subject matter or nature of this cause is Maritime that, even if it is heard in a Common Law court, that court is bound to apply the Maritime Law to the case. We also will show that no Admiralty court in the land as any jurisdiction to hear Common Law issues.

Briefly, here are some distinctive differences between the principles, rules and procedures of common law and civil law:

Common Law
Right to trial by jury
12 judges -- the jury
12 judges:
control the trial
judge justice of law determine admissibility of evidence apply law to facts render verdict according to conscience

Civil Law
No right to trial by jury
ONE judge (chancelor)
One chancelor controls trial:
jury is advisory to chancelor chancelor determines admissibility of evidence jury must accept the law as given by chancelor jury renders verdict according to law dictated and evidence presented
The Supreme Court analysed these two sections of the judiciary act in the Huntress case in 1840: The Huntress case was a libel in personam against the owners of the steamship Huntress. The Court said: "In these, and in analogous cases, the only question that can be considered as an open one is, whether they come within that clause of the Constitution that says, the judicial power of the United States shall extend to "all causes of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction." If they do, then the original cognizance of them is by the ninth section of the Judiciary Act, given to the district court". . . . "The argument, that this clause is controlled by the Seventh Amendment, which secures the right of trial by jury in all suits at Common Law, where the value in controversy exceeds twenty dollars, has no application to the constitutional grant; because these are not suits at Common Law";

And, in the DeLovio vs. Boit case, Justice Story said: "And, the ground is made stronger by the consideration, that the right of trial by jury is preserved by the constitution in all suits at common law, where the value in controversy exceeds twenty dollars; and by the statute this right is excluded in all cases of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction." Here we have a clear statement, by the Supreme Court that there is no access to Common Law in courts of Admiralty.

In 1832, the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania very ably addressed the meaning and intent of the 7th amendment in the case of Bains v. The Schooner James and Catherine, as follows: ". . . by attempting to introduce the admiralty jurisdiction of the civil law, . . . a foundation is laid for interminable conflicts of jurisdiction between the courts of the State and the Union." "It is vain to contend that the Seventh Amendment will be any efficient guarantee for the right, in suits at Common law, if an Admiralty jurisdiction exists in the United States, commensurate with what is claimed by the claimant in this case. Its assertion is, in my opinion, a renewal of the contest between legislative power and royal prerogative, the Common and the Civil Law, striving for mastery; the one to secure, the other to take away the trial by jury, . . . judicial power must first annul the Seventh Amendment, or judicial subtly transform a suit at Common Law, into a case of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction, before I take cognizance as such a case as this without a jury."

Thus, Admiralty is Civil Law, and, once again, Common Law is not accessible in courts of Admiralty -- and, as J. Reuben Clark said: there is a constant ideological conflict between Civil and Common Law for the control of society.

In the preface to his book "Honest Money", Dr. Norburn wrote: "What a marvellous country was this new world -- AMERICA. Its coastline, dotted with deep harbors, seemed endless. It had great mountains and great rivers. There were magnificent forests and vast fertile plains. Its earth was rich with minerals. Those who came to live in this veritable paradise were of sturdy stock. They were industrious, saving and ingenious. They had the best government ever devised. How does it happen that now, after more than three hundred years of intense toil, the inhabitants of this nation find themselves more than ten trillion dollars in debt? They have received no benefits to justify this debt. To whom do they owe it? How were the claims acquired?

As you will see, the factual answers to Dr. Norburn's questions, and proper application of the appropriate law to these facts, provide us the necessary fact and law to build a winning case that can restore our access to Common Law; and can restore our allodial land titles.

Introduction of the George Rapp Society:
First Successful communistic, religious, organization in the United States.

The society was designed for profit making (for some) and its formula included a controlled economy under limited liability, which, as you will see before this rresentation is over, are the same ingredients of the Federal Reserve formula that is running this country today! This is the formula that brought admiralty inland and has barred our access to substantive Common Law.

George Rapp Harmony Society -- 1805 (Re: Schriber v. Rapp, Pa. Supreme Court, 351) George Rapp founded the "Harmony Society" in 1805, at Harmony, in Beaver County, Pa., subsequently moved to Harmony on the Wabash, in the state of Indiana, and then moved to "Economy" in Beaver County, Pa. The nature of this society was brought to light in the case of Schriber v. Rapp in 1836. This case was an action of account brought by Jacob Schriber, administrator of Peter Schriber, deceased, against George Rapp and others, doing business in company under the name of Harmony Society. To sustain the action, the plaintiff proved by testimony that the Harmony Society possessed a great deal of wealth in the form of personal property, real property, factories, etc. It was a pool of property.

Witness, Dr. Smith, once a member of the association stated: "They intended to make money when they entered into it; it was a part of their object. I believe there were Articles at Harmony, but everyone was not obliged to sign it. Equal rights, equal enjoyments and equal profits. Rapp said it should not be incorporated, for that would take too much power from him. Rapp was not elected. He assumed the power that Moses and Aaron had. If anyone would not do what he said, he would say, `What have you to do about it? I have the power -- I could crush you. All you have to do is obey.' He got worse as he got wealthy."

George Rapp was a preacher -- and a very persuasive one. Adam Shelly testified on behalf of the plaintiff respecting the first articles of association on the Wabash. "The people were directed to come in companies, one of them read it and the rest signed it. As to the article signed at Economy, Rapp made a long speech. Said any one who would sign it would have his name written in the Lamb's Book of Life. If they did not, their names would be blotted out, and God would ask him about it."

Defendants, to sustain the issue on their part, produced in evidence the articles of association. Some pertinent excerpts are as follows:

Article 1: We the undersigned, for ourselves and our heirs, executors and administrators, do hereby give, grant and forever convey, to the said George Rapp and his associates, and their heirs, and assigns, all our property. . . for the benefit of said association or community.

Article 2: We do further covenant and agree to and with the said George Rapp and his associates, that we will severally submit faithfully to the laws and regulations of said community, . . . therefore holding ourselves bound to promote the interest and welfare of the said community, not only by the labor of our own hands, but also by that of our children, our families and all others who now are or hereafter may be under our control.

Article 3: . . .that we will never claim or demand either for ourselves, our children, or for anyone belonging to us, directly or indirectly, any compensation, wages or reward whatever, for our, or their labor or services, rendered to the said community, . . .

Article 5: The said George Rapp and his associates further agree to supply the undersigned severally with all the necessaries of life. . . and to such extent as their circumstances may require.

Article 6: If any of the undersigned. . . should withdraw from the association, then the said George Rapp and his associates agree to refund to him or them the value of all such property without interest, as he or they may have brought into the community. . . Said value to be refunded. . . as the said George Rapp and his associates shall determine.

The court ruled for defendant George Rapp on the basis that "an association for the purpose expressed is prohibited neither by statute nor the common law." And the court also stated: "It is supposed, however, that as the intestate had power, by the articles, to secede from the society and take out whatever he brought into it, the successor to his personal rights may exercise it as his representative. Such, however, are not the terms of the articles. . . The right of accession, therefore, is intransmissable." The court also stated that "the law knows no duress by advise and persuasion", and, therefore there was no fraud in the inducement to sign the article.

In analyzing this case, we see that: 1. The complaint was brought under the jurisdiction of common law. 2. The plaintiff lost because of the common law and constitutionally protected right to contract. 3. Under the common law, the only way to break the contract was to prove fraud. 4. According to testimony, the members of the association "intended to make money when they entered into it."

The witnesses did not explain how they expected to "make money" under the terms of the contract. The only reasonable explanation is that they were gambling that they would be last survivors in the Association -- and share in the distribution of assets; and/or they expected to benefit from limited liability by sharing any loses of the association with the other members. Last survivors take all in a wagering policy, and mutual sharing of losses is insurance.

In analyzing the George Rapp Association formula, we see:
1. The contract contained a forfeiture clause. (Members would "never claim compensation;" upon withdrawal, value of property would be refunded "without interest" -- The right of accession of property donated to the Association is intransmissable to heirs of the decedent.

2. Rapp and his associates had no risk as the insurer. They not only had nothing to lose in the event of death of a contributor and member -- but gained all property donated with no possible claim from heirs of the decedent.

3. It was a controlled economy -- under the exclusive control of George Rapp and his associates.

4. There was no accountability to members of the Association. . .

You will see, later on, that if Schriber had taken these facts into an Admiralty court and applied the proper Admiralty Law to these facts -- he should have won his case.

One additional note on George Rapp --- George Rapp continued to gain affluence and prestige -- and dignitaries came from all over the world to his mansion at "Economy" to marvel at the fantastic success of his society.

Why shouldn't he be successful? By contract, he had slave labor, donations of untold wealth from members who, if they chose to withdraw before they died, could only get back the equivalent of what they had donated without interest; and, if they died as a member, the property and assets donated remained in the society as long as it existed.

George Rapp died in 1847; however, the society went on. Evidence will show that the tremendous wealth accumulated by this society was subsequently used to fashion a George Rapp Society on a much larger scale -- with plans to ultimately encompass the world in a "superstate" controlled and governed by mercantile interests, under the law of admiralty -- a superstate wherein all the property in the world, and all the people on space-ship "Earth", are pledged to the benefit of this World-wide mercantile association. The "New World Order?

DeLovio v. Bott [1815]:
In 1815, in the case of DeLovio v. Boit, the Supreme Court ruled the following: [Opinion written by Justice Story]: "The Admiralty, from the highest antiquity, has exercised a very extensive criminal jurisdiction, and punished offenses by fine and imprisonment. The celebrated inquisition at Queensborough, in the reign of Edward III, would alone be decisive. And, even at Common Law it had been adjudged, that the Admiralty might fine for contempt. . . Appeal, and not a Writ of Error, lies for its decrees. . . Yet, it is conceded on all sides, that of maritime hypothecations of the Admiralty depends, or ought to depend, as to contracts upon the subject matter, i.e. whether maritime or not; and as to torts, upon locality. . .

Neither the Judicial Act nor the Constitution, which it follows, limit the Admiralty Jurisdiction of the District Court in any respect to place. It is bounded only by the nature of the cause over which it is to decide. On the whole, I am, without the slightest hesitation, ready to pronounce, that the delegation of cognizance of `all civil cases of Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction' to the Courts of the United States comprehends all maritime contracts, torts, and injuries. The latter branch is necessarily bounded by locality; the former extends over all contracts, (wheresoever they may be made or executed, or whatsoever may be the form of the stipulation) which relate to the navigation, business or commerce of the sea.

The next inquiry is, what are properly to be deemed "maritime contracts." Happily, in this particular there is little room for controversy. All civilians and jurists agree, that in this appellation are included, among other things, marine hypothecations . . .and, what is more material to our present purpose, policies of insurance. . . My judgement accordingly is, that policies of insurance are within (though not exclusively within) the Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction of the United States." cmlaw4.htm

Introducing Professor Frederich List

Part Five of the British System

We will now address the subject of Dr. List's letters. The letters of Dr. List, and the economic theories he espoused in those letters, will become very significant to you when you see that his economic theories are being applied against you today by the Federal Reserve -- and are, thereby, controlling every aspect of your life.

Professor List represented the society of German merchants and manufacturers for the purpose of obtaining a German system of national economy. His plans of reform proving obnoxious to the government, he was accused of high treason and thrown in prison, and was subsequently exiled from Germany. He settled in Pennsylvania and studied and lectured on the doctrines of political economy. During his attention to that subject, he voluntarily addressed a series of letters which were published in the National Gazette. Professor List was also a member of the George Rapp Harmony Society. In his first letter he tells us what he means by the term "National Economy."

Editor's Note: The author's negative opinion of List's economics is not shared by L. LaRouche, economist and an advocate of the original American System of economics. (Information on Lyndon Larouche can be found on his website at: Lyndon Larouche Presidential Campaign

"National Economy" teaches by what means a certain nation, in her particular situation, may direct and regulate the economy of individuals, and restrict the economy of mankind, either to prevent foreign restrictions and foreign powers within herself, . . . without restricting the economy of individuals and the economy of mankind more than the welfare of the people permits."

It is common knowledge that we have a "National Economy" today that directs and regulates the economy of individuals, and that of mankind -- and that this economy is controlled and regulated by the Federal Reserve System.

Swift v. Tyson, 16 Peters 1 (1842)
In 1842, in the case of Swift v. Tyson, the Supreme Court held that there was a general Federal common law (i.e., at that time, access to substantive common law existed at the federal level).

Limited Liability Act -- 1851
On March 3, 1851, the Congress of the United States enacted the Limited Liability Act, (codified at 46 USC 181-189), as amended in 1875, 1877, 1935, 1936, and the Act of 1884 cover the entire subject of limitations. The Purpose of this act was to limit the liability for the payment of debts of persons who were ship owners involved in maritime commerce. This act was the result of a US Supreme Court decision titled, "The New Jersey Steam Navigation Co. vs. the Merchants Bank, 6 Howard 42, (1848)." In the New Jersey Steam Nav. Case, the High Court ruled that under the Common Law, ship owners were liable for the acts of their ship masters. In other words, if a party were to ship goods on board a ship and something happened to the goods such as being destroyed or damaged by the perils of the sea, the ship owner was responsible to the owner of the goods.

The ship owner must pay to the owner of the goods the amount the goods were worth. If the ship owner didn't pay the debt, the owner of the goods could sue the ship owner and collect. If the ship owner failed to pay, the creditor could then file a lien on the ship which was called a maritime lien which does not require possession of the object. This Act specifically gives limited liability on shipments of "bills of any bank or public body." America was founded upon Maritime or Admiralty Law because shipping was the only means of commerce at the founding of the country.

The Congress decided in 1851 that, as a result of the New Jersey Steam Nav. Case, persons would no longer be drawn into ownership of ships because of the liability involved. Shipping on the high seas is very risky especially at that period of time.

After the Limited Liability Act was enacted [1889], the US Supreme Court in Butler vs. Boston & Savannah Steamship Co., 130 US 527, ruled as follows; "But it is enough to say that the rule of limited responsibility is now our maritime rule. It is the rule by which through the Act of Congress we have announced that we propose to administer justice in maritime cases."

"The rule of limited liability prescribed by the Act of 1851 is nothing more than the old maritime rule administered in courts of admiralty in all countries except England from time immemorial and if this were not so, the subject matter itself is one that belongs to the department of Maritime Law."

Tontine Insurance -- 1868
In order to evade the usury laws which had prevented the growth of a funded system of national insurance, governments had frequently resorted to the issue of annuities and child endowments as a means of raising funds. The tontine was a somewhat later development, having been put into operation in France during the year 1689. It took its name from that of its originator, Lorenzo Tonti, a Neopolitan by birth, who was attracted to Paris by the regime of Mazarin. In its original form the tontine was a loan, "In which the premium was never to be repaid, but the entire interest on the loan was to be divided each year among the survivors or the original subscribers."

The chief characteristic, and trademark, of tontine is that the pool of assets is divided among the survivors, at the options of those subscribers who dropped out, or did not survive until the time for distribution had arrived. It was a wagering policy, just like that of the George Rapp Society. The Equitable Life Insurance Company, in 1868, introduced the deferred dividend system, which was really an application of the tontine principle. The most serious flaw in the deferred dividend system was the inability of the insured to compel an accounting. The general rule is that the policy holder is not entitled to compel the company to account for dividends. Nor can the policyholder "compel the distribution of the surplus fund in other manner or at any time, or in any other amounts than that provided for in the contract."

As stated in the report of the Armstrong Committee, "the plan of deferring dividends for long periods. . . has undoubtedly facilitated large accumulations, providing apparently abundant means for doubtful uses on the one hand, while concealing on the other the burden imposed upon the policy holders. . ." According to George L. Armhein, Instructor in Insurance at the University of Pennsylvania, ". . . deferred dividends were prohibited by law in the legislation (Pa.) of 1906 and subsequent years. Thus came to an end a system which in 1898 had superseded to a very large extent that of annual dividends, and which in 1915 seemed antiquated."

Question: What made it "antiquated" in 1915? According to Mr. Armhein, it was outlawed in 1906, but didn't seem antiquated until 1915! John K. Tarbox, The commissioner of Insurance the State of Massachusetts had this to say about tontine in his annual report: "The false idea of life insurance as investment begat the equally false conception of life insurance as a bet, and the latter gave birth to the modern tontine, which is a wager."

". . .In the tontine the forfeitures go to enrich the individual survivors of the special class of policy holders who enter the compact, constituting a company liability instead of a company asset, for the protection of its policy obligations. . . The stake played for, rather than the game itself, constitutes the chief offense. Our law condemns, forbids, and makes void the contract of forfeiture." "As was truly testified before the committee of the New York Assembly, in 1877, . . . the tontine policy is taken for purposes of investment by a set of men who would not insure their lives at all. The inducement to the investment is. . .the expected profits from forfeitures. . ."

"Aside from the moral quality of the matter, -- concerning which I waive controversy, -- the considerations which the public aspect seems to me principally to invite are these; First, whether it is prudent to make of our insurance companies great banking establishments, . . .and, second, whether an institution organized as the life insurance system was, for a benevolent and unselfish use, shall be combined with enterprises of selfish speculation as the tontine undeniably is." I am strongly persuaded of the implicitly and positive danger of magnifying the banking feature of life insurance institutions, to accommodate modern plans of tontine speculation and endowment investment.

John Tarbox was clearly saying that, at that time, there were modern plans to make insurance companies (specifically, tontine insurance companies) great banking institutions.

The tontine had been declared unlawful in several states and these people knew that they had to do something to protect their money. They brought over the son of one of the big banking families from Europe, Paul Warburg, from the House of Warburg, which dates back to the Hanseatic League of merchants. cmlaw5.htm

The Federal Reserve

Part Six of the British System

And, it was he (Paul Warburg) who sold the American public on creating a Federal Reserve Bank, so that there wouldn't be any more panics and depressions, that they would be able to even out the economy by control of the money supply. By this one Act, the American people lost their independence. It, in fact, was the opposite of the British surrender at Yorktown. Giving control of our credit and money supply to a private banking organization, by the name of the Federal Reserve, was the surrender of our independence.

Congress passed the Federal Reserve Act on December 23, 1913 wherein it made Federal Reserve Notes debt obligations to the United States, and authorized the Federal Reserve to be the issuers of these debt obligations. The Federal Reserve Act also stipulated that the interest on the debt (to the Federal Reserve as a maritime lender to the United States) was to be paid in gold. No provision was made in the Act for paying off the principle. There was also a proviso that the people had 20 years to challenge the Act . . .

NOTE: 1. Under the law of Nations, an action on Quo Warranto can be brought within 20 years. Quo Warranto, in this case, would be an action in the Court of Admiralty demanding "By whose Authority", and proof of that authority, the Act was implemented.

2. "Public policy" is part and parcel of the Law of Nations. The Act was never challenged in a court of proper jurisdiction (admiralty), probably because anyone who wanted, or tried, to challenge it didn't know how.

On June 20, 1932, in the midst of the Great Depression, Congressman Louis T. McFadden addressed the House of Representatives on this subject. Representative McFadden had previously served as president of the First National Bank, Canton, Pa.; and later he served as chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency. Following are selected excerpts from his address: "Some people think the Federal Reserve Banks are United States Government Institutions. They are not government institutions. They are private credit monopolies which prey upon the people of the United States for the benefit of themselves and their foreign customers;" "They should not have foisted that kind of currency, namely an asset currency, on the United States Government. They should not have made the government liable on the private debts of individuals and corporations and, least of all on the private debts of foreigners."

"The Federal Reserve Notes, therefore, in form have some of the qualities of government paper money, but, in substance, are almost purely asset currency possessing a government guaranty against which contingency the government has made no provision whatever." "Mr. Chairman, there is nothing like the Federal Reserve pool of confiscated bank deposits in the world. It is a public trough of American wealth. . ." "I see no reason why the American taxpayers should be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the European and Asiatic customers of the Federal Reserve Banks."

"Is not it high time that we had an audit of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Banks and an examination of all our governments bonds and securities and public monies instead of allowing the corrupt and dishonest Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Reserve Banks to speculate with those securities and this cash in the notorious open discount market of New York City?" "Every effort has been made by the Federal Reserve Board to conceal its power but the truth is the Federal Reserve Board has usurped the Government of the United States." "Mr. Chairman, when the Federal Reserve Act was passed, the people of the United States did not perceive that a world system was being set up here that the United States was to be lowered to the position of a coolie country. . . and was to supply financial power to an international superstate -- a superstate controlled by international bankers and international industrialists acting together to enslave the World for their own pleasure."

Congressman Wright Patman, of the House Banking and Currency Committee said in 1952: "In fact there has never been an independent audit of either of the 12 banks of the Federal Reserve Board that has been filed with the Congress where a Member would have an opportunity to inspect it. The General Accounting Office does not have jurisdiction over the Federal Reserve."

Question: Why does not the General Accounting of the United States have jurisdiction over the Federal Reserve to demand an accounting? The answer is that accountability of the Federal Reserve is not in the contract, the Federal Reserve Act, just as it was not in the contract of the George Rapp Society or tontine insurance policies. The Federal Reserve Act provides for accountability of "member banks," But, by definition, in the Act itself, the Federal Reserve banks are not "member banks" and, therefore are exempt from accountability -- by contract.

Congressman McFadden and Congressman Patman, both experts in banking and finance, did not understand this. How many senators and representatives that signed the Federal Reserve Act in 1913, do you suppose, understood what they were signing? Not only with respect to this issue, but others that have been raised from time to time?

What about the numerous attempts to audit Fort Knox?? The Federal Reserve Act stipulates that gold owned by the Federal Reserve may be stored in storage facilities of the United States. Now, if Congress cannot compel an accounting for Fort Knox, who, do you suppose owns the gold?

Now, we may ask ourselves another question at this point -- Is the Federal Reserve a maritime lender, or is it an insurance underwriter, to United States? Some additional information from an Essay on Maritime Loans, may help us decide this question: "The contract of maritime loan approaches more nearly to that of Insurance. There is a strong analogy between them. In their effects they are construed on the same principles." "In one contract, the lender bears the sea risks, in the other, the underwriter." "In the one, the maritime interest is the price of the peril; and this term corresponds with the premium which is paid on the other."

So we see that it really is immaterial, under Maritime Law, whether the Federal Reserve is thought of as a maritime lender, or as an insurance underwriter, to the United States. In either case the lender, or underwriter, bears the risks -- and the maritime laws compelling performance in paying the interest, or premium, are one and the same. Also, in either case, assets can be hypothecated as security for the price of the peril.

Speaking of risk, let's see what risk the Federal Reserve is incurring as lender, or underwriter, to the United States in exchange for United States Securities: Mariner Eccles, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, held the following exchange with Congressman Patman before the House Banking and Currency Committee on September 30, 1941:

Congressman Patman: "Mr. Eccles, how did you get the money to buy those two billions of government securities?"

Mr. Eccles: "We created it."

Patman: "Out of what?"

Mr. Eccles: "Out of the right to issue credit money."

And, from further testimony from the Federal Reserve itself: In a publication from the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, entitled "Two Faces of Debt," -- "Currency is so widely accepted as a medium of exchange that most people do not think of it as debt."

In the Chicago bank publication entitled "Modern Money Mechanics," we find: "Neither paper currency nor deposits have value as commodities. Intrinsically, a dollar bill is just a piece of paper. Deposits are merely book entries. Coins do have some intrinsic value as metal, but for less than their face amount." "What, then makes these instruments -- checks, paper money, and coins -- acceptable at face value in payment of all debts and for other monetary uses? Mainly, it is the confidence people have that they will be able to exchange such money for real goods and services whenever they choose to do so." "Confidence in these forms of money also seems to be tied in some way to the fact that assets exist on the books of the government and the banks equal to the amount of the money outstanding, even though most of these assets are no more than pieces of paper (such as customer's promissory notes), and it is well understood that money is not redeemable in them."

Modern Money Mechanics publication from Chicago, once again: "Deposits are merely book entries. . . demand deposits are liabilities of commercial banks. The banks stand ready to convert such deposits into currency or transfer their ownership at the request of depositors."

From the Federal Reserve bank of St. Louis Review: "But what induces the non-banking public to accept liabilities of private, profit-making institutions such as banks?" "The decrease in purchasing power incurred by holders of money due to inflation imparts gains to the insurers of money. . ." "The gains which accrue to issuers of money are derived from the difference between the costs of issuing money and the initial purchasing power of new money in circulation. Such gains are called 'seigniorage'. If the goods and services for which the issuer exchanges money have a market value greater than that of resources used to produce the money, then the issurer receives a net gain."

From a book entitled "The Federal Reserve System -- Its Purposes and Functions," published by the Federal Reserve Board in 1939: "Federal Reserve Bank Credit resembles bank credit in general, but under the law it has a limited and special use -- as a source of member bank reserve funds. It is itself a form of money authorized for special purposes, convertible into other forms of money, convertible therefrom, and readily controllable as to amount. Federal Reserve Bank credit, therefore, as already stated, does not consist of funds that the Reserve authorities "get" somewhere in order to lend, but constitutes funds that they are empowered to CREATE."(emphasis added)

In his notes entitled "A Primer on Money," Congressman Patman tells that upon hearing that Federal Reserve Banks hold a large amount of cash, he went to two of its regional banks. He asked to see their bonds. He was led into vaults and shown great piles of government bonds upon which the people are taxed for interest Mr. Patman then asked to see their cash. The bank officials seemed confused. When Mr. Patman repeated the request, they showed him some ledgers and bank checks.

Mr. Patman warns us to remember that: "The cash, in truth, does not exist and never has existed. What we call `cash reserves' are simply bookkeeping credits entered upon the ledgers of the Federal Reserve Banks. These credits are created by the Federal Reserve Banks and then passed along through the banking system."

So, by the testimony of the Federal Reserve itself, we see: 1. It creates money out of thin air -- at no cost or risk to the Federal Reserve System -- from its right to issue credit, granted in the Federal Reserve Act. 2. It gains from the inflation it creates. 3. Money is not redeemable in its liabilities. 4.Demand deposits are liabilities of banks. 5. Federal Reserve Notes are liabilities of Federal Reserve. 6. Its gains, as issuers of credit money, are the difference between the cost of creating that credit (essentially nothing) and the initial purchasing power when the new money is put into circulation. cmlaw6.htm

In a reprint of the book "THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM -- Its Purpose and Functions," S. W. Adams, uses the Federal Reserve's own published figures to give us an example of how lucrative this no risk scheme is to the Federal Reserve: The pauper (The Federal Reserve System) with assets of only $52 billion with no productive know-how, with no productions of goods, and fewer than 100,000 stockholders, loaned (?) the rich man (The United States of America) with a trillion in productive capacity and know-how with well over $600 billion in assets and 170 million stockholders, including the aforesaid 100,000 bank stockholders, $250 billion to fight World War II.

Can you imagine the greatest corporation on earth, the Government of the US with 170 million alert full-of-know-how stockholders, and assets running over $600 billion, turning to a small segment of its population, with fewer than 100,000 stockholders and assets of only $52 billion to borrow money?

Can you conceive of Rockefeller saying to his chauffeur, "Tom, I am transferring my personal bank account which is well over $1 billion, to your account. You may spend it as you please; provided as often as I ask for money, you will let me have it. Of course, I will give you my note for cash I receive, and try to rustle from my children enough money to pay you interest on the borrowed money." Well, that is exactly what Congress did in 1913 when it passed the Federal Reserve Act.

To fight World War II, we gave the bankers of the United States $250 billion in US Bonds that we might use our own, the Nation's credit. By using the reserve multiplier, this gave them $1 trillion 250 billion bank credit. What an unearned bonanza for the banksters! Credits are to the bankers what your deposits are to you. They can lend them, or use them to buy investments -- it is cash to the bankers!

So, by adding the $250 billion in US Bonds we absolutely gave to them their $1 trillion 250 billion bank credit, and we find that the bankers (the then paupers) came out of World War II $1,500 billion richer, and the (then rich man) the United States Government came out $250 billion in debt to the bankers (the paupers) thanks to the stupidity and/or venality of our Congressmen, newspapers, journals, and educated people of the nation. Clearly, by their own testimony, the Federal Reserve, as a maritime lender or insurer, not only has nothing at risk (i.e., nothing to lose in the maritime venture for profit) -- but can only gain on a scale that is almost inconceivable, just like the tontine insurance schemes, and just like the George Rapp Harmony Society.

The significance of this will become very apparent when we apply the law to the fact. These same people who were given control of our public money system, for the ostensible purpose of evening out the economy, using Professor List's formula for a "National Economy", caused a recession in 1921 -- and precipitated the crash of `29 by increasing the member bank reserve requirements from 15% to 20% -- thereby forcing a huge liquidity squeeze. This set the stage for what was to follow in 1933 by way of bankrupting the treasuries of the States and Federal governments -- they could no longer pay their debts at law to the Federal Reserve -- drastic measures were obviously necessary -- we had a "National Emergency" on our hands!

In March of 1933, President Roosevelt had Congress pass an Emergency Measures Act. The text used in this act was the "Trading With The Enemies Act" of 1917 which revoked the constitutional rights of Germans and allies of Germany living in the USA. These people were forbidden to carry on trade with Germany and were subject to fines and/or imprisonment for showing any anti-USA sentiment. The Emergency Powers Act of 1933 eliminated section five of the Trading With The Enemies Act. This section exempted US citizens from the act. Thus the Citizens of the United States were put on status as enemies of the United States.

This allowed the President to rule by decree (executive order) as under marshall rule. On April 5, 1933, President Roosevelt issued an executive order calling for the return of all gold in private hiding to the Federal Reserve by May 1 under the pain of ten years imprisonment and $10,000 fine. Hoarders were hunted and prosecuted, Attorney General Cummings declared: "I have no patience with people who follow a course that in war time would class them as slackers. If I have to make an example of some people, I'll do it cheerfully."

On May 12, 1933, the California Assembly and Senate adopted Assembly Joint Resolution No. 26. This resolution stated in part: "Whereas, it would appear that, with proper use and control of modern means of production and distribution, it would be possible for practically all persons to have and enjoy a fair share of material goods in return for services; and whereas, such use, control and appropriate economic planning are not feasible except through the direction and supervision of a single, centralized agency and the removal of certain constitutional limitations; now, therefore be it resolved by the Assembly and Senate, jointly, that the Legislature of the State of California hereby memorializes the Congress to propose an amendment to the constitution of the United States reading substantially as follows:

"The Congress and the several states, by its authority and under its control, may regulate or provide for the regulation of hours of work, compensation for work, the production of commodities and the rendition of services, in such manner as shall be necessary and proper to foster orderly production and equitable distribution, to provide ruminative work for the maximum number of persons, to promote adequate compensation for work performed, and to safeguard the economic stability and welfare of the nation;' "resolved, that the Legislature of California respectfully urges that, pending the submission and adoption of such amendment, the Congress provide for such economic planning and regulation as may be necessary and proper under present economic conditions and legally possible under the existing provisions of the Constitution;

And be it further Resolved, that the chief clerk of the Assembly is hereby instructed forthwith to transmit copies of this resolution to the President of the United States, and to the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives and each of the senators and representatives from California in the Congress of the United States." May 12, 1933." cmlaw7.htm

But, how about the Federal Reserve itself? Does not his repeal allow them to, once again, demand payment in gold for the interest on public debt -- pursuant to the terms of the Federal Reserve Act? Remember, this act contains a provision made with respect to an obligation purporting to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold -- and that provision appears to be back in effect. If this be so, what can we expect to happen when the bankers present their demands -- knowing that there won't be enough gold to meet them and no hope of acquiring enough gold?

Any good banker knows that, in this situation, it is foreclosure time -- it is time for distribution of the pool to the last survivors. These facts paint a picture so complex that it is almost beyond comprehension, so a summary of the most salient facts is appropriate at this time. The same people that said give us the Federal Reserve Charter and we will see that there is stability to our economy forced us into a recession in 1921, by a contraction of the Federal Reserve requirements of the fractional reserve to the various banks. This contracted the money supply by increasing the reserve requirement from 15% to 20%. They forced a huge liquidity squeeze in 1929, which brought on the depression.

This precipitated our inability to pay off interest on the debt to the Federal Reserve -- so in 1933 Congress entered the United States into bankruptcy, by the suspension of the payment of debt in gold mandated by HJR-192 in 1933. This one act terminated national Federal Common Law.

This one act breached the flood gates which held the maritime law at the tidelands (with the ebb and flow of the tide) and permitted Maritime Admiralty Law and its jurisdiction to sweep over the American people -- because we substituted the payment of debt in lawful gold with discharge of debt under limited liability in maritime. What we have in lieu of lawful money is federal reserve notes of an insurance underwriting scheme that is a tontine -- just like the George Rapp Society was a tontine and just like the early tontine insurance programs.

Now, you may say to us at this point, how is it that a communistic, religious society that's operated for economic profit, and insurance companies, and the Federal Reserve -- how do these totally interlock? In all three cases there was a pool of assets involved. In all three cases, limited liability was involved, which is insurance. In all three cases, there was a policy of survivors take all -- that is a wagering policy.

In the George Rapp Society, people and property were pledged to the pool. In a tontine, premium payments were pledged to the pool. In the Federal Reserve, premium payments, people and property are pledged to the pool.

In all three cases, there was no accountability to the members or subscribers. In all three cases, there was forfeiture for withdrawal. In the George Rapp Society it was labor interest and intransmissability of property to heirs. In tontine it was the premiums and the interest thereon. In the Federal Reserve, it is Social Security, Unemployment Premiums, property Tax, etc. For example, what happens if you withdraw from social security, or from unemployment insurance, or stop paying property taxes -- is not a forfeiture demanded?

In the George Rapp Society, List's "National Economy" was practiced on a small scale -- in the Federal Reserve, List's "National Economy" is regulating and controlling our economy.

In the George Rapp Society, there was no risk to the insurer, George Rapp and his associates. In the Federal Reserve, there is no risk to the Maritime lender, or insurance underwriter.

In the George Rapp Society, labor was pledged, and labor was the premium for the privilege of remaining in the society for the chance of "making a profit". -- In the Federal Reserve, labor is pledged to obtain the units of credit (Federal Reserve Scrip) to pay the interest to the maritime lender, or the maritime insurance underwriter (one and the same under maritime law).

In the George Rapp Society, George Rapp had no vested interest in the lives of the society members. In the Federal Reserve, the Federal Reserve has no vested interest in the lives of the United States, or its citizens, nor does it have any risk at stake in the maritime venture of the Public National Credit System. In the tontine, the premium was never to be repaid in the original tontine scheme; in the Federal Reserve, no provision is made to ever pay the principle of the loan from the Federal Reserve, in the Federal Reserve Act -- which is the contract between the United States and the Federal Reserve System.

I am sure that some of you in this audience has performed service in the Navy. Imagine yourself as a seaman aboard a ship, in this case the ship is the credit commune in a joint maritime venture for profit -- beholding to the class A Stockholders, the owners of the ship, the Federal Reserve. The Captain of the ship, for arguments sake, let's say is the Secretary of the Treasury.

Now let's look at Common Law versus Maritime: First of all, under the Common Law, the rights of privacy are respected. Aboard the ship, on the credit voyage, in the credit commune, there is no privacy. The Captain has the right at any time to invade your privacy. Under Common Law, we always deal in substance -- by substance we mean with gold and silver, and we are dealing with real goods and services.

Under Maritime Law, in the credit commune, we are dealing with bills, notes, cheques, and credit -- and of course now credit cards and fictitious documents known as stocks and bonds and so on down the line.

Under Common Law, we protect the right of the family -- understand that this Common Law comes from the early law of the tribes of Israel and from the laws and teachings of Jesus and the Bible. In fact the Common Law and the Bible are totally compatible. But, in and aboard the ship of the credit commune there is no marriage, there is no family unit -- oh yes, we know the Captain performs marriages aboard ship for people travelling aboard ship -- but for all practical purposes there is no family unit. You are a member of the commune, and you have to obey the orders of that commune. In fact, you, under Common Law, have personal rights and property rights. But, there are no personal or property rights in the commune --

Oh you're allowed to keep toilet articles and everything else. But if you have anything that they think is a danger to the voyage, like if you have a wooden foot-locker and they feel that the wood might burn and might be a danger to the ship, they could make you throw the foot locker overboard. Or, if you had some property in one of the holds of the ship and that presented some danger to the rest of the ship because of damage in that hold, or fire in that hold -- they could shut that hold off -- and all your goods would be destroyed. Under Common Law, your rights and property are considered and protected.

Now, in Common Law, we are totally responsible for our actions -- but under Maritime Law there is limited liability for payment of debts. And, if we just look at that a little bit further, we find how, now, we have a situation where even our criminal law has been corrupted by Maritime Law and we find people who have murdered and raped innocent people; eight, ten, twelve years later they are released from prison to become a probable danger to society again. A person who has murdered a supervisor and mayor of San Francisco is also out of jail in 7 years, because of limited liability for payment of debt. People can pull the trigger and wound the President and say I was insane at the moment that I did that -- and other than having to go to a mental institution, served no time at all in jail.

Under Common Law, these people would probably have been executed. John Booth didn't even get a trial when he shot President Lincoln. Under the Common Law, we have the right to refuse an order, as a free sovereign. Aboard the ship, the Captain can make every seaman perform, and do his duty -- as the Captain sees fit.

Under Common Law, the jury not only determines the admissibility of evidence and judges the facts, but its first and foremost duty is to judge the justice of the law as it applies to the particular case. It is this feature of a Common Law jury that caused our founding fathers to refer to the Common Law jury as the "palladium (i.e. the very foundation or cornerstone)" of liberty.

Aboard the ship, the chancellor does not even have to have a jury -- but if he chooses to have one, it is merely advisory -- and those jurors must consider only the evidence permitted by the chancellor; and they must take the law as the chancellor dictates it to them.

The history of due process is essentially the history of the Common Law jury. The right of a Common Law jury to say no, or jury nullification, was clearly established in England in 1670 when the jury refused to convict William Penn on charges of preaching before an unlawful assembly. For refusing to convict, as instructed from the bench, the jurors were fined 40 marks each and sentenced to imprisonment till paid. Upon a Habeas Corpus petition release from prison, the jurors were vindicated by a decision concurred in by all the judges in England, except one, abolishing the practice of punishing juries for their verdicts.

In the period immediately before the Revolution, jury nullification had become an integral part of the American judicial system and there is agreement among many commentators that the right of the jury to decide questions of law and fact prevailed in this country until the middle 1800's. By the end of the century, however, the power of the jury had been thoroughly decimated by a jealous judiciary.

The specific demise can be traced to four highly influential cases, three of which were exclusively within the Admiralty jurisdiction of the Federal courts. Being Admiralty cases, limitation of the powers of those particular juries was perfectly proper. The problem is, not understanding and distinguishing jurisdictional bounds, we have allowed admiralty case law to be imposed in the totally different, and inapplicable, jurisdiction of Common Law.

Under the Common Law, there is no such thing as a victimless crime, and a victim receives redress and compensation for damages -- Aboard the ship, the Captain can make any act a crime, and he can impose his sanctions accordingly. His concern is for the safety of the voyage, and he has little time or inclination to see that the victim of a real crime, under the Common Law, receives compensation from the perpetrator of that crime.

Under the Common Law, there is very little need for jails; whereas aboard the ship, particularly when there is discontent among the crew regarding certain policies of the Captain, there is a continual need to contract more brigs -- enlarge the penal enforcement staff.

Remember what Justice Story said in the DeLovio case about appeals and Writs of Error? Writs of Error are Common Law writs. Appeal is Equity and Admiralty, in civil matters, and Admiralty alone in criminal matters because equity courts do not have criminal jurisdiction. These are some simple tests you can use to determine in which jurisdiction a particular court is operating, in any particular case.

So you see, because of the early customs and traditions of the perils of the sea, a very harsh group of laws grew up. Because of the danger of shipping substantive money, gold and silver, from pirates and storms they started transporting bills, notes and credits -- and this grew up into the evil practice of issuing bills, notes and credits when they didn't have the substance to back them up. And this is the basis for our inflation that is defrauding the American public today. Under the Common Law, all these things would not be possible -- under Maritime Law they are.

When we entered the credit commune and began forfeiting payment of debt and substituted a mere discharge of an obligation in its place, we lost access to our Common Law rights and were handed a pottage of privileges; and in fact, we transferred ourselves from free allodial title to that of sub-tenents, villains, working the land subject to the Captain of the ship. Yet, people still think that they own land -- Yet, we still think that we have rights -- and we go into traffic court not knowing we are under Maritime Law. This is why we don't get a jury trial for infractions anymore.

This is why the jury is merely advisory in every court in this land -- and must take the law as the judge gives it to them, and see and hear only the evidence allowed by the chancellor. Not knowing this, we have taken, time and time again, Common Law issues into courts of admiralty and wondered why our substantive constitutional rights were not upheld and respected by the courts. Being an Admiralty court, it had no jurisdiction to rule on such issues, or grant relief, regardless of how sound your law and facts were at Common Law! cmlaw10.htm

Pennsylvania General Assembly Act III

Part Eight of the British System

This act declared that when the state treasury department could no longer "pay" its debts and was jeopardizing its depositors and creditors, the secretary of banking would be designated as receiver for the treasury and he was to file a certificate of possession in Dauphin County's Prothonotary's Office in Harrisburg, the state Capitol. As receiver for the State treasury and all its offices (meaning all the county treasurers), William D. Gordon, Secretary of Banking, was granted the authority by Act III to appoint a fiduciary to manage all the financial matters of the State. He also had the power to assign as security for loan contracts from the Federal Government, all property in the state, real and personal, resources and many other assets as insurance to the Federal Reserve.

House Joint Resolution 192 1933
(20 years after enactment of the Federal Reserve Act)

On June 5, 1933, Congress enacted HJR-192 to suspend the gold standard and to abrogate the gold clause. This resolution declared that "Whereas the holding or dealing in gold affect the public interest, and are therefore subject to proper regulation and restriction; and whereas the existing emergency has disclosed that provisions of obligations which purport to give the obligee a right to require payment in gold or a particular kind of coin or currency. . . are inconsistent with the declared policy of congress. . . in the payment of debts.

Editor's Note: HJR 192 was suspended during the 1970's and recinded during the 1980's.

This resolution declared that any obligation requiring "payment in gold or a particular kind of coin or currency, or in an amount in money policy; and . . . Every obligation heretofore or hereafter incurred, shall be discharged upon payment, dollar for dollar, in any coin or currency which at the time of payment is legal tender for public and private debts."

A farm control bill around the same time period had attached to it a clause making Federal Reserve notes legal tender. In 1937, the Supreme Court struck down the Farm Control Act, thus carrying with it the legal tender status of Federal Reserve notes. Prior to 1933, Federal Reserve notes were used for inter-bank transfers. Around 1945, Congress passed a bill which called for the withdrawl of Federal Reserve notes from public circulation; but, they are still with us. . . *NOTE that the words do not talk about "payment" of debt, but clearly states that "Every Obligation . . . Shall be discharged."

In the case of Stanek v. White, 172 Minn. 390, 215 H.W. 784, the court explained the legal distinction between the words "payment" and "discharge": "There is a distinction between a `debt discharged' and a `debt paid.' When discharged the debt still exists though divested of its character as a legal obligation during the operation of the discharge. Something of the original vitality of the debt continues to exist, which may be transferred, even though the transferee takes it subject to its disability incident to the discharge. The fact that it carries something which may be a consideration for a new promise to pay, so as to make an otherwise worthless promise a legal obligation, makes it the subject of transfer by assignment."

Thus, it is clear that, as a result of HJR 192 and from that day forward (June 5, 1933), no one has been able to pay a debt. The only thing they can do is tender in transfer of debts, and the debt is perpetual. The suspension of the gold standard, and prohibition against paying debts, removed the substance for our Common Law to operate on, and created a void, as far as the law is concerned. This substance was replaced with a "Public National Credit" system where debt is money (The Federal Reserve calls it "monetized debt") over which the only jurisdiction at is Admiralty and Maritime.

HJR-192 was implemented immediately. The day after President Roosevelt signed the resolution the treasury offered the public new government securities, minus the traditional "payable in gold" clause. Article I, Section 10, Clause 1, proscribes the States making any thing but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debt -- but, this Article does not contain an absolute prohibition against the States making something else a tender in transfer of debt.

HJR-192 prohibits payment of debt and substitutes, in its place, a discharge of an obligation -- thereby not only subverting, but totally bypassing the "absolute prohibition" so carefully engineered into the Constitution. There is, now, nothing for this Article to operate on, just as there is nothing for Common Law to operate on. Perpetual debt, bills, notes, cheques and credits fall within a totally different jurisdiction than contemplated by Article I, Section 10, Clause 1 -- and that jurisdiction belongs exclusively to the Law of Admiralty and Maritime. Now, it is easy to see how "bills" as plenty as oak leaves, "polluted the laws after the War For Independence, as described by Peletiah Webster". This is how we lost access to substantive Common Law -- the very law the Minute Men fought to regain.

HJR-192 places every person who deals in the public national credit in the legal position of a merchant, and the only jurisdiction over any controversy involving this subject matter is Admiralty and Maritime. Obviously, if we cannot pay our debts at law, we are also benefiting from limited liability under the Limited Liability Act when we use this credit-- and, that is marine insurance!

The definitions of "liability" and "insure" will help convince us of this fact -- in analyzing these definitions, keep in mind the distinction between "payment" and "discharge". Liability: The word is a broad term. Ithas been defined to mean: all character of debts and obligations. . . any kind of debt or liability, either absolute or contingent, express or implied . . . condition which creates a duty to perform an act immediately or in the future . . . duty to pay money or to perform some other service . . . the state of being bound or obligated in law or justice to do, pay, or make good something. "Insure: "To engage to indemnify a person against pecuniary loss from specified perils or possible liability".

QUESTION #1: Who do you suppose took possession of the treasury of the State of Pa. on June 5, 1933, -- the moment HJR-192 made it impossible for the State of Pennsylvania to pay its debts?

QUESTION #2: Land titles being allodial in Pennsylvania, what was the State Assembly's authority and jurisdiction to pledge these allodiums to the Federal Reserve as security for loan contracts from the Federal Government?

QUESTION #3: If the individual citizens of Pennsylvania were indeed "sovereign" under the Common Law -- What was the authority and jurisdiction of the State Assembly to pledge their labor to the Federal Reserve pool?

Clearly, the alleged authority and jurisdiction is the so-called public policy declared by Congress. We will return to this subject later on.

If all the assets of the United States have been hypothecated to the Federal Reserve "pool" as security for the maritime loan and insurance underwriting policy, then that raises a couple of questions: QUESTION #1: If the United States "dies" (or is merged) under a One World government, who gets the pool? QUESTION #2: If the Federal Reserve "dies" by way of getting its charter rescinded, who gets the pool?

The answers can be found in the Federal Reserve Act itself: "Should a Federal Reserve bank be dissolved or go into liquidation, any surplus remaining, after the payment of all debts, dividend requirements as hereinbefore provided, and the par value of the stock, shall be paid to and become the property of the United States and shall be similarly applied".

31 USC 315B provided that: "No gold shall after January 30, 1934, be coined, and no gold coin shall after January 30, 1934, be paid out or delivered by the United States; provided however, that coinage may continue to be executed by the mints of the United States for foreign countries". This exception was necessary because foreign countries, being recognized or sovereign, could not be held to the internal public policy of the United States. HJR-192 was binding only upon those individuals who were beneficiaries of public policy; that being the privilege of limited liability for payment of debt arising out of participation in the Federal Reserve Public Credit System.

HJR-192 automatically extended the privilege to renege on debts to every person using the Federal Reserve banking system; however, never forget that when you operate on a privilege, you have to respect the ruler of the giver of that privilege. Furthermore, in the case of Great Falls Mfg. Co. v. Attorney General, 124 U.S. 581, the court said: "The court will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute at the instance of one who has availed himself of its benefits."

Thus, if you avail yourself of any benefits of the public credit system you waive the right to challenge the validity of any statute pertaining to, and conferring "benefits" of this system on the basis of constitutionality. cmlaw8.htm

Erie Railroad v. Tompkins, 304 US 64 (1938)

Part Nine of the British System

In its decision of the case of Erie R. R. v. Tompkins, in 1938, the Supreme Court overturned the Swift v. Tyson decision of 1842 by stating: In the Erie case, Justice Brandeis wrote: "Except in matters governed by the Federal Constitution or by acts of Congress, the law to be applied in any case is the law of the State . . . There is no Federal General Common Law." Note the exception. The court has excepted matters governed by the constitution and acts of Congress from being governed by State law. Henry J. Friendly, Judge, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit subsequently gave us the following insights into the significance of this decision:

"The clarion yet careful pronouncement of Erie, `There is no Federal General Common Law' opened the way to what, for want of a better term, we may call Specialized Federal Common Law. I doubt that we sufficiently realize how far this development has gone -- let alone where is likely to go." "Since most cases relating to Federal matters were in the Federal courts and involved `general' law, the familiar rule of Swift v. Tyson usually gave Federal judges all the freedom they required in pre-Erie days and made it unnecessary for them to consider a more Esoteric source of power . . . By focusing attention on the nature of the right being enforced, Erie caused the principle of a specialized Federal Common Law, binding in all courts because of its source, to develop within a quarter century into a powerful unifying force.

Just as Federal courts do not conform to State decisions on issues property for the States, State courts must conform to federal decisions in areas where Congress, acting within powers granted to it, has manifested, be it ever so lightly, an intention to that end. "The Lincoln Mills doctrine (353 US 448 (1957) is pregnant with possibilities. If the grant of Federal jurisdiction in suits on labor contracts affecting commerce was a mandate to fashion a Federal Common Law consistent with federal labor legislation . . . this like the Federal Common Law of labor would have supremacy over State law."

"The Federal giant" . . . ;`Professor Gilmore' has written: "is just beginning to stir with his long-delayed entrance we are, it may be, at last catching sight of the principle character."

QUESTION: (1). What, do you suppose, is the nature of the right, and what is the source Judge Friendly is referring to, that caused the Erie Court to overturn the Swift v. Tyson decision and rule that there was no longer a General Federal Common Law?

(2). Who, or what, is the "principle character" that Judge Friendly, [or Professor Gilmore, whom he quotes] refers?

Remember, Justice Story said in the DeLovio case that the jurisdiction of Admiralty, as to contracts, depends upon the subject matter and the nature of the cause! In a book entitled "The Law of Bills, Notes, and Cheques", Melville M. Bigalow, Ph. D. Harvard, said in the year 1900: "We are concerned in this book with a branch which deals with the law of bills, notes and cheques. This branch of the law merchant has retained throughout its life, to the present day, its essential characteristics, clearly marking it off from the Common Law . . . The term Law Merchant at the present time usually suggests the law of bills, notes and cheques. The time came when it must take its place, even if piecemeal by the side of the Common Law, and of Admiralty and Equity, in the jurisprudence of England. Admiralty had already been exercising jurisdiction over instruments in the nature of bills of exchange and promissory notes pertaining to contracts in the commerce of the high seas. The Law Merchant is not even a modification of the Common Law; it occupies a field over which the Common Law does not and never did extend."

And, from the "Handbook of the Law of Federal Courts": . . . a unanimous Court (Clearfield Trust co. v. United States, 1943, 63 S. Ct. 573) held: "The rights and duties of the United States on commercial paper that is of issue are governed by Federal rather than local law. This does not mean that in choosing the applicable Federal rule the courts may not occasionally select State law. But it was thought that such a course would be singularly inappropriate in the Clearfield case. The issuance of commercial paper by the United States is on a vast scale and transactions in that paper from issuance to payment will commonly occur in several States . . . The desirability of a uniform rule is plain.

To find such a uniform rule the Court looked to the Federal Law Merchant . . ." "Federal courts have made similar decisions for themselves as to what the controlling rule is to be in other cases where the United States is a party issued by the United States," government contracts, or the effect of a Federal lien . . ." "If an issue is controlled by Federal Common Law, this is binding on both State and Federal courts. A case `arising under' Federal Common Law is a Federal question case, and is within the original jurisdiction of the Federal courts as such . . ." The burgeoning of a Federal Common Law binding on Federal and State courts alike has occurred at the same time as the development of the Erie doctrine . . .

It is frequently said that the Erie doctrine applies only in cases in which jurisdiction is based on diversity of citizenship. Indeed in an action for wrongful death caused by a maritime tort committed on navigable waters, the Court curtly dismissed Erie as "irrelevant," since the district court was exercising its admiralty jurisdiction, even though it was enforcing a state-created right". . .

. . Despite repeated statements implying the contrary, it is the source of the right sued upon, and not the ground on which federal jurisdiction is founded, which determines the governing law." Obviously, the principle character Judge Friendly was referring to is the Admiral himself -- enlarging his powers and jurisdiction as a result of the "public policy" of HJR-192 -- that being perpetual debt and limited liability for payment of debt under the Federal Law Merchant and the Law of Admiralty because of subject matter and nature of the cause. Victory Tax Act (1942)

Prior to the Erie decision, it was well established by many court decisions that wages were not income within the meaning of the 16th Amendment. The Victory Tax Act was passed by congress in 1942, as an emergency war measure, authorizing income tax on wages. This act was to self-destruct, and did, two years from its enactment.

QUESTION: It is common knowledge that "income taxes" on labor have continued to be collected since the expiration of the Victory Tax Act in 1944. What is the legal basis for a so-called "income tax" on wages since 1944? The facts clearly show that it is not an income tax on wages, but, instead is an interest or premium payment to the maritime lender, the Federal Reserve. The 16th Amendment does not apply to the Feds in this case -- Just as Article I, Section 10, Clause 1, does not apply to the States! United States v. South-Eastern Underwriters Association, 322 US 533, (1944).

In 1944 the US Supreme Court decided the case of US v. S.E. Underwriters Association holding insurance to be inter-state commerce. FIRST NAT. EEN. SOC. V. GARRISON INSURANCE (1945): "The District Court takes judicial notice that, under a recent decision of the Supreme Court, insurance is now interstate commerce within the commerce clause." McCarren Act (1945).

In 1945, Congress enacted the McCarren Act declaring "that the continued regulation and taxation by the several States of the business of insurance is in the public interest and that silence on the part of congress shall not be construed to impose any barrier to the regulation or taxation of such business by the several States."

Beginning in 1963, the words "redeemable in lawful money" and "will pay to the bearer on demand" were removed from future issues of Federal Reserve Notes: further reflecting the public policy stated in HJR-192. And, strangely enough, on October 28, 1977, HJR-192 was quietly repealed by public law 95-147. The joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to assure uniform value to the coins and currencies of the United States" approved June 5, 1933 (31 U.S.C. 463), shall not apply to obligations issued on or after the date of enactment of this section.

The reason for the repeal of HJR-192 is somewhat obscure. After 44 years of unchallenged implementation, this public policy is clearly established by custom, usage and participation in the credit system by the American public. Those of us operating on the privilege of limited liability, via the public credit, are still bound by the rules of the giver of the privilege. cmlaw9.htm

Pleading Special Matters

Part Eleven of the British System

A complete and thorough understanding of jurisdictional bounds is so absolutely essential that it is worthwhile to spend just a little more time on the subject at this time. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (Title 28, United States Code) gives us some more specifics:

Rule 9.
Pleading Special Matters
Admiralty and Maritime Claims. A pleading or count setting forth a claim for relief within the Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction that is also within the jurisdiction of the district court on some other ground may contain a statement identifying the claim as an Admiralty or Maritime claim for the purposes of Rules 14©, 38 (e), 82 and the Supplemental Rules for Certain Admiralty and Maritime Claims. If the claim is cognizable only in Admiralty, it is an Admiralty or Maritime claim for those purposes whether so identified or not.

VI. Trials Rule 38.
Jury Trial of Right
(a) Right Preserved. The right of trial by jury as declared by the Seventh Amendment to the Constitution or as given by a statute of the United States shall be preserved to the parties inviolate.

(e) Admiralty and Maritime Claims. These rules shall not be construed to create a right to trial by jury of the issues in an Admiralty or Maritime claim within the meaning of Rule 9 (h). As amended Feb. 28, 1966, eff. July 1, 1966

Rule 39:
© Advisory Jury and Trial by Consent. In all actions not triable of right by a jury the court upon motion or of its own initiative may try any issue with an advisory jury or, except in actions against the United States when a statute of the United States provides for trial without a jury, the court, with the consent of both parties, may order a trial with a jury whose verdict has the same effect as if trial by jury had been a matter of right.

Rule 82:
Jurisdiction and Venue Unaffected
These rules shall not be construed to extend or limit the jurisdiction of the United States district courts or the venue of actions therein. An Admiralty or Maritime claim within the meaning of Rule 9 (h) shall not be treated as a civil action for the purposes of title 28 U. S.C. 1391-93.

After the War for Independence, by way of the Declaration of Independence and US Constitution, domestic law was to be the substantive Common Law in the United States, forever, -- and this was to operate on allodiums and gold, a portable substance representing those allodiums.
The encroachment of Admiralty law onto the domestic law of the colonies was the primary inducement for the Declaration of Independence.
HJR-192 removed access to substantive Common Law and brought Admiralty law inland by way of the Public National Credit System -- making everyone who touches it a merchant under Maritime Law.

Maritime loans and maritime insurance are treated exactly the same under the Maritime Law of the Law of Nations. In one case the party is called the lender, in the other the underwriter.
If, as was well-settled law by the courts prior to 1933, wages were not income within the meaning of the 16th Amendment -- then, obviously, wages are still not income within the meaning of this amendment.

The evidence conclusively establishes that the legal basis for the collection of these so-called income taxes, since 1944, is that they are, in fact, interest or insurance premiums to the Federal Reserve for the privilege of limited liability for the payment of debt.

The legal basis for this so-called tax was established in 1933 by HJR-192. The fact that implementation of this premium was postponed until 1942 and put into effect under the guise of an emergency war measure, thereby conditioning wage earners to believe it was actually a tax, smacks of willful and intentional concealment of material facts for the purpose of deceiving wage earners and concealing the truth.

Further, Forest D. Montgomery, Counsellor to the General Counsel for the Department of Treasury, wrote a letter to Mr. Smigeilski on this subject, wherein he stated: "31 U.S. Code, Section 742, generally exempts Treasury obligation from taxation by state or local governments. This provision, as well as the Constitution, prohibits state taxation of Federal Reserve Notes."

If this is true, and IF the states are actually collecting "income taxes" based on Federal Reserve Notes, they are in clear violation of Federal laws.

Do you really believe the States are openly flaunting Federal law, or is it possible that both the Feds and the States know something that has been kept from us all these years?

This letter was signed over the title of "Counsellor to the General Counsel" of the Department of the Treasury. Surely, this man would know if the states are flaunting Federal law. Note also, that he says that the Constitution prohibits state taxation of Federal Reserve Notes -- clearly referring to the absolute prohibition stated in Article I, Section 10, Clause 1. Just what is going on here, and just what is Mr. Montgomery telling us?

The California insurance Code itself can help us make the connection between insurance and so-called "taxes":

Sec. 103. Marine Insurance (California)
Marine insurance includes insurance against any and all kinds of loss of or damage to: . . .all goods, freights, cargos, merchandise, effects, disbursements, profits, money, bullion, securities, choses in action, evidences of debt, valuable papers, bottomry, and espondentia interests and all other kinds of property, and interests therein, in respect to, appertaining to or in connection with any and all risks of perils of navigation".

And, the California Insurance Code can also help us decide how a person gets involved, and incurs liability, under a policy of marine insurance: Article 1885. Interest in source of profits in marine insurance, a person who has an interest in the thing from which profits are expected to proceed, has an insurable interest in the profits.

So, we see that pursuant to California Code, any and all kinds of such things as evidences of debt and bottomry (that is maritime loans) are the subject matter -- and under marine insurance law in the State of California.

Obviously, the Law of Nations applies to the facts presented in this case, so, let's first find out just what this law is. cmlaw11.htm

Law of Nations

Part Twelve of the British System
General

The necessary and general Law. It is always obligatory upon a nation with respect to its own conscience and on all nations in the regulations of their internal conduct.

External law which dictates what every nation may require of every other, and yet being founded in the will of the governed (public policy) by reason.

The natural, or internal law of conscience. It is universal and founded in nature.

It proceeds from the general consent of mankind and binds all nations.

Unconventional
May be confined to particular states and depends on their arbitrary volition. A rule which their welfare and common safety obliges them to follow in mutual intercourse. (public policy)

Arises from express consent (e.g., Declaration of Independence, treaties and constitutions.)

Binds these nations who have assented to it.

Customary
May be confined to particular states and depends on their arbitrary volition. A rule which their welfare and common safety obliges them to follow in mutual intercourse. (public policy).

Arises from tacit consent (e.g., convention and custom).

Obligatory on those nations who have adopted it.

The law of nations may be considered of three kinds, to wit: general, conventional or customary. The first is universal, or established by the general consent of mankind, and binds all nations. The second is founded on express consent, and is not universal, and only binds those nations who have assented to it. The third is founded on tacit consent; and is only obligatory on those nations who have adopted it". Ware, Administrator of Jones v. Hylton, et al (1796)

Thus, it is clear that: 1. The United States Constitution is an ordinance (or statute) within the Law of Nations. 2. The various State constitutions are ordinances (or statutes) within the United States Constitution, and are a part and parcel of the law of Nations. 3. "Public policy" is within the jurisdiction of the law of Nations.

In the Seneca Case, decided by a court of appeals in Pennsylvania in 1829; the court said: "The jurisdiction of the district court, under the 9th section of the Judiciary Act of 1789 (1 Stat.76), embraces all cases of maritime nature, whether they be particularly of admiralty cognizance or not; and such jurisdiction, and the law regulating its exercise, are to be sought for in the General Maritime Laws of Nations, and are not confined to that of England, or any other particular maritime nation.

So we see that our Admiralty and Maritime courts are not only bound by the Maritime Laws of this country, or England, but are bound by the General Maritime Laws of all nations.

Now, let's look into some of those General Maritime Laws dealing with the subject matter brought into evidence in this case. From the Statutes at Large from the 15th to the 20th year of King George II, we find the following:

"The from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and forty six, no assurance or assurances shall be made -- interest or no interest, or without further proof of interest than the policy, or by way of gaming or wagering, . . . and that every assurance shall be null and void to all intents and purposes."

The reason for this enactment was stated to be: "Whereas, it has been found by experience that the making of assurances, interest or no interest, or without further proof of interest than the policy, hath been productive of many pernicious practices, . . . and by introducing a mischievous kind of gaming or wagering, under the pretence of . . . the institution and laudable design of making assurances, hath been perverted; and that which was intended for the encouragement of trade and navigation, has in many instances, become hurtful, and destructive to the same:" Here we have a clear and distinct statement that interest or no interest, insurance policies, and gaming and wagering, are absolutely against the "public policy" of nations -- and are, therefore, void.

From Halsbury's "Statutes of England"

we find: "The Life Insurance Act", 1774 (14 Geo. 3c. 48)
1. No insurance to be made on lives, etc., by persons having no interest, etc. -- From and after the passing of this Act no insurance shall be made by any person or persons, politick or corporate, on the life or lives of any person or persons, or on any other event or events whatsoever, wherein the person or persons for whose use, benefit, or on whose account such policy or policies shall be made, shall have no interest, or by way of gaming or wagering; and that every assurance made contrary to the true intent and meaning hereof shall be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever. NOTE: At Common Law, wager policies were legal contracts.

The Marine Insurance Act, 1906 (6 Edw. 7c. 41).
p1. Marine Insurance Defined. -- A contract of marine insurance is a contract whereby the insurer undertakes to indemnify the assured, in a manner and to the extent thereby agreed, against maritime losses, that is to say, the losses incident to maritime adventure."

4. Avoidance of wagering or gaming contracts.
(1) Every contract of marine insurance by way of gaming or wagering is void.
(2) A contract of marine insurance is deemed to be a gaming or wagering contract --
(a) where the assured has not an insurable interest as defined by the Act, and the contract is entered into with no expectation of acquiring such an interest;
(b)or, where the or no interest,' or `without further proof of interest than the policy itself,' . . . or subject to any other like term."

5. Insurable Interest Defined.
(1) Subject to the provisions of this Act, every person has an insurable interest who is interested in a maritime adventure.
(2) In particular a person is interested in a maritime adventure where he stands in any legal or equitable relation to the adventure or to any insurable property at risk therein, in consequence of which he may benefit by the safety or due arrival of insurable property, or may be prejudiced by its loss, or damage thereto,or by the detention thereof, or may incur liability in respect thereof."

Disclosure and Representations
#17 . . . A contract of marine insurance is a contract based upon the utmost good faith, and, if the utmost good faith be not observed by either party, . . .NOTE: If this good faith be not observed by either party, there being any concealment or non-disclosure of a material particular, the contract may be avoided by the injured party;"
#41 . . .Warranty of Legality. -- There is an implied warranty that the adventure insured is a lawful one, and that, so far as the assured can control the matter, the adventure shall be carried out in a lawful manner. . .
NOTE: It seems that the assured cannot hold the insurer to a waiver of illegality for . . . only legal adventures can be insured."

The Marine Insurance (Gambling Policies) Act, 1909, (9 Edw. 7 c. 12)
1. Prohibition of gambling or loss by maritime perils.
(1) If -- (a) Any person effects a contract of maritime insurance without having any bonafide interest, direct or indirect, . . . or a bonafide expectation of acquiring such an interest; . . . the contract shall be deemed to be a contract by way of gambling on loss by maritime perils . . .

And, from "An Essay on Maritime Loans from the French" of M. Balthazard Marie Emerigon, we find: "The Lender (of a Maritime Loan) was not prohibited from demanding pledges and hypothecations as an additional security; providing it was not a pretext for exacting maritime interest after the sea risk should be at an end." "It is essential to this contract that there be a risk, and that the risk be incurred by the lender . . . The stipulation, interest or no interest is a real wager . . . This is not permitted among us . . ." "If the contract was void in its commencement, the maritime interest is not chargeable, because no maritime dangers were borne by the lender." "Difference between contracts of bottomry and those of Loan, Partnership and insurance.

Bottomry is different from the contract of loan because:
1. The peril of money, simply lent, concerns the borrower: whereas money lent at bottomry is at the risk of the lender.
2. In a simple loan, interest is due by positive stipulation only; whereas, maritime interest is implied in the contract itself.
3. In a simple loan, the interest, among merchants, could not exceed the rate fixed by the Prince, or, at most the custom of the country; whereas, bottomry may carry any interest."
" . . . Maritime interest is not subject to the limits of ordinary legal interest, but that it may be regulated by the degree of danger to which the lender exposes or believes he exposes his money." "The contract of maritime loan approaches more nearly to that of Insurance. There is a strong analogy between them. In their effects they are construed on the same principles. In the one contract, the lender bears the sea risks, in the other, the underwriter. In the one, the maritime interest is the price of the peril; and this term corresponds with the premium which is paid in the ."

From The Marine Insurance Act of 1906 Previously referred to
#82. . . . Enforcement of return. -- Where the premium or a proportionate part thereof is, by this Act, declared to be returnable, -- (a) If already paid, it may be recovered by the assured from the insurer; and (B) If unpaid, it may be retained by the assured or his agent."
#84. . . . Return for failure of consideration.(1) Where the consideration for the payment of the premium totally fails, and there has been no fraud or illegality on the part of the assured or his agents, the premium is thereupon returnable to the assured . . . (3) In particular -- (a) Where the policy is void, or is voided by the insurer as from the commencement of the risk, the premium is returnable provided that there has been no fraud or illegality on the part of the assured;"

So you see, that pursuant to the Positive Law of the Law of Nations, if there has been no fraud or illegality on your part -- and you have marshalled your facts to prove that the Federal Reserve contract is a wagering policy, you can void the contract and are entitled to a refund of all premiums paid.

And, in the California Insurance Code, we find: SEC.1900. Duty to Disclose in marine insurance each party is bound to communicate, in addition to what is required in the case of other insurance:

(a) All the information which he possesses and which is material to the risk, except such as is exempt from such communication in the case of other insurance.
(B) The exact and whole truth in relation to all matters that he represents or, upon inquiry assumes to disclose.

Now, let's consider the public policy as stated in the Preamble to the United States Constitution and compare this statement of public policy to the public policy of the Positive Law of the Law of Nations dealing with wagering policies, and to the so-called public policy of the Federal Reserve Act and HJR-192!

The Preamble to the United States Constitution states:
"We the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

This Preamble is a statement of "Public policy" under the "conventional" branch of the Law of Nations. Since wagering policies, interest or no interest insurance policies, and maritime loans at no risk to the lender are forbidden under the public policy of the Positive Law of Nations -- reason and logic dictates that the, so-called, public policy of the Federal Reserve Act and HJR-192 are not public policy, as alleged by Congress, and the Supreme Court in the Erie R. R. decision -- but, instead, are precisely the contrary.

Congress, therefore, had no authority and jurisdiction to enact the Federal Reserve Act, or HJR-192, and it logically and reasonably follows that these acts are a nullity, ab initio. Congress is granted the power to define and punish offenses against the law of nations in Article 1, Section 8, of the United States Constitution; and, therefore, has the duty to do so.

We submit that the law and the facts presented here today establish beyond any reasonable doubt that Congress has authorized and implemented a wagering policy and sanctioned crimes and offenses perpetrated and committed against the people of the United States by the Federal Reserve Board and its class A stockholders.

Consequently, it also follows that no State assembly or legislature had the authority and jurisdiction to hypothecate the State's treasuries, land and people as security to the Federal Reserve.

Our State courts are operating in Admiralty jurisdiction, for the most part. (Remember the McCarren Act which declared that the continued regulation and taxation of insurance by the states was in the public interest? --- and that Judge Friendly said that, as a result of the Erie R. R. decision, the State courts must conform to Federal decisions in areas where Congress has manifested an intent to that end? --- and that the Erie R. R. decision was a result, and implementation of, the "Public policy" stated in HJR-192???) cmlaw12.htm

Volume 2, Part I
Section 8.183 -- Maritime Cases

Part Thirteen of the British System
" . . . STATE TRIBUNALS . . . HAVE CONCURRENT JURISDICTION WITH THE FEDERAL DISTRICT COURTS OVER MARITIME CASES."

WHETHER A CIVIL CASE IS OF ADMIRALTY OR MARITIME JURISDICTION DEPENDS UPON THE NATURE OF THE TRANSACTION GIVING RISE TO IT IF THE CLAIM IS IN CONTRACT, AND UPON THE LOCALITY OF THE TRANSACTION OR THE CAUSE OF THE INJURY IF THE CLAIM IS IN TORT."

" ... A RIGHT SANCTIONED BY THE MARITIME LAW MAY BE ENFORCED THROUGH ANY APPROPRIATE REMEDY RECOGNIZED AT COMMON LAW. THUS THE STATE MUST FOLLOW THE SUBSTANTIVE MARITIME LAW, ALTHOUGH IT CAN ENFORCE SUCH LAW THROUGH ANY COMMON LAW REMEDY. ACCORDINGLY, THE STATE HAS JURISDICTION TO ENTERTAIN PROCEEDINGS IN PERSONS AGAINST ONE WHO HAS VIOLATED A MARITIME CONTRACT OR COMMITTED A MARITIME TORT, SINCE COMMON LAW COURTS HAVE TRADITIONALLY ENTERTAINED SUCH PROCEEDINGS. A STATE COURT HAS JURISDICTION WHERE THE SUIT IS IN PERSON AGAINST AN INDIVIDUAL, AUXILIARY ATTACHMENT AGAINST A PARTICULAR THING OR AGAINST THE PROPERTY OF THE DEFENDANT IN GENERAL."

SECTION 8:184. IN GENERAL
"GENERALLY, THE STATE COURTS HAVE CONCURRENT JURISDICTION WITH THE FEDERAL COURTS IN FEDERAL CIVIL MATTERS, UNLESS THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION OR AN ACT OF CONGRESS PROVIDE OTHERWISE. FEDERAL AND STATE COURTS ARE EXPRESSLY GIVEN CONCURRENT JURISDICTION IN SOME MATTERS BY FEDERAL STATUE, INCLUDING . . . LIABILITY ACT ACTIONS, . . ."

There is another subject matter that falls exclusively within the jurisdiction of Admiralty that we should all be aware of; and that is "Revenue Causes:"

In Delovio v. Boit, the court said: "A third exposition requires an examination of the authority and powers of the Vice Admiralty Courts in the United States under the colonial government . . . The commissions of the crown gave the courts, which were established, a most ample jurisdiction over all maritime contracts, and over torts and injuries, as well in ports as upon the high seas. And acts of parliament by giving or confirming cognizance of all seizures for contraventions of the revenue laws." (emphasis added) And in the Huntress Case: "For more than a century before the formation of the Constitution, that is, from the early part of the reign of Charles II, revenue causes had been heard and tried in the colonies by courts of Vice Admiralty." (emphasis added)

Neither the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, nor any subsequently enacted statutes have modified the originally established jurisdictional boundaries over revenue causes in this country. In summary, some subject matters and causes that are exclusively with Admiralty/Maritime jurisdiction are:

Limited Liability
Bills, notes, and checks issued by the US Government Credit borrowed into circulation by the US Government
Hypothecation
Violation of a maritime contract
Commission of a Maritime tort (for example, failure to perform an obligation founded in a maritime contract.)
These are exclusively within the jurisdiction of Admiralty/Maritime -- whether the claim is so identified or not!

Judge Friendly also said that the Lincoln Hills Doctrine (dealing with labor contracts and commerce) was "pregnant with possibilities." In this context the friendly judge was talking about the possibilities of Federal courts increasing their powers because of the nature of the source, and the nature of the right being enforced. That source being the credit voyage -- and that right being derived from a maritime contract under Admiralty/ Maritime jurisdiction.

We are constantly told that, today, the law is what the Supreme Court says it is. Well, that is perfectly true, if this voyage were lawful one -- it is absolutely not true, if this voyage (the source of its increased powers) was unlawful from its inception. The task before us is clear. Maybe we can take a page or two from their own book. The facts and law presented here today are truly pregnant with possibilities for those of us who want to apply them effectively!!

Now that we understand the particulars of how we have been tricked into joining this maritime voyage for profit, and what, and where our remedies are, we will then have to know much more fact and law, in order to do this: we will have to know how to analyze and determine which jurisdiction a particular issue is in -- or should be in; we will have to know courtroom procedures for that particular jurisdiction, we will have to understand the essential issues and know them inside out and front ward and backwards; we will have to develop a winning strategy to apply and use this knowledge most effectively.

Years ago, particularly in the late 1970's many of us were bringing Civil, Common Law, actions in State and Federal courts -- based on alleged violations of Constitutional and Common Law rights under color of law. All of these complaints were summarily dismissed on the grounds that "There is no cause of action stated for which the court can grant relief."

Others have relied on Common Law defense in criminal actions. There have been a few minor "victories" -- some stalemates -- many outright losses -- and, never, a substantive win. Even in criminal cases, some of us have been told that: "Your law is valid and sound, but your conclusions are wrong." What were the courts telling us?

Let's consider a hypothetical situation. You are in San Francisco, short of funds, and hear about a fantastic voyage on a ship about to set sail from port -- security and profits guaranteed!! You go down to the ship and sign up to the voyage. Let's also assume that material facts about the voyage are withheld from you, in order to induce you to sign up -- and, that the contemplated voyage was in violation of the positive laws of the Law of Nations, and was contrary to the meaning and intent of the United States Constitution.

Nevertheless, the ship sets sail in the middle of the night -- when no one was watching from the shore. After a week at sea, you have discovered that concealment of material facts -- and that you are on an unlawful voyage. You go to the Captain, inform him of your newly discovered evidence -- and demand your Constitutional and Common Law rights, as a United States citizen. What do you suppose the Captain is going to do??

He has no jurisdiction to hear Common Law complaints -- his sole responsibility is to insure the safety of the voyage, under Maritime Law. His only jurisdiction is under maritime law. He sees you as possibly influencing other members of the crew -- thereby fomenting a mutiny. To him, his duty is clear: He must mete out a form of punishment, to some degree, thereby instilling in other members of the crew a fear of joining in that line of conduct. Therefore, he may give you one of two alternatives: (1) Go back to work and continue to perform, and I will forgive this outburst, and allow you to remain on this voyage, if you agree to pay a penalty which I shall determine and impose. (2) If you refuse to perform, I will order you to be confined to the Brig.

What, in this situation, is your recourse? Obviously none, until you get back to a port. Let's say that, eventually, that port is New York -- now, what can you do that makes sense? (1) If you can find a court of Common Law jurisdiction, you can file a Common Law action. The only proper issue in this court being fraud, and fraud is not easy to prove. Now, we know that there are no Common Law courts in New York -- and we know why.

So, where does that leave you?? (2) The only place left for you to go is into an Admiralty court, and you can find a proper court of Admiralty jurisdiction, in New York, to hear these issues. You can file an action in admiralty where the proper issues are, under Admiralty and Maritime Law, the unlawfulness of the voyage itself, from its inception, pursuant to the Positive law of the Law of Nations -- all going directly to the issue of jurisdiction, based on the fact that the contract was a nullity, ab initio.

Now, you have a proper cause of action filed in a court of competent jurisdiction!!

The possibilities are truly pregnant because we can prove several violations of the general Maritime Law of all nations -- laws that were developed to protect the merchants and enhance commerce -- laws that any Maritime court in the world is bound by!! To deny these laws, and properly presented facts and issues, would, thereby, destroy the very foundations that this mercantile superstructure is based upon.

After many futile attempts with Common Law issues and actions, that, just possibly, there may be something more to the law being applied in the courts than we knew about. It dawned on us that a far more comprehensive approach to the problem, than had ever been attempted before, would have to be undertaken if there was any possible solution AT LAW.

We are all involved in a situation that not only is enslaving us, but will make the lives of our children and grand-children unbearable. If we are to experience true freedom, we must educate ourselves now. We, as sovereign individuals, have all the power we need to turn this insane system around.

END OF ORIGINAL DOCUMENT

This document has been edited by Eldon G.Warman, of 702 - 54 Ave, SW, Calgary, Alberta, T2V 0E1 warmael@hotmail.com. This brief identifies the chains with which they, the Merchants of Venice, their direct descendants and their lackeys, have used to make, we the people of North America into debt slaves.

The Merchants of Venice bastardized the many courts of Europe during the Middle Ages so as to effect their continued control, which they had established during the period after the collapse of the Roman Empire, up to the Dark Ages and through the Middle Ages period.

In 1776 (as indicated on the symbolic pyramid on the Federal Reserve $1.00 note), the continuation of their control was revealed as the Illuminati. This was the grand organization (or, re-organization, as they would have us believe) of the Masonic Lodge. The direct effect on us was their influence in the various mixings of the Law of the Sea with the Law of the Land in the British Limited Monarchy system. The situation is as a frog immersed in cold water brought slowly to a boil; the poor creature doesn't recognize the temperature change and cooks unaware.

In the latter half of another webpage I have posted on the internet, I explain how the British Monarchy has exchanged the Anglo-Saxon Common Law, based solely upon God's Law - the Golden Rule - 'Do not unto others as you would not have them do unto you', for British (so-called) Common Law, a form of Roman Civil Law.

Find it here: Treason

The "Founding Fathers" of the USA were all Masons, a commonly known fact. A recent revelation shows that the Constitution of the USA is "Ultra Vires" because it was never ratified -- by either the Committee of The States, or, more appropriately, by the People. Those signing as "witness" after Article VII were members of a committee to draft the Constitution. Witnessing would be the procedure to show unanimous approval of the draft by the committee members involved.

The next step should have been "approval" by the Committee of the States, the representative organization of the States mandated in the Articles of Confederation, Section 5 (AD1777). The final step should have been a "ratification" vote by the eligible voters in all the States concerned. There is no evidence that the latter two steps ever took place, thus making the present Constitution of the USA an unratified draft. Instead, it was only ratified by the corporate officers (Legislatures) of the incorporated States.

Americans have been deceived into believing that those they elect into State legislatures and Congress are 'representatives' of the people. They are only 'representatives' of that portion of the deck (voting district) of the make-believe ship - corporate body politic for which they become corporate officers. Their total allegiance is to the 'captain' - governor of the make-believe ship.

The Protocols of Zion, the gameplan of the Illuminati and their One World Government movement was apparently brought to public attention as early as 1785. In that program, the plans were set forth to thwart nationalism and common law societies by many devious ways, including the use of Masonry. Were George Washington and his close associates -- all Masons -- involved in the plan to scuttle the Union and the Common Law society destined for the People of North America?

It is quite obvious that the Government of Canada has been using similar tactics to enslave the people of Canada; and, to turn over this country's raw materials to the Overlords who hold the economic strings which control it. The BNA Act of 1867 did not confederate Canada. It only combined four British colonies into one colony, the Dominion (Colony) of Canada. The government was a dictatorship, a Governor General and Council (Canada's Parliament). The status of Canada was similar to that of a ship of the British Admiralty. The status of the people of Canada was similar to sailors on a ship of the British Admiralty; not that of an English freeman.

In 1931, the Statute of Westminster effectively decommissioned the colonies of the British Empire just as they would decommission outdated ships of the Admiralty.

Canada was taken over by a usurper clique of financial barons (with Rothchild empire connections and allegiances) at that time, supposedly under the "right of salvage": and, no change has taken place since then. . . . .

At the time of writing of this document, the author was obviously unaware of the status of "US citizen". As originally conceived, the States were independent countries tied together by a pact or treaty in which certain sovereign states rights were given over to a federal government; first in the Articles of Confederation, and then more succinctly in the Constitution of the USA. Each person born within a State or naturalized in a State was a citizen of that State; and then by the "commonality clause" of the Constitution, a citizen of the other States -- a citizen of the USA.

For eminent domain purposes, so that the Federal Government could purchase land (Louisiana Purchase and Alaska Purchase) and enter into international treaties, a piece of land (a Federal State) was provided for in the Constitution (a necessity arising out of the rules governing eminent domain). Since the Federal Government was not given any Saxon Common Law jurisdiction in the Constitution (whether this was by oversight or by designing scheme, considering later circumstance, remains for conjecture) -- but only Maritime jurisdiction, the people within such a federal state (Washington, DC) come under Maritime law. In legal terms, United States only means the District of Columbia, some territories, and navy bases. The United States of America is the combined 50 States.

The 14th Amendment to the US Constitution was supposedly inserted to give the black slaves citizenship which was denied to them by the States; but, in fact, what the 14th Amendment did was just transfer ownership from the private slave owners to the US Federal Government.

It seems that the schemers have multi-layered the traps to ensnare the unwary People into Admiralty jurisdiction. Beyond what the author has revealed in his research within this paper, later research shows other methods. The result would be that one argument would clip one strand of the noose; but, two or three others would still be fatal in and before a Court of Admiralty. For example: Through interpretations of the Fourteenth Amendment and the Social Security Act (the act of applying for and receiving a Social Security Number being the binder of the contract), a USA citizen also becomes a US citizen. The former has Common Law RIGHTS, the latter has Maritime PRIVILEGE. The author adequately covers the differences in Common Law and Maritime Law. The former citizenship you were born or "naturalized" into; the latter, you were hoodwinked into.

In the USA, you have the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC). You should become "very" familiar with UCC 1-207; as well as UCC 1-103.6. Therein lies your protection and recourse when you are subject to any issue that falls into Admiralty jurisdiction on land - that is, unless the judge, whom you confront, decides that it is for the 'good' of the ship - the body politic that he invoke the 'notwithstanding clause' and disregard even this protection clause.

Craig-Oxley, I found your posted information most interesting. You see, I have been conducting some original legal research that is most complimentary towards your subject matter, as well as being related to the subject matter of some of your other thrads, more specifically your discussion regarding the doctrine of parens patriae.

I believe that our Constitutional Courts were restructured in 1878 by the Supreme Court in the case of Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714 Pennoyer v. Neff

Consider this quote from Shaffer v. Heitner, 433 U.S. 186 (1977) [Link] :

> QUOTE
> From our perspective, the importance of Pennoyer [v.Neff] is not its result, but the fact that its principles and corollaries derived from them became the basic elements of the constitutional doctrine governing state court jurisdiction.

Incidentally, Shaffer has another interesting statement within it's opinion:

> QUOTE
> Mr. Justice Field's opinion for the Court focused on the territorial limits of the States' judicial powers. Although recognizing that the States are not truly independent sovereigns, Mr. Justice Field found that their jurisdiction was defined by the "principles of public law" that regulate the relationships among independent nations.

Thus, based upon the above information as well as the contents of the Pennoyer case itself, I believe that Pennoyer is the landmark case which imposed the Fourteenth Amendmant limitations on state soveregnty, as well as the inhabitants of the several states.

If you will read that case, you will clearly see that the litigation did not involve any marital issues by any stretch of the imagination. That being the case, I'm sure that the following quote from Pennoyer will jump out at you as being startling in it's nature:

> The jurisdiction which every State possesses to determine the civil status and capacities of all its inhabitants involves authority to prescribe the conditions on which proceedings affecting them may be commenced and carried on within its territory. The State, for example, has absolute right to prescribe the conditions upon which the marriage relation between its own citizens shall be created, and the causes for which it may be dissolved.

Adding some weight to my theory, I found it curious that a Google search of the search term "Pennoyer v. Neff" revealed to me an odd fact, to wit:

It seem that it is universal to all US law schools that Pennoyer is always the first case assigned to a law student to be read and reported upon in a written assignment...

Is it possible that the control system is seeking out the sharper legal minds for special incorporation into their ranks? It's just a thought, really, but I've often wondered.

One other statement in that opinion hit home with me in an alarming way:

> QUOTE
>
> As was said by the Court of Exchequer in Vallee v. Dumergue, 4 Exch. 290,
>
> "It is not contrary to natural justice that a man who has agreed to receive a particular mode of notification of legal proceedings should be bound by a judgment in which that particular mode of notification has been followed, even though he may not have actual notice of them."

Reading the above two SCOTUS cases, as well as Burnham v. Superior Court, 495 U. S. 604 (1990) [Link] brings me to believe that our courts are operating under ancient Roman Law.

Quoting from Burnham:

>
> "Historically, the jurisdiction of courts to render judgment in personam is grounded on their de facto power over the defendant's person. Hence his presence within the territorial jurisdiction of a court was prerequisite to its rendition of a judgment personally binding on him. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 733.

I finally place due consideration upon MULLANE v. CENTRAL HANOVER TR. CO., 339

U.S. 306 (1950)

QUOTE

"Distinctions between actions in rem and those in personam are ancient and originally expressed in procedural terms what seems really to have been a distinction in the substantive law of property under a system quite unlike our own. Buckland and McNair, Roman Law and Common Law, 66; Burdick, Principles of Roman Law and Their Relation to Modern Law, 298. The legal recognition and rise in economic importance of incorporeal or intangible forms of property have upset the ancient simplicity of property law and the clarity of its distinctions, while new forms of proceedings have confused the old procedural classification. American courts have sometimes classed certain actions as in rem because personal service of process was not required, and at other times have held personal service of process not required because the action was in rem. See cases collected in Freeman on Judgments, 1517 et seq. (5th

So, I suppose my question now becomes as follows:

My an accused party rely upon the ancient rules of stipuli to physically amend and alter a criminal complaint or governmental civil action against him and thus nullify this defacto jurisdiction that might threaten legal jeapordy?

(Excerpt)

QUOTE

Real rights (in re) differ essentially from personal rights (ad rem), or obligations, which have persons as their immediate objects. Even these have things as their remote objects, since they tend to the attainment of a thing through a particular person and by reason of their being usually convertible into a money value. Obligations (dismissing at once those which were purely natural and hence unenforceable) were broader than either contract or tort, and included liability arising from both. They were civil or prætorian, and could arise from contract, quasi-contract, delict, and quasi-delict. In conventional obligations some things were essential, others accidental. Contractual obligations arose through delivery of a thing, through words, through writing, or merely through the consent of the parties; and were, accordingly, contracts re, verbis, littens, or consensu.

Contracts re were the bailments, loan for use, loan for consumption, deposit, and pledge.

Contracts verbis were entered into by a formal stipulation consisting of a direct question and an adequately responsive answer. They could take immediate effect, could commence in futuro, or could be conditional. Stipulations were prætorian, judicial, common, and Aquilian: the prætorian and judicial were scarcely voluntary. The common stipulation was used in the ordinary affairs of men and by persons in fiduciary relationships (e.g., in this form the tutor gave security for the faithful discharge of his duties). The Aquilian stipulation, in connexion with acceptilatio, was a means of general release for the dissolution of any obligation. Stipulations required the same consensual elements that were necessary in other agreements, in addition to their own peculiar formalism. If a conditional response were made to a direct question, the stipulation was void; so also, if made by letter or messenger. The relation of suretyship could be created by stipulation: suretyship was an accessory contract, and the surety was known as the fidei-jussor. Sureties had the beneficium divisionis, which was conceded by Hadrian. They enjoyed also the beneficium ordinis, invented by Justinian, and the beneficium cedendarum actionum, or subrogation to the right of action of the creditor against the principal debtor, or pro rata against the co-sureties. Contracts litteris took their juridical efficacy from writings, which evidenced the fact that an obligation subsisted or that it had been extinguished. The latter were called apochœ. Writings evidencing a subsisting obligation were syngraphic or chirographic respectively, as they expressed a mutual or a unilateral obligation. A writing in the book of the debtor which supported the creditor's entry was conclusive, and even he creditor's entry created a strong presumption.

Contracts consensu were not peculiar in that they required consent, which was requisite in all contracts. Their peculiarity was in the fact that consent alone sufficed. They were five in number: buying and selling (emptio-venditio); letting and hiring (locatio-conductio); the emphyteuticary contract; partnership (societas); and mandate (gratuitous agency). In sale, there was necessary the consent of the parties, an object and an agreed price. Letting and hiring might be considered a temporary sale, and the essential incidents of a valid contract were the same as in sale. Emphyteusis strictly was neither a sale nor a letting; it was rather a quit-rent lease dependent in its duration upon the payment of the agreed canon. Its special incidents were a quasi-ownership in the tenant and a right of pre-emption in the dominus. Similar to emphyteusis was the right of superficies; but as it applied only to the surface — that is, to buildings — it was less permanent. Partnership was general or universal; particular or special; and, finally, singular. As consent was of its essence, withdrawal of consent worked its dissolution. Partnership was an entity distinct from the individual partners; it gave rise to the actio pro socio. The leonine partnership (societas leonina) was illegal. Mandate was a consensual contract whereby one undertook gratuitously to attend to an affair for another; it was commissioned agency and was an actual contract; it was distinguishable from negotiorum gestio (uncommissioned agency) in that the latter belonged to quasi-contract. It gave rise to the actio mandati, directa, or contraria.
The contracts which had a definite name and form of action for their enforcement were nominate contracts. There were others termed innominate because they had no special names: these were summed up in the four formula: Do, ut des; Do, ut facias; Facio, ut des; and Facio, ut facias. They were enforced by the general action in factum or by the action prœscriptis verbis.
All of the foregoing contracts, nominate and innominate, were contracts in the true sense of the word, but there was another class of relations in which the law imposed duties and obligations as if the parties had actually contracted. These were the so-called quasi-contracts, and the forms were negotiorum gestio, tutorship, inheritance, administration in common, hereditatis aditio, indebiti solutio (payment under mistake of fact), and a few others of similar nature.
Obligations could be acquired through the paternal and dominical powers and through mandataries. A civil obligation once constituted could be extinguished by an exception (plea in bar) or by its own terms. Pleas in bar were divers and could arise from a will, a contract or pact, a judicial decision, etc.
The means of extinction common to all obligations were: solutio (payment); compensatio (set-off); confusio (merging of the character of debtor and creditor) oblatio et consignatio (tender); rei interitus (loss of the thing); novatio (substitution of obligations as to person or thing); prœscriptio (lapse of time); and further, in proper cases, by acceptilatio (release) and by mutuus dissensus (mutual change of intention).
The prætorian restitutio in integrum was an equitable restoration of the parties to their former situation, and could be invoked for metus (duress), dolus (fraud), minority, and generally by all who had suffered hardship through no fault of their own.
Obligations and rights of action arose also out of delictum, which was the voluntary penal violation of human law. Delicts were either actual or quasi-delicts — the former deliberate, the latter negligent. When public, they were crimes; when private, torts. Instances were: furtum (theft), either manifest or concealed; rapina (robbery with violence); damnum injuria datum (injury to property); and injuria (a kind of outrage, or defamatory wrong by word or action). In furtum, the thief could be prosecuted either civilly or criminally, and in the civil action the thing or the penalty could be recovered. The Roman criminal law imposed a fine to the fiscus and corporal or capital punishment. Justinian abolished mutilation and capital punishment for theft and substituted fines and exile. Rapina, like furtum, required a criminal intent. Where the putative owner, in the belief of ownership, sought to recover his property by violence, this was not robbery, but the offence against public order was punished by the loss of the property without, however, any fine to the fiscus. Damage to the property of another injuria datum was the subject matter of the Aquilian Law, and the damage must have been inflicted by a freedman; if by a slave, it was a noxal tort; if by a quadruped, the tort and liability were designated pauperies. The measure of damages in injuria depended upon the atrocity of the wrong and the status of the parties; the right of action accrued to the father for injuria to the son; to the husband, for the wife; to the master, for the slave, etc. Quasi-delictual obligations were torts or wrongs based on culpa (fault or negligence), and not upon dolus (evil intent). An instance was where anything was negligently or carelessly thrown from a house (dejecta vel effusa). Quasi-delictual, also, were the obligations of persons employed in a public calling, such as shipmasters and innkeepers, for the wrongful acts of their servants.

If you should be so interested, I can post more of my research related to this subject.

QUOTE

There are a couple of errors in the presentation.

1. Wages are in fact income and has been so ruled by judges..

2. Spiritual Power of the Pope---606; Temporal Power 756.

3. A few others.

-ERIC

QUOTE

Dear Ezra,

Thank you for contacting me.

I too really struggled with geocentricity. But it is first biblical and then true science. If the earth is not moving, then Jesus Christ is not the Son of God but a liar and we are yet in our sins.

Project Argus was another Jesuit lie, as the Order was building its Cold War Hoax upon the foundation of the Airborne Nuclear War Hoax. The nuclear canon is another laughable hoax. There is no evidence of any airborne nuclear detonation ever! All photos have been tampered with and no honest film of an atomic weapon falling through the atmosphere and exploding has ever been made. The detonation at Hiroshima is obviously a ground detonation.

I appreciate your prayers, dear brother.

Sincerely in faith,

Brother Eric

He served as the chairman of the Raytheon Company between 1960 and 1962, and again from 1964 until 1972. He was the son of Charles Francis Adams III. He was the great-great-great grandson of US President John Adams and United States Secretary of the Navy Benjamin Williams Crowninshield. Adams was born in Boston and attended St. Mark's School, graduated from Harvard College in 1932 and attended Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. Adams was a sixth generation Harvard legacy student (his great-great-great-grandfather, President John Adams graduated from Harvard in 1755). Adams married twice. First he was married to the late Margaret Stockton Adams by whom he had four children: Abigail (Mrs. James C. Manny); Alison (Mrs. Paul G. Hagan); Charles Francis V and Timothy. In 1973, Adams then married the former Mrs. Beatrice D. Penati. He had a total of ten grandchildren and 18 great grandchildren. Mr. Adams was awarded honorary degrees by Suffolk University, Northeastern University, Bates College and Tufts University." (wikipedia)

* Astor, William Waldorf 1848-1919
    o "I believe at least five Astor's are now members of the Pilgrim Society. The Pilgrims had recently included David Astor, John Jacob Astor 8th, and William Waldorf Astor 3rd. And during the 1970s, Baron Astor of Hever was the President of the London branch of the Pilgrims. This implies that Astor of Hever was at least the next level up in the chain of command. The higher levels started creating innocent sounding cover organizations to hide their meetings behind. In1901, the Astor's contributed toward the creation of the Pilgrim Society, which was the cover organization for American & British 6° Princes of the Illuminati. I believe at least five Astor's are now members of the Pilgrim Society. The_Astor_family" [13]

The Knights of Malta 12
The Roman Catholic Church did not forget the American agents who had saved them from both Nazism and Communism. It rewarded them by making them Knights of Malta, or members of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta (SMOM).

SMOM is one of the oldest and most elite religious orders in the Catholic Church. Until recently, it limited its membership to Italians and foreign heads of state. In 1927, however, an exception was made for the United States, given its emerging status as a world power. SMOM opened an American branch, awarding knighthood or damehood to several American Catholic business tycoons. This group was so conservative that one, John Raskob, the Chairman of General Motors, actually became involved in an aborted military plot to remove Franklin Roosevelt from the White House. SMOM has also been embarrassed by knighting or giving awards to countless people who later turned out to be Nazi war criminals. This is the sort of culture that thrives within the leadership of SMOM.

Officially, the Knights of Malta are a global charity organization. But beginning in the 1940s, knighthood was granted to countless CIA agents, and the organization has become a front for intelligence operations. SMOM is ideal for this kind of activity, because it is recognized as the world's only landless sovereignty, and members enjoy diplomatic immunity. This allows agents and supplies to pass through customs without interference from the host country. Such privileges enabled the Knights of Malta to become a major supplier of "humanitarian aid" to the Contras during their war in the 1980s.

A partial list of the Knights and Dames of Malta reads like a Who's Who of American Catholicism:

William Casey
CIA Director.

John McCone
CIA Director.

William Colby
CIA Director.

William Donovan
OSS Director. Donovan was given an especially prestigious form of knighthood that has only been given to a hundred other men in history.
Frank Shakespeare

Director of such propaganda organizations as the U.S. Information Agency, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty. Also executive vice-president of CBS-TV and vice-chairman of RKO General Inc. He is currently chairman of the board of trustees at the Heritage Foundation, a right-wing think tank.

William Simon
Treasury Secretary under President Nixon. In the private sector, he has become one of America's 400 richest individuals by working in international finance. Today he is the President of the John M. Olin Foundation, a major funder of right-wing think tanks.

William F. Buckley, Jr.
CIA agent, conservative pundit and mass media personality.

James Buckley
William's brother, head of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty.

Clare Boothe Luce
The grand dame of the Cold War was also a Dame of Malta. She was a popular playwright and the wife of the publishing tycoon Henry Luce, who cofounded Time magazine.

Francis X Stankard
CEO of the international division of Chase Manhattan Bank, a Rockefeller institution. (Nelson Rockefeller was also a major CIA figure.)

John Farrell
President, U.S. Steel

Lee Iacocca
Chairman, General Motors

William S. Schreyer
Chairman, Merrill Lynch.

Richard R. Shinn
Chairman, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Joseph Kennedy
Founder of the Kennedy empire.

Baron Hilton
Owner, Hilton Hotel chain.

Patrick J. Frawley Jr.
Heir, Schick razor fortune. Frawley is a famous funder of right-wing Catholic causes, such as the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade.

Ralph Abplanalp
Aerosol magnate.

Martin F. Shea
Executive vice president of Morgan Guaranty Trust.

Joseph Brennan
Chairman of the executive committee of the Emigrant Savings Bank of New York.

J. Peter Grace
President, W.R. Grace Company. He was a key figure in Operation Paperclip, which brought Nazi scientists and spies to the U.S. Many were war criminals whose atrocities were excused in their service to the CIA.

Thomas Bolan
Of Saxe, Bacon and Bolan, the law firm of Senator McCarthy's deceased aide Roy Cohn.

Bowie Kuhn
Baseball Commissioner

Cardinal John O'Connor
Extreme right-wing leader among American Catholics, and fervent abortion opponent.

Cardinal Francis Spellman
The "American Pope" was at one time the most powerful Catholic in America, an arch-conservative and a rabid anti-communist.

Cardinal Bernard Law
One of the highest-ranking conservatives in the American church.

Alexander Haig
Secretary of State under President Reagan.
dmiral James D. Watkins
Hard-line chief of naval operations under President Reagan.

Jeremy Denton
Senator (R–Al).

Pete Domenici
Senator (R-New Mexico).

Walter J. Hickel
Governor of Alaska and secretary of the interior.

When this group gets together, obviously, the topics are spying, business and politics.

HM King Hamad Receives Call from King Juan Carlos of Spain

Date : 2011/07/04 - 04 : 17
http://www.bna.bh/portal/en/news/463635

Manama, July 4. (BNA) – His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa today received a telephone call from the Spanish Monarch King Juan Carlos. The outstanding Bahraini-Spanish relations of friendship and cooperation and ways of further bolstering them were discussed. King Juan Carlos lauded HM King Hamad's wise initiative to launch a National Consensus Dialogue engaging all social spectra, asserting that it will consolidate the democratic march further and generate more progress and prosperity to the kingdom.

He also praised HM the King's sincere keenness to bring about landmark achievements to the kingdom through the Reform Project he anchored ten years ago, wishing Bahrain and its people further progress and prosperity. HM King Hamad expressed his sincere thanks and appreciation to King Juan Carlos for his noble feelings towards Bahrain and its people, reflecting the solid bilateral relations, wishing the friendly Spanish people further progress and development. French say Col Muammar Gaddafi 'prepared to leave'

Col Muammar Gaddafi is "prepared to leave", the French foreign minister confirmed on Tuesday citing emissaries of the Libyan dictator, in the strongest indication to date the embattled leader is prepared to withdraw from power.

By Henry Samuel, Paris
4:12PM BST 12 Jul 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...d-to-leave.html

While Alain Juppé denied holding "direct" negotiations with Col Gaddafi's regime, he confirmed Libyan officials were in communication with his emissaries, and that their message was clear.

"Everyone (involved in Libya's civil war) has contacts with everyone else. The Libyan regime sends its messengers all over, to Turkey, to New York, to Paris.

"We receive emissaries who are saying, 'Gaddafi is prepared to leave. Let's talk about it,'" he told France Info radio.

Francois Fillon, France's prime minister, said that a political solution was needed in Libya more than ever, adding that he saw signs one was emerging.

"A political solution is more than ever indispensable and is beginning to take shape," he told a parliamentary commission, which is expected to vote later in the day on whether to extend operations in Libya.

Diplomatic sources say that President Nicolas Sarkozy is adamant the dictator leave Libya completely.

"So far, it's been like a dialogue between deaf people, they are not on the same page," the source told Reuters, adding: "For Sarkozy, it's unthinkable that Gaddafi remain in Libya or a neighbouring country. He is insistent."

France, with Britain, is playing a leading role in the Nato-led operation of air strikes against Gaddafi forces, as part of a UN-mandated mission theoretically limited to protecting civilians resisting his four-decade regime.

But despite the intense air campaign, Col Gaddafi's grip on power remains intact with experts conceding his total military defeat is unlikely without a ground campaign, as rebels are not sufficiently powerful or organised to flush him out.

Mr Juppé's assertion appeared to be an attempt to assuage doubts over France's resolve to see the embattled leader give up power as a condition for ending hostilities.

These surfaced after Gérard Longuet, the defence minister, said it was time to "get round a table" with the regime, and that Col Gaddafi could "remain in a different room in his palace, with a different title".

While the French government flatly denied claims by Col Gaddafi's son that direct talks were under way, Mr Longuet's remarks pointed to growing French restlessness over the stalemate.

Mr Sarkozy had reportedly hoped to announce that the military campaign's end was in sight in time for July 14, Bastille day.

Mr Juppé said that a growing number of countries now agreed that Col Gaddafi had to go.

"There is a consensus on how to end the crisis, which is that Gaddafi has to leave power. That (consensus) was absolutely not a given two or three months ago.

"The question is no longer whether Gaddafi is going to leave power, but when and how," he added.

He did not specify whether this meant he should leave the country.

In an interview with Le Figaro newspaper on Tuesday, the Libyan prime minister Baghdadi al-Mahmoudi said Tripoli was ready to "negotiate without conditions" but that only once the bombing had stopped.

"You don't create democracy under bombs ... it doesn't work like that," he said.

When asked if Col Gaddafi could be excluded from a political solution, Mr Mahmoudi suggested he could stand aside. "The Guide will not intervene in discussions," he said. "He is ready to respect the decision of the people."

Mahmud Shammam, spokesman for the rebel National Transitional Council (NTC) said that the rebels would only respond to "serious initiatives" that include the departure from power of Col Gaddafi and his sons.

He said Beshir Saleh, a Gaddafi ally, had approached France to propose the strongman step down but remain in Libya under international supervision, but that his most influential son, Seif Al-Islam, had vetoed the idea.

Rebels control swathes of eastern Libya and have successfully repelled a siege of the city of Misurata, but have failed to threaten the regime's power base in Tripoli.

Some analysts now believe France, with Britain, may soon consider the political costs of leaving the Gaddafi camp in control of Western Libya the price to pay for ending the stalemate.

"What this really means is that Paris is also willing to accept a divided Libya, since nobody takes seriously the suggestion that Gaddafi would stay in Libya, but give up his powers," said Stratfor analyst Marko Papic.

Talk of the new diplomatic opening came as the French parliament approved the continuation of participation in the Libya campaign on Tuesday afternoon – a legal requirement in all French military operations lasting more than four months.

Nearly 500 deputies from President Nicolas Sarkozy's right-wing majority and the opposition Socialists voted to continue the campaign, with just 27 lawmakers voting against.

A Libyan government spokesman said Tripoli "regretted" the result of the vote, adding that Libya had hoped French deputies would have been able to examine the situation without listening to the "lies" of their government and of the media.

With the costs of the military campaign now at about 160 million euros, there are question marks over how long France can keep up the operation, particularly with presidential elections looming next year.

But Mr Juppé insisted progress was being made.

"Contrary to what we might hear, things are evolving in Libya," both from a strategic and political perspective, he said.

NTC leaders are due to meet with Nato and European Union officials in Brussels before a meeting of the Libya coalition in Istanbul on Friday.

Syria: Bashar al-Assad not 'indispensable', says Hillary Clinton

Hillary Clinton, the US secretary of state, has warned President Assad that he was “not indispensable”.

By Richard Spencer, Middle East Correspondent

6:15AM BST 12 Jul 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...ry-Clinton.html

Mrs Clinton condemned Syrian attacks on the US and French embassies and said Washington did not believe the long-time Syrian ruler would follow through on his promises to reform in the face of escalating protests against his rule.

“President Assad is not indispensible and we have absolutely nothing invested in him... remaining in power,” she said.

“From our perspective, he has lost (his) legitimacy. Our goal is to see that the will of the Syrian people for a democratic transformation occurs.”

The United States and France turned on Syria after mobs supporting President Bashar al-Assad stormed their embassies in Damascus, injuring staff and breaking windows.

The “demonstrators”, who arrived by bus, according to US witnesses were protesting the decision by the countries’ ambassadors, Robert Ford of the United States and Eric Chevallier of France, to visit the scene of mass anti-regime protests in Hama last week.

The US State Department condemned the “refusal to protect our embassy”, demanding compensation for damages. Syria’s envoy in Washington was later summoned over the protests.

A French spokesman said that Syria had “blatantly violated” international laws.

Guards at the French embassy were forced to fire three warning shots as protesters stormed into the compound using a battering ram, according to officials. Three members of the embassy staff, believed to be local employees, were injured.

Embassy windows were broken and the ambassador’s car damaged, while protesters hurled eggs and tomatoes at the walls.

An American spokesman said there were no injuries at the US embassy, but claimed that the Syrian authorities were “slow to respond”.

As the army tried to reassert control in Hama in previous days, it had killed 23 people, and Mr Ford and Mr Chevallier’s decision to visit was seen by some as an attempt to stand in solidarity and to prevent further bloodshed.

The regime reacted furiously, saying it was “proof” that America was instigating the uprising against Assad rule.

Mr Ford himself posted an angry message on Facebook at the weekend in response to a protest at the embassy on Saturday. “A group threw rocks at our embassy, causing some damage. They resorted to violence, unlike the people in Hama, who have stayed peaceful,” he wrote. “If they cared about their fellow Syrians the protesters would stop throwing this food at us and donate it to those Syrians who don’t have enough to eat.

The American position remains that it is not too late for President Assad to oversee reforms.

Obama: US Backs Russian Mediation in Libya if Gadhafi Goes

http://www.voanews.com/english/news/africa...-125355018.html

U.S. President Barack Obama told his Russian counterpart Monday that the United States is prepared to support Moscow's mediation in Libya provided it leads to a democratic transition and the departure of leader Moammar Gadhafi.

The White House said Mr. Obama spoke with President Dimitry Medvedev by telephone, thanking him for Russia’s negotiation efforts in the North African nation.

Mr. Medvedev has joined Western leaders in urging Mr. Gadhafi to step down, and Russian envoys have traveled to Libya to meet with government and rebel representatives.

Russia abstained from voting on a U.N. Security Council resolution earlier this year that authorized international involvement in Libya and has since criticized the scale and intent of the NATO-led campaign.

Meanwhile, France has denied claims it has changed policy toward the Libyan conflict and begun direct negotiations with Mr. Gadhafi. But officials in Paris signaled their impatience with the lack of progress in reaching a political solution to the crisis.

Foreign ministry spokesman Bernard Valero said Monday that Paris has sent messages to the Gadhafi government "in consultation with" Libya's rebel Transitional National Council.

Valero said the messages tell Mr. Gadhafi he must step down as part of any political solution to his five-month conflict with opposition forces fighting to end his 42-year rule.

Earlier, Mr. Gadhafi's son, Saif al-Islam, told the Algerian newspaper El Khabar that French President Nicolas Sarkozy recently met a Gadhafi envoy to discuss the Libyan conflict.

France has given direct aid to the rebels and is taking part in NATO airstrikes against Libyan government forces.

French Defense Minister Gerard Longuet said Sunday that opposition leaders eventually must talk to the Libyan government to resolve the conflict politically. The rebels have long rejected any negotiations with the Gadhafi government while he remains in charge.

Concerned about the mounting cost of the military campaign in Libya, France wants opposition fighters it is supporting to do more to end the conflict.

U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta, speaking in Iraq Monday, said some NATO allies operating in Libya could see their forces "exhausted" within 90 days and that the U.S. will be "looked at to help fill the gap."

He did not say which countries he was referring to, or what the U.S. response would be to any request for increased military assistance.

Also Monday, the United Nations envoy for Libya, Abdel Elah al-Khatib, said he has urged direct talks between Mr. Gadhafi's government and the rebels, but acknowledged the two sides remain far apart.

Khatib said one of the key issues is agreeing on an institutional body to manage a political transition. He said any such group would have to be "all-inclusive and involve representatives from all political and social groups, as well as a wide range of factions, regions and tribes."

Meanwhile, opposition fighters attempting to advance towards Tripoli from front lines near the western rebel stronghold of Misrata came under fierce shelling by pro-government forces Monday. At least six rebels were killed in clashes near the coastal town of Zlitan.

Bahrain opp. delegation leaves talks

http://www.presstv.ir/detail/188829.html

The spokesman of Bahrain's main opposition group al-Wefaq, Khalil al-Marzouq ®
A delegation from Bahrain's biggest opposition party has walked out of the ongoing talks with the Al Khalifa regime, saying the regime is not serious about addressing people's demands.

The representatives of Bahrain's main opposition group al-Wefaq left the Tuesday session of the so-called “national dialogue,” AP reported.

Khalil al-Marzouq, spokesman of group, said that he advised the party's top leaders to withdraw from the US-backed talks entirely, noting that the regime is not interested in political reform, therefore the dialogue is meaningless.

The opposition group agreed to participate in talks with the government after Bahraini King Hamad bin Issa Al Khalifa said he would set up an independent inquiry into the violent crackdown on protesters.

The opposition bloc is not satisfied with the process, saying participants in the dialogue do not fairly represent society and those participating are not being given a chance to speak during the sessions.

Earlier last week, senior Bahraini cleric Sheikh Issa Qasim also accused the Al Khalifa regime of using the ongoing reconciliation talks to delay democratic reforms, saying, “This dialogue process is twisted and the way it is conducted indicates that there is no meaningful substance.”

Since the onset of popular anti-regime protests in Bahrain in mid-February, Manama rulers have launched a brutal crackdown on protesters, their leaders and virtually anyone that come in contact with them, rounding up senior opposition figures and activists and even detaining doctors, nurses, lawyers and journalists that sympathized with the uprising in one way or another.

In March, a number of Persian Gulf Arab states, including Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, deployed military forces to Bahrain in an attempt to assist the Manama regime's crackdown on peaceful protesters that demand an end to the despotic, near 40-year rule of the Al Khalifa family.

Rights groups and families of those arrested during the Saudi-backed crackdown on popular protests have blamed Bahraini security authorities for mistreating anti-government protesters, charging that they have been subjected to physical and mental abuse.

Scores of people have been killed and over 1,000 have been arrested in the Saudi-backed crackdown on the peaceful protesters in Bahrain, a submissive US ally and home to US Navy's Fifth Fleet, reports say.

Libya: military action will intensify while UN presses for end to conflict

Military action against Muammar Gaddafi's government will be intensifed while a UN envoy presses for negotiations to end the conflict in Libya, William Hague said.

2:14PM BST 15 Jul 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...o-conflict.html

Mr Hague, the foreign secretary, said the UN secretary-general's special envoy to Libya, Abdul Elah Al-Khatib, would be authorised to present terms for Gaddafi to leave power and bring an end to the bloodshed that began with a popular uprising against his 41-year rule in February.

"He (special envoy) has taken a central role in this contact group meeting and we see him as the channel for negotiations and for political settlement, while the military pressure on the regime will continue to intensify," Mr Hague said in an interview with Reuters during an international Libya contact group meeting in Istanbul.

Alain Juppe, France's foreign minister, said that the military action will continue through Ramadan unless Gaddafi submits to demands to step down.

Hillary Clinton, the US Secretary of State and Baroness Ashton, the European Union's foreign policy chief, were among more than a dozen foreign ministers attending the Istanbul talks, along with heads of NATO, the Arab League and other regional organisations. More than 30 governments and international organisations were attending the one-day meeting.

The Libya contact group today recognised the rebel National Transitional Council as the country's "legitimate governmental authority".

The group of major Western and regional powers also urged "all relevant parties" to make efforts "for the formation of an interim government to ensure a smooth and peaceful transition of power," said the statement, to be formally issued at the end of a meeting in Istanbul later Friday.

Together with France, Britain has taken a lead role in the NATO mission to protect Libyan civilians from attack by Gaddafi's forces and enforce a no-fly zone.

"The people of Benghazi are there and the city was not stormed because of the NATO action. The same applies to Misrata, equally many people in the Western mountains have benefited from that," Hague said.

"Of course, we all want to follow it through to the real success of the political settlement in Libya that requires Colonel Gaddafi to go," Mr Hague said. "Military action will intensify."

NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen called on Thursday for members of the alliance to provide more aircraft to bomb Gaddafi's forces.

Britain said on Friday it would send four more Tornado warplanes for the NATO mission in Libya, in addition to the 12 already deployed to support the more modern Eurofighter Typhoons.

Clinton Meets With Allies to Discuss Libya Succession Plans After Qaddafi

By Nicole Gaouette - Jul 15, 2011
http://www.bloomberg.com/news/2011-07-15/c...s-in-libya.html

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and international allies are seeking to ensure that Libya's opposition is strong enough to fill the vacuum left after the expected departure of leader Muammar Qaddafi.

During a news conference that opened the so-called Libya Contact Group meeting in Istanbul today, United Arab Emirates Foreign Minister Abdullah Bin Zayed al-Nahyan said allies have to be "more forceful, more insistent" that Qaddafi steps down.

The group will also examine the political, security and diplomatic steps Libya's rebel National Transitional Council must take to secure funding and develop the capacity to govern, said two State Department officials who spoke anonymously because they aren't authorized to discuss the matter publicly.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization started military strikes in late March to aid rebels seeking Qaddafi's ouster. Qaddafi has already lasted longer than allies had anticipated, though his hold on the capital, Tripoli, appears to weakening amid shortages of food and fuel and increasing reports that his government is seeking a negotiated end to the fighting.

The contact group continues to believe time is on its side in the struggle for control of the oil-rich country, the officials said. The U.S. regards the council as the legitimate representative of the Libyan people, they said.
British Tornado Warplanes

Britain will add four Tornado warplanes to its force in the air campaign against Qaddafi's military, bringing the total number of British aircraft involved to 34, a spokesman for the U.K. Foreign Ministry said today at the meeting. There is a growing amount of interest from the Qaddafi government in finding a political solution to the fighting, the spokesman said.

Clinton, who landed in Istanbul today, will meet with the other 20 core members of the contact group. In addition to members of the United Nations, the European Union, the Gulf Cooperation Council and African Union, 35 nations are attending. This is the fourth meeting of the contact group and the ninth the allies have held since the insurgency began in February.

Libya's rebels must have access to the country's frozen assets, Turkish Foreign Minister Ahmet Davutoglu said today at the meeting. There is an "urgent need for cash," he said, calling on countries to "open banks" to the rebels' council, "along with a percentage of frozen assets."
Aid To Opposition

Qatar and Kuwait are expected to provide $100 million in temporary funding for the opposition and the meeting's host, Turkey, is in line to provide another $200 million, the State Department officials said.

The U.S. has yet to deliver aid to the rebel council. The U.S. House of Representatives rejected a plan to funnel frozen Libyan assets to the group. The U.S. has frozen more than $30 billion of the Qaddafi government's assets.

At today's meeting, the council will outline plans for leading a post-Qaddafi Libya, with the Obama administration pressing for assurances that Libyans from different tribes and locations will be represented, the officials said.

Davutoglu said, "There has been progressive improvement on the ground," and "what we need to do now is consolidate our achievements and move into the phase of conflict resolution."

The contact group has created an information clearing house in Benghazi, the rebel stronghold, to ensure it learns of the opposition's needs, the U.S. officials said.

Clinton will hold separate meetings with Turkish officials tomorrow to discuss bilateral issues from the unrest in Syria to the war in Afghanistan, they said.

When Clinton meets with Turkish leaders, they will have a full agenda, reviewing results of the contact group meeting and discussing the unrest in Syria, which has now sent more than 9,000 refugees over the border into Turkey. The leaders also plan to confer on Iraq, the Balkans, energy and defense issues, Iran, and Afghanistan, where Turkey has 1,800 troops.

'US secretly backs Bahrain crackdown'

http://www.presstv.ir/detail/189272.html

Interview with Ralph Schoenman, author, from Berkley.

The brutal clampdown on democracy seeking Bahraini demonstrators is taking place with the support of the United States, an analyst says.

Press TV interviewed Ralph Schoenman, author of "Hidden History of Zionism," for his thoughts on the latest developments in Bahrain.

Press TV: Violent crackdowns continue in Bahrain amid fragile talks between the opposition and the regime. Why do you think the regime does not stop its violent approach despite the fact that it has just not worked?

Ralph: Well, I think it's well articulated by Mehdi Hasan in The Guardian in London on Monday: “Let them eat doughnuts: The United States response to Bahrain's oppression.” 'Pity the poor people of Bahrain. They have been shot, beaten, tear-gassed - and patronized.'

'At the height of the pro-democracy protests crowds gathered outside United States' Embassy in Manama carrying signs: “Stop supporting dictators,” “Give me liberty or give me death.” US officials emerged from the buildings with boxes of doughnuts for the protesters. These sweets are a good gesture, but we hope it is translated into practical actions.'

'Meanwhile, the Pentagon's two most senior officials, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Michael Mullen and Defense Secretary, Robert Gates offered full-throated endorsements of King Hamad bin Isa Al-Khalifa brutal regime.'

This is a very clear unmistakable article. It is followed by the report in The Associated Press: “Bahrain doctor: Jailors beat members of the opposition”: 'Over more than two months the routine very rarely varied. Abuses by day, beatings with rubber hoses, being blindfolded and dragged into corridors at night to lie on cold tiles with others arrested.'

The Associated Press account by surgeons describes electrocution, torture and insults as Shia traitors.

This is the actual circumstance and condition and I should just add to the following in tomorrow's report in CNN: “Irish fact-finding delegation 'bullied' in Bahrain”: 'an Irish delegation of health workers are here to secure the release of dozens of Bahraini health workers along with former Irish Foreign Minister David Andrews were subjected to bullying and intimidation.'

'Pro-government doctors circled the Irish health workers and attempted to intimidate them'

'That is not the sort of treatment that we received when we were here. It is unfortunate we are being bullied and intimidated by government representatives.'

'They accused the President Bahrain medical society of provoking these incidents.'

These are reports … which describe accurately the real nature of what is taking place in Bahrain: a full-floated subjugation of the population with torture and terror and support by the United States. And when a delegation of Irish workers with supposedly Irish Foreign Minister David Andrews arrives, they are subjected to intimidation.

Press TV: How does the political situation in Saudi Arabia affect the situation on the ground in Bahrain? As our viewers know, many blame Riyadh for the violent crackdown in Bahrain.

Ralph: Well, I think when you speak of Riyadh you are talking about the United States and Great Britain. It's been disclosed and widely publicized that Cameron and British Intelligence Services were in Riyadh coordinating with the Saudis the follow-up repression in the wake of preparations for mass demonstrations tomorrow.

Yes, of course. The Wahhabi regime is the lynchpin of Imperial control of the region. With the original invasion and occupation and reign of terror waged with F-16s and Cobra helicopters and the US fifth fleet half a mile away, it's very clear that the Saudi regime, of course, is a vehicle for subjugation, notwithstanding the fact that these are the acts promote not merely resistance in Bahrain but in Saudi Arabia itself.

Libya suspended from Union for the Mediterranean Parliamentary Assembly

Politics 7/12/2011 9:38:00 AM

http://www.kuna.net.kw/NewsAgenciesPublicS...652&Language=en

BRUSSELS, July 12 (KUNA) -- The Union for the Mediterranean Parliamentary Assembly (PA-UfM) has decided to temporarily suspend Libya 's observer status, sending "a clear political sign against the violent repression exerted by Gadafi's regime", the European Parliament announced in a statement Monday night.

The decision was taken by the Assembly's enlarged Bureau, following a suggestion by European Parliament Vice-President Gianni Pittella.

The Assembly also firmly supported direct negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians based on UN resolutions. It expressed the conviction that the UN decision to grant full member status to an independent Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital in September this year will push both parties to enter serious negotiations, added the statement. The Assembly brings together 280 parliamentarian from the EU and other European countries and eleven Mediterranean partners Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Israel, Lebanon, Morocco, the Palestinian Authority, Syria, Tunisia, Turkey and Mauritania.(end) nk.asa KUNA 120938 Jul 11NNNN

Al-Wefaq quits Bahraini regime talks

A Bahraini woman attending protest march in the capital of Manama, while holding a sign referring to Bahrain's King Hamad bin Issa Al Khalifa, Crown Prince Salman bin Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa, and Prime Minister Khalifa bin Salman Al Khalifa. File photo The largest party and opposition bloc in Bahrain has quit the so-called government-sponsored national dialogue currently underway in the country.

On Sunday, the Al Wefaq National Islamic Society said it was leaving the talks pending formal confirmation from its leadership, AFP reported.

The party's representative at the dialogue, Khalil al-Marzuk said, "We have tried but without success to make it a serious dialogue."

Manama launched the talks on July 2 with the alleged aim of introducing reforms in the Persian Gulf sheikdom's system of governance.

Al-Wefaq says since the negotiations started, the government has been trying to muffle the voice of the Bahraini people.

In a popular revolution, tens of thousands of Bahraini protesters have been holding peaceful anti-regime rallies throughout the country since February, demanding an end to the rule of the family.

Al Khalifa has governed the oil-rich island for over 40 years with major backing from the United States, Britain and the neighboring Saudi Arabia.

Scores of people have been killed and many more arrested and tortured in prisons as part of the clampdown in the country -- a longtime US ally and home to the US Navy's Fifth Fleet.

King of Bahrain failing to restore country's reputation after uprising

The King of Bahrain's attempts to restore his island's reputation after a bloody crackdown on opposition protests are crumbling from political attack and repeated allegations of police brutality even from members of the island's middle classes.

By Richard Spencer, Middle East Correspondent
5:13PM BST 18 Jul 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...r-uprising.html

The government's National Dialogue, its forum for negotiation with opposition groups, lay in tatters yesterday after al-Wefaq, the biggest party in parliament, announced it intended to pull out.

Meanwhile, two of the most prominent figures detained in the crackdown have described to The Daily Telegraph a routine of beatings they suffered while in captivity.

One, Ayat al-Qurmezi, a 20-year-old trainee teacher jailed for a year for reciting poems critical of the king, said she was telephoned on Saturday by police to warn her against repeating her claims.

The other, a senior surgeon at the main Salmaniya Hospital, who has asked not to be identified, said the behaviour of the authorities had alienated the non-political middle classes like himself. He was one of 48 doctors put on trial in the wake of the protests, 20 of whom remain in custody.

He said he was hit round the head, kicked and beaten with a rubber hose until he was forced to confess to inflicting the wounds suffered by protesters he was treating for their injuries, or making them worse.

"I used not to be interested in politics," he said. "I always kept away from it, because that was the advice of my father. But now I have been at the centre of a story I could never have imagined possible I think everybody should know about our story. So now I am full of politics.

"We were an upper middle class group of people – doctors, lawyers. So they have created a new sort of opposition."

Most of the protesters involved in demonstrations in February and March were from the island kingdom's Shia Muslim majority. The royal family, which occupies all senior positions of government, is Sunni.

The government claimed the opposition was stirred up by Shia Iran, and was exacerbating sectarian hatred. It says the National Dialogue, which involves the government, political parties and non-governmental organisations represents the only way in which the country can "come together" and solve its problems.

But al-Wefaq claimed that membership had been drawn up in a way calculated to marginalise Shia groups. It had 35 out of 300 seats, despite winning 18 out of 40 seats in parliament in elections last year.

Miss al-Qurmezi, who was granted early release from prison on Thursday, said the dialogue was a "sham" while protesters like herself were jailed for speaking their minds. She said she had been expelled from teacher training college for taking part in the protests – one of thousands of government employees and students similarly punished.

"I think it's for show," she said. "We know our government. They don't do what they say."

The crisis in the island, whose economy depends on its role as a business hub and home of the US Fifth Fleet, has severely damaged international confidence.

While security fears have died down with the crushing of the protest movement, human rights groups have started to apply pressure.

Human Rights Watch, in a report released on Monday, accused the government of a "campaign of retribution", saying 70 medical staff in total had been detained, many had been tortured, and 150 sacked or suspended from their jobs.

The surgeon who spoke to the Telegraph claimed that Salmaniyah Hospital was now suffering a severe shortage of well-qualified doctors.

Isa Abdul Rahman, a spokesman for the National Dialogue, said it would continue even though al-Wefaq's role had been "central". "It is sometimes harder to stay and help shape the solution than to walk away," he said.

The government has responded to accusations of brutality by setting up an international panel of inquiry, which has been welcomed by human rights groups including Amnesty International. It has also moved the doctors' trial from a military tribunal to a civilian court, but it has refused to drop charges.

'US might redeploy Bahrain fleet'

http://presstv.com/detail/190000.html

The US is reportedly considering redeploying its Navy Fifth Fleet outside Bahrain, due to its alarm at the popular revolution against the country's Washington-backed regime.

Citing sources in Washington, The Times wrote that there was a groundswell of opinion in favor of the relocation of the fleet, which has been stationed in Bahrain since the 1970s.

Tens of thousands of Bahraini protesters have been holding peaceful anti-government rallies throughout the country since February, demanding an end to the rule of the Al Khalifa family.

"There was talk on Capitol Hill about moving the fleet within days of the protests breaking out, and that increased in March and April as people realized that what was happening in Bahrain ran counter to our interests," one source said.

The paper described the fleet as “a key component of US military power” in the Persian Gulf.

Al Khalifa, which has been ruling Bahrain for over 40 years, came into power with the direct support of the British royal family.

The Bahraini government is being constantly backed by the United States despite its record of human rights abuse and the numerous complaints lodged against it with the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

Scores of people have been killed and many more have been arrested and tortured in prisons since the beginning of protests in Bahrain.

Irish PM in unprecedented attack on Vatican

Enda Kenny on "dysfunction, disconnection and elitism" of Catholic Church

20 July 2011 Last updated at 15:42
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-northern-ireland-14224199

Irish Prime Minister Enda Kenny has launched an unprecedented attack on the Catholic Church in parliament.

He said the recent Cloyne Report into how allegations of sex abuse by priests in Cork had been covered up showed change was urgently needed.

Mr Kenny said the historic relationship between church and state in Ireland could not be the same again.

He said the report exposed the elitism, dysfunction, disconnection, and narcissism that dominated the Vatican.

"The rape and torture of children were downplayed or 'managed' to uphold instead the primacy of the institution, its power, standing and 'reputation'," the taoiseach said.
'Unprecedented'

"The revelations of the Cloyne Report have brought the government, Irish Catholics and the Vatican to an unprecedented juncture."

Opposition leader Michael Martin said that when he met the Papal Nuncio after the Murphy report into the cover-up of abuse in the Dublin diocese in 2009, he told him the government expected the full cooperation of the Vatican into the Cloyne inquiry.

However, he said, the Vatican chose to focus on the interests of the church rather than the children abused by its clergy and shielded by its leaders.

During the debate, the church was called upon to publish the audits currently being sent to every Catholic diocese in the country.

Sinn Fein spokesperson on health and children Caoimhghin O'Caolain said the government should consider coordinating with the Northern Ireland Executive on any future inquiries - particularly as four of the Catholic dioceses straddle the border.

Mexico cartel issues booklets for proper conduct

By E. EDUARDO CASTILLO and MARK STEVENSON Associated Press

http://www.chron.com/disp/story.mpl/metrop...an/7661475.html

MORELIA, Mexico — An organized crime group calling itself the Knights Templar is distributing booklets saying it is fighting a war against poverty, tyranny and injustice, publicly appealing to hearts and minds in a part of Mexico where the government claims it has largely taken down the major drug traffickers.

Federal police said they seized copies of the cartel's "code of conduct" booklet during an arrest of cartel members in the western state of Michoacan last week, but refused to release its contents Tuesday, saying they didn't want fan the flames of the quasi-religious movement.

But a copy of the 22-page "The Code of the Knights Templar of Michoacan," illustrated with knights on horseback bearing lances and crosses, was obtained by The Associated Press this week. It says the group "will begin a challenging ideological battle to defend the values of a society based on ethics."

The Knights Templar have been blamed for murders, extortion, drug trafficking and attacks on police. Analysts say the propaganda is part of an effort to transform a drug cartel into a social movement, along the lines of what right-wing paramilitary groups did in Colombia in the 1990s against leftist rebels - a fight in which both sides used the drug trade to finance their causes.

"I think the main intent is to create a social base in Michoacan ... and that way they are different from other criminal organizations," said Jorge Chabat, a veteran analyst of the drug trade in Mexico. "They say they are defending the people against attacks. In the case of Colombia it was the guerrillas; here it is against who knows what."

The Knights Templar was founded in March, according to the booklet, whose illustrations were lifted from an artist, a website of a company that sells swords and another promoting the 2007 Swedish film "Arn: The Knight Templar," according to an AP image search.

Named for a medieval Roman Catholic order of religious warriors who fought Muslim armies for control of Jerusalem, Knights Templar is a splinter group of La Familia, another cult-like cartel whose leader, Nazario Moreno Gonzalez, published a motivational pamphlet called "The Sayings of the Craziest One."

While La Familia claimed strict codes of conduct among its members, including prohibiting using or selling drugs within Mexican territory, it didn't distribute its booklets publicly. The contents of its "bible," reportedly based on the teachings of U.S. evangelist John Eldredge, have never been revealed by authorities. The cartel became one of Mexico's major sources of methamphetamine.

The Mexican government claims to have all but dismantled La Familia since Moreno was killed in a shootout with federal police last December and another founder, Jose de Jesus Mendez Vargas, was arrested last month.

But the mayhem and killing has continued in Michoacan as Knights Templar gunmen battle both the Zetas cartel and remnants of La Familia seeking to control President Felipe Calderon's home state more than 4½ years after Calderon launched his crackdown on organized crime here in 2006.

More than 35,000 people have died in drug violence across Mexico since then, according to government figures, and some groups put the number at more than 40,000.

Calderon has said he took on the cartels to prevent organized crime from spreading to the roots of Mexican society.

Like La Familia, Knights Templar claims to be highly religious, but unlike La Familia, the new cartel has sought to distribute its teachings to the general public with kitschy but florid posters, banners, emblems and even medieval robes.

"God is the truth and there is no truth without God," reads one passage in the booklet.

The person who gave the AP the professionally printed, pocket-size booklet said it was distributed earlier this month by two men in regular clothing aboard a bus traveling in rural Michoacan. He said the men handing out the material then sat down among the other passengers and, without saying a word, got off at the next stop. He asked that his name not be used for fear of retaliation.

The booklet says cartel members "must fight against materialism," and respect women and children. It prohibits them from killing for money and says, "for all members of the order, the use of any drugs or any hallucinogen is strictly prohibited." It mandates drug testing for members.

The Knights Templar have criticized federal police for failing to protect Michoacan against incursions by the ultra-violent Zetas.

The group may have helped organize a demonstration last week in the Michoacan city of Apatzingan, where people chanted "Federal police, get out!" Some young men scrawled slogans like "100 percent Knights Templar" on their T-shirts.

Government security spokesman Alejandro Poire did not respond to a reporter's question about whether the cartel had organized last Wednesday's demonstration, but said it had been known to do so in the past.

"It would not be the first time that various criminal organizations seek to use propaganda or publicity tools, but I stress that there is no criminal propaganda that can weaken the efforts of federal forces," Poire said Tuesday. "The stepped-up federal police presence will remain there."

While authorities at three government law enforcement agencies refused to confirm the authenticity of the AP's copy, the title is the same as three booklets that federal police found in a July 15 raid in Apatzingan that netted a suspect identified as the chief hit man for the cartel.

Along with the booklet, which also preaches loyalty to family and country, police also have confiscated banners with messages from the gang, trucks emblazoned with Templar "shields," and even white robes with red crosses like the ones worn by the original Knights Templar order.

The original knights were outlawed in Europe and executed and their order dismantled beginning in 1307.

Photos from a Mexican army raid the previous day on a Templar training camp in Zacapu, Michoacan, show pages like those in the booklet as well as a medieval-style helmet made of steel grating and the white tunics.

National security expert Javier Oliva at Mexico's National Autonomous University said the propaganda may have some pull in rural areas where the government is weak and lawlessness and violence are rampant.

"They mirror a bit the sociological, anthropological logic of the Mafia," he said. "They seek to take justice into their own hands in a Mexico where no functional justice system exists."

The propaganda campaign isn't winning over everyone.

The Mexico chapter of the modern-day Knights Templar Order issued a statement saying that "we disown completely and totally this disagreeable situation ... we have never had nor will we have contact with any of these people who display banners depicting themselves as Templars, and using this sacred name."

Welsh-born painter Mark Churms, who works from a studio in West Virginia, said he was never contacted by anyone in Mexico seeking to use his painting of a medieval knight, which appears in the booklet.

"When I was painting that image, I wasn't thinking, 'Wow, this would look good on a drug cartel leaflet,'" Churms said. "I hope people don't look at this and believe the hype that they are in any way connected with a monastic order."

TheUnhivedMind - July 19, 2011 04:35 AM (GMT)

Interesting isn't it folks how the Jesuit logo has thirty two flames on its Sun disc and the 32nd degree of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry has the Jesuit motto of 'Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam'. Not forgetting that these revived Templars from Aragon created the Scottish Rite in France including all the degrees instituted by their ally, Frederick the Great. Don't be deceived by those who'd rather you didn't know this knowledge.

You have documentation that proves it?
I understood the the motto of the 32º of the A:.A:. was "SPES MEA IN DEO EST".

What is this A:.A:. you're speaking of? The Arcana Arcanorum?

E.: Field blue; on it is a golden lion, holding in his mouth a key of gold, and a gold collar around his neck, with the figures 525 on the collar. Motto at the base, "Custos Areani," and in some rituals, "Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam" - the latter is the motto of the Jesuits. Around this standard are stationed the Knights of the Sun, the Commanders of the Temple, and the Princes of Mercy, 28th, 27th, and 26th degrees. Standard Bearer, Aholiab.

QUOTE

32. SUBLIME PRINCE OF THE ROYAL SECRET

This degree, originally a Christian degree of Knighthood, "consummates the Templarism of Masonry." Only "a lover of wisdom and an apostle of Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity" is eligible to partake of this exalted degree, which is military in character (as the previous degree was judicial). The Chivalric nature of Masonry is explained by the Knightly Armor of the Templar, which is buckled upon the novitiate piece by piece.

The Lodge, styled a Consistory, is hung in black, strewed with silver tears, skulls and cross-bones, and skeletons. In the East is a throne, ascended by seven steps, and draped in black satin with flame tears. An altar before the throne is also draped in black satin, with a skull and cross- bones, and the letter J above it, and the letter M below it. In front of each Warden in the West is a table, covered in crimson, with crossed swords and the letters "N-K .'. M-K .'." .

Also in the West is the "Camp of the Princes:" a nonagon, which encloses a heptagon, which encloses a pentagon, which encloses a triangle, which encloses a circle with a cross inside it. On the sides of the nonagon are nine Tents, each denoted by a letter, a flag and pennon, a Commanding Officer, and assigned to certain degrees of the A.A.S.R.:

	Flag and Pennon	Camp of...	Commanding Officer
1. S	White & crimson	18th, 17th	Malachi
2. A	Green	16th, 15th	Zerubbabel
3. L	Red	14th	Nehemiah
4. I	Black & red	13th, 12th	Joabert
5. X	Black	11th, 10th, 9th	Paleg
6. N	Red & black	8th	Jehoiada
7. O	Red & green	7th, 6th	Aholiab
8. N	Green	5th, 4th	Joshua
9. I	Blue	3rd, 2nd, 1st	Ezra

On each of the external sides of the pentagon are five Standards, each with colored fields, devices, mottos, bearers, and assigned to certain degrees of the A.A.S.R.:

	Color & Device	Degrees	Borne by
1. T	Purple, Ark of Covenant	30th, 29th	Bezaleel
2. E	Blue, Gold lion with key	28th, 27th, 26th	Aholiab
3. N	White, Flaming heart with Black wings	25th, 24th, 23rd	Mah-Shim
4. G	Green, Black two-headed eagle	22nd, 21st	Garimont
5. U	Gold, Black ox	20th, 19th	Amariah

Mottos:

1. "Laus Deo"

2. "Custos Arcani," "Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam"

3. "Ardens Gloria Surgit"

4. "Corde Gladio Potens"

5. "Omnia Tempus Alit"

Inside the triangle are encamped the Princes of the Royal Secret and Grand Inspector Inquisitor Commanders, "with such Knights of Malta as, having proved themselves true and faithful, may have been received among us." Inside the circle are the five Grand Inspectors General who serve as Lieutenant Commanders under the Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander.

Battery: [1-4].

The apron is white, lined in black, with a double-headed eagle and a plan of the Camp of the Princes.

The jewel is a golden Teutonic cross, with a double-headed white and black eagle in the center.

Obama to Israel: Give back seized land

Call sets the stage for meeting with Netanyahu

By: Ben Feller

http://www.winnipegfreepress.com/world/oba...-122291583.html

WASHINGTON -- U.S. President Barack Obama on Thursday endorsed a key Palestinian demand for the borders of its future state and prodded Israel to accept that it can never have a truly peaceful nation based on "permanent occupation."

Obama's urging that a Palestinian state be based on 1967 borders -- before the Six Day War in which Israel occupied East Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza -- was a significant shift in the U.S. approach. It drew an immediate negative response from Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who is to meet with Obama at the White House Friday.

In a statement released Thursday in Jerusalem, Netanyahu called the 1967 lines "indefensible," saying such a withdrawal would jeopardize Israel's security and leave major West Bank settlements outside Israeli borders, though Obama left room for adjustments reached through negotiations.

At the same time, it was not immediately clear whether Obama's statement on the 1967 borders as the basis for negotiations -- something the Palestinians have long sought -- would be sufficient to persuade the Palestinians to drop their push for UN recognition of their statehood. Obama rejected the Palestinians' unilateral statehood bid Thursday as he sought to underscore U.S. support for Israel notwithstanding the endorsement of the 1967 borders.

"Symbolic actions to isolate Israel at the United Nations in September won't create an independent state," Obama said.

Obama's comments came in his most comprehensive response to date to the uprisings sweeping the Arab world. Speaking at the State Department, he called for the first time for the leader of Syria to embrace democracy or move aside, though without specifically demanding his ouster.

As he addressed audiences abroad and at home, Obama sought to leave no doubt that the U.S. stands behind the protesters who have swelled from nation to nation across the Middle East and North Africa, while also trying to convince American viewers that U.S. involvement in unstable countries halfway around the world is in their interest, too.

Obama said the United States has a historic opportunity and the responsibility to support the rights of people clamouring for freedoms, and he called for "a new chapter in American diplomacy."

"We know that our own future is bound to this region by the forces of economics and security; history and faith," the president said.

He hailed the killing of al-Qaida terrorist leader Osama bin Laden and declared that bin Laden's vision of destruction was fading even before U.S. forces shot him dead.

Obama said the "shouts of human dignity are being heard across the region."

The president noted that two leaders had stepped down -- referring to Egypt and Tunisia -- and said that "more may follow."

Obama said that while there will be setbacks accompanying progress in political transitions, the movements present a valuable opportunity for the U.S. to show which side it is on. "We have a chance to show that America values the dignity of the street vendor in Tunisia more than the raw power of a dictator," he said, referring to the fruit vendor who killed himself in despair and sparked a chain of events that unleashed uprisings around the Arab world.

-- The Associated Press

Speech outlines vision for troubled region

Other elements of President Barack Obama's approach to the Middle East and northern Africa, as outlined in a speech Thursday.

SYRIA: President Bashar Assad, whose regime has been brutally seeking to quell a popular uprising, can either lead a transition to democracy or, in Obama's words, "get out of the way." The regime, Obama said, must permit peaceful protests, release political prisoners and give access to human rights monitors. The administration imposed sanctions on Assad this week.

OSAMA BIN LADEN: Bin Laden's death, Obama said, is a "huge blow" to al-Qaida. Though he won some adherents, he said, al-Qaida has lost relevance. The people of the region, Obama said, have come to see the terrorist group's agenda "as a dead end."

YEMEN AND BAHRAIN: Both U.S. allies. Obama reiterated U.S. demands that Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh "follow through on his commitment to transfer power." He demanded Bahrain halt mass arrests and use of force against protesters and that the government engage in a "dialogue" with the opposition.

EGYPT AND TUNISIA: Two countries where uprisings deposed long-standing regimes. Obama said the U.S. has asked the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund to present a plan at next week's G8 summit that sets a path to stabilize and modernize the economies of both countries. The U.S. will forgive up to $1 billion in Egyptian debt and guarantee another $1 billion to finance infrastructure and new jobs.

LIBYA: Obama said it is costly and difficult to seek to oust a regime by outside military force. But he said Libya was unique because "had we not acted along with our NATO allies and regional coalition partners, thousands would have been killed." He said time is working against Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi and that the opposition has organized a "legitimate and credible" interim council.

IRAQ: Obama put an encouraging face on changes in Iraq, saying it offers the promise of a multiethnic and multisectarian democracy. He said Iraq is "poised to play a key role in the region if it continues its peaceful progress."

IRAN: Obama cast Tehran's leaders as hypocrites who support protests in other countries but repress those at home.

Netanyahu associate: Obama detached from reality

Prime minister’s associate slam US president’s speech, says ‘he didn’t deliver the goods,’ fails to understand Mideast realities. Israeli PM prepared for confrontation with Obama over vital issues, Netanyahu’s aides say

Attila Somfalvi Published: 05.20.11, 02:21 / Israel News
http://www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-4071411,00.html

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu’s associates expressed their disappointment with Barack Obama’s speech Thursday, with one aide saying that the US president is detached from regional realities.

The PM’s associates told Ynet early Friday that Netanyahu, who departed to the US Thursday night, is prepared for a confrontation withPresident Obama on vital issues.

Referring to the US president’s Mideast policy speech, a Netanyahu associate said: “He (Obama) didn’t deliver the goods…Obama apparently does not understand the reality in the Mideast.”

The PM's aides added that Obama's historic speech lacked many key points and that his address was "bad for Israel." Netanyahu himself issued a quick response to the speech earlier, demanding that the president reaffirm previous US pledges that Israel will not be asked to withdraw to the 1967 borders in the framework of a peace deal with the Palestinians.

In his Washington speech, Obama said that a Jewish, democratic state must be based on the 1967 borders, with territorial tradeoffs. The president voiced his objection to the Palestinian intention to seek UN recognition of statehood in September, but refrained from addressing the contentious issue of Palestinian refugees.

Obama also refrained from harshly slamming the Fatah-Hamas reconciliation agreement, and reminded Netanyahu that the international community was getting tired of a process that has not culminated in a peace deal.

'Bibi faces problematic coalition'

A Netanyahu associate told Ynet that the president apparently "forgot the conditions set forth by the International Quartet, which Obama himself endorsed."

The aide added that Obama did not meet any demand set forth by the prime minister, referring to Netanyahu's recent speech where he declared that Israel will not give up settlement blocs and maintain a military presence along the Jordan River.

Obama also did not address in his speech the issue of Palestinian recognition of the Jewish State as a pre-condition for negotiations.

"Netanyahu is willing to offer painful concessions. In his Knesset speech, the prime minister went far," a Bibi associate said. "He contends with a problematic rightist coalition. We expected Obama to understand this and take these issues into consideration in his speech."

TheUnhivedMind - May 21, 2011 03:10 AM (GMT)

It seems that Netanyahu hasn't been reading 'Morals & Dogma' by Albert Pike the once Sovereign Commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite who was controlled by Jesuit soldier, Pierre Jean De-Smet SJ. I suggest he does look at this if he hasn't and he'll see how Zionism is to be destroyed along along with Islam and pitted against one another.

Israel PM defiant over Obama border proposals

Israeli PM Benjamin Netanyahu rejects pre-1967 border agreement call

21 May 2011 Last updated at 05:13

http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/world-middle-east-13481924

Israeli PM Benjamin Netanyahu has rejected US President Barack Obama's call for peace with the Palestinians based on pre-1967 borders.

After tense talks at the White House, a defiant Mr Netanyahu said Israel was prepared to compromise but there could be no peace "based on illusions".

Mr Obama, who formally adopted the principle on Thursday, admitted there were "differences" between the views.

But he said such differences were possible "between friends".

In his speech to the state department on Thursday, Mr Obama stated overtly for the first time that the peace talks should be based on a future Palestinian state within the borders in place before the 1967 Middle East War.

"The borders of Israel and Palestine should be based on the 1967 lines with mutually agreed swaps, so that secure and recognised borders are established for both states," he said.

This proposal has been a key demand of the Palestinians in the negotiations.

But speaking in the Oval Office after their meeting, Mr Netanyahu flatly rejected this proposal, saying Israel wanted "a peace that will be genuine".

"We both agree that a peace based on illusions will crash eventually on the rocks of Middle Eastern reality, and that the only peace that will endure is one that is based on reality, on unshakeable facts."

'Demographic changes'

Israel was "prepared to make generous compromises for peace", he said, but could not go back to the 1967 borders "because these lines are indefensible".

He said the old borders did not take into account the "demographic changes that have taken place over the last 44 years".

An estimated 500,000 Israelis now live in settlements built in the Palestinian West Bank, which lies outside those borders.

The settlements are illegal under international law, although Israel disputes this.

Mr Obama said there were obviously "some differences" in the "precise formulations and language" used by Israel and the US, but that this "happens between friends".

He did not bring up the matter of the borders in his joint conference with Mr Netanyahu.

But he said Palestinians faced "tough choices" following the recent reconciliation deal between Fatah, which runs the West Bank, and Hamas, which governs Gaza and still denies Israel's right to exist.

Mr Obama said true peace could only occur if Israel was allowed to defend itself against threats.

The BBC's Paul Adams in Washington says that while notion of a peace agreement based on 1967 lines is not news, Mr Obama has clearly angered Mr Netanyahu by formally adopting it.

Mr Netanyahu has come under increasing pressure as world figures and organisations, including American's partners in the Middle East Peace Quartet, EU, UN and Russia - lined up to back Mr Obama's position.

Arab League chief, Amr Moussa, also called on President Obama to remain committed to the plan.

But in the absence of a viable peace process, it is unclear what will come of US-Israel talks, says our correspondent.

TheUnhivedMind - May 24, 2011 09:56 PM (GMT)

Benjamin Netanyahu speech to Congress unlikely to do much for peace process

Benjamin Netanyahu's aides had promised it would be one of the most important speeches he would ever deliver, predicting that he would surprise and impress the world in equal measure.

By Adrian Blomfield, Jerusalem 10:00PM BST 24 May 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...ce-process.html

By that yardstick, the Israeli prime minister's address to a joint meeting of Congress has probably failed to meet such exalted expectations.

Mr Netanyahu moved himself closer to the peacemaking mainstream by conceding for the first time that he would be prepared to surrender outlying Jewish settlements in the West Bank under a peace deal.

Although that represents a step forward for Mr Netanyahu it is unlikely to do the same for the peace process.

For the Palestinians, his speech was more combative than placatory and it crossed a number of their red lines, particularly on the future of Jerusalem and Mr Netanyahu's insistence that the Jordan Valley, which makes up 30 per cent of the West Bank, remain under Israeli military occupation.

Despite promising to be generous about the size of a future Palestinian state, his offer is also less substantial than those made by two of his predecessors, Ehud Olmert and Ehud Barak.
Related Articles
Israel prepared to make 'painful compromises' for peace 24 May 2011

Yet few seriously expected that Mr Netanyahu's speech was going to yield a major breakthrough in the peace process. The Palestinian reaction has certainly confirmed such pessimism.

Instead the prime minister hoped to show his western and domestic critics, who have long doubted his commitment to peace, that he is prepared to make "painful sacrifices" to resume negotiations.

In this regard he may prove more successful. By signalling his willingness to sacrifice some settlements, he has placed himself on a collision course with the powerful pro-settler lobby that forms a significant part of his political constituency.

Supporters also point out that, unlike his predecessors, Mr Netanyahu has offered his concessions outside the confines of formal negotiations.

"Netanyahu has gone this far publicly without negotiations," said Anat Wilf, a legislator from the moderate wing of the prime minister's ruling coalition.

"Indeed, he has gone further than any prime minister has gone before in public."

Mr Netanyahu may still be more a hawk than a dove, but by moving closer to the centre he has the potential to present himself to the international community as someone who speaks for the majority in Israel rather than just its extremist fringes.

Barack Obama's Middle East speeches 'insufficient and contradictory'

10:00PM BST 24 May 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...tradictory.html

Azzam al-Ahmed, the chief negotiator for the Palestinian Fatah faction, described Mr Obama's endorsement of Israel's 1967 borders as a "positive signal, which is regrettably insufficient," adding that subsequent statements by Obama sounded discouraging.

In a speech last Thursday, Mr Obama endorsed the Palestinian position on the borders of their future state, saying it should be based on Israel's borders before the 1967 Mideast war. Israel captured the West Bank, east Jerusalem and Gaza Strip in the fighting, and the Palestinians claim those areas for their state.

At the same time, Obama reiterated his request that the Palestinians drop their plans to appeal for recognition at the U.N. this fall.

Al-Ahmed said that the Palestinians believe the move is necessary to overcome a deadlock in peace talks. "We aren't planning to unilaterally declare independence," he said.

Obama also raised tough questions about an emerging Palestinian unity government that is to include Hamas.

Earlier this month, Palestinian factions signed a landmark pact to end a longtime rift between the two main Palestinian movements, Fatah in the West Bank and Hamas in the Gaza Strip. They also agreed to form a caretaker government.

Israel has described the deal as a deadly blow to peace, saying it won't negotiate with a Palestinian government that includes the Iranian-backed group.

Mr Obama referred to Hamas in his Sunday's address to the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a powerful pro-Israel lobby, saying that no country can be expected to negotiate with a terrorist group sworn to its destruction.

"Obama's statements can be seen as an attempt to assuage Israel," said Moussa Abu Marzouk, a top Hamas leader who was among the Palestinians on a visit to Moscow. He shrugged off the US and Israeli criticism of the reconciliation deal.

"The US and Israel had cast the rift between the Palestinians as the main obstacle to peace," he said. "And now when we have reached a reconciliation agreement, they say it's an obstacle to peace. Which of these two positions is correct?"

Russia's foreign minister strongly backed the reconciliation deal, saying at Monday's meeting with the Palestinians that it would help advance the Mideast peace process.

Abu Marzouk on Tuesday bristled at Mr Obama's call for the recognition of Israel, saying that would mean recognizing Israel's sovereignty over what they see as the Palestinian lands.

"For me and my Palestinian comrades, the recognition of Israel would amount to recognizing that we have forgotten our home, our lands," Abu Marzouk said. "That's why we can't recognize Israel."

Al-Ahmed said that the Palestinian leadership was to hold a meeting in Ramallah Wednesday to determine its stance regarding Obama's statements.

Israel prepared to make 'painful compromises' for peace

Benjamin Netanyahu, the Israeli prime minister, said on Tuesday that Israelis were prepared to make "painful compromises" in a peace deal that would leave some or outlying Jewish settlements beyond the state's agreed borders.

By Toby Harnden, Washington 10:00PM BST 24 May 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...-for-peace.html

In a speech to a joint session of both houses of the United States Congress, Mr Netanyahu for the first time conceded that he recognised "in a genuine peace we will be required to give up parts of the ancestral Jewish homeland", referring to the occupied West Bank.

"I am willing to make painful compromises to achieve this historical peace," the Likud leader said in comments that will enrage some right-wing members of his coalition government. "As the leader of Israel, it is my responsibility."

While "the status of the settlements will be decided only in negotiations", he said, Israelis had "to be honest" about the nature of any final settlement.

"So I'm saying today something that should be said publicly by all those who are serious about peace. In any real peace agreement, in any peace agreement that ends the conflict, some settlements will end up beyond Israel's borders."

Mr Netanyahu's words were somewhat of an olive branch for President Barack Obama, with whom he clashed with last week, as well as being aimed at world opinion and particularly the British and French governments, which will vote at the United Nations in September on whether to recognise Palestinian statehood.

But although he stated that "we'll be generous about the size of the future Palestinian state" he emphasised that "as President Obama said, the border will be different than the one that existed on June 4th, 1967" and maintained: "Israel will not return to the indefensible boundaries of 1967."

Palestinians want East Jerusalem to be the capital of their future state but Mr Netanyahu insisted: "Jerusalem must never again be divided. Jerusalem must remain the united capital of Israel."

He added: "Any peace deal must take into account the dramatic demographic changes that have occurred since 1967. The vast majority of the 650,000 Israelis who live beyond the 1967 lines reside in neighbourhoods and suburbs of Jerusalem and greater Tel Aviv."

Palestinians immediately issued a strong rebuke to Mr Netanyahu's speech. Nabil Shaath, an aide to Mahmoud Abbas, the Palestinian president, said that the speech amounted to a "declaration of war" and was unacceptable. Another official said there was "nothing new" in the speech, which was simply a means of "adding obstacles" on the road to peace while a Hamas official said he was imposing "impossible conditions". A Palestinian negotiator added that they would have no choice but to approach the UN in September to seek recognition of Palestinian statehood.

By seizing on Mr Obama's clarification in his speech to the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) conference on Sunday that his reference three days earlier to 1967 borders would be a starting rather than end point for talks, Mr Netanyahu was seeking to limit damage to Israel's negotiating position.

He also called on Palestinians to see their future "homeland", rather than Israel, as the place to settle refugees from the 1948 war that founded the Jewish state. Palestinians demand a "right of return" to their pre-1948 lands, which Israelis view as a de facto dismantling of Israel.

"It's time for President Abbas to stand before his people and say, 'I will accept a Jewish state'," Mr Netanyahu said, receiving one of more than two dozen standing ovations.

"Those six words will change history. They will make it clear to the Palestinians that this conflict will come to an end. And those six words will convince the people of Israel that they have a true partner for peace."

He demanded that Mr Abbas, leader of the more moderate Palestinian group Fatah, should pull out of a power-sharing agreement brokered with the hard-line Islamist group Hamas, which he labelled "the Palestinian al-Qaeda".

"Tear up your pact with Hamas and sit down and negotiate, make peace with the Jewish state," he implored.

India pledges support for Palestine

‘India welcomes the recent reconciliation agreement between Fatah and Hamas on the West Bank and Gaza'

India has affirmed a “continuing commitment to Palestine” and voiced support for “the Palestinian people's struggle for a sovereign, independent, viable, and united State of Palestine.”

Addressing the Non-aligned Movement (NAM) Committee on Palestine in Bali, Minister of State for External Affairs, E. Ahamed, said: “India welcomes the recent reconciliation agreement between Fatah and Hamas on the West Bank and Gaza.”

The NAM panel on Palestine was convened on the occasion of the movement's 50th anniversary meeting in the Indonesian island-resort. A parallel three-day NAM ministerial meeting and the commemorative event were declared open by Indonesian President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono.

At the panel session, Mr. Ahamed spelt out India's emphatic endorsement of the Palestinian struggle for a “united State of Palestine, with East Jerusalem as its capital, living within secure and recognised borders – side by side and at peace with Israel.”

He recounted that India's stand was in sync with the Arab Peace Initiative on this issue, the Quartet Roadmap, and the relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions.

Expressing the “hope” that the recent Fatah-Hamas reconciliation accord “would lead to peace and stability in the region,” he said India wanted an “end to the illegal Israeli settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories.” Reaffirming India's call for “an early and significant easing of restrictions on the free movement of persons and goods in Palestine,” he noted that the blockade on Gaza was adversely affecting the population there.

Tracing New Delhi's “deep association” with the Palestinian cause, dating back to a timeline before India gained Independence, Mr. Ahamed described the commitment to Palestine as “a central feature of India's foreign policy.” Down the memory avenue, one could not miss India's recognition of the State of Palestine in 1988, acknowledgment of Palestine Liberation Organisation as the sole and legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, and New Delhi's initial vote against the partition of Palestine, he pointed out.

In a detailed intervention, Mr. Ahamed outlined India's more recent material assistance to the Palestine National Authority since 1996.

Earlier this year, New Delhi allocated $10 million for this purpose, signifying the same level of contribution as in the previous year. India's annual contribution towards the U.N. programmes for Palestinian refugees was recently raised to $1 million.

At the plenary session of the commemorative conference, Mr. Ahamed suggested that NAM play a role in shaping a multi-polar global order in which the developing countries would have a qualitatively significant voice.

'Spain will recognize Palestinian state on 1967 lines'

Shaath says Spain wants Palestine recognized in UN; announcement comes as Abbas meets with Islamic Jihad officials, Gen. Tantawi in Cairo to discuss Hamas-Fatah reconciliation, Mideast peace process.
Talkbacks (47)

The Palestinian Authority announced on Thursday that Spain has decided to recognize a Palestinian state along the 1967 lines before September. A spanish diplomat told Palestinian negotiator Nabil Shaath that Spain would support making the state of Palestine a UN member.

The announcement came as Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas met in Cairo on Monday, under the auspices of Egyptian authorities, with Ramadan Shallah, Secretary-General of the Islamic Jihad organization, and his deputy, Ziad Nakhleh.

The meeting between Abbas and the Syrian-based Islamic Jihad leaders dealt with ways of consolidating Palestinian national reconciliation, a PA official said.

The two sides also discussed the PA security crackdown on Islamic Jihad operatives and supporters in the West Bank, the official said.

Islamic Jihad has condemned the ongoing crackdown and urged the PA to release all its men, especially in wake of the Hamas-Fatah reconciliation accord that was reached in Cairo three weeks ago.

Under the former regime of Hosni Mubarak, Islamic Jihad leaders and members were unwelcome in Egypt.

An Islamic Jihad official said that the talks also focused on ways of "confronting future challenges and Israeli threats." He described the meeting with Abbas as positive and thorough.

Abbas, who arrived in Cairo, also held talks with Gen. Hussein Tantawi, head of the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, and briefed him on the latest developments surrounding the stalled Middle East peace process.

Abbas also briefed Tantawi on the outcome of the emergency meeting of Arab League foreign ministers in Qatar last weekend.

The ministers voiced their backing for Abbas's plan to ask the United Nations in September to recognize a Palestinian state on the 1967 lines.

Abbas is also seeking Cairo's help in overcoming differences with Hamas over the establishment of a unity government in accordance with the reconciliation agreement.

PA negotiator Nabil Shaath announced on Monday that Spain was planning to recognize the Palestinian state before September.

Shaath's announcement came after he met in Ramallah with Spanish Consul-General Alfonso Portable.

Shaath said that the PA was pursuing its efforts to secure additional backing and international recognition for the statehood bid.

He said that the Spanish diplomat stressed that his country would support making the state of Palestine a member of the UN.

Shaath said that he was planning to visit Armenia, Moldavia, the Philippines, Mexico and Columbia to persuade them to support the statehood bid in September

Pope meets Abbas, Palestinian state 'soon'

VATICAN CITY -- The Vatican says a Palestinian state must "soon" live side by side in peace and security with Israel.

The Vatican issued the statement Friday after Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas met with Pope Benedict XVI and other Vatican officials.

During the meetings, the two sides discussed the need to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and recognize the "legitimate" rights of Palestinians to a homeland. The Vatican said "that soon the state of Israel and the Palestinian state must live in security, at peace with their neighbors and within internationally recognized borders."

The Vatican has long supported a Palestinian state. The Vatican said it had to be done "soon" as the Palestinians mobilize support for recognition as an independent state in September.

Israel government 'reckless and irresponsible' says ex-Mossad chief

Meir Dagan attacks Binyamin Netanyahu for aggression towards Iran, and for failing to make any progress with the Palestinians

Conal Urquhart in Jerusalem guardian.co.uk, Friday 3 June 2011 18.01 BST http://www.guardian.co.uk/world/2011/jun/0...ss-mossad-chief

The former head of Israel's spy service has launched an unprecedented attack on the country's current government, describing it as "irresponsible and reckless", and has praised Arab attempts to reach an Israeli-Palestinian peace agreement.

Meir Dagan stepped down as the head of Mossad six months ago but has gone on the offensive in a series of briefings with journalists and public appearances because he feels that Israel's security is being mismanaged by Binyamin Netanyahu, the prime minister, and Ehud Barak, the defence minister.

One newspaper quotes him as saying that he, as head of Mossad, Yuval Diskin, the head of Sin Bet – the internal security agency, and Gabi Ashkenazi, the head of the army, could prevent Netanyahu and Barak from making mistakes but all three have left their positions and have been replaced by men chosen by the current government.

"I decided to speak because when I was in office, Diskin, Ashkenazi and I could block any dangerous adventure. Now I am afraid that there is no one to stop Bibi [Netanyahu] and Barak," said Dagan.

Upon leaving his post, Dagan publicly warned against Israel attacking Iran to stop it from acquiring nuclear weapons.

In his latest comments, he said that if Israel attacks Iran, it will find itself at the centre of a regional war that would endanger the state's existence. Dagan's intervention is dangerous for Netanyahu because it comes from the right wing of Israeli opinion rather than the left, where the prime minister would expect criticism.

Dagan has been in charge of aggressive Israeli actions abroad in recent years, that have included assassinations in Lebanon, Syria and Dubai and an air attack on a suspected nuclear reactor in Syria. He also criticised Israel's failure to offer any initiative to resolve the conflict with the Palestinians .

The absence of any workable plan, he said, will leave Israel in a dangerous and weak situation if the Palestinians push for UN recognition of a state later this year.

Dagan also endorsed Saudi Arabia's peace plan which offered Israel normal relations with all Arab countries if it reaches a peace agreement with the Palestinians. Leading columnist Ari Shavit summarised Dagan's point of view in the Ha'aretz newspaper: "Dagan is extremely concerned about September 2011. He is not afraid that tens of thousands of demonstrators may overrun the settlements. He is afraid that Israel's subsequent isolation will push its leaders to the wall and cause them to take reckless action against Iran."

Ben Caspit of the Maariv newspaper wrote: "He is one of the most rightwing militant people ever born here ... who ate Arabs for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

"When this man says that the leadership has no vision and is irresponsible, we should stop sleeping soundly at night."

Dagan was quoted in the newspaper Yedioth Ahronoth describing Netanyahu and Barak as "irresponsible and reckless individuals".

Dagan's criticism of Netanyahu comes when the prime minister is enjoying popular support following his trip to Washington and his speech to Congress.

Opinion polls suggest that Netanyahu has a nine-point lead over his nearest challenger and his Likud party is the most popular in the country.

However, Dagan's intervention suggests that while Netanyahu is seen as an able performer in public, he believes that behind the scenes he is less astute.

A spokesman for the prime minister said that he would not discuss Dagan's comments. However members of the cabinet told the Israeli media: "Dagan was out of line on the Iranian issue. This damages deterrence, because the military option must be on the table as a credible option after sanctions.

"If you come and say, 'we can't attack Iran, it's impossible,' you project weakness to the Iranians and make it look like you don't have the courage to do it, and that they can do whatever they want.

"More seriously, it sends a message to the world that they can take their foot off the gas pedal of sanctions."

HRC keeps clause dedicated to Israel

UN automatically approves Human Rights Council agenda for next five years, which keeps Israel as only state in world specifically targeted for human rights violations. US, Canada, and Palau only states to join Israel in objecting

Yitzhak Benhorin Published: 06.17.11, 23:33 / Israel News
http://www.ynetnews.com/articles/0,7340,L-4083617,00.html

WASHINGTON – Israel demanded Friday a UN vote and called on members to vote against a Human Rights Council agenda for the next five years, which will keep Israel as the only permanent state to be targeted out of 192 member-states.

The agenda in its current form ensures a continuing and skewed focus on Israel while ignoring other dictatorships and blatant human rights violations.

Israel requested a vote in order to prevent the automatic approval by the UN General Assembly, and in order to allow the state to express its objections.

The US, Canada, and Palau are the only countries that joined Israel in objecting to the agenda, which passed with an automatic approval of 154 states.

Ron Prosor, who just days ago officially assumed the position of Israel's UN ambassador, told Ynet the agenda was absurd.

"These days, as Assad slaughters his citizens, Gaddafi murders his countrymen, and in Yemen people are being gunned down in the street, The Human Rights Council is dedicating a special clause to the issue of human rights in Israel," he said.

"It is utter insolence that tyrannical regimes are judging Israel, the only democratic country in the Middle East, with a dignified court system."

Prosor added, "The Human Rights Council has missed a golden opportunity to become an international body that the global community can treat with respect and seriousness."

The five-year agenda dedicates a clause number seven to Israel while all other countries in the world – including Yemen, Syria, and Libya – are united under clause four, which describes human rights violations in the entire world.

The Human Rights Council was established in 2006 and replaced the United Nations Commission on Human Rights (UNCHR), which lost its reliability, partly due to its disproportionate treatment towards Israel.

Israel was hoping the HRC would make more objective decisions and the US negotiated extensively to this end, but apparently to no avail. Since its establishment, the HRC has met 17 times, 14 of which meetings concluded in anti-Israel resolutions.

Israel has also made numerous attempts to change the HRC's agenda over the past five years, but the council is within complete control of a number of nations which are themselves human rights violators. Libya was, until March, also a member.

US 'could withdraw funding from UN if Palestine state is recognised'

The US could withdraw funding from the United Nations if its members decide to recognise and independent Palestinian state, a close ally of President Barack Obama has warned.

By Jon Swaine, New York and Adrian Blomfield
6:21PM BST 24 Jun 2011
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...recognised.html

Susan Rice, the American ambassador to the UN, said there was "no greater threat" to US support and funding of the UN than the prospect of Palestinian statehood being endorsed by member states.

Mahmoud Abbas, president of the Palestinian authority, plans to ask the UN general assembly, which comprises all 192 members, to vote on recognition at its annual meeting in New York in September.

The US and Israel are pressing Mr Abbas to drop his plans. Mr Obama has strongly opposed the move, raising the prospect of a veto in the UN Security Council, which is expected to vote on a Palestinian statehood proposal in July.

But Palestinian officials have spoken of their determination to a circumvent a US veto by deploying a rarely used Cold War mechanism known as "Uniting for Peace" under which a two-thirds majority in the General Assembly can override the Security Council.

Although Palestinians believe they are close to securing such a majority, the General Assembly does not have the power to confer UN membership on a new Palestinian state, meaning that a successful vote would represent little more than a symbolic triumph.

Even so, Republicans in the US Congress are promising to react aggressively to any approval of statehood. Two congressmen have already vowed to initiate bills to withdraw UN funding in the House of Representatives.

Such a development could be devastating to the UN. The US provides almost a quarter of its $2.5 billion (£1.6 billion) annual budget, making a yearly contribution of almost $600 million (£375 million).

Speaking at an event in Washington, Miss Rice said the Obama administration was devoting "extraordinary efforts and energy" to restarting middle-eastern peace talks so that a vote in September could be avoided.

On the prospect of it being approved, she said: "This would be exceedingly politically damaging in our domestic context, as you can well imagine.

"And I cannot frankly think of a greater threat to our ability to maintain financial and political support for the United Nations in Congress than such an outcome".

A video of Miss Rice making the comments has been removed from the internet.

Attempting to play down their significance, a spokesman for the ambassador said: "These were informal remarks in a domestic setting."

The US is desperate to avoid being put into a position of having to wield its veto. With growing international support for Palestinian statehood, even in Europe, the US is looking increasingly isolated in its support for Israel and a veto would badly damage Mr Obama's credentials in a rapidly changing Middle East.

But the president faces a politically damaging backlash from the pro-Israeli lobby and its many supporters in Congress if he does not block a resolution, a move that could also cost all-important Jewish votes in key swing states like Florida during next year's presidential election.

Mr Obama has already angered the Israeli government and its US supporters by calling for a Palestinian state that roughly corresponds to the existing boundaries of the West Bank and Gaza, which Israel occupied after the Six Day war of 1967.

The move was intended to rejuvenate the stalled Middle East peace process.

But Palestinian officials, in public at least, say they remain committed to a UN vote as the only realistic way of breaking the deadlock.

Western powers have backed a two-year Palestinian state-building programme that reaches fruition at the end of August. It has already been judged a success by the World Bank and International Monetary Fund and Palestinian officials say it would be hypocritical for the West to back the state-building exercise but not its "logical outcome".

Britain has indicated that it would not join the US in vetoing Palestinian statehood in the Security Council. But David Cameron is also hoping to avert a highly divisive vote in the general assembly.

"The question is whether we can do anything that might deflect the Palestinians from going ahead with this," a British diplomatic source said.

Some Palestinian officials have conceded in private that they do not want to fall out with Mr Obama and are working on ways to resume peace talks with Israel and postpone a statehood vote.

Palestinians to apply to Security Council next week for UN membership

DEBKAfile Exclusive Report July 7, 2011, 10:27 PM (GMT+02:00) Tags: Barack Obama Nicolas
http://www.debka.com/article/21091/

On Wednesday, July 6, the Palestinian Authority notified the Obama administration that early next week it would file with the UN Security Council a request for admission to the United Nations as a full member recognized as an independent state within the 1967 borders.

But debkafile's Washington sources report the US had got in first, having agreed with European powers and Russia on a ploy for deferring the Palestinian request. The Security Council would agree to discuss it behind closed doors without setting a date. A senior American official commented: The Security Council will stall by keeping the matter "under consideration" on its regular agenda.

PA Chairman Mahmoud Abbas knew what was going on: That is why his chief negotiator Saeb Erekat said in Washington Thursday, July 7, that there is no contradiction between the Palestinian application for UN recognition and the restart of negotiations with Israel. What Erekat had in mind was the US-French initiative -first revealed exclusively by debkafile Tuesday, July 5 – for the convening of an Israeli-Palestinian peace summit on September 2 in Paris. If this plan takes off, President Barack Obama will come to Paris to join President Nicolas Sarkozy in declaring the talks open alongside Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and PA Chairman Mahmoud Abbas.

By putting of a Security Council debate, the US, France, Israel and the Palestinians have won two months to get negotiations off the ground and moving forward. The Americans hope to bring Turkey aboard for the effort, to which end it is necessary to end the quarrel between Ankara and Jerusalem in that time.

According to US and Israeli sources, Abbas was given to understand that whatever happens, even if the talks stall again, Washington would stand in the way of a Security Council discussion of the Palestinian application. Abbas would then have to decide whether to circumvent the Security Council and take the Palestinian request for recognition of its statehood to the UN General Assembly when it convenes in September.

Tuesday, July 5, debkafile's sources disclosed the US-French plan to convene an Israeli-Palestinian peace summit in Paris on Sept. 2 after ending the Libyan war.

Back to the main story: The Obama and Sarkozy administrations are working together on a plan to convene an Israel-Palestinian peace summit in Paris on Sept. 2 shortly after the Libyan war is brought to a close, debkafile's Washington and Paris exclusive sources disclose. If they can pull it off, Presidents Barack Obama and Nicolas Sarkozy will join Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas at a summit in the French capital to announce the restart of Israel-Palestinian peace talks, thereby calling off the unilateral Palestinian request for UN recognition of an independent state.

President Obama's Special Adviser Dennis Ross and senior French diplomat Jean-David Levitte are leading the effort to get this summit off the ground. According to the US-French plan, it will take place shortly after the Libyan war is brought to a close – ideally by a four-way accord between the US, France, Muammar Qaddafi and the Libyan rebels or, failing agreement, by a crushing NATO military blow in which the United States will also take part. The proposed accord would be based on Muammar Qaddafi's departure and the establishment of a power-sharing transitional administration in Tripoli between the incumbent government and rebel leaders.

The US and French presidents hope to be credited at home and in the Middle East with a triple feat: two diplomatic breakthroughs in the Middle East and a US-French victory in Libya.

To this end, negotiations are going forward with the concerned parties. Russia and the African Union have been drawn into the drive to end the war in Libya. One stumbling block still remaining is Qaddafi's demand for his sons to be part of the proposed transitional administration in Tripoli.

To clear the way for the Paris summit, Ross recently put before Netanyahu Obama's revised formula for the starting-point of negotiations with the Palestinians: Israel would accept the 1967 borders with territorial swaps in exchange for Palestinian recognition of Israel as the national state of the Jewish people. Just this week, the Israeli prime minister said that if the Palestinians recognized Israel as the Jewish homeland, the other outstanding issues could be easily and quickly resolved.

However, it is not clear whether the revised formula had won prior Palestinian approval before it was presented in Jerusalem or Washington intended to later squeeze this concession out of Mahmud Abbas and so drive a crack in the deadlock which has frozen the peace track for more than seven months.

At all events, Netanyahu's reply was qualified. He accepted the new US formula in principle, but batted the ball back into the White House's court. debkafile's sources in Jerusalem and Washington disclose that he made acceptance contingent on President Obama publicly and formally affixing his signature to President Bush's letter of April 2004 to then-Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. This letter constituted a presidential commitment to support negotiations with the Palestinians based on UN Resolution 242 (which promised Israel defensible borders), to refrain from demanding Israel's return to the 1949 lines, and to acknowledge the existence of major Jewish population centers on the West Bank as demographic changes occurring in the years since the Six-Day War.
The prime minister is now waiting for an answer from the White House.

Our sources in Jerusalem explain that this exchange encapsulates the US-Israeli-Palestinian debate over how much territory the land swaps would leave Israel and the Palestinians respectively in future agreements on their borders.

Up until now, the Palestinians have insisted on a ratio of one kilometer in pre-1967 Israel for every kilometer awarded Israel on the West Bank. This ratio Jerusalem has found to be unacceptable. A comprehensive study commissioned by the prime minister's office from the National Security Council found that the big settlement blocs on the West Bank cover roughly 8 percent of West Bank area. Giving up an equal area of Israeli territory would imperil its security no less than a flat return to the 1967 borders. Israel cannot therefore afford to cede more than 4 percent of its sovereign territory at most. The Palestinian demand for parity in the mutual exchanges of land is therefore rejected by Jerusalem.

Jerusalemis reverting to the Bush letter and its reaffirmation of UN Resolution 242 – not just because it better addresses Israel's security needs more advantageous, but also because, "You can't just toss out UN Resolution 242 and Bush's letter to Sharon," Netanyahu has been saying in recent private talks. In his view, the Obama White House cannot simply ignore a presidential commitment given by his predecessor personally to an Israeli prime minister.

In the opinion of the prime minister and his advisers, the formula incorporated in Obama's May 19 speech requiring Israel to return to the 1967 borders with mutual land swaps and accept a non-demilitarized Palestinian state is tantamount to giving up on secure borders. The UN 242 and the Bush commitment upheld this principle and is therefore the option preferred in Jerusalem.

'Majority of US Jews worried about Obama Israel policies'

By GIL HOFFMAN

Among those polled, 65 percent voted for Obama, 24% for John McCain, and 5% did not vote, or voted for someone else.

American Jews still have a favorable opinion of Obama, but are concerned about his policies regarding Israel’s future, a comprehensive bipartisan poll of 600 likely American- Jewish voters indicated. The poll, sponsored by SecureAmericaNow, was taken by Republican pollsters McLaughlin & Associates and Democrat Pat Caddell.

Among those polled, 65 percent voted for Obama, 24% for John McCain, and 5% did not vote, or voted for someone else. Sixtyfour percent had a favorable opinion of Obama and approved of his general performance.

But only 43% would vote to re-elect Obama, while 48% would consider voting for someone else, and 9% are undecided.

And when it comes to Israel – which a plurality said was the most important issue to them – the poll found problematic numbers for Obama.

Indeed, two-thirds of those polled said they would be concerned about Obama’s policies toward Israel if he were re-elected.

Meanwhile, 81% said they were against Israel being forced to return to pre-1967 lines, which Obama said should be the basis for talks, with land swaps.

Nearly three-quarters (73%) believe Jerusalem should remain the undivided capital of Israel. Only 8% think the US should force Israel to give parts of Jerusalem to the Palestinian Authority.

Sixty-four percent believe that if the PA was given its own state in the West Bank, part of Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip, the Palestinians would try to destroy Israel with terror. Only 16% think the Palestinians would coexist peacefully with Israel.

An overwhelming majority – 88.5% – agree with Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu's position that before the PA is given its own country, it must first recognize Israel's right to exist as a Jewish state.

Respondents were strongly pro- Netanyahu, with 65% viewing him favorably and 20% unfavorably.

Asked whether Obama was more pro- Israel or pro-Palestinian, 43% said they were unsure. Among those with an opinion, 31% thought he favored the Palestinians, and just 26% said he was more pro- Israel.

The recent numbers are more favorable to Obama than The Jerusalem Post-sponsored polls that asked Israelis the same question.

According to the last Smith research poll published in the Post on May 27, just 12% of Israeli Jews said Obama was more pro- Israel, 40% said he was more pro-Palestinian, 34% said he was neutral, and 13% did not express an opinion.

Arab League backs Palestinian bid for UN membership

Arab ministers pledge to 'take all necessary measures' to secure recognition of Palestinian state via appeal to security council

The Arab League has endorsed a Palestinian plan to seek full membership at the United Nations, in a move likely to lead to a confrontation with the US in the UN security council.

Negotiations with Israel on the terms of Palestinian statehood have been frozen since 2008. As an alternative the Palestinians have decided to seek UN recognition of an independent "Palestine" in the West Bank, Gaza and east Jerusalem, areas Israel captured in the 1967 six-day war.

Arab League foreign ministers meeting in Doha said they would support the Palestinian bid.

The ministers pledged in a statement to "take all necessary measures and to rally needed support of all world countries, starting with members of the security council, to recognise the state of Palestine ... and to win full membership of the United Nations".

There was no immediate official reaction from Israel or the US to the decision. However the US, one of the five permanent members of the security council, has strongly hinted it would veto a Palestinian membership request. As an alternative the Palestinians could go to the general assembly and seek recognition there as a non-member observer state, a largely symbolic nod. After Thursday's announcement Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said the Palestinians would appeal to both bodies, beginning with the security council. "We hope the United States will not use its veto against this decision," he said.

Taking on the US is potentially risky for the Palestinians, since Washington is the main Middle East mediator. There is already a move in Congress to cut off millions of dollars in aid if an emerging Palestinian unity government includes Hamas.

The Israeli prime minister, Binyamin Netanyahu, opposes a full withdrawal from the West Bank, where 300,000 Israelis have settled since 1967, and says Israel will never relinquish east Jerusalem, which he considers an integral part of the country's capital. Israel withdrew from Gaza in 2005 but continues to control the territory's borders, sea and air space.

Israel and the US say a Palestinian state should be formed through a peace deal with Israel. The latest significant round of peace talks broke down in late 2008. At the time Netanyahu's predecessor, Ehud Olmert, and the Palestinian president, Mahmoud Abbas, had agreed on the principle of swapping some West Bank land for Israeli territory but the leaders were far apart on the extent of such a swap and other key disputes, including the fate of Jerusalem.

The Palestinians have said they will not resume talks unless Israel agrees to freeze settlement construction and accepts the pre-1967 lines as the basis of a peace deal.

'Spain will recognize Palestinian state on 1967 lines'

Shaath says Spain wants Palestine recognized in UN; announcement comes as Abbas meets with Islamic Jihad officials, Gen. Tantawi in Cairo to discuss Hamas-Fatah reconciliation, Mideast peace process.

The Palestinian Authority announced on Thursday that Spain has decided to recognize a Palestinian state along the 1967 lines before September. A spanish diplomat told Palestinian negotiator Nabil Shaath that Spain would support making the state of Palestine a UN member.

The announcement came as Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas met in Cairo on Monday, under the auspices of Egyptian authorities, with Ramadan Shallah, Secretary-General of the Islamic Jihad organization, and his deputy, Ziad Nakhleh.

The meeting between Abbas and the Syrian-based Islamic Jihad leaders dealt with ways of consolidating Palestinian national reconciliation, a PA official said.

The two sides also discussed the PA security crackdown on Islamic Jihad operatives and supporters in the West Bank, the official said.

Islamic Jihad has condemned the ongoing crackdown and urged the PA to release all its men, especially in wake of the Hamas-Fatah reconciliation accord that was reached in Cairo three weeks ago.

Under the former regime of Hosni Mubarak, Islamic Jihad leaders and members were unwelcome in Egypt.

An Islamic Jihad official said that the talks also focused on ways of “confronting future challenges and Israeli threats.” He described the meeting with Abbas as positive and thorough.

Abbas, who arrived in Cairo, also held talks with Gen. Hussein Tantawi, head of the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, and briefed him on the latest developments surrounding the stalled Middle East peace process.

Abbas also briefed Tantawi on the outcome of the emergency meeting of Arab League foreign ministers in Qatar last weekend.

The ministers voiced their backing for Abbas’s plan to ask the United Nations in September to recognize a Palestinian state on the 1967 lines.

Abbas is also seeking Cairo’s help in overcoming differences with Hamas over the establishment of a unity government in accordance with the reconciliation agreement.

PA negotiator Nabil Shaath announced on Monday that Spain was planning to recognize the Palestinian state before September.

Shaath’s announcement came after he met in Ramallah with Spanish Consul-General Alfonso Portable.

Shaath said that the PA was pursuing its efforts to secure additional backing and international recognition for the statehood bid.

He said that the Spanish diplomat stressed that his country would support making the state of Palestine a member of the UN.

Shaath said that he was planning to visit Armenia, Moldavia, the Philippines, Mexico and Columbia to persuade them to support the statehood bid in September.

Malaysia established diplomatic ties with the Vatican on Monday as the prime minister of the Muslim-majority country vowed to build a “global movement of the moderates”.

Christians, who make up about 9 per cent of the country’s 28m population, have become more vocal about their rights as a series of disputes between religious minorities and Muslims have led to concerns that the country is becoming more Islamicised.

The announcement came after Najib Razak, prime minister, met Pope Benedict XVI at the pontiff’s summer residence in Castel Gandolfo, outside Rome.

Malaysia is one of the last Muslim-majority countries to form diplomatic relations with the Holy See.

Malaysia’s constitution guarantees freedom of worship for all faiths. But in recent years, authorities have reinforced a ban on Christians using the word “Allah” when referring to their god in the Malay language.

Analysts have attributed that move to an attempt by the Muslim-led government to boost its image as the defender of Islam in order to win more votes among the Malay-Muslim majority.

The dispute has led to churches being firebombed and to bibles being impounded. The issue remains stalled in the court system.

Preparatory Catechesis for World Youth Day 2011 in Madrid

Consecration of the youth of the world to the Sacred Heart

MADRID, 14 July 2011 (ZENIT.org). - Pope Benedict XVI. is the youth of the world on Saturday, the 20th August, 2011, consecrated at the airport from Cuatro Vientos in Madrid, at a prayer vigil to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. On this occasion, the organizers of World Youth Day catechesis have developed with the aim to help young people prepare for the dedication of the young people of the world to the Sacred Heart.

The catechism is composed of three parts. The first is the message of the Pope for WYD from the perspective of the heart closer to Jesus. The second is to make a short digression into the history of the veneration of the Sacred Heart. And the third part of the meaning of the consecration of the Sacred Heart Youth is explained.

I. "From the heart of man to God's heart"

1st As we enter the depths of our hearts, we all find the same desire: to try to be happy. But we wonder: Where and how can one find happiness? Experience tells us that can adjust the happiness of the human being only because, if his desire is satisfied for the infinite. As the Pope said in his message: "Man is truly the Great, created for the infinite" (Benedict XVI, Message for WYD 2011 in Madrid.).

We must go one step further. This human desire for the infinite love is to be equal with the desire of God's love that knows no limits. Answer to this question gives us the appearance of God as "God is love." It has been shown to be exactly this inexhaustible, infinite, personal and merciful love, which responds to a simple way to longings for happiness in the hearts of all people. For this reason, the Pope tells us: "God is the source of life to remove him would be, just to separate himself from this source, and so inevitably sacrificing the fullness and joy:" For the creature falls Without the Creator nothing "(2 vatik council." Gaudium et Spes, "36) (message of WYD). We can see in the many experiments and trials which have taken place in our society, to far away from God to build a "paradise on earth".

2nd The problem of the heart of the people dissolves completely only in the encounter with God's heart. In this regard, says Saint Augustine: "You made us, God, for you were created, and our hearts are restless until it rests in you." The uneasiness of the saint of Hippo says, refers to the difficulty, because of our human nature to love "reach" to want, we are limited, and beyond that we are sinners. Again and again we stumble on the stone of our egoism 'and the confusion of our passions, making it impossible for us to reach this love. The heart of man needed a heart on his "level" and on the other hand, is all powerful, get him out of his finiteness and his sin out. God has sent Jesus Christ to encounter someone with the man who has loved us with a "human heart". In the encounter of the heart of man with God's heart, the secret has completed the redemption: "For if the infinite horizon of his love come to God in the limits of history and humanity, he was in body and heart, so that we can consider the infinite within the finite and meet him, the invisible and ineffable mystery of the human heart of Jesus the Nazarene. "(Benedict XVI., Angelus on June 1, 2008).

3rd The final revelation of this love he has shown us on the cross. The love God has for us, has come with the sacrifice of His life to its limit. The open heart of Jesus on the cross as a result of the blow of the sword of the soldier is the clearest expression of how and how much God loves us. The pope said in his message "From the open heart of Jesus on the Cross divine life has flowed" (Message of the WYD) Sun -. On the cross - Jesus transformed our "Heart of Stone", which is violated by sin, in a "heart of flesh, "as his own: He gives us His love and makes us capable in His place, and with His own love to love.

4th From the risen and living Jesus' heart flows the source to drink from a man to love his endless thirst, and to be loved, to be silent. It is because of this personal encounter "heart to heart" in which people experience "rooted in Christ and in Him established firm in the faith" (Colossians 2:7) to be. The holiness is entirely in the flow of love to enter, which flows from the heart of Jesus. "The motto of Cardinal Newman," cor ad cor loquitur - the heart speaks to heart "gives us an insight into his understanding of Christian life as a vocation to holiness, which is experienced as the ardent desire of the human heart, in intimate communion with the heart God's reach. (Benedict XVI., Homily for the Beatification of Cardinal Newman).

II "Behold the heart that loved people so much"

The church has deepened over the centuries, the importance of devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Many men and women in the contemplation of this image asleep a valid way to completely identify with Christ even to achieve this goal of holiness.

Must be stressed under these saints Santa Margarita Maria Alacoque of (1647-1690), nun of the Order of the "Visitation" in Paray-le-Monial. Their shows Jesus in the Eucharist, her revealing the secret of his heart: "Behold the heart that loved people so much and learns nothing more than shame and ingratitude." Throughout her life, the Holy Margarita has taught to love the Heart of Jesus, it accompanied the Holy Hour of the Eucharist, in the consecration to Him and in the accomplishment of small charitable services as reparation of sins. It also flowed into what they practiced on every first Friday of the month: Confession and Communion for the expiation of sins. It was in 1864 by Blessed Pius XVI. and blessed in 1920 by Benedict XV. canonized. Their anniversary is on 16 Celebrated in October.

Will be highlighted along with these saints must also be the Holy of Claudius Colombière SJ (1641-1682). He was the Spiritual Holy Margarita Maria. It was his job, the message of love of the heart to make Jesus known to the most remote places. It is thanks to him that the Jesuits spread the worship of the Sacred Heart's mission.

The echo of these revelations in the life of the church was so large that the Blessed Pius IX. in 1856 announced to the whole Church the feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Pope Leo XIII. in 1899 consecrated the entire human race to the Sacred Heart. Hundreds of religious communities who devoted themselves to the education of young people, care for elderly and sick or of the mission, were born in this period, infected from the spirituality of the Sacred Heart. During the 20th Century have invited the pontiffs and over again, to turn to the Sacred Heart as "the principal mediator and the symbol of love, with which the divine Redeemer loves essential to the eternal Father and all men" (Pius XII. "Haurietis Aquas") .

The consideration of the Sacred Heart today enriches the Church with new ways of holiness and shows the people of our time in need of divine mercy, as a messenger of hope, so that "on the ruins left behind by the hatred and violence, a civilization of love grows, a reign of Christ's heart (John Paul II, Message to the Superior General of the Community Zeus, Father Peter Hans Kolvenbach, October 5, 1986).

III. The consecration to the Heart of Jesus to "rooted and built up in HIM HIM, firm in faith" to stay (Col 2, 7)

The consecration of the Sacred Heart is set up act by which the youth of the world, the Pope, the head of the trusting eyes on Jesus Christ and to help them, "rooted in Him and established in him, steadfast in the faith" (Colossians 2 , 7 living).

It's about revitalizing the beloved disciple of experience again, looking at the open heart of Jesus on the cross, believe in his love and turns into his witnesses. "And the one who has seen has testified, and his testimony is true." (Jn 19, 35).

It is thus an act of faith. By the Heart of Jesus be ordained, we invite the Holy Father, to confess our faith, "We firmly believe that Jesus Christ gave himself on the cross, to give us His love, in His suffering he has borne our grief, took our sins upon himself and gained us forgiveness with God, reconciled to the Father, we open the way to eternal life "(Message of the WYD) this commitment we make not only because of the knowledge of truths, but as the fruit of the personal relationship. Christ, founded on trust in the love of his heart. In addition, we make this confession of faith with the Pope, the bishops and priests of his Church, which means that our "personal faith in Christ is associated with the Church" (message of WYD). It is in the "Heart of the Church," where we can find the heart beat of the heart of Christ.

Second there is also an act of hope. We dedicate ourselves to not only all his heart, but the Pope entrusts to us "young people in the world" and the Sacred Heart of Jesus. In the youth of today are the hope of the future of the Church and of humanity to be found. The teenagers, as the Pope puts it, "without the dead and risen Christ, no salvation. Only He can save the world from evil and grow the kingdom of justice, peace and love can, after all, we strive "(Message of the WYD). Combines the" one heart "we ask the whole church," Come, Lord Jesus, "help the young people of the third millennium, that they are builders of a civilization of love, which is being built," when people and nations to accept the presence of God, worship Him in truth and hear His voice "(message of WYD).

And the latest is the consecration of an act of love. The young people of the third millennium would like the Apostle Thomas' touch Jesus, by placing the hand in the sign of His sufferings, the sign of His love "(message of WYD). Consecrated in becoming "we touch him" to renew the grace of our baptism, when we were fully introduced into this love. It strengthens in us the desire to drink constantly from the sources from which gushes the divine life, which are the sacraments, especially the sacrament of the Eucharist and the forgiveness. And finally, we are immersed in his merciful eyes to always be close to the poor and the sick, and so for them the love of God a reality felt to be.

In emulation of the example of the beloved disciple we are invited to "take Mary into our homes." We dedicate ourselves to the Hearts of Jesus and the Blessed Mother as a special intercessor and mediator. She who "received the word of God with faith" teaches us to believe in the love and trust in Him and thus become witnesses among our brothers and sisters, the people be.

Vatican II: Calling ambassadors for Christ

By Louie Verrecchio *
June 29, 2011
http://www.catholicnewsagency.com/column.php?n=1677

Among the most frequently noted exhortations coming forth from the Second Vatican Council is the “universal call to holiness,” which encourages not simply those in the clerical and religious life but every member of Christ’s Body to participate, each according to his or her gifts, in the mission of the Church.

“Though the classes and duties of life are many, holiness is one,” the Council Fathers teach. “Thus it is evident to everyone, that all the faithful of Christ of whatever rank or status, are called to the fullness of the Christian life and to the perfection of charity; by this holiness as such a more human manner of living is promoted in this earthly society. In order that the faithful may reach this perfection, they must use their strength accordingly as they have received it, as a gift from Christ” (cf Lumen Gentium 4o,41).

So desirous were the Council Fathers to make sure that this message was not lost, they produced a document, "Apostolicam Actuositatem" (The Decree on the Apostolate of the Laity), specifically for the purpose of exhorting the laity to engage in apostolic endeavors in cooperation with Christ who “renews the face of the earth” (Psalm 104:30).

Since then, much good fruit has been yielded including the creation of a new dicastery in the Roman Curia in 1967, the Pontifical Council for the Laity, and the subsequent emergence of numerous laudable organizations that are dedicated to serving the lay apostolate.

"All associations of the apostolate must be given due appreciation, but those which the hierarchy have praised or recommended as responsive to the needs of time and place must be held in highest esteem," the Council Fathers stated (AA 21).

One particularly noteworthy example of just such an association is Legatus, an organization that draws upon the collective strengths and talents of top-ranking Catholic CEO's and other business leaders and their spouses in service to the mission of the Church.

Celebrating its 25th anniversary next year, Legatus was founded by Catholic philanthropist Tom Monaghan after meeting Pope John II in 1987, the idea having hit him as he describes it, "like a lightning bolt!"

In just the following year, our visionary pontiff of Blessed memory could already see how important the then fledgling organization would be in promoting a truly just society by aiding its members in Legatus' stated mission: "To study, live, and spread the Catholic Faith in our business, professional, and personal lives."

"The world needs genuine witnesses to Christian ethics in the field of business, and the Church asks you to fulfill this role publicly and with perseverance. This is the evangelical challenge being presented to you," the Holy Father said as he imparted his Apostolic blessing to Legatus members gathered in Rome.

Now, more than two decades later (in the wake of so many scandals caused by the Enrons and Bernie Madoffs of the world) the importance of an organization like Legatus is all the more obvious.

That said, the real value of Legatus' commitment to aiding Catholic business leaders in deepening their faith extends well beyond the boardroom, the stock market and the workplace. It's really best considered a means toward accomplishing a much broader end – delivering the Gospel of Christ to the entire world starting with one family, one company, one community, etc. at a time.

Membership in Legatus – which is Latin for "ambassador" - is not intended for just anyone. It is comprised of a rather select group of individuals - those who some might call the "movers and shakers" of the world - who in addition to being committed to the sacred Magisterium of the Church also meet a quantifiably high standard of business achievement with regard to position (e.g. President, Owner, CEO, etc.), number of employees and company value.

According to Tom Monaghan's vision, an elite group of proven business leaders such as this - individuals who have a demonstrably high capacity for creativity, resourcefulness and dedication - are also eminently qualified to serve as leaders in the Church as well. These are the men and women, in other words, who have been blessed with some unique gifts that, properly formed and applied, can go a long way toward transforming society with the light of Christ.

When one considers the anti-Christian impact being brought to bear by people like George Soros, Ted Turner and Bill Gates – business leaders who all-too-frequently use their God-given talent to create and fund organizations that actively promote a culture of death - the importance of Legatus in today's world should be clear.

Indeed, the Council Fathers recognized this phenomenon taking shape nearly 50 years ago and felt moved to issue to laity what one may rightly consider to be a "call to arms."

Since, in our own times, new problems are arising and very serious errors are circulating which tend to undermine the foundations of religion, the moral order, and human society itself, this sacred synod earnestly exhorts laymen - each according to his own gifts of intelligence and learning - to be more diligent in doing what they can to explain, defend, and properly apply Christian principles to the problems of our era in accordance with the mind of the Church (AA 6).

So, you've heard of MoveOn.org, the Ted Turner Fund and the Gates Foundation but you've never heard of Legatus?

Well, maybe that's because its members according to the association's stated mission, "don't typically wear their faith on their shirtsleeves; rather, they spread the faith through good works, good ideas, and high ethical standards."

You see, theirs is neither a political movement nor a PR campaign; rather, Legatus is modeled after the Council's teaching that "the laity fulfill this mission of the Church in the world especially by conforming their lives to their faith so that they become the light of the world as well as by practicing honesty in all their dealings so that they attract all to the love of the true and the good and finally to the Church and to Christ" (AA 13).

That, however, doesn't mean that Legatus members aren't making their presence known in concrete, visible ways too; far from it. The manner in which individual Legates draw from their collective pool of resources, experiences and talents in service to the kingdom of God are as varied as the members themselves.

The organization itself provides what the Council calls "aids for lay persons devoted to the apostolate, namely, study sessions, congresses, periods of recollection, spiritual exercises, frequent meetings, conferences, books, and periodicals directed toward the acquisition of a deeper knowledge of sacred Scripture and Catholic doctrine, the nourishment of spiritual life, the discernment of world conditions, and the discovery and development of suitable methods" (AA 32).

Now, if you're not exactly a business tycoon or a "captain of industry" type (and very few of us are) don't simply write this column off as a nice little story about "them;" rather consider it encouragement toward finding your own place in the apostolate, whether individually or as a member of an association.

The truth is every single layperson by virtue of their Baptism is called to be an Ambassador for Christ. There are no neutral positions in the Christian life; one is either with Christ or against Him (Mt. 12:30), and the world in which we live is daily crying out all the more for an increase in lay involvement.

As the Council Fathers tell us, "The effort to infuse a Christian spirit into the mentality, customs, laws, and structures of the community in which one lives, is so much the duty and responsibility of the laity that it can never be performed properly by others" (AA 13).

Legatus is just one noteworthy example of what it means to answer the Council's call for the laity to use the gifts the Lord has given them in service to the mission of the Church. The question that remains is how will you go about carrying the light of Christ in your own way, in your own small part of the world?

Video: Religious orders to refuse meeting over cash shortfall

Many of the religious congregations investigated by the Ryan Report may refuse to meet with the Minister for Education Ruairí Quinn as planned on Friday.

They had been invited to discuss a massive shortfall in their half of costs incurred by the State in compensating abused residents.

The Government is asking congregations named in the Ryan report to transfer ownership of schools to the State to help make up the shortfall.

It is expeced that those congreagations which will attend would “go in, listen and say nothing," according to one source.

And the source also claimed that the first the congregations heard about a 50:50 contribution was in April 2010, when they met then Taoiseach Brian Cowen and other ministers.

On July 6 Minister Ruairi Quinn reiterated that he wanted congregations to hand over properties to the State to make up for the €375m compensation shortfall from the orders.

The Ryan Report -- which probed the horrific abuse of children in institutions run by 18 religious orders -- recommended that the orders pay half of the redress bill, which amounts to some €680m.

But so far just two orders -- the Presentation Brothers and the Sisters of St Clare -- have committed to paying their 50pc share of the costs.

In one case, the Dominican Order said it believed it had offered a sufficient sum already.

The order gave a total of €6.5m over three periods last year following the sell-off of some assets.

The Papal/Jesuit Father General’s International Delegate to Apostleship of Prayer, Rev. Fr. Claudio Barriga, SJ, would be visiting the Apostleship of Prayer Nigeria from 27 June to 3 July.

A release by Mr Augustine Achugwo Shimeobi, a member of the National Executive and Lagos Archdiocesan President, the Council of Apostleship of Prayer League of the Sacred Heart of Jesus Nigeria, indicates that the visit, which is at the instance of Pope Benedict XVI and the Father General of the Society of Jesus, Rev. Fr. Adolfo Nicolas, is meant to acquaint the Holy See with the situation of the Apostleship of Prayer, its youth wing, Eucharistic Youth Movement (EYM) and the Sacred Heart devotion in Nigeria.

This is in line with the plan to recreate and unite the Apostleship of Prayer worldwide.

The Apostleship of Prayer, a foremost Catholic pious organisation, was established in Vals France on 3rd December, 1844 by Rev. Fr. Francis Xavier Guatrelet, SJ. It is present in over 70 countries cutting across all continents in the world with headquarters in Rome.

It came to Nigeria in 1922 with the first centre at Holy Cross Cathedral, Lagos and later spread to other parts of the country.

Habsburg-Requiem: deep symbolism and historical references

Cardinal Schönborn's celebrants include the archbishops of Prague and Trnava, Dominik Duka and Robert Bezak - Easter candle, and Pummerin Anklopfritus talk about symbolic death and resurrection of hope

http://www.kathweb.at/site/nachrichten/database/40540.html

Vienna, 16.07.2011 (KAP) Requiem for Otto von Habsburg in Vienna's St. Stephen's Cathedral is the highlight of the funeral and is characterized by a number of deep symbolism and historical references. When Cardinal Christoph Schönborn in the Rudolf IV of Habsburg instituted a solemn Requiem Cathedral on Saturday, 15 clock presides, he will carry a 275 year old baroque chasuble. The numerous concelebrants from Austria and Central Europe do not just represent an historical legacy, but a living bond of common faith to this day.

The ringing of Pummerin at the end of the Requiem and the Anklopfritus at the Capuchin church will say that a big one died among mortals, death and the presence of God but does not include titles and honors, but only God's mercy. The Easter candle at the bier is an expression of Christian hope in the resurrection.

The Requiem for Otto von Habsburg leads Cardinal Schönborn on behalf of Pope Benedict XVI. The chasuble, which is borne by the Archbishop of Vienna was, 1736 was made for the funeral of Prince Eugene of Savoy. The commander in the service of the Hapsburgs is in the Chapel of the Cross of St. Stephen's buried where Otto von Habsburg was laid out until Saturday morning.

Requiem Mass for the bishops to travel from numerous countries of the old monarchy in Vienna. Among the twelve concelebrants Schönborn include the archbishops of Prague and Trnava, Dominik Duka and Robert Bezak, the Brno Bishop Vojtech Cikrle, Bishop Franjo Komarcia from Banja Luka, the Bishop of Ostrava (Moravia-Ostrava), Frantisek Lobkowicz, as well as the Ljubljana Auxiliary Bishop Anton Jamnik. One of the twelve is further Paolo Habsburg, who is currently the only priest from the former ruling family, nor Grand Master Bruno Platter by the Teutonic Order, the Holy Cross Altabt Gregor Henckel-Donnersmarck and the Mariazell Superior Father Karl Schauer will concelebrate. In addition, approximately 100 other bishops and priests have registered, among the diocesan bishops Klaus Küng (St. Pölten) and Ludwig Schwarz (Linz) and the Greek Orthodox Metropolitan of Austria, Michael Staikos.

Nearly 2,000 mourners at St. Stephen will attend the fair. There are five heads of state - Federal President Heinz Fischer, King Carl Gustaf of Sweden with Queen Silvia, Henri, Grand Duke of Luxembourg, Grand Duchess Maria Teresa, Prince Hans Adam of Liechtenstein and Princess Marie and the Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili - and two head of government - the Croatian Prime Minister Jadranka Kodori and the Macedonian Prime Minister Nikola Gruevski - as well as from the Austrian policy include Vice Chancellor Michael Spindelegger, Defense Minister Norbert Darabos, Finance Minister Maria Fekter, Mayor Michael Häupl, Governor Erwin Pröll and Governor Herbert Sausgruber.

And EU Parliament President Jerzy Buzek and Czech Foreign Minister Karel Schwarzenberg Habsburg prove their last respects. Both come from areas of the former monarchy. Furthermore, will attend the Grand Master of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta, Fra Matthew Festing, the Requiem. From the royal houses of Europe and Africa will include Princess Astrid and Princess Paola (Belgium), Prince and Princess Michael of Kent (England), Infanta Cristina (Spain), Exzar Simeon II (Bulgaria), ex-King Michael (Romania) and Prince Asfa- Wossen Asserate (Ethiopia).

The coffin was Otto's in the night from Friday to Saturday of the Capuchin Church of St. Stephen and brought to the bier in the chapel of Prince Eugen. The chapel was then up to the transfer of the coffin shut on Saturday morning.

Admission for the invited mourners is from 13 clock. In the rear of the cathedral standing room for some other worshipers are provided. The fair will be transferred to several large screens around the St. Stephen's Cathedral and in front of the Capuchin church.

For the funeral service in the cathedral of Otto's coffin and a paschal candle is placed in the center aisle. The pulpit is decorated with a relic of Blessed Emperor Karl I of the Augustinian Church in Vienna.

At the beginning of the Requiem reads the Apostolic Nuncio to Austria, Archbishop Peter Stephan Zurbriggen, the already published the Pope's letter of condolence to the family Habsburg. Benedict XVI. appreciates the fact the deceased as a "great European" who had "worked tirelessly for peace, the coexistence of people and a just order on this continent." The sermon Cardinal Schönborn, who will conduct the funeral service at the end of the farewell ceremony. Readings and prayers before the bear seven children of Otto von Habsburg and Regina.

The Vienna Cathedral Music Director of Music under the direction of Prof. Markus Landerer will make the worship music with the Requiem in C minor by Michael Haydn. Organist Hans Haselböck.

ORF 2 will broadcast live, Commentator is the theologian Prof. Paul M. Zulehner. Around 300 media representatives from Austria, Europe, USA and Japan have become accredited, according to information from the press for the big event. Among them are several TV crews. About one-third of the rapporteur comes from abroad, from Italy, France, Spain, the Netherlands, Hungary, Croatia to Slovakia.

Pummerin rings around clock by 17

After the service the coffin will be led in a procession from the Cathedral. Once the coffin has arrived in the area of ••the pulpit, which begins Pummerin for a few minutes to ring.

Parish Priest Anton Faber said, the ringing of the Pummerin is a sign of gratitude for the close connection of the house of Habsburg to the St. Stephen's Cathedral.

After ringing the Pummerin - just after 17 clock - the coffin is placed with an open car in a funeral procession to the imperial crypt beneath the Capuchin Church. Music, flags and shooting missions and church representatives to lead the funeral procession, which will have a length of more than a thousand meters.

Is the European Union on the brink of being destroyed? Is Jesuit trained Rompuy about to get the biggest lecture of his life for failure? This meeting doesn't look a very happy one if you ask me. So it seems we have another piss balling to add to the list along with the one that the wicked witch of the North, Crown/DVD operative Hillary 'Queen Melusina' Clinton got the other day. All eyes on the European Union and it's currency the Euro as the meltdown progresses. The people of Greece have to lay on the pressure and fold this swine quickly. Then we need to fold the Emperor's, Union for the Mediterranean.

THE MEETING WITH THE PRESIDENT OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT JERZY BUZEK

Rome, 28/02/2011
http://www.orderofmalta.org/news/46297/the...-buzek/?lang=en

The President of the European Parliament Jerzy Buzek was received by the Grand Master Fra' Matthew Festing in the Order of Malta's Magistral Villa in Rome.

During the meeting, President Buzek said that "the Order of Malta is very important for Europeans, it is part of our historic identity and we will continue to support its programmes, including the development of healthcare and welfare services in developing countries". Speaking of the Order of Malta's project to safeguard the World Heritage Holy Sites, he stated that "the Order's efforts in this area are very significant. The European Parliament and I personally have often defended the religious freedom and protection of the world's minorities." On this "we expect the same respect and protection from all the other states," he concluded.

The Grand Master recalled that the Order of Malta has for some time been engaged – supported by the President of the European Commission Barroso, together with the Italian and Maltese Republic Foreign Ministries– in a project involving access to and projection of the Holy Sites. "These places have a value that goes beyond the borders of a specific community; they have to be respected and protected as a common good, a heritage of universal value, and no longer a target for destruction and desecration during conflicts".

On the basis of the close ties, the Grand Master continued, the Order of Malta has forged with the Christian and Muslim communities in the Middle East, we also intend to "expand our healthcare and welfare services, and especially in Lebanon, Syria, Jordan and Iraq, where the cultural and religious diversity is at risk". Through these projects, "we propose helping the population to remain in their places of origin, thus strengthening the region's stability".

Fra' Matthew Festing also recalled the signature in 2009 in Brussels of the Cooperation Agreement between the European Commission and the Order of Malta, and especially in the healthcare and emergency relief sectors.

Also taking part in the meeting, that ended with a luncheon in honour of President Buzek, were the Hon. Enzo Scotti, Secretary of State, Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Senator Lamberto Dini, Msgr. Luigi Travaglino, Permanent Observer of the Holy See to the FAO and ten ambassadors of European countries accredited to the Order of Malta.

In the morning President Buzek was received in the Vatican by His Holiness Benedict XVI.

German priest arrested for child abuse

Mon Jul 18, 2011 3:6AM
http://www.presstv.ir/detail/189564.html

The German police have arrested a Catholic priest on suspicion of having sexually abused a child after the victim's mother pressed charges.

"The accused priest has admitted the allegations made against him in police questioning," the local police stated on their website on Sunday without naming the priest.

An investigation into the case had commenced in early July, Reuters reported.

Joachim Geyer, the spokesperson for the prosecutors' office in the German city of Braunschweig, said an arrest warrant had been issued against the priest.

The alleged abuse, however, had taken place some years ago.

The police had planned to arrest the priest next week. However, as the priest was due to go on a trip together with minors organized by the church, the arrest was made earlier.

Germany has over the past years experienced several cases of children being physically and sexually abused in institutions that were predominantly run by the Roman Catholic Church.

In 2010, some 180.000 Germans left the Catholic Church due to the revelations of priests sexually abusing minors.

This shows a 40 percent increase from 2009.

A report posted on the website for Germany's ARD broadcaster in April showed that thousands of children had been abused in church-run orphanages in Germany between 1949 and 1975.

I am a layperson working for Opera Romana Pellegrinaggi ran by Father Atuire. It is the travel agency for the vatican. I work out details for bookings for flights and hotels for employees of the church(priests, students, laypersons, invited guests, etc). The Vatican last week ordered us to get travel arrangements for ALL Archbishops from around the world to Rome. They are to be in Rome by Oct. 10, through the 24. They indicated that if they arrive after the 17th, they are not to come and stay with their clergy.

Both recalling all the bishops and mandating the date and not to come if you miss the date has NEVER happened before. It should be noted, Elenin will be closest Oct. 17.

Bishops to visit Rome on Ad Limina spiritual pilgrimage

http://www.parra.catholic.org.au/news---ev...pilgrimage.aspx

The Catholic Bishops of Australia will travel to Rome in October 2011 on a spiritual pilgrimage designed to celebrate and strengthen their communion with the universal Church and the Successor of Peter, Pope Benedict XVI.

The pilgrimage is known as the 'Ad Limina Apostolorum' visit - or 'to the threshold of the Apostles' - and it will take place from 10-22 October 2011.

All Bishops who are charged with the leadership of a Diocese are required to make an Ad Limina visit every five years and present a report on the pastoral situation of the local Church. It is an important spiritual pilgrimage and a reminder of a local Bishop's wider role in communion with the Bishops of the world. Due to the increasing number of Bishops in the world and the circumstances of the declining health of the late Pope John Paul II the visit was delayed two years.

The key events for Australia's Bishops will be a visit to the tombs of Sts Peter and Paul, pastors and pillars of the Roman Church, and a personal meeting with the Holy Father.

The visit is also seen as an important part of the Holy Father's pastoral ministry, when he as head of the College of Bishops receives his brothers with whom he exercises pastoral ministry and listens and talks with them about their mission in their Diocese.

Australian Catholic Bishops Conference President Archbishop Philip Wilson of Adelaide said he and his fellow Bishops would be seeking the prayers of those in their diocesan community as they prepared for the Ad Limina pilgrimage.

"The Bishops wish to involve the whole Catholic community in reflection and prayer, as we prepare for this spiritually significant event," Archbishop Wilson said.

"The Ad Limina visit confirms and celebrates that which we profess at Mass each week in the Nicene Creed when we express our belief in the 'one, holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church'.

"Our faith was handed down to us from Jesus by the Apostles and as Bishops we are charged with the enormous responsibility of continuing and handing on that tradition. The Ad Limina visit is an important physical and spiritual milestone in the carrying out of that ministry."

While in Rome, the Bishops will visit various Vatican Congregations and other organisations.

BRUSSELS, July 12 (KUNA) -- The Union for the Mediterranean Parliamentary Assembly (PA-UfM) has decided to temporarily suspend Libya 's observer status, sending "a clear political sign against the violent repression exerted by Gadafi's regime", the European Parliament announced in a statement Monday night.

The decision was taken by the Assembly's enlarged Bureau, following a suggestion by European Parliament Vice-President Gianni Pittella.

The Assembly also firmly supported direct negotiations between Israelis and Palestinians based on UN resolutions. It expressed the conviction that the UN decision to grant full member status to an independent Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital in September this year will push both parties to enter serious negotiations, added the statement. The Assembly brings together 280 parliamentarian from the EU and other European countries and eleven Mediterranean partners Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Israel, Lebanon, Morocco, the Palestinian Authority, Syria, Tunisia, Turkey and Mauritania.(end) nk.asa KUNA 120938 Jul 11NNNN

Investiture of the new Secretary General of the Union for the Mediterranean, Youssef Amrani – Speech by Alain Juppé, Ministre d'Etat, Minister of Foreign and European Affairs (excerpts)

Barcelona, 5 July 2011
http://www.ambafrance-uk.org/France-welcomes-UfM-Secretary

For more than six months, the Arab Spring has been creating a new scenario on the Mediterranean's southern shore. For more than six months, a wind of freedom and modernity has been blowing through that region of the world.

This irrepressible momentum towards freedom is immensely promising for the Arab countries, Europe and the world. It's our responsibility and in all our interests to support it, by helping the new governments respond to the aspirations of the people, particularly young people. It's in this spirit that France has been spurred into action, both bilaterally and in multilateral forums: I'm thinking, of course, of the G8 and the partnership launched in Deauville.

In taking up this challenge, the Union for the Mediterranean is a special tool. As you know, this project – launched in 2008 on an initiative of President Sarkozy – was based on the idea of a balanced partnership between the two shores.

The Arab Spring shows how far-sighted this initiative was. It shows how profound our shared destiny around the Mediterranean is and how urgent it is to structure a project that encourages solidarity and common achievements in order to improve citizens' daily lives.

So we're at a turning-point in the Union for the Mediterranean's history.

This is why France welcomes the investiture of the new Secretary General, Mr Youssef Amrani, who is in charge of embodying and relaunching this dynamic of solidarity around concrete projects in the Mediterranean region. Secretary General, you have remarkable expertise in Euro-Mediterranean affairs, proven skill in dealing with men and women and invaluable experience in the workings of a secretariat. You will also be able to count on high-calibre assistant secretaries general and a devoted staff. We know you've set to work without delay. France hopes you can contribute with the full weight of the consensus of the 43 countries you represent, so that our countries individually, and the European Union collectively, are able effectively to support the democratic aspirations of the Arab Spring and economic development, and structure a system for ensuring organized and regulated labour mobility.

The last European Council confirmed the importance of the Union for the Mediterranean, alongside the bilateral relations the EU is developing with the countries of the southern shore in the framework of the new Neighbourhood Policy. Today we must help coordinate these two policies, so that the Union for the Mediterranean becomes the "matrix" of the regional projects conceived in the framework of the European Neighbourhood Policy.

This requires an improved governance of the Union for the Mediterranean in which the EU plays its full role, in accordance with the Lisbon Treaty.

It also requires an ever closer association between the projects identified by the Union for the Mediterranean's secretariat and European funding. So it's essential for an increasing share of the European Neighbourhood Policy's regional appropriations to be devoted to these projects, in addition to the loans from the European Investment Bank. For her part, France will take part in co-financing the Union for the Mediterranean secretariat, with a contribution of €500,000 for its 2011 budget.

Among the possible target areas for these projects, four strike me as demanding the attention of the Union for the Mediterranean's secretariat.

The first is mobility. We want to encourage a global approach to migration, with real cooperation in the fight against illegal immigration, but also partnerships for mobility to encourage circular migration. (…)

Second area: renewable energy. I'm thinking of the Mediterranean Solar Plan, whose success will have a major impact on growth, employment and social development, at a time when electricity needs to the south and east of the Mediterranean are set to increase by 6% a year between now and 2025. (…)

Third area: innovation and SMEs, which are essential for young people's employment and future. The Internet has played a major role in the blossoming and spreading of the Arab Spring. It's also a tremendous engine for relaunching the economy and better sharing the fruits of growth. I call on the secretariat to propose a plan for the e-Economy and encourage the more widespread use of the Internet by companies on the southern shore.

Finally, fourth area: civil protection, a priority area identified as early as the Paris summit in 2008. I hope in particular that the secretariat can provide its full support to the plan for a joint programme to combat forest fires, led by the French Interior Ministry, so as to organize an initial, full-scale exercise as soon as possible.

Ladies and gentlemen,

The Arab Spring requires us to reconsider our conception of international relations. It leads us to develop our relations on the basis of equality, reciprocity and equilibrium.

By providing itself with a real co-presidency and a joint secretariat, the Union for the Mediterranean anticipated this evolution. By awarding the "UfM" label to the very first project – the construction of a desalination plant in Gaza –, you have shown the way.

It will be your responsibility, here at the secretariat, to give full meaning to this new way of working together between both shores of our shared sea./.

Title: THE SUN & MOON EYES OF HORUS

craig-oxley - November 15, 2009 05:27 PM (GMT)

Interesting to see red around her when she's throwing the symbolism of the feminine capstone of Lucifer. Notice how she highlights the eye which represents the Sun. The Left eye is of course the Moon and the one which Horus had ripped out by Seth. Remember the triangle is itself the symbol of the maculine Satan, the planet Saturn and his three angels.

That video is one sick piece of work. Interesting on a bottle on the video it says 'made in ukraine' hmm the usual 666, pyramid and crosses even crossed herself catholic style.

craig-oxley - November 15, 2009 05:28 PM (GMT)

I took this from 'V' series 1, episode 2 right towards the end of the show. It shows the visitor FBI infiltrator being shredded. Then they highlight the showing of his right 'white' eye. The eye of the Sun after Seth destroyed the other one being the 'black' Moon.

Now whats funny is what happened when this infiltrator was wounded in episode one:

Yes you got it! Its symbolising Seth's ripping of the Moon eye of Horus.

craig-oxley - November 15, 2009 05:28 PM (GMT)

Just maybe that saber tooth is symbolising Seth?

Rihanna

craig-oxley - November 15, 2009 06:44 PM (GMT)

Notice the multiple "Eye" communication whilst in front of the Sun around 2.55 mins (Solar phallic 666).

craig-oxley - November 17, 2009 12:53 AM (GMT)

note the goat of mendes which is the constellation of Capricorn, the abode of Saturn. Not the Nov 6 date being the number of perfection and saturn. Now 6x11=66 being idol worship as the sheople idolise thse film stars. N ow nov 6 is 911.

wow this one is pretty blatant

craig-oxley - November 23, 2009 03:48 PM (GMT)

Why does that photo remind me of the Vesica piscis (Root of 3)? Note the two blonde sames either side of the brunette different in the middle? The feminine opening one presumes.

craig-oxley - November 25, 2009 12:33 AM (GMT)

"V"

Remember folks the Moon Goddess Diana? This was the name of the feminine reptile leader in the first show. In Sumerian the Moon Goddess was Nanna. She's the mother of 'V'enus which in Sumerian was Inanna. Now note the Anna name of the 2009 series, the leading reptile feminine. Also take note how the feminine face is next to the feminine waters controlled by Nanna. You'll see they highlight the feminine eye of the Moon.

Janus the two faced and sometimes Janus Quadrifrons (the four-faced).
The four-faced (four brothers) we already know as bacab: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bacab

The cult of Janus is one of the most ancient known from Italic peoples.

The Romans associated Janus with the Etruscan deity Ani. However, he was one of the few Roman gods who had no ready-made counterpart, or analogous mythology. Several scholars that, most likely, he was the most important god in the Roman archaic pantheon: this is reflected in the appellation Ianus Pater, still used in Classical times. He was often invoked together with Iuppiter (Jupiter). http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Janus_

Janus was usually depicted with two faces looking in opposite directions (Janus Geminus (twin Janus) or Bifrons) http://www.bookrags.com/wiki/Janus_(mythology)

Bifron is a other name for baphomet.

Bifrons was also one the names given to the baphomet allegedly worshipped by the Knights Templar, and which description was as a statue with two heads surely inspired in the Roman god Bifrons, one looking towards the left to tell the past, and the other looking towards the right to tell the future, all this by means of the power of a demon (there were other suppositions on the figure of the baphomet).

Looking at left is the timeless time the golden age of saturn and represents the counterclockwise spin.Before 500 BC the old bon religion used the counter clockwise swastika it represents the old one aka SATURN. The age of the blackhats.

After 500 BC the age of budha emerged with the clockwise swatika,it is janus looking to the right,this is the time of zeus/jupiter osiris the second.
The swastika of the nazi's is CLOCKWISE. The age of the yellow/red hats. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bifrons_(demon)

Two guy's on a horse on the four brother pillar denote the nodal point of the age of saturn and the age of jupiter.

There are several Goddesses linked with Thoth, most notably Isis, with the help of Thoth she is able to resurrect Osiris long enough for her to oncieve Horus (Mars, the Yonger). Later when she is hiding in the Delta papyrus swamps, one of the seven scorpion helpers of Isis, either through malice or clumsiness stings Horus, in her grief she causes the sky barque of the sun god to stop, and refuses to let it go again until her son is cured. Once again Thoth comes to the rescue. It was Thoth who brought Tefnut, who left Egypt for Nubia in a sulk after an argument with her father, back to heaven to be reuinted with Ra.

Thoth as Creator

Thoth's centre of worshiped was at Khmunu (Hermopolis) in Upper Egypt, where he was the creator god, in Ibis form, who laid the World Egg. The sound of his song was thought to have created four frog gods and snake goddesses who continued Thoth's song, helping the sun journey across the sky.

Who are those seven (scorpion) helpers?

The 7 satellites known before the 19th century, in order...

Mimas, Enceladus,Tethys, Dione, Rhea, Titan and Hyperion.

The 2 satellites at extreme distances... that did not count for the egyptians are Iapetus and Phoebe.

Though the researchers are not yet clear whether the petrified lightning, or fulgurite, was brought to the mountain or if it was created there, its presence is quite compelling. The fulgurite is created when lightening strikes and melts loose sand or soil, forming a kind of glass.

Somebody ask the symbolism of this flag of portugal:

The colours red and green are the colours of osiris the second. The face of osiris the second is green as it represent jupiter comming through the astroid belt and the hydrogen in space lit up and first that was green.Jupiter came closer to earth and our sky which was still closed became red and the sky start bleeding red...

The bands arround the circle represents the aten band and those bands (seven for the egyptians and nine for them mesoamericans) are the rings arround earth. These rings play a huge role in our modern time symbology. It all got to do with electricity in the matrix (tric of EL)

Them atenband make the cross in the red sky and they cross each other behind the roteshield (redshield). This is the roots of them bankers as it is the ultimate currency (tric of EL). Remember the old god is saturn and it's symbol is the sickle and the new god is jupiter and his symbol is the hammer(thor).So hammer and sickle gives red square! They are not stupid and like egyptians never make mistakes!It is the red sky (square) that denotes the transition between the gods.

So the crown(kronos/saturn) of portugal depicts the opening sky with the aten bands our cross of the crossings.The double cross of knight templar.Hey the even went to portugal!!!

Lepenski Vir:

The prototypical grave in Europe is probably seen at a site facing the raging Danube river (thus oriented west and southwest) at Lepenski Vir in Serbia, and dating from 6500 to 5500 BC. The graves each consist of a single large flat stone slab used as the floor, roughly trapezoidal in plan, and no bigger than what would be required to accommodate a body. There are occasional skulls and bones under the stone slabs or in the ground adjacent to them. These look like excarnation floors. The platforms are thought to have been covered with thatching. They are open at the wide end, and at the narrow end have a standing stone carved in representation of the Mother Goddess, naked, with a large fish-like head and clawed hands opening up her vulva. At times this is reduced to just the genitalia.

There are about 50 grave platforms like this. The imagery here is obviously modeled on what is seen in the sky at this time -- probably the Opossum of the south, the far plasmoid of the Peratt Column of ca 5000 BC. The two closer plasmoids probably could not be seen from ground level. The sculptures might also represent the Fat Lady in the north sky, certainly seen at earlier times, who is the model for the Venus Figurines, but I doubt that. The trapezoidal shape of the flat floor stones reflect the trapezoidal plan of many of the Nasca lines reported on by Peratt.

I have seen book illustrations suggesting that the platforms were a village campsite (occupied for a thousand years!), but the platforms are not large enough to accommodate even two crouching persons. It is also hard to imagine why a one-person hut would require a stone floor cut from one single piece of stone. The same illustration showed canoes pulled up at the adjacent beach of the Danube. There is no beach, the site is on a cliff, and the river is unnavigable here.

The standing stones at the narrow end of the slabs are the oldest stone sculptures in Europe, and possibly anywhere, made by what would be postulated to be the 'Original Europeans' -- preceding the 'Old Europeans' farmers identified by Marija Gimbutas and before the later Kurgan invaders. I would postulate that the farmers who invaded Europe after 5600 BC crowded the 'Original Europeans' ever further westward, to end up in western France, England, and Ireland. And, in fact, it is in Ireland, England, and Normandy that we again meet up with these images, known in Ireland as the 'Sheela Na Gigs' -- carved stones set in church and monastery walls and looking almost identical to the menhirs at Lepenski Vir. They date from at least AD 1200, but are relocated from earlier sites. This is a continuity of images spanning over 8000 years. The concept behind the depictions, however, has been totally lost.

"The Fish-Man, Oannes -- goes the legend -- came ashore among the first and savage people of Babylonia, and he taught them the human arts. He also told them the history of the world from its beginnings."
"There was a time in which there was nothing but darkness and an abyss of waters, wherein resided most hideous things..." (Another translation of the same passage says: "In the early days, before the Earth was yet made, a number of terrible beasts were the masters of the heavens.")

QUOTE

Dodeca:

The "Enuma Anu Enlil" records have been used by the Saturnians as one of the sources for the concept that Saturn was known in antiquity as "the Star of the Sun" and in fact was considered to be the Sun. Cardona and other Saturnians who used the essay "Sun and Saturn" (1910) by Morris Jastrow have been faulted for ignoring Jastrow's comments, to quote Leon Ellenberger..

"According to Morris Jastrow, Jr., in his 'famous' and oft-cited article 'Sun and Saturn,' Saturn was not given a specific name until after Venus and Jupiter were named, which is surely strange if Saturn was the primordial deity described by the 'Saturnists.'"

-- Ellenberger, "An Antidote to Velikovskian Delusions" in Skeptic (1995) or at http://abob.libs.uga.edu/bobk/velstcol.html

This sequences of naming, and similar faults, are entirely resolved if consideration is given to the sequence of events as I have proposed in this essay. The records in question all date to after 747 BC, although Jastrow suggest that some predate the period of Hammurabi (ca 1700 BC).

That Saturn is called "sun" (Shamas) is no surprise. Until 3114 BC Saturn indeed was the Sun, and certainly the "sun of the night." After 3114 BC, and until 2250 BC, with some interruptions, Jupiter assumed the role of the "Sun of the night" and was called Shamas. Some 1500 years after Jupiter disappeared from view -- became a star -- the Babylonian astronomers were suddenly pressed into service by the Assyrian kings. The names of the planets to be watched were derived from a 3000 year old tradition. Duplicated names could be sorted out when seen in context. Additionally, some tablets are annotated with indications of whether the daytime or nightime Sun was meant.

What none of the Saturnian commentators have done is to elucidate some of the truly strange wording of the tablets, like...

"Saturn stands in the halo of the moon"
"The moon has a halo around it and Saturn stands in it."
"When the sun stands in the place of the moon.."
"When a mock-sun stands over the moon (or) under the moon.."
"If Samas has a halo around it, there will be rain."
"When Jupiter [stands] in the sun.."
"If Venus approaches Samas, the King will perish." with a note explaining that here by Samas the Sun in meant.
A "sun-crown" above Venus...
"Dilbat [Venus] is decked with two crowns."

"A 'Samas' crown above the moon, is explained as 'Lu-Bat [Saturn] [standing] by the moon.'"
"If a mock-sun stands above the moon or below the moon.."
"If Mars reaches the road of the sun [the ecliptic] .. there will be a famine."
"The mock-sun and moon appear together," explained as "on this night Saturn approached (or 'was near') the moon."

On this last note, specifically, Jastrow starts to justify the texts of the tablets in uniformitarian terms, as..

"It would appear, therefore, that the association of sun with Saturn was carried to the extent of using even the term which stands for an image of the sun due to atmospheric conditions to represent Saturn. Naturally a 'mock-sun' or parhelion cannot stand above or below the moon or be seen anywhere near it."

"The term was intended to apply to a "mock-moon" and this phenomenon of a second moon was explained as due to the presence or reflection of Saturn near or standing by the moon."

"I venture to think, that we have in this naive explanation of an atmospheric phenomenon which seems simple enough to the modern astronomer, a suggestion as to the origin and meaning of this interesting association of the sun with Saturn, leading to the wide spread usage of the signs for Samas (An-UT and Amna) to represent Saturn."

"Strange as it may seem to us, the planet Saturn appears to leave been regarded as 'the sun of the night' corresponding to Samas as 'the sun of the daytime' and the cause of such light as the night furnishes. It was argued, that since there was a sun furnishing the light of day, so there must be some corresponding power which causes the illuminations of the heavens at night."

Besides the fact that such reasoning degrades the intellectual abilities of the Babylonians, none of these suppositions are necessary. The "crescent of the Moon," seen below, above, even on both the left and right, or seen in multiple units, are simply the diffraction of the light of a bright planet on approaching the last remaining band of the equatorial rings. It would be placed some distance away, probably 1/4 or 1/2 degrees, and thus make it appear as if the planet were placed within a Moon.

Mesopotamian "Star and Crescent" images show the star inevitable well within what would be the orb of the Moon, a situation which would not happen if the crescent genuinely belonged to the Moon.

The left and right diffraction, when a bright object were centered on the band of the equatorial ring, would result in an image identified as the 'double axe' in antiquity, although I would assume that the 'double axe's was more likely seen in remote antiquity, before 2349 BC, when the ecliptic dipped completely behind the still intact Absu. Jupiter, with its gigantic coma, would have been the candidate for this imagery. The handle of the axe, which is frequently, but not at all times, shown, is probably the south polar plasma plume. The double bitted battle axe is a fantastical invention of the current age. Even the tomahawk does not appear until the late Bronze Age.

Jastrow and others allowed that the situation of Saturn, or another planet, might be seen above or below the Moon because the Moon frequently runs off the ecliptic by some 5 degrees. What has not been accounted for, of course, is to have the Moon's crescent appear on the top or bottom. That does not happen in real life.

It is the same diffraction of the point light source of a planet when behind the last of the equatorial rings which causes the depiction of planets as a four and eight pointed figures.

It should also be pointed out again that this last equatorial ring was red. It would cause Sirius to appear as red when the axis of the Earth shifted. The ring was recalled as a rope in the sky by the low-land Maya -- "and blood ran through it." In the "Popol Vu" it is called the "river of blood."
The only hint at color comes from the tablet which reads, "If Mars reaches the road of the sun [the ecliptic] then.." Mars, colored red, would be nearly invisible behind the red ring and would appear to suddenly enter on the 'road of the Sun' as its travels along the ecliptic took it from behind the equatorial ring.

These conditions, including the 'planet within the crescent,' would only occur near the equinoxes, where the ecliptic crossed the equatorial ring in the sky.

Dodeca:

During the Mesozoic, proto-Saturn (Ouranos) orbited the Sun in what is now the asteroid belt. It was probably the only body orbiting the Sun, its immense size locking it into a binary system which astronomer's believe to be the more usual solar system formation. Earth and other satellites orbited proto-Saturn which dominated the skies, almost to the complete exclusion of the Sun and other celestial bodies; in comparison, the Sun was an insignificant body, proto-Saturn being the main source of heat and light.

The Earth was dominated by the large single super-continent Pangaea, with the World Mountain at its epicentre, and surrounded by a fresh-water shallow Sea. Only a non-rotating synchronous orbit, with the super-continent locked into and facing proto-Saturn, would account for this stability.

The climate was sub-tropical with high humidity. The synchronous (syn-, chronous: together with Saturn?) orbit meant constant light and heat, and hence no variation in temperature. There were no tidal forces in the large shallow Sea, and hence no sedimentation. There were no seasons and hence minimal tree rings.

Birds, mammals and our ancestors inhabited the planet during the Mesozoic, and co-existed with the dinosaurs. In much the same ways as our diversity exists today, cultures varied from the sophisticated, who lived towards the World Mountain, to the primitive who lived towards the ends of the super-continent. Giantism was common in this era of reduced gravitation, and size and bulk were no disadvantage.

The Earth and original satellites of proto-Saturn separated some 15,000-20,000 years ago, and the Golden Mesozoic Age came to an end. Proto-Saturn separated into may parts, to form the gas giants Neptune and Uranus. Proto-Saturn became Saturn. Part of the smaller debris became moons of the outer planets, and much remained in the original orbit as the asteroid belt. The events were witnessed by the peoples of the Earth, and became the basis of the ancient catastrophic mythologies, beginning with the Genesis event "Let There be Light". During separation, Earth was saturated with radiation from proto-Saturn, which caused much mutation and was the catalyst for new sequences of evolution for many generations. The same radiation rendered all forms of radiometric dating useless causing grossly exaggerated time-scales.

Separated from proto-Saturn, planet Earth commenced rotation and the charge focused on the World Mountain dispersed. Together, the Earth lost its inherent stability and with the new centrifugal force, the super-continent separated, and "drifted" changing the pear-shaped Earth into it present shape. The dispersion of the charge together with piezo-electro effects in the rocks, enabled the separation to take place in hours, rather than millions of years.

The survivors of the catastrophe found themselves in a completely new environment: lower temperatures, seasons, diurnal variations, a changed atmosphere, and an apparently greater gravitational effect. This was neither the environment, nor the "solar" system, in which life had evolved.

Imagine these currents increased. A circle of big electric current could melt a circular section of the surface of Saturn, and thus promote the formation of a new planet inside this ring. Even if Saturn is not hollow, a cylindrical piece of crust could break away and being pretty hot, reshape into a sphere and thus form a new planet. On the other hand the aurora ring could be evidence of a section of the surface having already broken away. It is also evidence of a large current travelling through the centre of the planet.

In 4200 BC Venus came out one of the spokes of Saturn: The lady was born.Eve out of the rib of adam.

Mesopotamian "Star and Crescent" images show the star inevitable well within what would be the orb of the Moon, a situation which would not happen if the crescent genuinely belonged to the Moon.

The left and right diffraction, when a bright object were centered on the band of the equatorial ring, would result in an image identified as the 'double axe' in antiquity, although I would assume that the 'double axe's was more likely seen in remote antiquity, before 2349 BC, when the ecliptic dipped completely behind the still intact Absu. Jupiter, with its gigantic coma, would have been the candidate for this imagery. The handle of the axe, which is frequently, but not at all times, shown, is probably the south polar plasma plume. The double bitted battle axe is a fantastical invention of the current age. Even the tomahawk does not appear until the late Bronze Age.

I didn't know if it's linked with the ring, but I've found this photo into a Finland blog (sorry but I've lost the link).

See the Moon at center and at right an arc/ring (a planet?).

Here image at best zoom fit.

Dodeca:

4186 BC: Saturn lights up --
Saturn goes through a nova event -- a mass discharge which creates its rings and Venus -- and Saturn lights up. This is the moment of 'Creation.' The arc at the point of contact with Earth creates massive cloudbanks and glaciation. Venus is in orbit around Saturn and Mars hangs below. The "Age of the Gods" begins. Mars makes eight 'descents' to Earth.

After the initial period of chaos, when Saturn looked like an egg in the sky Saturn went nova and started to blaze like a sun, in about 4200 BC. Saturn flared up, threw out an enormous amount of matter, and developed a corona, that is, it lights up like a sun. Initially the globe (egg) seems to split and light up, and bright circles appear at the periphery. The glow mode coma collapses and disappears. The mass ejection become the rings with which it remains adorned. Venus is expelled from Saturn and starts to rotate far beyond Saturn's rings. Lightning flashed continuously from the planet to the rings, as it still does today.
"The name of the water of chaos was Nun. It was from Nun that Ra created himself, rising up on the first piece of land - the primeval mound (Benben) out of the water lily (lotus) blossom, born from the world egg, or as a /bnw/ bird who then found and landed on the mound."

Venus is the only 'God' which is almost universally recognized as having been 'born' during historic times, because the birth was seen by humans in 4186 BC

From the beginning:

During the Mesozoic, proto-Saturn (Ouranos) orbited the Sun in what is now the asteroid belt. It was probably the only body orbiting the Sun, its immense size locking it into a binary system which astronomer's believe to be the more usual solar system formation. Earth and other satellites orbited proto-Saturn which dominated the skies, almost to the complete exclusion of the Sun and other celestial bodies; in comparison, the Sun was an insignificant body, proto-Saturn being the main source of heat and light.

The Earth was dominated by the large single super-continent Pangaea, with the World Mountain at its epicentre, and surrounded by a fresh-water shallow Sea. Only a non-rotating synchronous orbit, with the super-continent locked into and facing proto-Saturn, would account for this stability.

The climate was sub-tropical with high humidity. The synchronous (syn-, chronous: together with Saturn?) orbit meant constant light and heat, and hence no variation in temperature. There were no tidal forces in the large shallow Sea, and hence no sedimentation. There were no seasons and hence minimal tree rings.

Birds, mammals and our ancestors inhabited the planet during the Mesozoic, and co-existed with the dinosaurs. In much the same ways as our diversity exists today, cultures varied from the sophisticated, who lived towards the World Mountain, to the primitive who lived towards the ends of the super-continent. Giantism was common in this era of reduced gravitation, and size and bulk were no disadvantage.

The Earth and original satellites of proto-Saturn separated some 15,000-20,000 years ago, and the Golden Mesozoic Age came to an end. Proto-Saturn separated into may parts, to form the gas giants Neptune and Uranus. Proto-Saturn became Saturn. Part of the smaller debris became moons of the outer planets, and much remained in the original orbit as the asteroid belt. The events were witnessed by the peoples of the Earth, and became the basis of the ancient catastrophic mythologies, beginning with the Genesis event "Let There be Light". During separation, Earth was saturated with radiation from proto-Saturn, which caused much mutation and was the catalyst for new sequences of evolution for many generations. The same radiation rendered all forms of radiometric dating useless causing grossly exaggerated time-scales.

Separated from proto-Saturn, planet Earth commenced rotation and the charge focused on the World Mountain dispersed. Together, the Earth lost its inherent stability and with the new centrifugal force, the super-continent separated, and "drifted" changing the pear-shaped Earth into it present shape. The dispersion of the charge together with piezo-electro effects in the rocks, enabled the separation to take place in hours, rather than millions of years.

The survivors of the catastrophe found themselves in a completely new environment: lower temperatures, seasons, diurnal variations, a changed atmosphere, and an apparently greater gravitational effect. This was neither the environment, nor the "solar" system, in which life had evolved.

Oh look we have Roman Catholic whore, Nancy Pelosi standing in front of the Roman Goddess, Minerva. Lets note this photo shot with her throwing the five phallic fingers, the five of the feminine energy, Astarte! So this Baratanna is the daughter of Baal. Now study this God of death and his links to the Church of Rome. Notice those upside five pointed pentagrams around the head of Baratanna? How conveniant when she's feminine. They also represent the upper Shamash houses of the Mazzaroth.

Okay you must remember the symbolism behind the Pheonix, that old fire bird tied in with Osiris and the phallic. But something you probably wont have thought about is the Birds Nest. Whats so special about these nests? Well they are of the Islamic Dragon, the Hashsashin continued as the Templar and Maltese Knights. The nest is where the head exists whilst it sits upon the King of the Mountain.

Remember how the cross is actually not Holy or of Christ. This cross is actually Satanic of Saturn. This is also why Jesus Christ (888) was killed upon the cross. Symbolism of Satan winning over Christ and the God Adonai. Utter blasphemous and hypocriscy by the Church of Rome and it's false claim of being Christian whilst infact it is the Dragon itself. Also the same of the phony organised pagan Protestant churches displaying these satanic, pagan symbols of the Palmyrium Schools of Babylon. You'll also not that the phallic masculine Saturn cross enters into the 'U' of the 'H' whilst we see a phallic arrow thing about to do the same in the lower 'U'. Remember the 'U' is symbolism for the feminine, so once again we have a Generative Principle of sexual union! Remember on how the cross is also a lower down symbol amongst the profane of Osiris. Osiris is represented as the golden phallic given him by Isis. So we have the golden phallic of Osiris entering the feminine opening. Please take note that the 'G' is of Saturn worship as well as sex. The 'G' is Generative Principle! When once rotates the 'G' anti-clockwise (banishing) then we have the symbol of the Hebrew for Pei. Remember the 'P' is a phallic! This is why we see the Austin Powers movie 'Gold Member' as we do. You'll also notice the Dutch bought up a lot in that movie, the Gold Member character is Dutch. Why is this? Well its because of the Royal House of Orange. Why? Well the word orange amongst other things is representative of gold. You'll notice the 'G' in that film has yet again an arrow entering the open feminine. Now lets have a quick look at the sexual union in the alphabet. We see the phallic 'P' and feminine vagina 'O' coming together creating insemination 'Q'. We then see the DNA creation 'S' whilst then the pregnancy 'B' then the giving of BiRth as the waters BReak 'R'. So you BRed in order to give BiRth in order for the baby (gateway to adulthood) to take its first BReath. Then you feed the baby on your BReast. Should have been taught the BiRds and the Bees. What do these do? They help POLEnate the plants. A pole is a phallic and usually used to impregnant Athirat (Earth). So in all your talking 'POQSBR'

The ten gallow hat as with most hats are nothing more than symbolism of Saturn and its 7 rings as one. The phallic body and its head enter the feminine circle opening of the hat creating a sexual union, a Generative Principle of both energies together. Your El and Astarte all in one Satan and Lucifer! Please note how the Crown is of Saturn. Crown comes from the word Chronos and Kronos the Greek Saturn God. The Father of Time and this is a reason why we have chronograph cLocks. The Royals and their Divine right to rule. We'll the Vatican is the Divine Dragon and they hand out the Monarchy titles still to this day. They are of Saturn based in ancient Saturnia. So these Divine Royals claim a right to rule because they worship thee God in their eyes known as El the Planet Saturn. The one who controls the Root Chakra of you. The first step on the Theological ladder to the light. Remember how I showed before how the Crown was symbolised as the Yod in the Yoni (the circle with the dot). Also tied in with the word Or-ange. Also note this word's links to Taaut.

CHRISTMAS 2008 - MY GIFT TO YOU

THE EXACT DATE AND TIME FOR THE RETURN OF JESUS CHRIST
YOU HAVE NEVER HEARD THIS BEFORE, PLEASE LOOK
No, I am not going to stand on a street corner and shout the return of Jesus Christ, but I am going to give you substantial proof that what the Bible writers referred to as the 2nd coming of Jesus Christ is a cosmic event that will take place on December 21 2012 at 11:11pm.

The reality that something will happen at that time is undisputed scientific fact. The Biblical stories I will refer to here were written by people who understood the nature of the universe and thus prepared a story for the second coming of the SUN of God. So be of an open mind and evaluate what I am saying.

For more detail go to the web site at www.hiddenmeanings.com.

THE BIBLE FROM BEGINNING TO END IS GREEK MYTHOLOGY

This is the key to your understanding of why the Bible stories were written and what they meant.

The entire Bible, both the Old and New Testament were written in Alexandria Egypt after it was founded by Alexander The Great who was a Zeus worshipper. It was the center of Zeus worship and the place where Greek and Egyptian mythology came together. This is historical fact and your history books will confirm it. The work was done by scholars under the direction of the Greek Ptolemy's and is filled with mythical references to universal scientific concepts expressed by Greek thought before that time.

WHAT EVIDENCE DO WE HAVE THAT THE BIBLE IS MYTHICAL?

Professor Zeev Herzog archeologist from the University of Tel Aviv in Israel reports that after 200 years of archeological expeditions, his department concludes that the Bible stories never happened.

There is no archeological evidence of any kind.

WHAT ADVANCED THOUGHT WAS PUT INTO THE BIBLE AND BY WHOM?

Classic Greek scholars. Anaxagoras mathmatics, astronomy. Aristarchus scientific plotting of the universe. Eratosthenes astronomy, measured the earths circumference. Heraclides explained the rotation of the earth.

Herophilus, physician brain specialist. Hipparchus discovered the precession of the equinoxes. (This is what measures the prophecy of Pacal Votan to December 21 2012.) Hippocrates, father of medicine, said that he who does not understand astrology is not a doctor but a fool.

Pythagoras, harmony of the universe, string theory, numerology. Aristotle founder of the science of biology, discussed physics and astronomy. Plato, ethics, metaphysics, reason, and the universal power located within each human being. Democritus, atomic energy. Socrates philosophy and ethics. Zeno quantum physics and the intelligent power of the universe.

WITH SUCH BRILLIANCE SO LONG AGO WHY WAS THE WORLD PLUNGED INTO INTELLECTUAL DARKNESS DURING THE MIDDLE AGES?

The spread of Christianity throughout the Roman world, followed by the spread of Islam ushered in the end of classic Greek philosophy and replaced it with Medieval philosophy.

The world became dominated by Christian, Islamic, and Jewish philosophy. In other words we turned away from the light beings God had sent to show us the way, and instead followed superstitious religious teachers.

WHAT SIGNIFICANT EVENT WILL TAKE PLACE ON DECEMBER 21 2012?

For the first time in 26,000 years the Sun will align with the center of our galaxy on December 21 2012. Whatever energy comes from the galaxy to earth will be disrupted at that time.

At that exact time we will also Passover from the age of Pisces to the Age of Aquarius . The sign of the waterman.

HERE IS WHAT I PROMISED YOU. PROOF OF THE SECOND COMING OF JESUS CHRIST AS WELL AS THE COSMIC BAPTISM. IT WILL HAPPEN ON DECEMBER 21 2012 AT 11:11pm.

Jesus Christ is the Greek mythical sun god.

The physical person Jesus is symbolized by the sun and I will prove that to you further down. In the Biblical story Jesus came to earth, was touched by the waterman John and the dove of peace descended to the earth.

ON DECEMBER 21 2012 AT 11:11 pm WE LEAVE THE AGE OF PISCES AND ENTER THE AGE OF THE WATERMAN---AQUARIUS

On December 21 2012 the Sun (Jesus) will align with the center of the galaxy as the change takes place from Pisces to the time of the waterman Aquarius.

In other words on December 21 2012, Jesus (the Sun) will come to earth and be baptized by the waterman, and the heavens will open up, and the dove of peace will descend.

Jesus is not the sun in the sky, but his power and healing is symbolized by the Greek mythologists as the sun in the sky. Can I prove that?

THE BIBLICAL JESUS IS THE SUN GOD FROM GREEK MYTHOLOGY

The Greek sun God is represented in Greek myth by the number 888. Each letter in Greek has a numerical equivalent. When you add of the values of the Greek letters in the word Jesus they total 888.

The Egyptian Sun god is Amun/Amen Ra. The Book of Revelation referring to Jesus in Revelations 3:14 says, "these things say the Amen".

The Biblical life of Jesus follows the trajectory of the Sun through the annual signs of the Zodiac. He is the Sun God.

THE PASSOVER FROM PISCES TO AQUARIUS. THE COSMIC PASSOVER.

In Mark 14:12 Jesus disciples ask him where they will find the place of the Passover. Jesus answered them by saying "when you see the man with the pitcher of water, follow him".

The man with the pitcher of water Aquarius will appear on December 21 2012 at 11:11pm and Jesus the Sun God will come to the Passover with his 12 disciples, which are the 12 constellations of the Zodiac.

THE GREAT CHANGE SPOKEN OF BY PACAL VOTAN FOR DECEMBER 21 2012 IS CONFIRMED BY THE BIBLE AS THE TIME OF THE COSMIC PASSOVER AND THE RETURN OF JESUS CHRIST TO THE WATERMAN AQUARIUS AT WHICH TIME THE COSMIC BAPTISM WILL BRING FORTH THE DOVE OF PEACE TO THE EARTH.

As John the Baptist said in the Bible. Prepare the way of the Lord. Enter the temple on your shoulders and in your meditation prepare. Watch and wait and see the signs all around you of the great change.

SATURN

The square has everything to do with the Occult, with Alchemy, with Geometry, with the ancient Mystery Religions, and with Masonry.

The square of course, is the cube represented 2-dimensionally (see all the square logos above, see cube explained below):

[dohtml]<img src="http://i393.photobucket.com/albums/pp14/Inverted_Heptagram_Star/Pillar8-Thought-and-Art-Vitruvia-1.jpg" height="270" width="360">[/dohtml]

[dohtml]<hr>[/dohtml]
The Cube and hence the Square (usually seen as 2-dimensional in logos, sometimes seen 3-dimensionally) is one of the quintessential principles/teachings of Masonry.

The Cube (remember the Square represented 2-dimensionally) in Geometry, is known as the Hexahedron and is in the class of Polyhedron's (shapes with flat sides) known as Platonic Solids:

Once again we have a perfectly square logo being employed by one of the most powerful corporations in the world. (which, just for the record, plays a part in determining the future lifestyle of the "citizens")

[dohtml]<hr>[/dohtml]
Of course, we all know that this logo is not Masonic, this logo does not have Masonic roots, the logo could not possibly in any way, shape, or form, be considered to come from or be interpreted as having even the slightest connection to Masonry.

No, the men running our world did not graduate from Masonic-like and Masonic-influenced colleges and institutions. The men running our world do not earn a degree from said colleges and institutions.

The men running our world did not join Masonic-founded and Masonic-inspired secret fraternities whist in said colleges and institutions. (such as the widely available and openly public Order of Skull & Bones, and Order of Book & Snake. Note: Skull & Bones was not founded by a German Mason)

The men running our world, would not use their big, powerful, and influential companies' logo's to communicate to each other that they are in the same club and on the same page, whist at the same time having a good laugh at John Q. "Profane" Public's expense.

The men running our world would not chose a perfectly square logo to represent their brand/company/organization time and time and time again. That would be grounds for conspiracy theory!

Yet another square logo, found in a place of influence.

Swiss Post helps out Father Christmas

Swiss postal workers gave a helping hand to Father Christmas and the Christ Child over the 2008 Christmas season, delighting thousands of youngsters.

Swiss Post said on Friday that its six-person team had answered 97 per cent of the 16,401 letters sent by children to the figures traditionally associated with bringing presents.

The only letters that didn't get a reply, and a little gift, were those with illegible or incomplete addresses that thwarted the team's best efforts to track the writers down.

More than half the letters – 9,597 - came from the French-speaking part of Switzerland, followed by 3,258 from the Italian-speaking canton of Ticino.

German-speaking children were less keen, or more sceptical. Although German-speakers account for nearly two-thirds of the population, they wrote only 16 per cent of the letters – 2,619. There were just 13 from the Romansh-speaking area.

The team, based in Chiasso in Ticino, responded in any of the four national languages or in English, sending 245 responses to children abroad.

The Christmas answering service has existed for nearly 60 years. When it started in 1950/51 it received 450 letters, of which 250 came from abroad. For the past five years it has hovered around 17,000 letters.

pi starts with 31

if you take the 3 and turn it the other way it becomes the shape of an uppercase E

if you take the 1 and see it as the lowercase L(l) you see the 1 is L now look at 31 and see El or EL now the ancients couldn't calulate pi to as many digits as we can with supercomputers. Did the ancients view pi as god and named it according to the symbols? El being the oldest god. since they couldn't calculate perfectly, they must have focused on the beginning/end digits so without any specific set gematria or alphanumerics, for example venusian code or pythagorean code, we can see EL as 31 through STRICTLY SYMBOLS the odds of 31 appearing as the first two digits of pi is 1 in a 100.

the odds of EL appearing in the alphabet is roughly 1 in 676 (26x26=676), of course we know that these odds are probably lower considering that vowels are used alot in words and there are only 5 vowels.....six if you count Y as a vowel

EDIT: whoa. a post time of 3:02.....1 minute from 3:01....301=31 if you count the zero as useless

Looking at that one of my records tonight, I discovered another occult signal the record industry is run by the masonic elite. How many revolutions on the turntable for normal albums? 33. Or 33.3 to be exact. Add those up and you get 9. Just like you also get 9 when you add up 4 and 5 because of the jukebox records with one song on them being 45 revolutions per minute. That's two nines right there. What do you normally do with a record when it's done? You flip it. Flip the 9 you get a 6. Six. Satan. Saturn. What is Saturn's color? Black. What color are most records? Black. But that's not all. Remember you have 33.3 or 333. But you have two sides to a record. So 333 times two is 666. Now I finally know why those numbers were selected for albums to spin on a turntable. And records come INSIDE square covers. I see it as a way of squaring the circle. How about you?

Description: in Dominican Republic

Narrow_Is_The_Way - January 24, 2011 08:35 PM (GMT)

I was seeing a show in Dominican Republic showing the National Palace in Santo Domingo showing something that i saw in both Congress and the Cathedral back in the Vatican. (I'm not trying to make it a big deal but this how I saw this)

National Palace (front)

National Palace

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/National_Pala...nican_Republic) http://es.wikipedia.org/wiki/Palacio_Nacio...ica_Dominicana)

QUOTE

The National Palace (Spanish: Palacio Nacional) is a building in Santo Domingo, that houses the offices of the Executive Branch (Presidency and Vice Presidency) of the Dominican Republic. Designed in an eclectic neoclassical style by Italian architect Guido D'Alessandro at the behest of Rafael Trujillo, construction started on February 27, 1944 —Dominican independence centenary— and was inaugurated on August 16, 1944. Occupying an area of 18,000 square meters and luxuriously appointed throughout, the National Palace is considered one of the greatest and most beautiful buildings built in the Dominican Republic.[1] The building stands on the grounds of the former Presidential Mansion (Mansión Presidencial), built during the United States military occupation of 1916-1924.

While the president's office is located within the palace, the Palacio Nacional is not an executive residence as the president does not live there; there is no designated Executive Residence in Santo Domingo. The building comprises three stories. Building services are located at ground level. The main floor includes the ceremonial vestibule, the Presidential and Vice-presidential offices, and the Cabinet meeting room. The third story houses the main reception rooms: the Hall of the Ambassadors, the Hall of the Caryatids, the Green Room, the Mahogany room, and the president's private quarters.

The dome, which rests on a windowed drum, is 34 meters high and has a diameter of 18 meters. Inside, 18 columns sustain the dome. Most of the marble used throughout the building is Dominican, and was extracted from quarries in Samaná and Caballero. The Palacio Nacional complex also includes the "presidential" Chapel of San Rafael Arcángel, carried out in the same architectural style as the palace.

QUOTE

El Obelisco del Malecon (formely known as Trujillo's Obelisk) in Santo Domingo, is painted with "A Song to Liberty." (by Elsa Nuñez) This 137 foot tall Obelisk, that Trujillo had built to bring honor and recognition to himself, was converted to honor the Mirabal sisters. It is now painted with the three women he had murdered. It was unveiled on March 8, 1997 in honor of International Women's Day.

You mean the one mentioned back in the end of April?

If so, that's not a church, it is called Faro a Colon or Columbus Lighthouse in English.

Faro a Colon
Columbus Lighthouse (in english)

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Faro_a_Col%C3%B3n

QUOTE

Columbus Lighthouse (Spanish: Faro a Colón) is a monument located in Santo Domingo Este, Dominican Republic, in tribute to Christopher Columbus.

Construction began in 1986 using plans drawn by Scottish architect J.L. Gleave in 1931, in time for the 500th anniversary of the Discovery of America, the monument was inaugurated in 1992. It was funded by the Latin American states[1][2] and the total cost of construction was approximately $70 million.[3]

The monument's lighthouse-style features projecting beams of light, forming a cross shape, which are so powerful they can be seen from neighboring Puerto Rico.[3]

Containing what are purported to be the remains of Columbus, the monument is both a mausoleum and a museum showcasing objects including a boat from Cuba and Columbian jewelry. Constructed of concrete, the monument is half a mile long,[3] its architecture is cross-shaped and represents the Christianization of America.

Architecture
The Columbus Lighthouse, is a cross-shaped monument made of reinforced concrete. It's dimensions are 680 feet (210 m) by 195 feet (59 m). There are 157 beams of light which emanate towards the sky from the structure and a rotating beam, which can be seen for miles.

History
The Dominican historian Antonio Delmonte y Tejada, in his book "History of Santo Domingo," published in 1852, expressed the idea of erecting a monument in honor of Columbus in Santo Domingo.[4] By in 1914, the American Pulliam William Ellis began selling the idea of build a monumental beacon in the first city of the New World to the American press. The idea becomes universally accepted during the 1923 celebration of the Fifth International Conference in Chile, when it is decreed that this monument should be built in cooperation by all governments and peoples of America.

Scottish architect Joseph Lea Gleave won the competition among 455 participants from 48 countries. The ceremony was held in Brasil in 1931, and the judges included distinguished architects such as Horacio Acosta y Lara (Uruguay), Eliel Saarinen (Finland), and Frank Lloyd Wright (USA).[5] But, by 1950 only eight countries had made contributions totaling less than $15,000USD, yet the Dominican government forged ahead with the project and in 1948 the foundations of the monument were inaugurated.[4] After 1948 there was growing instability in the country and the political situation made it impossible to resume construction until 1986. During the government of Joaquin Balaguer, construction resumed under the supervision of the Dominican architect Teófilo Carbonell, and culminating in the construction of the monument in 1992, in time for the celebration of the quincentennial discovery of the Americas. [6]

The monument though originally conceived by Gleave as a mausoleum, was adapted to house a permanent collection of exhibitions from each American country as well as other European and Asian countries, as requested by former President Balaguer.

Maximiliano - January 10, 2010 06:55 AM (GMT)

This is the explanation about the beginning of the use of the "mano cornuto" signal.

The "Horns Hands Signal" was first used in the American Culture through the influence of heavy metal music. But in fact this signal have Italians, and therefore Catholics roots. The following video proofs that.

MALLOCHIO (EVIL EYE)

So, the first to use the "Mano cornuta" was Ronnie James Dio in the year 1980 with the launch of the first album on which would work as a singer of Black Sabbath

"Heaven and Hell". As you can see this signal is called by the Italian supersiticious and for sure Catholics people, as the "Mal-occhio". which means the "Bad or Evil Eye".
So, this links the "All-seeing-eye" with this signal. Maybe its a mixture performe of the "Eye of Lucifer" and " the horns of Moloch".

But it's believed that the "Evil Eye" is the name for a sickness transmitted - usually without intention - by someone who is envious. It is also called the invidious Eye and the envious Eye. The Evil Eye belief is that a person can harm you, your children, your livestock, or your fruit trees, by “looking at them” with envy and praising them.

But its more interesting that the firsts to do that signal whith the hand was the Hinduist and Buddhist religions, both highly respectful of the traditions of the Babilonian Mistery Religion.

The "Mano Cornuto" is in buddhism the "Karana Mudra" (which is a sign made with the hands that means "seal") of "protection against negativite" or "the sign to control the demons".

Wikipedia says:

"Karana Mudr•": The Karana mudr• is the mudr• which expels demons and removes obstacles such as sickness or negative thoughts.
It is made by raising the index and the little finger, and folding the other fingers. It is the same as the rude gesture known as corna in many western countries. (This mudr• is also known as Tarjan• mudr•; Japanese: Funnu-in, Fud•-in)."

The earliest written references to the "evil eye" occur on Sumerian clay tablets dating to the third millennium BC.

Agate beads of exceptional quality, worn to protect the wearer from the influence of the evil eye were also discovered in the royal Sumerian graves at Ur. It is believed that other ancient culture that used this signal was the Amorites mentioned in the Bible as the tribe of the last Refaim (Giants) which was all killed by the Israelites in his fight against "Og" which was a king of the Bashan in Canaan.

So, this sign is not to protection of the "Evil Eye"; it is to invoke demonic forces. There it's no coincidence and casualty that the people make this sign. But have his causality in the influence of the ancient tradition related to demons, and the Nephilim, and Babylon; and the people that do this signs, are victim and victimizers of this curse, both for excess or deficiency of knowledge of the meanings of his acts.

The TRIad claw is tied to the reptilian Dragon's claw. If one did bend down the two attached fingers then one would create the el-diablo signal also from it. Remember that the Dragon is the sacred animal of Lucifer whilst her next sacred animal is the Lion. Tri meaning three, the three so called angels protecting Satan with the equilateral TRIangle, the all seeing eye of Saturn. Also signals the letters 'M' and 'W' which both symbolise 666 from the three 'Vs'. The 666 being the 'Beast'.

craig-oxley - December 6, 2008 02:03 AM (GMT)

Remember if we take a side on look at this Dragon symbol of Cosmos, we find it looks like a six. The six of Saturn the Masculine Dragon, otherwise known as El or the Anti-Christos 666 Beast. The very enemies of the 888 Jesus Christ. We can see this Cosmos signal as a 66 which itself is Idol Worship. Something forbidden by God Adonai in the real ten commandments. The anti-Christos Catholic continuation of Rome and Nimrod removed that second commandment. They then split the tenth into two in order to make up the ten commandments. This all reminds me of this a-okay symbol which is infact the 666. If we take the Cosmos signal again but this time seperate the two vertical fingers into a Astarte 'V' what do we have? We have the occult symbolism for the masonic 'Law of Five' veiled in profane nonsense such as victory. Note how with one same hand signal we can have both the six and the five? The masculine and feminine energy of El and Astarte in one. Just like the circle from the Goddess Circe, the upper half feminine, the lower half is masculine. If we add these two numbers together we get the eleven of Boaz and Jachin and Judgement! Now if we just have a six and five next to one another we have the number for water representing the currency of Yarikh and Astarte the feminine. If we reverse this to five and six then we have the number of Yarikh herself.

Notice how this Baal is infact black. This is nothing to do with the Negros as they would like it to be. It is everytyhing to do with the Planet Saturn, the Ultimate pagan God known to most as El and Ninurta. The Royals are supposedly have a Divine right to rule. Who gives them this Divine right? Who is their one true God? Why it's Saturn. Why do those cretins where the crown on their heads exactly? What is the crown? It is representation of the Yoni Vagina and the rings of Saturn. A sexual union, generative principle takes place as the head of the phallic body enters the crown. The word crown comes from the Greek word Kronos. Kronos is linked to time as Chronos and of course is the God of Saturn in Greek. Notice the 8 pointed star of Shamash in the feminine wheel? Notice it within the wallpaper and above Baal's head. Baal is infact the God of death known as Jupiter. Saturn is the God of Judgement, Darkness and Evil.

I wonder if they(i.e. Alec Baldwin, Jeff Hardy) know the true meaning of the Cosmos sign if they know that is what they are doing. Although to me in regards to Alec Baldwin in the Hulu commercial is doing the quotation marks. Sometimes people will use their hands to make the quotation marks.

Same here. Children are unaware of these things. But the truth will stand in the end. Even if those things are one of our favorite games, toons, etc.

I played this game for the 1st time in like 7 years MGS2 theres a scene where they kind of talk about the NWO but change the name of it. The game was made from 98-01 was originally going to take place in Iraq but the makers got scared because of the unrest going on in 1999. It's interesting the setting is almost like a oil tanker in 2009 tho.

AMERICA'S DEMON TRAPS - TELLTALE SIGNS OF THE NEW WORLD ORDER
(Radio Show Transcript Follows)

The New World Order is coming

Are you ready?

Stand by for insights so startling you will never look at the news the same way again.

THE CUTTING EDGE

This is David Bay, Director of Old Paths Ministries, a ministry of Grace Baptist Church. And this is the Cutting Edge, a radio program dedicated to warning and informing God's people. This program is sponsored by Grace Baptist Church, a fundamental, independent Baptist Church, in Attleboro, Massachusetts. We are committed to the study and exposition of the inerrant, inspired and authoritative Word of God. The views expressed belong to us, and are not necessarily shared by this station.

The moral bankruptcy of our society is well-documented. But, few people understand why we have become morally bankrupt. However, when we look at society through the Biblical eyes of God, we can easily see why we are facing the unprecedented troubles of today. This study of America through the eyes of God is what we will always try to do here; stay with us for some eye-opening truths.

Several weeks ago, we showed you how the two Great Seals of the United States, both of which are printed on the back of our One Dollar bills, are powerful occultic symbols. In fact, these two seals contained three hexagrams, all of which were surrounded by a circle. Thus, these seals were simply "Demon Traps". A "Demon Trap" is a most powerful Satanic device a witch can utilize to achieve his/her specific goals. A real demon trap when utilized properly, actually brings a demon into our dimension.

At this point, we need to instruct you how witches exercise power through their practice of the occult. "Witches must obey certain laws of witchcraft in order for the force to work for them...a witch's only force come through demonic contacts and obedience. A witch...cannot cause anything to happen -- it's strictly by the follow-up actions of a demon. If every procedure is properly done, a demon must obey any order or spell given by a witch...In order for a witch to conjure a demon -- and I mean a literal demon being summoned into our plane of existence -- a witch must first draw on the ground a circle with a nine-foot radius." A true witch must ensure that his/her circle be precisely nine feet in radius.

Now the witch draws a hexagram, a six-sided star, inside this circle. This hexagram looks very much like a Jewish Star of David, which is simply two equilateral triangles interlaced, one pointing up and the other pointing down. However, Satan's counterfeit hexagram does not interlace its two triangles; one triangle simply lays on top of the other.

Now, back to the proper utilization of a demon trap. When a witch utters the correct incantations, a demon must appear in our dimension and must perform whatever the witch commands him to do. However, the demon thus summoned, is angry and rebellious, not wanting to obey the commands of the witch. He must use his supernatural power as the witch instructs him; however, the boundary of the circle forms a protective fence for the witch, because, if the demon can ever escape the circle, he will attack and kill the witch. Therefore, the witch takes great care in ensuring that no portion of the outer boundary of the circle is smudged or broken. The supernatural power of the demon is literally contained within and channeled through, this demon trap.

As we discussed earlier, the Bible teaches that God and Satan battle in the supernatural sphere for control of both human beings and nations. Further, the Bible teaches that God has appointed His most powerful angel, Michael, to be Israel's protector angel; therefore, it is logical that Satan, also, assigns his most powerful demons to be in charge of directing the affairs of the most powerful nations on the scene at any particular time. We have demonstrated that, beginning in the mid-1700's the guiding spirits of occultic societies were telling key leaders that the newly emerging North America was going to be a powerful nation; therefore, every effort was to be made to guide North America into the paths of the occult.

This Satanic effort thus set the stage for the most profound battle for America's soul between Satan and God. In the beginning, God's influence directed America in great and powerful ways. Several revivals in the 1800's and the early 1900's swept this nation, and America's influence throughout the world by her many missionaries was profound. However, all throughout this time, Satan had sown the seeds for destruction, awaiting only for God to withdraw His restraining power as He had prophesied He would do just prior to the end of the age. All throughout the Twentieth Century, God seems to have been withdrawing His restraining power, as this century has been the most violent, bloody, and stressful time in history. People the world over have likewise been the most violent, bloody, and Godless in history.

Certainly since 1948, when America proved effective in leading the struggle to reestablish Israel as a nation, God has seemingly withdrawn His influence. Since this year, America has consistently and dramatically moved away from God's principles and commands and toward Satan's. We have spent much time in the past year chronicling all the many reasons America has traveled this route, and we still firmly believe all that we have said. However, we believe it quite possible that the three "Demon Traps" on the two Great Seals of the United States have played a huge part in this dramatic change in the direction of this country. The witches who have led the secret societies of this country, i.e., Freemasonry, Rosicrucians, and the Illuminati, have literally been consistently using these national "Demon Traps" to conjure up powerful demons. And, understand, that these are literal Satanic demons. Since they are being called up on behalf of the national entity, the United States of America, we can rest assured that they are the most powerful demons possible. And, remember, that witches employing this "Demon Trap" device have had 216 years in which to consistently call these powerful demons up for the express purpose of changing the values of this country.

Furthermore, since the plan is to move America in the direction of Satan, we should expect that the attack will be primarily attitudinal in nature. We should expect that Satan would attack this country at its values base. At this point, it would be helpful if we studied the major principalities of Hell, as taught to a Satanist, because such a study will throw great light on this subject at hand. We draw our material from Doc Marquee's book, "Secrets Of The Illuminati". Marquee states that Satan has organized Hell into seven (7) major areas. We find it highly interesting that Satan chose the number 7 for his organizational number, since we know that God considers 7 to be His perfect number. As we list these major principalities, you will understand that Satan has planned to move men and women in his values direction. We will also identify the name of the demon whom Satan has appointed to be in charge of each principality. After we have quickly identified each major division, we will go back to show how America has literally been changed in these precise areas.

THE SEVEN MAJOR DIVISIONS OF HELL

1.The Drugs of Sorcery, lead by the demon, "Rege", who is the overall General of the Occult. Rege is responsible for such drugs as marijuana, hashish, cocaine, speed, LSD, peyote, and mescaline. These drugs attack a person's mind and open it for a demon to enter.

We have repeatedly stated that persons throughout history who have entered the occult have taken drugs to increase their levels of occultic consciousness. The taking of drugs is absolutely essential to the practice of witchcraft, and it comprises one of the three steps of Satanism. In our seminar, when we are pointing out that America, as a nation, has systematically gone through these three standard steps into Satanism, we show how this nation began its major, widespread usage of drugs in the late 1960's. Drug usage in America continues at an extremely high rate, and is consistent with our position that this nation is practicing witchcraft, as a national entity.

2.Sexual lust is the second division, led by the demon Larz. This area includes such sexual practices as homosexuality, adultery, and bisexuality, as well as any other sexual perversions.

3.Addiction is the third division, led by the demon, Bacchus. Common addictions are drugs, smoking, and alcohol. I had never thought of addiction as constituting one of the basic conditions of the human spirit, a weakness so important that Satan would establish it as a major division. But, I should not be surprised, because the Bible teaches that the unsaved are the slaves of sin, and of the master of sin, Satan. Addiction is simply condition of personal slavery to Lord Satan.

4.Mental illness or distress is the fourth division of Hell, and is led by the demon Pan. Pan and his soldiers cause mental illness, depression, and suicide. Have you noticed that, when a person becomes depressed, or feels rejected, he will turn to drugs or to alcohol for relief from his emotional pain. Then, he will become addicted to one or more of these substances. Thus, you can see how one demon will cause a person to go to another. Pan causes you to be depressed, so you go to Rege, the demon of the occult and drugs, and he in turn will send you to Bacchus, the demon of addiction. These demons literally create a circle in which they try to keep a person trapped for their entire life.

5.The fifth major division of Hell is Hate, Murder, Killing, and War, and is led by the demon, Medit. Christians should not be surprised by this revelation, because we know that Satan is a murderer of men by nature. However, most of us might be surprised to learn that Satanists teach that this division of Hell accomplishes its goals through the manipulation of such emotions as jealousy and envy, and through the practice of gossip among men and women. It is no wonder that the Bible forbids such practices among the saved.

6.The sixth major division is Death, led by the demon Set. This division literally welcomes unsaved individuals into the arms of death. We see an unusual picture of this division in action in the book of Revelation, Chapter 6:8, "And I looked, and behold, a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given unto him over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth". The fourth Horse of the Apocalypse, the Pale Horse, rode from this sixth major division of Hell, the division of Death.

7.The seventh, and most powerful, division of Hell is identified only as the "Christian" division, and is led by the most powerful demon of all; however, the name of this general is never given. The purpose of this division is to literally render the Christian Church ineffective.

They accomplish this goal by discrediting the lives of Christian leaders and followers, by sowing discord among believers, and to weaken the daily walk of believers. Demons are literally actively involved in this type of activity, and it all begins with weakening the daily walk. Demons encourage Christians to skip daily Bible reading and prayer, to refuse to make commitments to Church, to gossip about others, to not tithe, or to become content and lazy about their walk with the Lord.

These are the seven major divisions of Hell, each led by a powerful demon. If our theory is correct about witches calling forth demons through the "Demon Traps" built into our two Great Seals, then we should expect that the demons thus called would attempt to influence this nation to move into the value system of Satan. Do we see such a movement of National Attitudes and Values? Of course, the answer is "Yes", but to drive our point home, let us now examine each of these seven divisions of Hell again, examining relevant national statistics which might show how far along the road America is in possessing Hell's values.

1. The Drugs of Sorcery
America, as a nation, has certainly embarked upon the usage of drugs. Remember, drugs are so critical to the development of anyone who wants to become a Satanist. Drugs break down a person's moral and spiritual inhibitions, and they actually open a person up for demonic possession. Satanism literally could not exist if there were no drugs. Let us examine relevant statistics concerning America's usage of drugs.

Drug abuse and addiction are now at a high epidemic level in the U.S., accompanied by the corresponding crime rate. The greatest loss, of course, is the human one. America's losses are occurring through several channels:

1.Drug overdose is killing thousands every year.

2.Drug dependency is killing family structure.

3.Drugs drain the nation economically.

4.Drugs drain the nation's health care system

5.Drug addicts now are being born from mothers who are addicts, passing the addiction in their womb.

6.Drug addiction is contributing greatly to the spread of AIDS.

7.Drug addiction is contributing to the sexual abuse of children and young adults through prostitution and pornography. This type of sin also "traffics in the bodies and souls of men", as Jesus prophesied in Revelation 18:13.

The SCOPE of the problem is absolutely staggering:

"...Random lab tests show virtually EVERY USA BILL IN CIRCULATION bears microscopic traces of cocaine. That amounts to 12 billion bills worth $230 billion." (US News and World Report).

Every nation in history has had some drug usage, but NOTHING with this MAGNITUDE.

"...The peddler is not the primary villain in the spread of drug abuse...the real culprit is the lawyer, housewife, stockbroker, or teacher down the street who is using drugs and passing the habit on.."President George Bush, in a speech, 9/5/89, reported that the number of persons in the USA who were using cocaine frequently had doubled (1985-88), to 10% of the population. This means that approximately 25 million people in the USA use cocaine frequently." And this terrifying statistic only talks about cocaine!

But, the worst is still ahead of us:

Federal Government leaders are preparing the people for legalization of drugs. We are being conditioned through the Six Step Attitudinal Change Plan, which we have discussed at length on this program. America, as a nation, has definitely been moved into this First Division of Hell.

2. Sexual lust
Americans today are caught up in a frenzy of sexual lust, on a wide variety of fronts. Our mass media -- TV, newspapers, magazines, and movies -- have been pumping sexual sin into the minds and hearts of Americans since the end of World War II; however, since the early 1980's, depiction of sexual sin have reached ever-increasing levels of frequency and stark reality. The predictable change in attitudes and values among the population has occurred, as many, if not most, young Americans have adopted the attitude that any sexual action is OK to do as long as it feels good.

Of course, our school systems have gotten into the act also, as they have continuously taught that there are no absolute right or wrong and that sex between students is inevitable. This entire process of eroding the traditional values system of the population of America began in 1963, when the Supreme Court ruled that prayer could no longer be said in public schools. The resulting change in behavior is startling, to say the least:

Pregnancies to girls 10-14: +553%
Suicide Rates for 15-24 year-olds: +102%, 20-24 year-olds: +98%
School dropouts: +650%
Divorce: +140%
Violent Crime: +160%
Sexually transmitted Diseases: +148%
Alcohol Consumption per person: +24%

Americans have truly abandoned God. Can His physical judgment be far behind? Indeed, as the Apostle Paul teaches so eloquently in Romans 1:18-32, when a person (or a nation) consciously rejects God, he/she begins to receive judgment in their bodies and minds. Certainly, the statistics quoted above clearly show that such judgment has already begun, and will only get worse until God's final physical judgment falls.

However, remember that this division of Hell also includes homosexuality and bisexuality. Since the late-1960's, American homosexuals have literally come out of the closet and into the open. Today, mass media and schools are teaching our young children that homosexuality is just as acceptable as heterosexuality. As a result, homosexuals have become much more open and bold about displaying their lifestyles, and in recruiting new members. This is the sin of Sodom. The entire society of Sodom must have been supportive of homosexual activity. Schools, churches, courts, social organizations of all types, had to have been supportive. Do we see this kind of societal support for homosexual behavior beginning in America? Clearly, yes. This public acceptance of homosexuality in Sodom is the reason the young and old men of the city surrounded Lot's house in broad daylight and demanded that God's angels come out so that they could copulate with them, in public. These people had no fear of being arrested, because there were no laws against any type of homosexual conduct. America is clearly traveling down the same path.

3. Addiction
American people are suffering from many types of behavioral and substance addictions today. Let us briefly talk about substance addictions first, since these are the most commonly thought of first:

Drugs -- As we have discussed in detail, Americans are addicted to drugs on a wide scale. This addiction is now at an epidemic scale and can only continue to increase. Alcohol addiction is a major problem in America, and it has left untold misery in its wake. "Dr. David Musto, a medical historian, calls (alcohol addiction) the `American disease'.

According to statistics from (Government) sources alcohol is involved in:

66% of fatal accidents.
70% of murders.
72% of assaults and robberies.
52% of fire deaths.
50% of problems at work.
60% of suicides.
56-70% of fights and assaults in homes. 3

Food addiction is becoming recognized as a major problem today, as the majority of Americans are overweight, and an unprecedented number are actually obese.

Cigarette addiction is claiming the lives of hundreds of thousands of people annually, as Americans are finally succumbing to a wide variety of diseases associated with a lifetime of smoking. While some groups of Americans are giving up smoking, other groups, such as women and teens are showing dramatic increases. The death toll just continues to roll.

Gambling is quickly becoming the new addiction. Our goal in life is to seek Jesus Christ and His righteousness, not riches. However, the goal for most people today seems to be to get as rich as possible as quickly as possible. This type attitude leaves a person wide open for the "deceitfulness of riches", against which Jesus warned. And adults are leading the way.

Consider Adult Gambling: There are many cities in which casinos and gambling are legal. The latest craze is for American Indian reservations to legalize gambling, creating brand new facilities in which people can lose their money. And the crowds filling these gambling halls are enormous.
Bingo is sponsored primarily by churches and charitable organizations.
Horse racing
Sports gambling is huge business
State lotteries have been conceived as the easiest way for governments

People who would protest vigorously against increased taxes simply do not mind losing even more money to a government sponsored lottery.

Since children learn most effectively from observing role models, we might expect that, with all this gambling going on among the adults, teenagers might be developing this attitude themselves. Such is exactly the case.

In high schools, 50% of the kids are now gambling;
One in five (20%) has a serious problem-- stealing in order to gamble.
That is the kind of nation we're becoming."

Sexual addiction is becoming a major problem. More and more men are addicted to the sexually explicit materials which are so easily obtained through a variety of sources:

Adult bookstores
Soft-core pornography in public places such as convenience stores and retail bookstores.
Adult XXX-rated videos, widely available in any city of any size in this country. Most video stores which carry these adult videos also allow underage teens to rent them. This addiction is becoming so prevalent that psychologists are beginning to specialize in this area, and are advertising their services in newspapers and underground publications. And, of course, the toll of criminal behavior related to sexual addiction continues to rise.

You can probably think of more ways in which Americans are addicted, but you get the point. Americans are clearly addicted to some substance or some behavioral lifestyle in ever-increasing numbers. The demon in charge of this division in Hell must be very pleased with the progress of his campaign.

4. Mental illness or distress

Most people today understand that millions of Americans are suffering from some form of mental illness or distress. Of course, when someone does begin to suffer mental and emotional distress, they are far more open to the temptation of substance of lifestyle addiction. The circle of which Doc Marquee spoke earlier is thus perpetuated. Again, the demon in charge of this division must be pleased.

5. The fifth major division of Hell is hate, murder, killing, and war.
Certainly, the Twentieth Century has experienced war and death on an unprecedented level. We have seen two world wars and hundreds of smaller wars. Hundreds of millions of people have died as the result of these wars. However, this century has suffered from unprecedented political death and persecution, as well. Adolf Hitler's vision of a cleansed Germany resulted in the deaths of over 18 million people, including 6 million Jews. Communism has killed over 200 million people, as they attempted to cleanse their society of anyone who could never accept its tenants.

In this country, killing has reached unprecedented levels. "A violent crime is committed (in America) every 5 seconds...In a typical year: There are 8.1 million serious crimes like murder, assault, and burglary. BUT:

Only 724,000 adults are ever arrested.
Only 193,000 of them are convicted.
Only 149,000 of them go to prison.
And, 36,000 serve less than a year (in prison).
If all this isn't enough, the 8.1 million crimes, above, represent only 50% of the actual crimes committed. The rest are never reported to the police."

America has become saturated with violence and murder.

6. The sixth major division is Death
Death is rapidly becoming an institution and a source of making huge monetary profits. Abortion not only kills 1.6 million babies annually, it is a source of huge profits. Now that this death industry is being threatened by the French abortion pill, RU-486, Dr. Kevorkian is suggesting to these abortionists that they turn their clinics into public Euthanasia Centers. The devaluation of human life is not only dramatic, it is frightening, because it parallels the slide in Germany in the 1920's-30's into Hitler's slaughter. America is not far from the point where its government will be deciding who lives and who dies.

7. The seventh, and most powerful, division of Hell is identified only as the "Christian" division
This is the most powerful division of Hell. Its responsibility is to weaken the Christian Church. Indeed, the many ills of which we have been talking would never have been possible had it not been for the decline of the influence of the Church. Of course, this decline in influence has been occurring since 1948, when the World Council and National Council of Churches was established.

These twin organizations have led the march into apostasy first, and the global religion of Anti-Christ second (known as the Ecumenical Movement).

But, the final straw in discrediting the Christian Church has been the discrediting of some of its leaders in the area of sexual misconduct. And we cannot blame just the Bakers and Jimmy Swaggert. Hundreds, possibly even thousands, of pastors and priests all across this country have been accused and convicted of sexual sin. The final, glorious Satanic goal of finally defeating Christianity must appear tantalizingly close to Satan and his demonic host.

Now that we know the major divisions of Hell, we can see that America's decline and inevitable demise has occurred in precisely these major divisions. Remember that Satan's most powerful device in which to actually conjure up powerful demons to accomplish Satan's goals is the "Demon Trap". This may very well have been Satan's goal when he designed the two Great Seals of the United States. Satan knew that America would simultaneously be the most influential nation in the history and the most Christ honoring nation in history. He knew that he would have to devise the most powerful possible plan to turn this nation toward his value system. Therefore, he included this "Demon Trap" system as part of the Great Seals, allowing witches in the secret societies and in Satanism to consistently conjure up demons designed to move America into Satan's camp. Of course this activity would be carried out in extreme secrecy. But, we can see the effects, now that we know what to look for.

The end is very near. Not only are Americans participating in unparalleled witchcraft activity, but we have just elected a President who is personally involved in this type activity, and whose wife has recently admitted that she is participating in witchcraft.

But, this is the subject of another program.

Title: LUCIFER PROJECT update FYI (2010) Clarke novel?
Description: Cassini extended tour = Equinox Mission

Goliathan - October 18, 2008 02:51 AM (GMT)

http://members.cox.net/saturn-nustar/

A.C. Clarke's novel 2010 was to take place at Saturn, but others convinced him to change the mark to Jupiter.....

Lucifer was the name of the star created from Jupiter in "2010".

The new report above takes a closer look at that time frame concerning the "Lucifer Project" when the Saturn/Cassini "Equinox Mission" is to wind down.....

UPDATE..
The "Solstice" mission has just been approved by NASA allowing Cassini to possibly still be orbiting Saturn until Sept. 2017, HOWEVER, also programmed into the Solstice Mission is the only possible "mission end scenario" being developed and that is for Cassini to be terminated by plunging into Saturn while in NEAR POLAR ORBIT (after studying closely the polar anomalies). This plunge is set to happen, as a contingency plan for Cassini's early termination, at any time with as little as 2 months notice after the Equinox mission ends in Sept. 2010. This means the possible plunge times now are a very wide range = late 2010 to Sept. 2017.

Plumes spewing from Saturn moon may contain water

WASHINGTON – Astronomers looking at the spectacular supersonic plumes of gas and dust shooting off one of Saturn's moons say there are strong hints of liquid water, a key building block of life.

Their research, appearing in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature, adds to the growing push to explore further the moon Enceladus, as one of the solar system's most compelling places for potential life.

Using images from NASA's Cassini probe, astronomers had already figured that the mysterious plumes shooting from Enceladus' icy terrain contain water vapor. New calculations suggesting the gas and dust spew at speeds faster-than-sound make the case for liquid, said study lead author Candice Hansen of NASA's Jet Propulsion Lab in California. Her team calculated the plumes travel more than 1,360 mph.

Reaching that speed "is hard to do without liquids," Hansen said. While her paper offers more evidence building on what others have found, she added that her research is not the final proof of liquid water on Enceladus (pronounced en-SELL-ah-dus).

Other planetary scientists, such as Andrew Ingersoll at the California Institute of Technology, said the research is good, but that it is possible to achieve such speeds with ice particles and at cooler temperatures. So Hansen hasn't proven her case yet, he and other scientists said.

Carolyn Porco, the head of the Cassini camera team and an astronomer who didn't take part in Hansen's research, said "the evidence in my mind is building on liquid water." That moon, one of 60 circling Saturn, "has become the go-to place" for exploration in the outer planets, she said.

Europa, a moon of Jupiter, may have a liquid ocean beneath its frozen surface. But Enceladus, thought responsible for producing one of Saturn's rings, is more accessible, Hansen said. "Enceladus is sort of helpfully spewing out its innards," she said.

There is something strange to it, does it all sound just like "theories" and even what is written in the Bible about certain beings coming over to Earth and building cities etc? Would they not do the same now again with their blow up of Saturn to make its moon fit for life, won't it be the repeat of history? They showing up at another planet and making things go anew?

This was sent to me by a user of Youtube who had been pestering me with mathical bullshit for a while. When I told them to stick their maths up their backside this arrives. I'd explained how bullshit maths claims all sorts of a virus which doesn't actually exist haha this is hiv. :) I will not yet name the character involved: -Craig Fact of the matter is, I'm just trying to prevent you from getting this out. I thought that I would be able to use clever math trickery (math is false btw, anything beyond basic calculus is concocted by the establishments of the world) to get you to just submit and agree that the theory is crazy. Yes, this is exactly what is happening. I've been working with the government under a contract for years now, and honestly I've been trying to convince myself that none of this is really happening. From what I've seen from the inside, you are spot on.

I don't want to believe that this is what's happening, but from what I've seen, we're going to have another sun for sure. Saturn is too small. It's Jupiter they want to ignite, right out of the movies. It's crazy.

Think about this: why do you think they only allowed a movie like 2001 to be made by Kubrick, a director that the public ALREADY KNEW was crazy? They knew that everyone would eventually find out about their plans, so they chose a director like Kubrick to make the movie. That way, if anyone starts comparing the illuminati's plans with the movie, that's where it will stop. People will just laugh it off because a crazy director made the movie about it.

BTW, this Obama stuff is all just a farce. He was placed in office by the illuminated ones to make sure this happens. Everyone is so crazy that he is the savior that they haven't a clue what is about to hit them.

if you post a video about ANY of this, be EXTREMELY CAREFUL. The illuminati already know about your channel about now, and probably know exactly what we are typing. You are risking your life for sure, but keep it up.

All this stuff, with the economy and the presidency and the catholic church, it's all very connected. I'm sure you've seen this for decades.

I work for the NSA, at least that's what my job title would say if I were to fill one in. It's the official front. I know very much about Milton William Cooper and I am glad you are following what he says closely. He is very respected and I suggest you continue following him. Unfortunately, his death in 2001 leaves an undesired gap in very important recent information that has continued to stream in from other sources, so though he might have had a point a long time ago, his information is now outdated.

Fact of the matter is: Saturn won't make enough of a sun. It just isn't enough, and it's too far away. Jupiter is a much better candidate, and the information leaking out about Saturn is intentional, to deceive you. I think it's time to step back and strongly reevaluate the governments' plans.

For one, a solar Jupiter would provide just enough energy (transferred via microwave radiation) to power our supercomputers. With them in place, and BS projects like the Large Hadron Collider (to lead people astray), the end of the universe will be able to be digitally simulated down to the last molecule. This is important information to have, as such will allow complete control over intergalactic marketplaces (yes, intergalactic) and result in easy establishment of the new world order.

I have a list of planets that will be ignited (only 1 in this solar system, more in others) Whatever happens to us just won't matter to them. You might be interested to hear about it.

craig-oxley - December 9, 2008 12:29 AM (GMT)

QUOTE

That's because I'm not a contractor of the NSA. I just say I am. Like most things in the government, it's a front.

Your knowledge of Saturn and its symbolism are spot on. That was the original plan to blow up Saturn, but it was found that it wouldn't generate enough energy to run the supercomputer. (This thing is massive.. where do you think all of NASA's trillions of dollars budget is going, to make some ancient chinese rockets? LOL those things are cheap to make!)

NASA (again another front, there is no real "NASA" per se beyond what exists on paper), determined that Jupiter would actually be easier to blow up and produce much more energy than Saturn once the fusion chain reaction takes place. Yeah, it's basically a case of using another probe. That probe, along with thousands of others, have already been launched. Both Jupiter and Saturn are absolutely surrounded like freaking balls of dust with these darn things. NASA has been launching them for decades, calling them anywhere from GPS satellites (4 is MORE than sufficient for Earth GPS, so why need THOUSANDS??), to thermal radiation probes (huh??.. they say it's for "solar flares") and Russian spy sats (cold war has been OVER for 15 years now, get over it guys! lol). There are a million and one reasons to keep launching more crap into space and setting it en route to most of our gas giants. Jupiter, right now, though, is the one that's absolutely packed with probes.

Plutonium isn't needed to ignite Jupiter. All they need to do is take advantage of Jupiter's immense atmospheric pressure. This kind of pressure literally fuses the atoms together which causes a chain reaction, much like the inside of a thermonuclear device.

With regards to Chemtrails, that's a whole other issue as well. It loosely ties into increasing the size of our van allen belts, but it also is a form of chemical mind-altering, over the course of many years so nobody notices "drastic" changes. But, suffice to say, it's controlled by the High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program (HAARP) (basically an atmospheric modifier)

craig-oxley - December 10, 2008 04:41 AM (GMT)

QUOTE

The van allen belts specifically protect earth from solar radiation.. Putting things in the atmosphere in large amounts is an ingenious way of getting things to those regions. What happens when solar radiation hits the atmosphere is it causes it to expand. It's a form of orbital perturbation that can slow satellites down (because they are literally dragging through the air under high radiation storms). The chemicals, once exposed to enough solar radiation, get pushed by the expanding atmosphere to the van allen belts. What I was describing there was one of the many MANY chemicals located in the chemtrails. The gas I am talking about that affects the van allen belts is called Diethylene triamine pentaacetic acid or DTPA. It's a common gas used in lung scans due to its ability to transport radioactive material to make things easy to see under an X ray. The specific purpose of this DTPA is to protect earth's belts from the extra radiation that will be pumping through the atmosphere due to another sun.

By the way, though at least one of the gas giants will become another star, it's still a small enough effect that it can be fixed using the chemtrails. If jupiter becomes a star, for instance, it would just appear as a very bright star because 1: it's smaller than the sun and 2: it's farther away. Still, though, Earth's current state cannot handle that kind of radiation.

It's actually not that hard to go through the van allen belts. Any conventional metal tube that's pressurized and it shoots through the belts fast enough won't affect its passengers with anymore than, say, a year's worth of conventional radiation dosage (average for all humans, radiation that's naturally occurring in minerals in earth). It's a racket, though. government agencies work together to make sure space exploration's cost is kept artificially high to control the masses by keeping them on the ground.

All in all, chemtrails have no specific purpose other than to be used much like railroad tracks. It's atmospheric infrastructure by which the authorities are able to inject whatever they want to cause anything from mass population control to simply seeding clouds to make it rain over drought areas. Chemtrails are all sorts of things, in short. The way the jet stream cleans out these pathways about once every 3 days makes it convenient to inject whatever new chemical they come up with frequently.

The ice age ties into the supercomputers being built, because it offers a means of cooling the massive electronics. Once the ice age takes place (having an extra star would start pumping up the atmosphere full of moisture, keeping the heat out), it will be many years as government officials work out the "kinks" in the computer. The purpose of this, though, as previously mentioned, is to make a digital universe simulator. It uses planetary and solar power (huge power sources) to keep immense amounts of data flowing (We're talking around 10^68 bytes per second, several quadrillion times the earth's total data capacity at this point in time) so economic and political swings in the future can be predicted. This, of course, would be heavily controlled information, because the minute any of that information gets out, it changes history as predicted (government-sponsored predestination, whaddya know), and they would have to start all over and redefine their initial conditions.

I'm feeding you this information because you saw through my initial front. You were able to quickly denounce what "scientists" have been feeding the general public for years. It became clear to me that if I was going to even begin to clear my conscience of this stuff, I would have to start telling SOMEONE.

PS the rings of saturn... you probably already know about why they're there in the first place (the general public loves saying how it's naturally there, but think about it, how do random objects floating through space make such perfect rings?) That's why the first Saturn pictures were so blurry. This was a tidbit they didn't want people to know about.

screw my financial situation. I already get paid like dirt in this crummy job, and I just end up tabulating in excel 99% of the time anyway. It's the data that passes through my hands that I find to be interesting.

With regards to cigarettes, no I haven't seen anything on that and how it relates to chemtrails. I wouldn't be surprised, but at the same time I wouldn't be quick to attribute it to chemtrails and reactions. For one, a simple forest fire or burning a fire in your backyard, or a car's exhaust, would easily put out the same kind of reaction if cigarettes were a problem.

Jet streams actually do touch the ground, and when they do it usually makes local news (one touched down a few years ago here and it resulted in 100+ mph blowing wind that blew some roof tiling off of some houses), but they don't need to in order for the chemicals to pass. the chemicals (99.9% of them at least) at much heavier than air, and their own warmth (after being released) keeps them around the same "weight" as normal air, so they get carried by the jetstreams until they lose temperature, and start sinking, and fall out of the jet stream. It's a very imprecise measurement right now on how fast to warm the chemicals, how much to use, what kinds of chemicals to use, but many scientists are working on it.

Overall, though, I'll have to look more into cigarettes and their role in all of this. There might be something to it, or it might just be exactly as it seems: politicians just think it's better for our safety to not be at risk. Plus, being anti-cigarette gets the self-righteous voters onboard, making it easier for re-election.

There certainly is something going on in the underpinnings of society to try to overturn it like an old rock, but that doesn't stop the typical things from still happening: ignorant politicians think they know what's best for us so they try to change laws. A lot of the things we hear on the news is exactly as it is reported, but the mass conspiracy under all of this is still happening.

GEO-ENGINEERING OUR NEW PLANETARY HOMES

By craig oxley
20 Jul 2009

[dohtml] [/dohtml]

"We were told that Project Lucifer was in order to starve off global cooling which would last for at least fifty years or more. We're entering into right now a period of global cooling and solar minimum. Many claim a Saturn Sun would not have the power to heat up this planet. Now then what would you do when this planet was in warming for instance? The next problem would then of course be having a second heat source would cripple the Earth further right? This Project Lucifer isn't actually to promote a form of heating energy for Planet Earth. The whole idea of this detonation is to create solar orbs for new civilisations. Right now their geo-engineering the moons of both Jupiter and Saturn the two main Gods worshipped today and right this minute. They need solar sources for these regions to sustain life and human beings. This is why their trying to ignite both of these planets as we're to expand out of this planet further into this and other solar systems.

This is evidenced in the social-engineering of us all via Orsini's, Hollywood of course. Just look at all these films out there like 'Total Recall'. Its claimed that since 1966 the black operation projects have been geo-engineering the planet Mars and without us knowing anything whatsoever. Current Earth overt elementary science and so forth couldn't account for how we got there but covert science and materials can and do. Evidenced by so much material being manufactured in space in order to produce material which cuts drag out in water etc by creating barriers between water and the ship itself. The same with these stealth bomber type aircrafts and more advanced systems.

[dohtml] [/dohtml]

So 2010 is the time for the real push for the destruction of the planets in order to form Suns which will start with the planet Saturn if successful, the great 'Lord of the Rings'. Creating a great big firey eye in the sky just as Orsini's, Hollywood showed you in those films. This will bring about a new following on Earth of the anti-Christos as El is awakened and worshipped openly as the Earth's second Sun within a one World pagan religion. Lets not forget how Luke 'Sun' Skywalker stands in the openess and we see the two suns over the horizon. All of course in the cult Knights Templar movie known as 'Star Wars'. You should also read the book '2010 Odyssey Two' by Arthur C. Clarke or the film '2010' based upon the novel."

Question here: How can we get to Mars if we can't even get to the moon because of the Van Allen belts? Did they find a way past it?

Jefferson Smith - July 20, 2009 02:53 AM (GMT)

It can either be 1. Symbolic(freemason/nazi/jesuit run NASA) 2. Demonic/witchcraft "signs and wonders" or 3. They really have technology to reach other planets

This radiation thing is pretty interesting. "Padre" Pio had a "vision" that near the end of times their will be a giant flash of some sort, many people will die and their won't be any light for three days.

Insurgent - July 20, 2009 05:30 AM (GMT)

Isn't it something that we are a year away from this supposed Saturn blow up and 3 away fro 2012. How bout it.....

craig-oxley - July 20, 2009 02:08 PM (GMT)

Alexander from a overt space program point of view and overt element science we couldn't get past the belts. But theres the covert side of both which has been going on for a long time. The materials being used now can easily get by the challenges of old. Study the work of Phil Schneider and all his material knowledge. Note how when they killed him they only took the materials and left everything else about. The usual problem would be the time to take getting to these planets but if you can bend time as such then that is removed. Exotic elements are utilised in this type of field.

Karl - July 20, 2009 05:18 PM (GMT)

An eye appearing in the sky you say? That is exactly what I believed would happen when the Age of Aquarius would take over, as a devoted New Age follower. I believed it would be the eye of whatever god it was that created the universe.

Comet smashes hole in Jupiter the size of Earth... and is spotted by amateur stargazer

By Daily Mail Reporter
Last updated at 11:24 AM on 21st July 2009
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/art...met-strike.html

An amateur astronomer has discovered a hole in Jupiter the size of Earth, after the planet was apparently hit by a comet.

Australian Anthony Wesley was using a home-made telescope in the yard of his rural home in Murrumbateman, near Canberra, when he spotted a dark scar had suddenly appeared on the side of Jupiter at 1am yesterday morning.

Scientists at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California then gathered evidence of an impact, possibly from a comet strike, using images from the infrared telescope in Hawaii.

Mr Wesley said that he had discovered the scar in between running inside to watch the final rounds of the British Open golf on television.

'About 11pm I went inside to have a break and watch the golf, and by the time I came back out at about 1am the impact point had rotated around into view,' he told The Times.

'I couldn't believe it. I thought "That wasn't there before" and then I realised Jupiter had actually been hit by something.'

The 44-year-old IT consultant, who spends 20 hours a week watching the planet, immediately notified NASA of his discovery.

The agency's scientists then used infrared images to identify the likely impact point as near the south polar region

Bright upwelling particles in the upper atmosphere were detected in near-infrared wavelengths, while a warming of the upper troposphere with possible extra emission from ammonia gas was detected at mid-infrared wavelengths.

'We were extremely lucky to be seeing Jupiter at exactly the right time, the right hour, the right side of Jupiter to witness the event. We couldn't have planned it better,' said scientist Glenn Orton, praising Mr Wesley.

The suspected strike comes on the 15th anniversary of another comet strike.

In 1994, Jupiter was bombarded by pieces of the comet Shoemaker-Levy 9.

JUPITER UPDATE: Something interesting is happening to the dark impact mark on Jupiter. Not only is it growing larger, but also "it seems to be developing two lobes," says amateur astronomer Mike Hood, who sends this July 28th picture from Kathleen, Georgia:

The same result has been obtained by astrophotographer Raffaello Lena of Rome, Italy. "On July 27th, the Jupiter impact site has evolved and now contained two condensed nucleii," he says.

These changes are surely caused by dynamics in Jupiter's upper atmosphere. High-resolution images from the Hubble Space Telescope show that the impact cloud is being molded by high-altitude winds and turbulence. On a planet where vortices are ubiquitous, perhaps it is no surprise that a cloud would organize itself into two or more swirling spots.

Amateur astronomers are encouraged to continue their monitoring: sky map. The cloud is located near Jupiter's System II longitude 210°. For the predicted times when it will cross the planet's central meridian, add 2 hours and 6 minutes to Sky and Telescope's predicted transit times for Jupiter's Great Red Spot.

http://www.theforbiddenknowledge.com/hardt..._antichrist.htm

The following article is part of a series of articles relating to an Illuminati plan to ignite Jupiter as a "sign in the heavens" that will herald the coming of the New Age Christ [Antichrist]. You should read all related articles to get the full picture and understand why we reported it.

In the first article NEWS1260, posted mid-March, 1999, Cutting Edge made public the Illuminati plan to set Jupiter on fire and reveal Antichrist precisely 13 weeks later. We did our scientific homework, showing that this feat was impossible according to the scientific community. We specifically concluded that, if Jupiter was going to be ignited, God would have to allow Satan to ignite it by supernatural power.

We also did our homework to verify the importance of the dates and positions of the planets, as the Illuminati planned to use these positions at these dates. . Although we were skeptical, we know that Bible prophecy foretells of signs in the Sun, Moon and stars and that the Antichrist will have awesome supernatural powers.

We know that we cannot count on the word or plans of the illuminati; however, we do know that we can count on the word of God. If there were any chance that this feat could be accomplished, we wanted to make sure that our readers would know that it was not a sign of the second coming and be deceived into thinking the Antichrist was God. It would have been foolish and irresponsible for us to keep silent on the matter.

After publication of the first article we began to get many new opinions from scientists that Jupiter could actually be ignited, as well as many confirming that we were right and Jupiter could not be ignited. We also began to get new possible dates for the event from former occultists. Then President Clinton made a statement about something that would light up the sky on new years eve which we wrote about in NEWS1331.

Prior to the December 6th, 1999, date we published another article on December 3, NEWS1338 , reminding our readers that we were skeptical of the Jupiter plan. Then, shortly after the December date passed, we published an article about the failure of the illuminati to pull it offNEWS1340, "Illuminati Fails To Illumine".

Since that time we have heard new proposed dates.

However, having said all this, we believe the plan to ignite Jupiter into a second Sun in our sky will occur, but according to God's timing, not Satan's. God is in control of the timing of the entire Tribulation Period. On several occasions, the Illuminati wanted to bring in their coveted New World Order, but could not, because of God's restraints. But, when the timing comes to ignite Jupiter, and you see a new Sun in our sky, you will have been forewarned that this new Sun is of Satan, not God. You will also know to expect the soon appearance of Antichrist. What is that old adage? "To be forewarned is to be forearmed."

It is interesting that as all of this timing of Jupiter was going on, a plan was made public that the great pyramid was going to be capped on New Years Eve. When the plan became public, the Egyptian government appeared to cave in to public pressure and cancelled the plan. Was it a cave in to public pressure or was it postponed because Jupiter did not ignite on December 6, 1999? The Cutting Edge Webmaster heard an MSNBC report on New Years eve that the Pyramid was going to be capped, but we have found not evidence that it was. When the pyramid is capped, the symbolism the Illuminati is flashing to the world that Lucifer has come to earth to reign and to rule. It means that Antichrist is soon to appear.

We want to make sure that when the Illuminati does cap the pyramid, our readers know exactly what is going on and what to expect. It is foolish indeed to be uninformed and unprepared.

At this time we have seen that the Illuminati has not been able to ignite Jupiter on either the Dec 6th or Dec. 31 dates and we are hearing new dates. We cannot be sure whether they tried and failed or whether the whole plan has been rescheduled. We remain skeptical. But we feel that it is better to be informed and prepared than surprised and unprepared.

The Cutting Edge Ministries has been given the detailed timetable of the Illuminati to produce Antichrist. This timetable was determined by occult witchcraft almost 50 years ago, after the technology of atomic weaponry was fully understood. In this article, we shall show you how the powerful witches of the Illuminati arrived at this timetable, complete with charts and pictures. The source for this timetable must remain unknown, but we do believe the accuracy of both the source and the information.

BIBLE PROPHECY CONCERNING TIMING OF ANTICHRIST'S APPEARANCE

First, let us examine Biblical prophecy to see if God has foretold whether man can know the exact date of the appearance of Antichrist. Most Christians are familiar with Jesus' statement that no man could know the timing of His return for His church, and vaguely feel this prohibition applies equally to the timing of Antichrist's appearance. Let us open our Scriptures.

1) Timing of the Rapture For His Church -- "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." [Matthew 24:36-37] In Chapter 24 of Matthew, Jesus told His disciples of all the "Signs" by which people living in the End of the Age might know that the time of His return was close. A little earlier, Jesus told them boldly, "Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors." [Matthew 24:32-33]

Therefore, we know that the people living in the End of the Age can know the approximate time of Jesus' return for His Church in the Rapture, but we will never be able to know the exact "day and hour". Since Israel came back to her land on May 15, 1948, the End of the Age has been officially in progress. We know that "this generation shall not pass away" [verse 34] until Jesus returns for His Church.

We also know that Matthew 24:36-37 cannot be speaking of the time Jesus returns after the 7-year Tribulation Period has ended. Why? Because God has been very specific about the length of this period; it will be exactly 7 Jewish years long, or 2,520 days [7 years x 360 days in a Jewish year]. The beginning point of this 2,520 year period will be when Antichrist "confirms the covenant" with Jewish religious and secular leaders as foretold in Daniel 9:27. Parallel periods of specific time are also foretold in Daniel 12:11-12 and Revelation 11:2-3 and 13:5. People living in this Tribulation Period will be able to know with mathematical certainty the very day Jesus is returning to Earth to defeat Antichrist and set up His Millennial Kingdom. Therefore, Jesus must be speaking of the Rapture of the Church in Matthew 24:36-37.

2) Timing of the Appearance of Antichrist -- 2 Thessalonians 2:1-8 gives us some tantalizing clues concerning the timing of Antichrist. Let us examine this prophecy in its natural divisions. a) In verses 1-2 we see that the people of Paul's day were expecting Antichrist and the Tribulation Period right then; in fact, some of the people had been convinced by false teachers that they were already in that Tribulation Period. 2) In verse 3, Paul tells them this view is false, that Antichrist cannot arise until the "falling away" [apostasy] comes first. Once this apostasy comes, then Antichrist can arise. The word used for "falling away" is the Greek word, "apostasia", which has two meanings: first, it can mean the drifting away of belief formerly held; secondly, it can mean a sudden departure of something. Many scholars believe this passage means both a drifting away by many in the Church who formerly held firm doctrinal position AND the Rapture of the Church.

In Verses 4-5, Paul tells the people of Thessalonica that Antichrist will fulfill the prophecy in Daniel 11:36-37, of profaning the Holy of Holies because of his supernatural arrogance and pride.

Verse 6-8 deserves our detailed examination, because therein hold the clues to solve the question as to whether Christians in the End of the Age can know the specific date of Antichrist's appearance. "And now you know what is restraining him from being revealed at this time; it is so that he may be manifested (revealed) in his own appointed time." [vs 6] Now we know God has set an "appointed time" for Antichrist to arise; verse 3 tells us that he will arise when church people have departed from the firm, Absolute faith and underlying doctrine they have always held in previous generations, and maybe, just maybe, after the Church has been Raptured. Let us continue:

"For the mystery of lawlessness (that hidden principle of rebellion against constituted authority) is already at work in the world, but it is restrained only until he who restrains is taken out of the way." [verse 7] Bible scholars know that the power to restrain evil in both individuals and nations is exercised by the Holy Spirit. Therefore, we can know for certain that the restraining power of the Holy Spirit is going to be withdrawn enough to allow Antichrist to arise; some Bible scholars hold that, since the Holy Spirit indwells each believer, this verse is also foretelling that the Rapture of the Church must occur before Antichrist can arise.

However, the key ingredient we need to grasp in this verse is that the Antichrist will appear only after "he who restrains is taken out of the way". Notice the interesting use of words, "taken out of the way". God is not saying the Holy Spirit will leave the world; rather, He is saying the Holy Spirit will be taken out of the way of Antichrist. Once the Holy Spirit allows Satan full access to his goal of world domination and worship, Antichrist will arise. The Holy Spirit will still be in the world convicting men and women of sin, but no longer will He stand in the way of Satan fulfilling all prophecies spoken of him.

Verse 8 then sums this matter up, when it says, "And then the lawless one (the antichrist) will be revealed ..." [NOTE: All Scripture quoted above was taken from the Parallel Bible, KJV/Amplified Bible Commentary .]

Not once in the entire Bible are we told that we cannot know the specific plan of Satan and his human agents as to the date(s) by which Antichrist is to be revealed. Since May 1, 1776, the Masters of the Illuminati has been the leading force driving the world to the Kingdom of Antichrist -- the New World Order. Since 1782, Freemasonry has cooperated with the Illuminati in all leadership functions. And, from 1776, the demonic Guiding Spirits have been telling their human hosts that the New World Order would occur in the year 2000 A.D.

Our source has told us that the specific plan was formulated almost 50 years ago. The appearance of Antichrist is planned to be a two-stage affair, and will evidently include all the "lying signs and wonders" of which the Bible speaks so eloquently. Let us now examine this plan, and the occult and astrological planning behind it. We will first give the basic dates and then come back to explain them in detail.

ILLUMINIST PLAN TO PRODUCE ANTICHRIST

I) December 6, 1999 -- The sky will suddenly light up with a new bright Star, as Jupiter explodes into flame, creating a bright star in our sky. The world will be thrown into confusion, and a babble of voices will wonder what this new, bright star might foretell. The Mass Media will play heavily on the religious theme that many in the world believe this incredible phenomenon is a portent that a Messiah figure is soon to arise. We will discuss this planned lighting of Jupiter later.

II) March 6, 2000 -- Antichrist arises to an expectant world, exhibiting his many occult "lying signs and wonders" to convince people he is Messiah. To the Jew, he will claim to be their Messiah, for whom they have long been waiting, even to the point of demonstrating his unbroken lineage back to King David; to the Christian, he will claim to be Jesus Christ returned; to the Mohammedan, he will claim to be Mohammed returned, an event for which they are awaiting; to the Buddhist, he will claim to be Buddha returned; to every religious group on earth who is expecting a Messiah figure, he will claim to be that man. If New World Order author and leader, Peter Lemesurier, is on target in his book, Armageddon Script , Antichrist will arise East of Jerusalem riding a donkey, recreating Jesus' Palm Sunday ride. Lemesurier says that all groups of the world will accept The Christ's outlandish claims solely on the basis of his even more outlandish signs and miracles, except for Born Again Christians and Orthodox Jews. To persuade these two groups, Antichrist will deliberately set out to "fulfill" each of the Messianic prophecies and expectations.

EXPLANATIONS OF THESE DATES

December 6, 1999 was carefully chosen because of several occult factors.

1) This date produces two (2) sets of '666' . Remember, occultists believe that numbers have inherent power, either to support your plan of action, or to oppose it. They believe a good plan can be unsuccessful simply and only because it was implemented on date(s) which did not add up to the right numbers. Since this date is in December, the 12th month, and because 12 is 6 + 6, the month itself provides two (2) 6's. Then, the day of the month provides the third 6 to produce a '666'. The second set of 666, is provided by the three (3) nines in the year, 1999. Satanists have always viewed a 9 simply as an upside down 6; therefore, the last three digits of the year provide the second set of '666'.

The Moon is in the right phase. In NEWS1257 , "Clinton Sought Voodoo Ceremony", we explained the occult belief in the importance of the phase of the Moon. When a witch wants to perform a "good, positive" spell or event, he or she will carry this event out during a Full phase or nearly full phase of the Moon. However, when the witch wants to perform an "evil, negative" spell or event, he will carry this event out during an Empty, or nearly empty, phase of the Moon. As you can see from the above Moon Phase Chart for December 6, 1999, the Moon is nearly empty. In fact, December 6 is only one day before the absolutely empty New Moon.

3) This new star will occur during the time period leading up to Christmas , possibly enabling the Illuminati to stage one of the largest stage productions ever in conjunction with the annual celebration of the Christ Child. As part of this star lighting up, a recreation of the trip of the Magi 2,000 years ago may be reenacted. Just as these new "Magi" are within a matter of days of reaching Bethlehem, this star may suddenly appear in the sky. Listen to the words of apostate author and leader, Jay Gary, writing in his book, The Star of 2000 . "Now as we approach A.D. 2000, the spiritual journey of the wise men could be reenacted before our eyes ... with horses and camels over the original Middle East route." [p. 23-4]

March 6, 2000 was chosen for the appearance of Antichrist because of several occult factors.

1) This date is precisely 13 weeks after an extremely bright star had been created by the lighting of Jupiter . The number 13 is an extremely important number to the occultist. The occult gematria of numbers lists Number 13 as meaning, "Depravity and Rebellion" [Doc Marquis, Former Illuminist Witch]. The Bible confirms this meaning of the number 13. Remember, Illuminists plan to bring about the New World Order by utilizing the most depraved and blackest of all Black Magick witchcraft, so this time period between the advent of the Jupiter Star and the appearance of Antichrist fits perfectly. [See the I WITCH symbol below]

2) The Moon Phase is absolutely correct. Once again, when you check March 6, you will see that the moon is the blackest possible, i.e., the New Moon. Since the appearance of Antichrist is going to be the blackest day in human history, we find it only fitting that the Moon Phase would be the blackest possible. This date may very well see the most powerful Black Magick witchcraft in world history, as the Man of Perdition appears.

The planets in our Solar System are lined up in a favorable way according to occult Astrology . Satanists are huge believers in Astrology. They would never think of staging the appearance of their beloved Antichrist unless the Astrological signs are most favorable. This lineup is most favorable. We checked the lineup of the planets in our Solar System on December 6, 1999, and found no discernable lineup; but there is a significant lineup on March 6, 2000. When you look at this chart, bear in mind that this astronomy program which we used [Celestron, The Sky, on CD-ROM] views everything from planet Earth. Therefore, you will not see Earth in this lineup; however, the Earth is right next to the Moon in this chart, making it fall right into line with the rest of the planets, and the Sun.

Beginning in January, 2000, the universe continues to exit the Zodiac House of Pisces and will begin entering into the House of Aquarius. This lineup of 8 planets [Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Earth, Mercury, Venus, Uranus, and Neptune] is called a Grand Alignment in Astrology. This Grand Alignment will be the first to occur in this new House of Aquarius, making it a most propitious event, the kind of event like staging the Christ of the Age of Aquarius! Astrologers view the House of Pisces as a "spiritual" house, which has been dominated by Christianity; however, they view the House of Aquarius as an occult house, where all the values and attitudes are opposite. Thus, this lineup on March 6, 2000, is perfect for the most dramatic change in values and attitudes imaginable on Earth, i.e., the staging of the New Age Christ!

HOW DO OCCULTISTS EXPLAIN JUPITER IGNITING INTO A STAR?

New Age author, Bill Cooper, explains this plan the best in his book, Behold A Pale Horse , so we will quote him.

"According to many, the great pyramids were built to commemorate and observe a supernova explosion that occurred in the year 40000 B.C. Dr. Anthony Hewish, 1974 Nobel Prize winner in physics, discovered a rhythmic series of radio pulses which he proved were emissions from a star that had exploded around 4000 B.C. The Freemasons begin their calendar from A.L. In the Year of [Lucis], ... by adding 4000 to the modern year. Thus, 1990 + 4000 = 5990 A.L. George Michanowsky wrote in< EM > The Once and Future Star that, 'The ancient Sumerian cuneiform ... described a giant star exploding within a triangle formed by ... Zeta Puppis, Gamma Velorum, and Lambda Velorum ... located in the southern sky ... An accurate star catalogue now stated that the blazing star that had exploded within the triangle would again be seen by man in 6000 years'. According to the Freemason's calendar, it [this exploding star] will occur in the year 2000, and indeed, it will."

"The spacecraft Galileo is on its way to Jupiter, a baby star with a gaseous makeup exactly the same as our sun, with a load of 49.7 pounds of plutonium, supposedly being used as batteries to power the craft. When its final orbit decays in December, 1999, Galileo will deliver its payload into the center of Jupiter. The unbelievable pressure that will be encountered will cause a reaction exactly as occurs when an atomic bomb is exploded by an implosion detonator. The plutonium will explode in an atomic reaction, lighting the hydrogen and helium atmosphere of Jupiter and resulting in the birth of the star that has already been named LUCIFER ... documents I read while in Naval Intelligence stated that Project GALILEO required only five pounds of plutonium to ignite Jupiter ..." [Page 72, Emphasis was in the original]

We have been able to substantiate this information from another credible occult source.

While Bill Cooper only stated that Galileo would decay its orbit in December, 1999, our source for the specific date of December 6 has emphatically stated that the orbit will be forced to decay on this specific day, using their small guidance rockets to turn the spacecraft into Jupiter. < P >

JUPITER NOT A PLANET, BUT AN UNLIT GASEOUS BODY

It seems pretty outrageous to think of Jupiter becoming a star. Some investigation of the makeup of Jupiter on some scientific web sites is in order, especially because of Cooper's bold statement that Jupiter has a makeup "exactly" like that of our Sun. Here are a few comments about Jupiter from the NASA web site located at: http://www.jpl.nasa.gov/galileo/Jovian.html#king

"Jupiter contains two-thirds of the planetary mass of the solar system. In composition it resembles a small star. Electrical activity in Jupiter is so strong that it pours billions of watts into Earth's own magnetic field every day. No planet has greater influence on its neighbors. Most of its mass is hydrogen and helium --- it does not burn like the Sun. Models of star formation suggest that Jupiter's mass is only about one-eightieth of the mass needed for ignition, which occurs due to heating from internal gravitational collapse. Jupiter's smaller size leaves its center too cool to ignite."

Here are some comments from (Students for the Exploration and Development of Space) at the University of Arizona. http://seds.lpl.arizona.edu/nineplanets/nineplanets/jupiter.html

"(Jupiter does NOT produce energy by nuclear fusion as in the Sun; it is much too small and hence its interior is too cool to ignite nuclear reactions.) Jupiter is just about as large in diameter as a gas planet can be. If more material were to be added, it would be compressed by gravity such that the overall radius would increase only slightly. A star can be larger only because of its internal (nuclear) heat source. (But Jupiter would have to be at least 80 times more massive to become a star.) "

These comments from NASA, and this astronomy research group, seem to be clear that Jupiter could never ignite on its own. We then posed the following question to the Arizona Space Exploration and Astronomy research group "Could Jupiter be ignited by a huge nuclear device ?" The answer we got back was:

"Jupiter could not be ignited. The central temperature is the determining factor. A self-gravitating mass of hydrogen 20% the size of the Sun, or smaller, does not have a high enough central temperature to induce nuclear fusion. Temperature equates to average kinetic energy of particles; it takes a very high temperature to get even a small fraction of hydrogen ions to overcome their electrical repulsion and fuse." [Guy Smiley dated 2/2/99]

We were still not sure exactly why Jupiter could not ignite, especially if it were hit with the huge atomic explosion of 1,750 Megatons, as occult sources are saying will occur when the 49.7 pounds of plutonium in the spacecraft Galileo is turned into the planet on December 6. After all, the largest thermonuclear explosion on earth was the Russian test of only 100 megatons in 1961. The answer we received from a Christian scientist, Dr. Kent Hovind, [www.drdino.com] explained the science to us so we could understand. In the NASA excerpt, quoted above, we learned that "most" of the mass of Jupiter is Hydrogen and Helium, a most explosive mix, if it is mixed with sufficient oxygen in order to burn this mixture. Dr. Hovind says Jupiter does not contain enough oxygen in order to sustain the type of continuous burning that would be needed to produce a star. Now, we understand and now it all makes sense. No matter how large the initial explosion might be, the lack of sufficient quantities of oxygen would snuff out any resulting fire rather quickly.

BUT OCCULTISTS ARE BEING TOLD JUPITER WILL LIGHT AS A STAR

Yet, the Guiding Spirits of key occult leaders are adamantly saying that, when this nuclear payload of Galileo explodes with 1,750 megatons of force, Jupiter will light up. We have too much respect for the power of Satan to discount this story completely, especially we are dealing with the subject that most interests Satan, i.e., the staging of his man, Antichrist. Plus, we have been noting, for almost a decade now, that the signs God has given by which believers would know that the End of the Age is close are all now occurring. Even Israel has been back in her land for a generation now. This time seems to be God's timing also.

We go back to the fundamental meaning behind this symbol depicting the forces that will produce Antichrist and his global New World Order. From the beginning, in 1776, the occult leaders of the New World Order Plan realized that the only way in which they could achieve their final victory was if they accessed the "Dark Side" of the "Force". In other words, the only way in which this plan could achieve victory is by the utilization of the most powerful witchcraft in world history. This is the fundamental meaning behind the words, I WITCH in this symbol.

Therefore, we can only conclude that, if Jupiter does light up on December 6, 1999, in order to begin deceiving the peoples of the world, and to begin preparing them to accept Antichrist, it must light up by Satan employing the greatest supernatural witchcraft power the world has ever seen. Of course, for him to do this would mean that God has stepped aside to let him do it. But, the Bible clearly says that God will do just that at the End of the Age. Listen:

"And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword." [Revelation 6:4]

"And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill ..." [Revelation 6:8]

"And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power ..." [Revelation 9:3]

"... and the dragon gave him his power , and his seat, and great authority." [Revelation 13:2, speaking of Antichrist]

"And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast ..." [Revelation 13:4]

"And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months." [Revelation 13:5]

"... power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." [Revelation 13:7]

"... And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast ..." [Revelation 13:15]

"And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast." [Revelation 17:12]

On these nine occasions, God stated boldly that He was going to give Satan and his man, Antichrist, power for a very short time that would allow them to do certain things on earth that they have never been able to do in the past. God has the power, and He gives it to them during this time period, so that wicked men might be deceived into following their hero, Antichrist. Once again, we take you back to the specific words of Paul in 2 Thessalonians 2, quoted above. The Antichrist can only arise when the traditional restraining power of the Holy Spirit is "taken out of the way ". This incident may be one of the major instances where God no longer stands in the way of Satan. Satan might supernaturally cause oxygen to appear in Jupiter, or he might even cause Jupiter to light up with a star using techniques not known to man.

SATAN'S POWER ASSUMED

Therefore, if Jupiter is going to light up like a star on December 6, 1999, Satan must supernaturally intervene. Let us assume, for the sake of argument, that Satan is able to light Jupiter up so it would burn as a star on this night. Is the position of Jupiter on December 6, 1999, so perfectly placed that it could be construed by people on earth as being another Messiah Star , that could portend the soon appearance of another Messiah?

Where will Jupiter appear in the sky on December 6th? How would it move for someone traveling to Israel from the east as the Magi did, and this new group with this Magi project will do? It is very easy to determine this with some great shareware from Cybersky. http://www.cybersky.com/ You can download this software and see this animation for yourself by setting the date to December 6th, 1999, the orientation to west and the location to Jerusalem.

By sunset Jupiter will be well into the darkening moonless sky. It will be the brightest item in the heavens since the moon and Venus are not visible. By 10 PM Jupiter will be high in the sky, beginning its descent to the West. Someone traveling from the East toward Israel would be seeing Jupiter in a position about the same as someone in Israel. At about 3 am Jupiter will disappear in the west as Venus rises in the East.

Let's talk about brightness just for a minute. Only Venus and the moon outshine Jupiter with reflected light from the sun. With those two planets out of the way on this night, Jupiter is normally the brightest object in the sky all night long and is visible most of the night. A dark desert sky makes it even more impressively bright.

Now let us say that this New World Order planned ignition of Jupiter would succeed. December 6th is already one of the darkest desert nights of the year. Jupiter -- the largest object in our solar system other than the sun on this night, and only reflecting light since creation -- now suddenly explodes with its own light, making it exponentially brighter than it has ever appeared. In a little over 30 minutes, this new light from the new Jupiter Star will be visible on Earth. If the Magi are East of Bethlehem, this Jupiter will appear to be over Bethlehem as it is setting. Can you imagine how the Mass Media will play this event up once they can shoot pictures of this star appearing over Bethlehem? All the technological and movie producing capabilities that Hollywood has honed over the past 5 decades will come into play very strongly at this moment in world history. People will be convinced that this new star WILL portend the soon appearance of a new Messiah.

It doesn't take an astronomer or a physicist to know that this would be the most exciting celestial event in the lifetime of any living human and probably the most exciting in 2000 years.

Let's move ahead 13 weeks to March 6, 2000. The sun will set followed shortly by a dark moon. Jupiter has been brightly shinning in the night sky for 13 weeks and is now setting in the west in the early evening.
THE MAGI REENACTMENT PAGEANT

New Evangelical author, Jay Gary, has written a very interesting book entitled,The Star Of 2000 . Listen to his words describing the purpose of this book. "TheStar Of 2000 is dedicated "to the Magi everywhere who decide to join this journey toward hope... you will...meet various Magi who have seen His star." [Preface] Then, Gary says, "Now as we approach A.D. 2000, the spiritual journey of the wise men could be reenacted before our eyes ... with horses and camels over the original Middle East route." [p. 23-4]

What is Jay Gary talking about here when he states that this book is dedicated to the "Magi everywhere ", and then offers to introduce you to several Magi who have already "seen His star"? The Magi were the occultic followers of Zoroasterism who believed the Hebrew Prophet Daniel was divinely inspired when he wrote the book of Daniel generally and the Messianic 70-Weeks Prophecy of Daniel 9:24-27 specifically. While this subject is most interesting, and most worthy of reading, the scope of this subject is well beyond this article; therefore, we encourage you to click to read the full story of the "Magi 70 Weeks Prophecy".

Briefly stated, these original Magi believed that Daniel's prophecy about the coming Jewish Messiah was divinely inspired, and they knew the world was within a man's lifetime of fulfillment. Remember, after 69 Jewish Weeks of Years [483 Jewish years], this prophecy said that the Jewish Messiah would die. Therefore, these occult Magi were awaiting some sort of heavenly signal, or sign; when the Bethlehem Star appeared, the Magi felt this was the heavenly sign for which they had been long awaiting, and they set forth to visit the newly born Jewish Messiah.

Now, fast-forwarding 2000 years, Jay Gary is saying that we have Magi today that are looking for the appearance of such a star; indeed, Gary says these Magi have already "seen His star". Gary then lists some of these modern-day Magi. He lists prominent evangelical leaders Bill Bright, Chuck Colson, Ralph Winter, John Dawson, David Bryant, Graham Kendrick, Tony Campolo, Karen Mains and Madeline L'Engle. We know Bill Bright to be founder and director ofCampus Crusade for Christ; Chuck Colson headsPrison Fellowship Ministries ; Tony Campolo is President Clinton's "spiritual advisor", and author of the unbiblical book,Partly Right; and Madeline L'Engle is author of a New Age Christian book, entitled,A Wrinkle In Time; David Bryant is part of the Promise Keepers Movement and is founder of the unbiblical Concerts of Prayer; Graham Kendrick is founder of the March For Jesus , whose doctrines are also unbiblical.

You may be familiar with the rest of these evangelical leaders. So far, I am not unduly alarmed at prominent Protestant, Evangelical leaders placing emphasis on the Magi of the Christmas story, even if their ministries hold unbiblical positions.

But, then, I become very much alarmed when Gary then says these evangelical leaders are cooperating with known Luciferian New World Order leaders in this Magi project! Gary lists the following leaders: Robert Muller, Hans Kung, John Naisbitt, Isaac Asimov, Tom Sine Brian Swimme, Thomas Berry and Mahatma Ghandi.

Robert Muller is a self-confessed Luciferian New World Order leader, and a former Assistant Secretary General of the United Nations. Muller is one of the foremost leaders in the New Age/New World Order Movement whose #1 goal is to produce Antichrist so he can rule the newly formed global government. In fact, Muller claims his Guiding Spirit is none other than Master Diwhal Khul [Master D.K.], also referred to as the Tibetan . This demon was the Guiding Spirit of Alice A. Bailey, Director, House of Theosophy, as quoted above. This revelation is really heavy-duty, because such an important and powerful demon would not spend his time with anyone other than a heavy weight world leader.

These other leaders listed after Robert Muller are recognized Luciferians also.

Now, all of a sudden, I am alarmed. Liberal Protestant Evangelical leaders are cooperating with known Luciferians and are describing them as fellow Magi . What is the purpose of this emphasis on the Magi trip at this most important time in world history? When you discover this purpose, you will feel your hair curl.

Jay Gary implies that a reenactment of the march of the Magi will be carried out, probably ending in Bethlehem on December 25, 1999. This reenactment will move by camel along the path believed to be taken by the original Magi 2,000 years ago! The "Magi" on this trip, however, will be comprised of Liberal Protestant leaders and confessed Luciferians!

Can you imagine the excitement of this huge play? These "Magi" might start out on their trip, claiming they are moved by great "Faith" and by their love of mankind to reenact the trip of the Magi to the scene of the birth of the Christ Child. They would have been on this dusty, rough road for approximately 3 1/2 months, when, suddenly, the sky is lit up by the "surprise" new star! How "shocked" everyone will be, for this new star in the heavens will be proclaimed by these Magi as a sign that they are doing the right thing, and that a new Messiah is surely to come as a result of this new sign.

The Liberal Mass Media will do their part in beating the drums of the expectancy generated by the appearance of this new star. In NEWS1255 , "Millennium Fever A Hoax Against Christians", we demonstrated that the only groups expecting some big religious and/or Messianic event to occur in the Year 2000 were the New World Order and New Age groups, and Apostate, Liberal Christians. All Fundamental Christians who believe their Bible and who are familiar with prophecy will know to shy away from dates because Jesus told us we would not know the date of His Second Coming. The Media is already hyping Messianic expectations in the Year 2000; can you imagine the wall-to-wall, saturation coverage of this new star, and the enormous outpouring of Messianic expectations from religious groups all over the world?

Truly, Peter Lemesurier is right, when he says in his book, Armageddon Script , that this whole staging of Antichrist will be the greatest play ever. Listen to his words, by which his book is concluded: "Their script is now written, subject only to last-minute editing and stage-directions. The stage itself, albeit as yet in darkness, is almost ready. Down in the pit, the subterranean orchestra is already tuning up. The last-minute, walk-on parts are even now being filled. Most of the main actors, one suspects, have already taken up their roles. Soon it will be time for them to come on stage, ready for the curtain to rise. The time for action will have come." [page 253, published in 1981].

This Magi Play will be the most dramatic play in world history, as it will tie in beautifully with the planned ignition of Jupiter into a star. For 13 weeks, the world will be increasingly anxious about the Messianic expectations generated by the appearance of this new star. At the "appointed time", Antichrist will arise -- March 6, 2000.

HORRIBLE EVENTS PLANNED DURING THIS 13 WEEKS

You must also know that the building expectations about the new star will not be the only thing occurring during this 13-week time period. In past articles, we have written about the many simultaneous planned crises that are designed to so panic the peoples of the world that they will embrace Antichrist when he arises, and be willing to give up their freedoms if he can just return the world to "peace and safety". We have listed the following planned crises, in which many people will die and all people will be scared right out of their skin.

* Third World War started in the Middle East between Israel and her immediate Arab neighbors. This war would fulfill Albert Pike's demonic vision of 1870 as to how to produce Antichrist and Biblical prophecy, most notably in Obadiah. [SeeNEWS1015,1056, and1057 for full details]

* Planned nuclear war, or threat of same, on the Korean Peninsula [SeeNEWS1074 for full details]

* Terrorism in our cities, possibly using atomic bombs [See above articles]

* Economic Meltdown, with most people thinking we are heading into another Great Depression

* Riots in the cities, with the Religious and Patriotic Right being blamed

In short, we believe this 13-week period between the lighting of Jupiter to produce a Messianic Star and the time Antichrist actually arises will be the most frightening period in world history . This may be the time of which Jesus foretold, a time when "men's hearts fail them for fear", [Luke 21:26] or at least the first instance of such fear.

When Antichrist does arise, he will not only be displaying magnificent occult power with signs and wonders that will convince the people he is Messiah, but the leaders of the world who have instigated all the "crises" we have described above, will just as quickly stop these crises. And the peoples of the world will give Antichrist credit; they will believe that, at long last, the world can have "peace and safety" [1 Thessalonians 5:1-3]

Remember one final thing: the 10 Illuminist leaders of this world are acting in conjunction to produce these planned crises so everyone will be so scared they will embrace Antichrist. These leaders command the armies, navies, air forces, and space exploration organizations of the world; they have at their disposal all types of armaments, including nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons. This plan is theirs,and they will carry it out unless God Almighty stops them; but, the signs are all here that this is also God's time to allow these things to occur.

However, remember that Satan can only accomplish this feat if God allows him to do it. Let us review our earlier segment concerning the End of the Age Biblical prophecy that God will step aside and give Satan power to do things that mankind has never seen before.

"POWER WAS GIVEN"

"And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword." [Revelation 6:4]

"And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill ..." [Revelation 6:8]

"And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power ..." [Revelation 9:3]

"... and the dragon gave him his power , and his seat, and great authority." [Revelation 13:2, speaking of Antichrist]

"And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast ..." [Revelation 13:4]

"And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months." [Revelation 13:5]

"... power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations." [Revelation 13:7]

"... And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast ..." [Revelation 13:15]

"And the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast." [Revelation 17:12]

On these nine occasions, God stated boldly that He was going to give Satan and his man, Antichrist, power for a very short time that would allow them to do certain things on earth that they have never been able to do in the past. God has the power, and He gives it to them during this time period, so that wicked men might be deceived into following their hero, Antichrist. Once again, we take you back to the specific words of Paul in 2 Thessalonians 2, quoted above. The Antichrist can only arise when the traditional restraining power of the Holy Spirit is "taken out of the way ". This incident may be one of the major instances where God no longer stands in the way of Satan. Satan might supernaturally cause oxygen to appear in Jupiter, or he might even cause Jupiter to light up with a star using techniques not known to man.

Truly, the End of the Age is upon us. Are you spiritually ready? Is your family? Are you adequately protecting your loved ones? This is the reason for this ministry, to enable you to first understand the peril facing you, and then help you develop strategies to warn and protect your loved ones. Once you have been thoroughly trained, you can also use your knowledge as a means to open the door of discussion with an unsaved person. I have been able to use it many times, and have seen people come to Jesus Christ as a result. These perilous times are also a time when we can reach many souls for Jesus Christ, making an eternal difference.

If you have accepted Jesus Christ as your personal Savior, but have been very lukewarm in your spiritual walk with Him, you need to immediately ask Him for forgiveness and for renewal. He will instantly forgive you, and fill your heart with the joy of the Holy Spirit. Then, you need to begin a daily walk of prayer and personal Bible Study.

If you have never accepted Jesus Christ as Savior, but have come to realize His reality and the approaching End of the Age, and want to accept His FREE Gift of Eternal Life, you can also do so now, in the privacy of your home. Once you accept Him as Savior, you are spiritually Born Again, and are as assured of Heaven as if you were already there. Then, you can rest assured that the Kingdom of Antichrist will not touch you spiritually.

If you would like to become Born Again, turn to our Salvation Page now.

> We hope you have been blessed by this ministry, which seeks to educate and warn people, so that they can see the coming New World Order -- Kingdom of Antichrist -- in their daily news.

Finally, we would love to hear from you. You can write us at:

So what will happen if their turned into Suns? Will they still stop comets by burning them out or? That would play nice with the threat from outer space as the Iron Mountain Report detailed. By the way it was an advanced race which destroyed the Dinosaurs not some bloody meteor nonsense. -Craig

Guardian planets Jupiter and Saturn shield the Earth from catastrophic comet collisions

Jupiter and Saturn have protected life on Earth for hundreds of millions of years by shielding us from comets.

Many large comets hurtling towards Earth all the way from the edge of the Solar System have been batted away by the two gas giants, preserving life as we know it.

The guardian planets effectively act as the planet's bouncers, research has shown.
Enlarge

Most scientists agree that a catastrophic asteroid collision 65 million years ago wiped out the dinosaurs.

But the new research suggests few, if any, mass extinctions have been caused by the 'long-period' comets that take from 200 to tens of millions of years to orbit the Sun.

Previously it was thought that long-period comets, originating from a mysterious region called the 'Oort Cloud', occasionally destroyed life on Earth.

Astronomers know that Jupiter and Saturn's gravitational fields can eject comets into interstellar space, or draw them in so that they crash into the giant planets.

Last week a huge scar appeared on Jupiter's surface, thought to be caused by a comet impact.

The new study suggests we may owe the guardian planets more than we think.

Computer models simulating comet evolution in the Solar System for 1.2 billion years showed that the Oort Cloud was a bigger danger than previously realised.

Even outside active periods of comet showers, triggered by the close passage of a star, the inner Oort Cloud was a major source of threatening long-period comets.

The Cloud is a region of icy dust and debris left over from the birth of the Solar System. It starts from a point about 93 billion miles from the Sun and stretches for around three light years.

Scientists believe the Oort Cloud could contain billions of comets, most of them small and hidden.

About 3,200 long-period comets are known, one of the most famous being Hale-Bopp which was visible to even the naked eye during 1996 and 1997. Halley's Comet, which reappears about every 75 years, is a 'short-period' comet from a different part of the Solar System called the Kuiper Belt.

Evolution rethink: An asteroid collision is widely believed to have wiped out the dinosaurs. But the latest research suggests comets are not responsible for many mass extinctions.

The computer simulations showed that no more than two or three comets from the Oort Cloud could have struck the Earth during what is believed to have been the most powerful comet shower of the last 500 million years.

One minor extinction event 40 million years ago was probably caused by an unusually intense burst of comets that slipped past Jupiter and Saturn.

Astronomer Nathan Kaib, from the University of Washington, who led the study, said: 'That tells you that the most powerful comet showers caused minor extinctions and other showers should have been less severe, so comet showers are probably not likely causes of mass extinction events.'

It was clear the Earth had benefited from Jupiter and Saturn standing guard like giant 'catchers mitts', deflecting or absorbing comets that might otherwise strike the Earth.

'We show that Jupiter and Saturn are not perfect, and some of the comets from the inner Oort Cloud are able to break through, but most don't,' said Mr Kaib.

The research appears today in the online edition of the journal Science.

Revelations In Saturn's Rings Continue As Equinox Approaches

http://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2009/...90810034048.htm

ScienceDaily (Aug. 10, 2009) — Thanks to a special play of sunlight and shadow as Saturn continues its march towards its August 11 equinox, recent images captured by NASA's Cassini spacecraft are revealing new three-dimensional objects and structures in the planet's otherwise flat rings.

The Cassini spacecraft captured this image of a small object in the outer portion of Saturn's B ring casting a shadow on the rings as Saturn approaches its August 2009 equinox.

This new moonlet, situated about 300 miles (480 kilometers), inward from the outer edge of the B ring, was found by detection of its shadow which stretches 25 miles, or 41 kilometers, across the rings. The shadow length implies the moonlet is protruding about 660 feet, or 200 meters, above the ring plane. If the moonlet is orbiting in the same plane as the ring material surrounding it, which is likely, it must be about 1,300 feet, or 400 meters, across.

This object is not attended by a propeller feature, unlike the band of moonlets discovered in Saturn's A ring earlier by Cassini. The A ring moonlets, which have not been directly imaged, were found because of the propeller-like narrow gaps on either side of them that they create as they orbit within the rings. The lack of a propeller feature surrounding the new moonlet is likely because the B ring is dense, and the ring material in a dense ring would be expected to fill in any gaps around the moonlet more quickly than in a less dense region like the mid-A ring. Also, it may simply be harder in the first place for a moonlet to create propeller-like gaps in a dense ring.

The search for three-dimensional structures in Saturn's rings has been a major goal of the imaging team during Cassini's "Equinox Mission," the two-year period containing exact equinox -- that moment when the sun is seen directly overhead at noon at the planet's equator. This novel illumination geometry, which occurs every half-Saturn-year, or about 15 Earth years, lowers the sun's angle to the ring plane and causes out-of-plane structures to cast long shadows across the rings' broad expanse, making them easy to detect.

The new images can be found at http://saturn.jpl.nasa.gov and http://www.nasa.gov/cassini

Remember that Cassini's mission was extended two years to 2010. Therefore expect detonation around and from July. Also forget the Jesuitism propaganda in this film about evolution. Eboard10 - January 30, 2010 11:46 AM (GMT)

I find the idea of transforming Saturn into a star quite irrealistic, no matter the technology that we possess. I think it's part of the disinformation campaign led by the jesuits; there are also many similarities with all the Planet X disinfo. Both theories imply the appearance of a new celestial body in the sky close to Earth around the 2010-2012 period. From the research I've done and looking at cataclysmic events which occurred in the past, I am of the opinion that both theories contain part of the truth.

I am more inclined in believing that we are actually part of a twin-star system, the companion star being a brown dwarf hence not visible to most telescopes (as it's made of dark matter so it doesn't radiate any more light) which passes close to the Sun every ~ 3600 years (see disappearance of South American civilization and of Mammoths due to end of Ice Age! an many others). Hoagland did say that his Hyperdimensional physics shows that there is an object approaching the Solar System which is causing all the storms and heating up of planets.

Then we have the asteroids coming into play, though most people fail to connect the two together. It is very simple to understand; the Solar System is surrounded by the Oort Cloud which is a spherical cloud of comets and where most asteroids come from. When a celestial object, such as a star, enters the Solar System it passes through the cloud attracting to itself many of these comets. The comets are then pushed towards the centre of the system and...well you know the rest. The gravitational force of Saturn and Jupiter wouldn't be enough to stop asteroids entering the inner part of the system because of the star and also because they wouldn't necessarily be on the same side of the orbit around the Sun, if you get what I mean.
Just my opinion though it's just speculation.

SmokeScreen11 - January 30, 2010 03:56 PM (GMT)

I seem to agree with your comment above. Many people are taking stuff to literally that there will be two suns. It may be metaphorical and symbolic. People are chasing some wild and imaginary stuff :) Now some will say there were clues in the movies about 9/11 and it really did happen. But there were many movies made about Alien Invasion, UFOs but those never happened. There were movies about colonizing MARS but that never happened. May be it is all science-fiction after all and people are looking for the new event to take place because they themselves are not satisfied within. To me it seems like a classic propaganda and disinformation campaign. After all people are free to believe whatever they want to believe :)

snooze - January 30, 2010 10:09 PM (GMT)

I still think they will try it not sure if it will work or not but maybe that doesnt matter at the end.Just look at the LHC stuff they want to start that machine in the spring time then you got this in the summer if it even works tho. it could be small chance

Mission has been officially EXTENDED....XXM or Solstice....

This extension, however, ALSO means that the Cassini team is now prepared to END the mission with a Cassini plunge into Saturn as soon as the Equinox mission wraps up in September 2010. They need as little as 2 months to execute the developed plunge plan after that....

This is a change that many have not grasped yet. Cassini WILL NOW PLUNGE INTO SATURN WHILE IN NEAR POLAR ORBIT as predicted, just later than supposed.

Insurgent - February 7, 2010 05:25 AM (GMT)

Ha how bout it.....

Goliathan - February 7, 2010 02:45 PM (GMT)

Well, this means that all that is required to order the only developed plunged scenario, i.e. Cassini plunges into Saturn while in POLAR ORBIT, is for Cassini to have some "malfunction" at which point it will be deemed "Cassini must go in now before we lose control of it...therefore initiate the planned plunge scenario..."

JABBING JUPITER – Testing the Titan

6-16-2010 – August S. France http://members.cox.net/jabbing-jupiter/

The following are six significant events that have occurred on Jupiter in the past 16 years:

1) 1994 – SL-9 and Galileo Imaging of the Event (July 16-22)

2) 1995 – Galileo Atmospheric Entry Probe Insertion (December 7)

3) 2003 – Galileo Plunge and Jupiter “Mystery Mark” (September 21 & October 19)

4) 2009 – Wesley Mark Event (July 19)

5) 2010 – Jupiter Southern Equatorial Belt (SEB) Disappearance (late 2009 to early 2010)

6) 2010 – Wesley/Go Flash Event (June 3)

This paper poses the question, “Are we looking at strictly coincidental and anomalous events here (outside event number 2), or do the evidence and statistical odds actually point to manmade cause and effect for at least some of the above events?”

From a recent report: “Wesley’s Jupiter Mark” of July 19, 2009 (WJM-09), the Case for an Unnatural Event “Evidenced for December 7, 1995, and September 21, 2003, NASA has inserted various sizes of Pu-238/239 Oxide pellets into Jupiter using assorted means.

The following are NASA-admitted instances of this:

December 7, 1995 the Jupiter Atmospheric Entry Probe, which earlier launched from Galileo, impacted Jupiter contained (15) LWRHU’s (Lightweight Radioisotope Heater Units) shielded behind the main probe heat shield and also massively shielded each separately in the manner shown in [Diagram 1].

Diagram 1 - LWRHU

[link to www.animatedsoftware.com]

Each LWRHU contained .006 pounds of Pu-238 Oxide (criticality factor of approximately 5.5 pounds at normal Earth pressure [link to sti.srs.gov]) within the volume of a standard pencil eraser head. This probe entered Jupiter several degrees north of the equator. [link to www.seds.org]

September 21, 2003 Galileo craft plunges into Jupiter containing (144) RHU's (Radioisotope Heater Units) which each contained .333 pounds of Pu-238 Oxide within the volume of a standard golf ball formed to a tight cylinder. In addition Galileo also contained (120) LWRHU's. The craft entered Jupiter at the equator."

http://www.godlikeproductions.com/forum1/message850762/pg1

1) 1994 – SL-9 and Galileo Imaging of the Event (July 16-22)

Strangely coincidentally as NASA's Galileo spacecraft was approaching Jupiter in 1994, Comet Shoemaker-Levy – 9 was suddenly discovered orbiting Jupiter and was said be on course to impact Jupiter on July 16 and other various pieces of it over the next few days. The first collision of two solar system bodies ever to be imaged, it seemed way too much of a stroke of luck. The locations of the impacts on Jupiter varied widely longitudinally, but generally were around 45 south latitude. Galileo, Hubble, and a host of other telescopes continued to image the debris for weeks.

http://www2.jpl.nasa.gov/sl9/

2) 1995 – Galileo Atmospheric Entry Probe Insertion (December 7)

In December of 1995, Galileo arrived at Jupiter on time to release its probe into a trajectory to dive into Jupiter's atmosphere at 6.5 N, 4.5 W (CM3) on December 7th in order to take scientific readings.

http://www.lpi.usra.edu/publications/newsl...b78/gal_78.html

The probe contained 15 LWRHU's. These Light-Weight-Radioisotope Heater Units (Diagram 1) each contained .006 pounds of Plutonium-238 Oxide in pellets the size of a standard pencil eraser head; each rested behind the heat shield of the probe, the shield being used to protect the probe's equipment upon atmospheric entry. It needs saying that the Pu-238 pellets were also protected by this heat shield in addition to each pellet individually having a sturdy multilayered shield. The advertised intent of the LWRHU's was for minor heating of the probe's equipment.

There are 6 layers of protection tightly surrounding one of these plutonium pellets, 1/2" aero-heat shield, 7/16" total of graphite-carbon insulators (4 insulators = 7/16" total), and .04" thick Rhodium-Platinum alloy. Inside sits the Pu-Oxide (Pu-238/239 and other Pu isotopes plus a small amount of Oxygen) of .006 pounds.

Diagram 2

Galileo Atmospheric Entry Probe

http://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/comm...be_diagram.jpeg

3) 2003 – Galileo Plunge and Jupiter Mystery Mark (September 21 & October 19)

The actual orbiting craft of Galileo made a plunge into the equator of Jupiter to end its mission on September 21, 2003. Less than 28 days later on October 19, 2003, Jupiter was sporting a large black “mystery spot” the size of Earth very near its equator and near the entry location of Galileo. The entry point was approx. 0, 230 (CM1), and the mark surfaced at approx. 7, 285 (CM1).

http://www2.jpl.nasa.gov/galileo/countdown...ter_impact3.mpg http://www.space.com/scienceastronomy/jupi...pot_031023.html

http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/ciencia/...erproject02.htm

http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/ciencia/...ct.htm#contents

After calculating Jupiter atmospheric wind patterns over the 28 days from 9/21/03 to 10/19/03 it was determined that the location of the mark could easily coincide with the drifting of an object that entered Jupiter at the original Galileo plunge location, as well as the drifting of the actual blast mark. Also note that the origin of the blast below and the exit location at the cloud tops would also be a different lat/long due to extreme Jovian wind dynamics and the likelihood of a two hour trip that the blast would have taken upwards after exploding 1000 miles deep, thereby possibly adding additional dislocation from the original Galileo entry point. Add to this the fact that the mark was likely not discovered immediately upon surfacing and therefore even more drift error would be allowed. This brings the difference in entry point to noticed exit mark into plausible correlation.

http://www.enterprisemission.com//NukingJupiter.html

The Galileo craft contained 144 RHU’s (Radioisotope Heater Units) each with a Plutonium-238 Oxide mass of .333 pounds. Each RHU was shielded by its main RTG casing as well as individually with many layers of protection, allowing survival of entry into Jupiter’s atmosphere. The Galileo craft also contained 120 LWRHU’s. Both RHU and LWRHU were advertised as necessary for keeping the craft’s instruments heated.

4) 2009 – Wesley Mark Event (July 19)

On July 19, 2009 Anthony Wesley spotted a mark on Jupiter at -57, CM2 216 in the southern hemisphere. The mark lasted for several weeks and was widely considered an impact event from a comet. However there is evidence to suggest it may not have been an impact event but an internally generated event possibly from previously inserted Pu years earlier. Namely, at least two astronomers noted that there were disturbances at the same location days before the mark appeared as obvious.

“Anthony Wesley’s site includes an update added a couple days after the main event admitting the fact that “pre-existing storms” were likely present at the supposed impact site, before the impact day. “Update: Two of these three small spots may be pre-existing small storms. Thanks to a blink comparison by Brett Hughes.” [link to jupiter.samba.org]

So it’s possible that there were multiple explosions as much as days apart, the first ones being not as intense. In addition to this, Claudio Martinez also noted the spot existing previous to July 19 on “Sky and Telescope’s” online site: Posted by Claudio Martinez July 22, 2009 At 12:22 AM PDT, “Sorry but my English is not good. I was looking at Christopher Go’s photos, and I believe that the collision appears in their photos from the June 27, 2009. Their site is: [link to jupiter.cstoneind.com] Regards from Argentina” [link to www.skyandtelescope.com]”

http://www.godlikeproductions.com/forum1/message850762/pg1

“If the claims of this paper are valid it is likely we will see other “marks” begin to show up in the coming months resulting from the same fission effect described herein…”

http://www.godlikeproductions.com/forum1/message850762/pg1

Also, at least one online astronomy magazine with the help of astronomer Theo Ramakers noted the location of the Wesley Mark maintained its origin throughout the entire event at 57 S, 216 (CM2) which would not happen with an impact event. Video of this event when multiple images were spliced together confirmed that the mark seemed to emanate from the said location and throw out debris to the east from there.

5) 2010 – Jupiter Southern Equatorial Belt (SEB) Disappearance (late 2009 to early 2010)

Anthony Wesley and many other astronomers noted that throughout late 2009 to May 2010 the Southern Equatorial Belt of Jupiter gradually and completely disappeared, speeding up its disappearance toward the end of this time period. A similar instance of this has happened in the past as recent as the mid-70's, but the most recent one is still considered to be a big event.

6) 2010 – Wesley/Go Flash Event (June 3)

A very bright flash lasting 2 seconds was imaged and verified occurring in Jupiter's upper atmosphere on June 3, 2010 at location -16.1, 300 (CM1). Imaging of the same location by many astronomers over the next two weeks failed to produce even a tiny hint of debris from what was widely considered to be an impacting object. To the day of the writing of this report, no debris has been spotted causing some astronomers to reconsider the impact claim and open up a wider investigation that may include an internally generated event of great magnitude, or an impacting object so dense that it has not yet disintegrated in the depths of Jupiter enough to expel visible debris.

Other Notes:

Pu-238 Oxide is mostly plutonium by weight and is considered ceramic in form and texture when manufactured. Pu-238 Oxide was proven to be fissile by Richard Garwin of the Jason Group, and various other nuclear institutes, in purity of 80% or less, which the RHU's and LWRHU's qualify as since not all of their plutonium is Pu-238, but a host of other Pu isotopes. To be fissile means to be capable of a sustained nuclear reaction under the right conditions.

http://www.fas.org/rlg/980826-pu.htm

"In conclusion, separated plutonium-- whether weapon grade or reactor grade-- poses a similar danger of misuse in nuclear weapons and must be provided similar physical protection, control, and accountancy. This has been recognized by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) from its beginning-- all plutonium (except Pu-238 of isotopic purity greater than 80%) is regarded as equally hazardous from the point of view of diversion to nuclear weaponry."

A recent scientific report poses that only one Jupiter mass is actually required to produce and sustain a small star under the right conditions.

Commentary:

ZONES OF PRESSURE INSIDE JUPITER (PRESSURE HOLD THEORY)

Arbitrarily selected levels to represent various “pressure holds” are shown (A thru D)

There currently is not a logical conventional explanation for any of the events below that match the collective evidence. The “impactor” theory has problems in each case. So, suspend for a moment what you have been told has happened on Jupiter in the last 15 years and consider the following plausible sequence:

First of all, note that each of the RHU’s and LWRHU’s discussed below are massively protected against breaking down with multiple layers of shielding for the purpose of maintaining integrity under extreme conditions. When scientists try to claim that the Galileo crafts were vaporized in Jupiter’s atmosphere, this cannot apply to the extremely hardy plutonium-laden pellets and casings. In fact, each of these cylinders likely underwent great compression without vaporizing, and some are still intact and still compressing while falling inwards to the center of Jupiter. When a tight cylinder drops into a dense atmosphere, as the elements we are discussing did, they do not vaporize or flatten out, they get compressed equally from all sides until they resemble a sphere of smaller and smaller volume, and this is what the RHU’s and LWRHU’s did and are doing inside Jupiter until the point of the plutonium elements reaching supercritical.

--The first nuclear reaction occurred from the plutonium-laden RHU’s of the Galileo Spacecraft on 10/19/03 (see “1”, Diagram 3). This group of 144 RHU’s went supercritical very early (less than 28 days after entry day of 9/21/03) and verified to people “in the know” that indeed the NASA Pu-238/239 Oxide concoction was a valid fission starter. This blast also probably detonated most of the 120 LWRHU’s around it, but some likely escaped the blast having taken a slightly different drift path. The RHU’s would go supercritical much easier being .333 lbs. as opposed to the LWRHU’s at .006 lbs.

--Each of the (15) plutonium-laden LWRHU’s that entered in 12/7/95 via the Galileo Atmospheric Entry Probe, and the surviving LWRHU’s from the Galileo spacecraft entry of 9/21/03, penetrate deeper into Jupiter (by now each is in a separate location due to displacement dynamics over the years) and each go super-critical at a different time, the time differences spanning possibly one or two years. Explosive reactions of those LWRHU’s that go supercritical too early are actually able to penetrate back through Jupiter’s cloud tops as the created gas bubble successfully rises through the path of least resistance all of the way to the top. This is what we may have witnessed July 19 of 2009 the “Wesley Mark” (see “2”, Diagram 3).

--Other LWRHU’s that go supercritical while deeper into Jupiter may go through a violent fission reaction without being able to break back through the layers above (in the same way magma under Earth’s lithosphere is under great pressure but often held back from erupting by pressure from layers above it); therefore, the resulting pressure is trapped and held inside Jupiter (see “3” and “4” Diagram 3). LWRHU’s that have not gone super-critical yet will do so soon and add to the building pressure deep inside Jupiter. In the meantime Jupiter may give off signals that something is happening deep inside (Wesley impact mark of July 2009 that did not act like and impact mark, SEB belt disappearing late 2009 to present, the tremendous lightning flash in the SEB with no explanation on June 3, 2010), until reaching a general situation of great pressure that may no longer be containable, or reaching a temperature point near the center of the planet that produces a general fusion chain reaction.

--Unexploded LWRHU’s (see “5”, typical small red dots on Diagram 3), are waiting to fission, or have already done so and have gone unnoticed and have added pressure to the “hold”.

William Cooper claims he was privy to documentation for the project we are discussing dubbed “Project Lucifer” back in the early 1970's when working on the intelligence briefing team for the Commander of the Pacific Fleet.

"The spacecraft called Galileo is on its way to Jupiter, a baby star with a gaseous makeup exactly the same as our sun, with a load of 49.7 pounds of plutonium, supposedly being used as batteries to power the craft.

When its final orbit decays in December 1999, Galileo will deliver its payload into the center of Jupiter. The unbelievable pressure that will be encountered will cause a reaction exactly as occurs when an atomic bomb is exploded by an implosion detonator.

The plutonium will explode in an atomic reaction, lighting the hydrogen and helium atmosphere of Jupiter and resulting in the birth of the star that has already been named LUCIFER. The world will interpret it as a sign of tremendous religious significance. It will fulfill prophecy. In reality it is only a demonstration of the insane application of technology by the JASON Society which may or may not even work….”

from Page 72, “Behold A Pale Horse” 1991, by William Cooper

William Cooper was only privy to partial details of this project. Regardless, his account is stunning.

Examining Cooper’s account of the project details:

1) “…a load of 49.7 pounds of plutonium” -- This accounts for the fact that not all of the plutonium was present in the RHU’s only, this allows for the added LWRHU load plus some unknown extra amounts. (.333x144=48, .006x120=.72, these added = 48.72. leaving about 1 lb. unaccounted for).

2) “...final orbit decays in December 1999..”-- This was the original end of mission time slated for Galileo; it was subsequently extended by 4 years, however the Galileo Atmospheric Entry Probe’s mission ended December 1995 delivering its plutonium payload into Jupiter.

3) “…Galileo will deliver its payload into the center of Jupiter…” – The most stunning of claims by Cooper regarding this matter, yet it is just coming clear how the center of Jupiter can be reached, like the “David and Goliath” story, the tiny LWRHU can sneak through like a pebble into the brain of the titan. Rather than the actual Galileo spacecraft being the crucial delivery load, it was the delivery medium for another secret, the (15) LWRHU's launched from Galileo inside the vessel called Galileo Atmospheric Entry Probe.

4) "The unbelievable pressure that will be encountered will cause a reaction exactly as occurs when an atomic bomb is exploded by an implosion detonator." – Say no more, this has been proven possible already, but only after Cooper suggested this as the plan.

It is the author's contention that at least some of the anomalous events mentioned are human-caused, intentionally or not. By 1995, it was assumed that in recent last billion years Jupiter would only naturally receive a noticeable impact with a comet, asteroid, or meteorite once every 1000 years, and over the past 15 years we have been told we have witnessed at least 3 impacts of such note. Rather than investigating the possibility that the impacts were human-caused and a couple possibly not impacts at all, or researching the possibility that something extraordinary in happening, astronomers have simply adjusted the odds of impacts occurring on Jupiter. That is the easy way out and not a strictly scientific approach.

"By December 9 1993, the probability of impact for all the large fragments of Shoemaker-Levy 9 was calculated to be greater than 99.99%. The fragments would hit over a period of several days, centered on July 19, on the night side of Jupiter. Unfortunately, this was the back side of Jupiter as viewed from Earth. The impact site would be close to the limb of Jupiter, near 750 from the midnight meridian and only a few degrees beyond the dark limb as seen from Earth. The disruption of a comet into multiple fragments is an unusual event, the capture of a comet into an orbit about Jupiter is even more unusual, and the collision of a large comet with a planet is an extraordinary, millennial event. The observatories of the world lined-up for a week of observations."

http://abyss.uoregon.edu/~js/glossary/come...ker_levy_9.html

Simply put, it's possible that experiments are being conducted on Jupiter to get a better handle on its composition or to attempt to ignite it into a small star for various reasons. Along this line, technology has progressed to the point that comets already on near-impact orbits could be very slightly nudged when in apogee to cause their next orbit to be a direct hit with Jupiter, as could have been the case with SL-9.

Note that:

"Pre-history of SL-9 only goes back to March 15, 1993.

Eugene Shoemaker who was very interested in researching the pre-history of SL-9 was killed in a remote area of Australia in 1997.

Jupiter comet orbits were unheard of before SL-9.

Galileo was conveniently in place to image the first significant celestial body collision live."

http://www.godlikeproductions.com/forum1/message850762/pg1

It's also possible that knowing the fissile nature of Pu-238 oxide, what NASA has dumped into Jupiter can come back up in different forms when the Pu-238 goes supercritical at a later time, as could be the case with the "mystery spot" of 2003 caused by the RHU's of the Galileo craft, and the other two Wesley-related events caused by the many LWRHU's of the Galileo craft and/or the 15 from the Jupiter atmospheric entry probe. It's also possible that other plutonium-laden craft have entered Jupiter without public knowledge.

The multiple LWRHU locations after all of this time from 1995 and 2003 (two insertions that we know of) would be impossible to calculate deep in the depths of Jupiter and at this point it is possible now that some kind of ongoing event is occurring inside Jupiter resulting from previous reactions as we have witnessed a recent anomaly on June 3, 2010 of a terrific force emanating from Jupiter never before seen causing a bright flash within the same latitude as the disappearing SEB. Without a debris signature, it is almost certainly not from an impact of a recent external source.

This begs the question, has NASA succeeded in producing the star-maker formula, the first hints of which we are now seeing? Will the force emanating from Jupiter that caused the bright flash on June 3 increase and continue to produce more energy until something extraordinary is achieved?

Note that it is not supportable that the components of the LWRHU's would have broken up upon entering Jupiter. In fact it can be argued that each one was naturally kept intact compressed tighter and tighter into a very dense ball until going super-critical. As the density increases for this already unusually heavy element inside Jupiter (Jupiter is used to seeing only hydrogen and helium at these depths), this further causes its downward pellet drift, a self-perpetuating fall.

http://www.animatedsoftware.com/cassini/fe...95/ei995221.gif

Now, just assume that one LWRHU drifts down far enough then goes super-critical with the right conditions of heavy or metallic hydrogen, super-compressed. All that is needed is one super-hot spark, which a fission reaction from this NASA plutonium concoction can supply, to cause a chain fusion reaction that may or may not sustain, or only partially sustain.

There is previous evidence that just this very thing has occurred higher up in the atmosphere of Jupiter. When the "mystery spot" was imaged on Jupiter on October 19, 2003 in a location consistent with the possible drifting and surviving elements of Galileo, a plausible super-critical plutonium scenario emerged as valid. The main difference between the RHU's and LWRHU's is the amount of plutonium, the former causing an "early" super-critical reaction (measured in days after impact), the latter causing one much later (measured in years after impact).

It is this key point that even those studying the plutonium danger on Jupiter have not yet grasped: in order for a plutonium pellet of the nature that NASA has designed to get extremely deep penetration into Jupiter (dare we say near the center?), it must be a VERY SMALL MASS SO THAT IT DOES NOT GO SUPER-CRITICAL TOO SOON. The LWRHU's at .006 pounds may have been calculated to be the perfect fit allowing critical mass to arrive at just the right time (the criticality factor changes for plutonium the deeper one dives into Jupiter). Of the announced and admitted pellets of this sort that we know of, there are 135 LWRHU's that have entered Jupiter, potentially allowing 135 chances to get a correct supercritical combination at the right depth. The earliest a group of these entered was December 7 of 1995, when 15 LWRHU's were released into Jupiter; more than 14 ½ years ago, the latter known group of 120 entered September 21, 2003.

http://www2.jpl.nasa.gov/galileo/mission/j...ey-arrival.html

What we have seen in the past 2 years is possibly the first of the LWRHU's going supercritical causing strange anomalies at the surface when the resulting gases rise. On July 19 of 2009 we witnessed a dark and smoky column emanate from a point in the southern realms of Jupiter; less than a year later, June 3 of 2010 we witnessed a brilliant and unexplained flash of tremendous energy without a debris signature. In between these two events we have witnessed the disappearance of the SEB. The marks and flashes may simply be the different effects of LWRHU pellets going critical in different situations and depths of Jupiter. Somehow, the disappearance of the SEB may also be related as energy dynamics may be changing in this region as a result of on-going activity deep below.

The bottom line is: we've been jabbing Jupiter and now Jupiter is acting strange. We should, in light of the above evidence pointing to internally generated events due to past insertion of manmade objects, expect increasingly greater and stranger occurrences on Jupiter.

Thanks for posting that information, Craig!

An important clue is that the Wesley mark of 2009, its center stayed put, it held in place throughout and this would not happen if the mark were due to an impact, it would drift.

The mark stayed in place because it was the breach or path of least resistance to the surface that the blowout bubble had found, therefore it just kept spewing there and tossing out black stuff to the east from there.

Also note, the object (LWRHU) , 15 inserted in 1995, has custom-made characteristics to sink deep into Jupiter without breaking up.

1) 15 were inserted carefully in 1995.

2) Gravity acceleration for Jupiter increases up to 85% of the radius in, allow this object to continue to sink.

3) Melting point keeps increasing due to increased pressure and this happens ahead of the temperature curve as this object falls into Jupiter, so the object DOES NOT MELT, just keeps getting more compressed.

4) Density of object keeps increasing as it drops allowing criticality of its Pu to change based on even pressure applied.

5) Its Pu mix becomes more fissionable over time as 238 converts to 239.

6) Pu makes a sudden phase change back to Alpha under the right extreme pressure allowing a sudden characteristic change which increases its fissionability suddenly allowing a fission reaction.

It's custom made for this, strangely.

This is just amazing! Notice the esoterical symbology of the opening scene of the movie "The Rite", and notice also the secuence of the apparence of each symbol:

First, the dead woman dressed in black and the men dressed in blue seems to me that Saturn (Nimrod) and the Mother Goddess (Semiramis) switched roles. The woman represents the "Great Whore of Revelation that would Die" (The Vatican and the Roman Catholic Religion controlling all religions) and the men dressed in blue who is preparing the woman for his funeral (Controlled Destruction of the Vatican) is the Antichrist ruling the Luciferian Religion of the coming New World Order. Notice in the ritual that, first the woman is dressed in blue like the typical clothing of the Mother Goddess, but later the men dresses she with the black color of death.

Second, appears the Tattoo of "SATAN"!!! The fact that this symbol is tattooed in the skin of the woman represents the fact that the Catholic and Babilonian religions are just Satanical religions.

Third, the men puts in the corpse of the dead woman a bracalet with the images of THREE FROGS, such symbols that represents Demons (False "Aliens") predicted in the Bible in the Book of Revelation as the "Three Unclean Spirits Like Frogs [...] which are Spirits of Devils" (Apocalypse 16:13,14).

Fourth, the bracalet also reveals the image of an ALL SEEING EYE... this represents the climax during the 3 and 1/2 years of New World Order under the Luciferian Religion.

London Olympics: Iran to compete despite logo complaint
http://www.bbc.co.uk/news/uk-12724166

Iran has indicated it will attend the 2012 Olympics in London, despite complaining that the Games logo resembles the word "Zion".

Last month the Iranians complained to the International Olympic Comittee and called for the graphic to be replaced.

They objected on the grounds that its resemblance to the word Zion - a Biblical term for Israel - was racist.

But now the Iranian-backed Press TV has quoted an official as saying Iranians will "participate gloriously".

The report by Press TV quotes the secretary of Iran's Olympic organising committee, Bashram Afsharzadeh, as saying: "Our decision, to partake [in the] Olympic Games, has nothing to do with the UK politicians.

"We will make co-ordination with officials of the International Olympic Comittee and we will participate and play gloriously in London Games."

In its original letter to the IOC, Iran had called for the Games logo to be withdrawn and its designers "confronted".

There was also a suggestion that Iranian athletes would be told not to attend.

At the time, IOC president Jacques Rogge told BBC Sport: "No, it can't be serious. We will quietly reply, telling [Iran] the logo has nothing to do with racism or any political connotation."

The complaint was also dismissed by Prime Minister David Cameron, who said the Iranians would not be missed if they did not attend.

In an interview with the London-based paper Jewish News, Mr Cameron said: "It's completely paranoid. If the Iranians don't want to come, don't come - we won't miss you.

"It would be a crazy reason for not coming."

Remember these Egyptian obelisks are symbolism of the Constellation of Orion and have been used as birth certificates of the real elite bloodlines as I've highlighted in the past. This is the reason they were bought to Rome and it was a death sentence to any worker who destroyed one. Needless to say they were all safe, I wonder why? So these are highly important. They also represent the generative force of the masculine tied with Nimrod amongst the philosophers of fire with their damn phallic candles. You'll also notice the masculine inside the feminine opening and the feminine opening is next to the waters of life or should we say the Sea of Souls.

Folks can you see the symbolism in front of you? Well note the C for Catherine and W for William (flipped 'M' for Mason) and note the upward triangle of the middle point of the 'W' going inside the 'C'. This is the masculine entering the feminine for fertility and rebirth or Generative principle. You'll also note how this point from the masculine is landed right over the Yod of the background picture of a window of the Westminster Abbeyl. Please also note that a 'W' is a series of three V's thus 666.

Revolution Harry - December 17, 2010 10:49 PM (GMT)

A commenter on another forum posted a link to the TPUC website and implied that there was something Satanic about its logo. Before he could explain what this was he was banned from the forum. I don't think it was related to the post referred to but I am intrigued as to whether or not he's correct.

I can see there are 13 sections going round the circle but how about the rest. Any clues?

PS I wasn't sure where to post this but seeing as this section tends to deal with symbology I thought it appropriate.

This is the 29th path in Cabbala jumping from malkuth(10) to netzach(7)

The 29th path linking Malkuth to Netzach is that of the moon (Atu XVIII), the Astral path leading mundane perception to the pure animal drives and sexual desire of venus, the planetary symbol of Netzach.
This is a dangerous path, employing a ligthning-swift retroversion of the senses linking the moon of Yesod to the moon of Da¢ath via the symbol of Khephra, the midnight sun resplendent in darkness connecting the path leading from Netzach to Tiphareth, the path of Death (Atu XIII). In the alchemical sense, Death means change via putrification. This is emphasised by the Qliphotic Guardian NIANTIEL, a distorted image of the reaper Saturn, which sentinels the underside, or tunnel, of this path leading straight to the dark Tiphareth.

about rolling the skull:
The ritual decoration of these ornate skulls originated as long ago as the 14th century. It is said that during the cremation of a powerful monk, his skull rolled out of the fire and toward the feet of the monks attending the cremation. This was taken as a sign that his skull should not be destroyed but glorified and used as a focal point in meditation.Today, there is still a belief that skulls can be used to capture and contain the flesh and blood of a demon. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. 2 Corinthians 11:14 KJV

The once anointed cherub Lucifer (the now Satan) fell due to pride in wisdom and beauty. He can be overtly satanic and grotesque or covertly "religious" and beautiful when needed.

Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices. 2 Corinthians 2:11 KJV

Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. James 4:7 KJV

It should have had one of the Rothschild's shaking hands with the Whore-monger not a deluded orthodox numpty waiting to be grafted back on the bush once he has repented of his satanic Judaism.

Rothschild = Wrathschild = Canaanite Jew = The Tares = Those who say they are Jews but are not.

Rev 2:9 (KJV) I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

John 14:25-26 (KJV - which you quote from, so staying in line with it)

> QUOTE
> [25] These things have I spoken unto you, being yet present with you.
> [26] But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

So Jesus Christ in the Gospel of John reveals the truth of Trinity, meaning that the Holy Ghost (Holy Spirit & gender neutral in the Greek, thus should be rendered more accurately as "it") & Jesus Christ are one.

John 10:30

> QUOTE
>
> I and my Father are one.

2 Corinthians 13:

> [14] The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

Matthew 28:19:

"Name" - singular. Not "names" plural.

Even in the Geneva Bible:

Linguistic analytical verification of the scripturally correct understanding of the Christian Trinity:

http://thearmchairscholar.org/webdoc/Chapt...olySpirit2D.pdf

QUOTE

The Greek word, onoma (name), is used 229 times in the New Testament. Onoma refers to the name of a place four times. Barring these place names and one reference in Revelation, in every other instance, onoma refers to a person. While not proof of personality (there is the one instance of onoma referring to an inanimate object in Revelation 11:13, see preceding footnote), the fact that onoma refers to a person or persons by a factor of 98% is highly indicative of how onoma should be considered here.
The name, onoma, refers to a person or persons by a factor of 98%. As such, the application of onoma to personal beings is highly indicative that the Holy Spirit is a personal being as well.

A study of the phrase “in the name of” (eis/en/epi onoma) in Scriptures, however, is even more significant. The phrase occurs 29 times in the New Testament and 36 times in the Old Testament, for a grand total of 65 occurrences in the entire Bible. In all of these occurrences, “in the name of” refers to a person, never an object, abstract concept or impersonal force/being. A person. Always. At no time do we find, “in the name of the law,” “in the name of common sense,” or any such similar phrase in the Bible. These are modern idioms foreign to the times and cultures in which the books of the Bible were written. The meaning the WTBTS suggests simply did not exist in those cultures at those times. The phrase “in the name of” always refers to a person. Always. ...

Onoma in Matthew 28:19 is also singular. In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. The three are grouped together to share one name, not three names. The Father (who is a person) shares the name with the Son (who is also a person) and the Holy Spirit. The most natural reading of the text indicates the Holy Spirit as is person as well. The reading becomes unnecessarily and unnaturally awkward only when insisting the Holy Spirit is impersonal: in the name (singular) of the Father (a person), and of the Son (a person), and of the Holy Spirit (an active force)?

The most natural reading of Matthew 28:19 indicates the Holy Spirit is a person. ...

> As noted above, the use of the phrase, “in the name of,” which always applies to a person or persons in the Bible, very clearly identifies the Holy Spirit as a person and none of the three meanings for “the name” suggested above demand that the Holy Spirit is devoid of personality. In fact, each of the three meanings proposed for “the name” strongly identify the Holy Spirit as a personal being.
>
> The Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit are all three united in sharing the one single name in Matthew 28:19. ...
>
> ... absolutely nothing in the text of Matthew 28:19 demands or even implies that the Holy Spirit is an active force. In fact, Matthew 28:19 strongly identifies the Holy Spirit as a personal being.

So when you write:

> QUOTE
>
> ... you can tell me what separates you from the Whoremonger Pope above who also believes in the trinity. I ask this 'cos none of your Cainite-Judeo-Christian Religious friends could.

It is you who refutes scripture & needs to repent.

If you do not know the difference between the Papal trinity & the Christian trinity then you I refer you to Milton's Satanic Trinity in Paradise Lost:

http://cantuar.blogspot.com/2007/11/milton...n-paradise.html

>
> Milton's Satanic Trinity in Paradise Lost
>
> John Milton presents a Satanic "trinity" in Paradise Lost. We meet the three agents of destruction at the gates of Hell in Book II: Satan, Sin, and Death. Satan "gave birth" to his daughter "Sin" after pride caused in him a head ache. "Sin" came forth from his head - just as Athena came forth from the head of Zeus. Satan then entered into an incestuous union with his daughter Sin and they produce a son named "Death".
>
> Satan, Sin, and Death form the diabolical triad. Milton describes Sin as the image or icon of Satan. Sin is thus the "logos" of Satan. The third person, Death, functions as the opposite of the Holy Spirit, who is the Lord and Giver of Life. Satan is the "father". Sin is the "image of the father". Death "proceeds" from the Satan and Sin.
>
> To make matters worse, Death raped his mother (and sister) Sin and this union brought forth "helhounds". The whole thing is incestuous.
>
> A rather brilliant depiction of evil.

Milton was absolutely correct in this understanding.

Please do not quote intellectual meaningless crap.

In my articles I raise real issues which you will need to answer in order to prove your case.

"Onoma in Matthew 28:19 is also singular. In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit."

Matthew 28:19 is a corruption.

1 John 5:7-8 is a corruption

So Satan, Sin & Death is "intellectual meaningless crap"? These are concepts clearly beyond your understanding though you are clearly of them. You know not your own parents. Very sad!

I'll tell you. In your case you have no answers, apart from meaningless religious hand-me-downs (the traditions of men) all the way from the sorcerers and conjurers Tertullian in circa 200AD and Jerome circa 390 AD.

You had better start your repentance soon 'cos these are the last of the last days and time is running out for you.

You've had your answer, you didn't like it & now it is you who are running away. Good riddance to bad rubbish!

"yes2truth" reminds me of "true2u"" who plagued the Eric Phelps thread at the Outlaw Forum until we were banned from there for providing solid facts & plentiful evidences to verify Rome's pinnacle control of the New World Order pyramid.

Example of "yes2truth"s fellow anti-Jewish counterintelligence agent "true2u":

I'm curious as to where the proof of the corruption is. It's easy for someone to say something is corrupt, but where is the proof. An online search of the Stephanus 1550 greek text of Matthew 28:19, translated by google reads the following (not that I advocate that this is very reliable):

> QUOTE
> porefthentes s disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit

I believe in: 2 John 1:9 Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

the individual that has the Father and the Son, has them in the person of the Holy Ghost (by indwelling); which Christ said the Father would send in His name (John 14:26).

Just a thought.....

What Is a Hamsa?

http://www.wisegeek.com/what-is-a-hamsa.htm

The hamsa, also called the hamesh hand, looks like a hand with three fingers pointing upward and the thumb and pinky pointing outward. The palm of the hand is commonly covered with an eye. Some connect the hamsa to its use by the Phoenicians or Punic people in honor of the goddess Tanit. She was considered the patron of Carthage, and a goddess who controlled the lunar cycle. Many identify Tanit as an early possible origin for Greek goddesses such as Hera and Athena.

Who was Tanit?

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tanit

Tanit was a Phoenician lunar goddess, worshiped as the patron goddess at Carthage where from the fifth century BCE onwards her name is associated with that of Baal Hammon. Her shrine excavated at Sarepta in southern Phoenicia revealed an inscription that identified her for the first time in her homeland and related her securely to the Phoenician goddess Astarte (Ishtar). Her symbol, found on many ancient stone carvings, appears as a trapezoid/ trapezium closed by a horizontal line at the top and surmounted in the middle by a circle: the horizontal arm was often terminated either by two short upright lines at right angles to it or by hooks. Later, the trapezoid/trapezium was frequently replaced by an isosceles triangle. The symbol is interpreted by Hvidberg-Hansen as a woman raising her hands.

What I gotta do to let you know. Secret societies got you toor. Freemasonry at a higher degree mixed with them skull and bones. I praise a higher power. You demons all is cowards. Reach for my bible as I pray I see demons devoured.

Verse 1
Skull & Bones Rosicrucians. Secret Societies & Evil Institutions. Knights Templar & the Freemasons. Working for the Jesuits doing dirty deeds of Satan. I'm yelling wake up people open your eyes. When will you realize your being fed lies. Private armies rising up to enslave you. Welcome to camp FEMA.... ONLY JESUS CAN SAVE YOU! Theirs a new age movement & a new world order. Population control were all headed for a slaughter.Our land was never free this soyals drenched in blood. Crooked politicians run this country just like thugs. The say their Christians but they sold their souls. For seats of power & invites to the grove.How long can this nation exist. Being run by a Luciferian Government.

Hook

Verse 2
Some people sayin Playboy you need to chill. Talking bad about the government gone gitcha killed. If the truth hurts let them suckaz come & get me. I'm bangin hard for YHWH until the day they kill me. Land of tyranny home of the enslaved. Where if you spread the Gospel they want to see you slain. If Jesus isn't part of the plan. Then I guarantee theirs no way that this nation can stand. Grippin my bible as I pray with my eyes closed horrific visions flicker revelation unfolds. If you knew the things I knew then you'd understand.The value of a soul & pray for every man. Read the bible while you can before they all burn history repeats its self when will people start to learn. If you ain't got Jesus then your lost & in need of grace. Bow down to the Messiah before the end of days.

craig-oxley - October 12, 2010 11:35 PM (GMT)

I've noticed some possible symbolism in the new logo for the company called Gap. First of all we see the G is in upper case standing out. Please take a look at the logo for the Masonic order with its 'G' being inside the feminine circle which may also be a reference to Gaia (GE) the mother of the Goddess Rhea (circle) who was married to Kronos (square). You'll note that the feminine represented by the color blue is squared by the masculine of the square. You'll notice that we have a sexual union going on between the 'p' of the phallic and the feminine blue also being a sign of the masculine of the square.

QUOTE

The Saturnalian Brotherhood or Saturnian Brotherhood or the Cult of Saturn.

The core of the control over Planet Earth's populace lies in ancient cults. These cults are still in existence to this day. Following the most ancient religions mixed with sexual worship. The main cults are the worship of the Planet Saturn (El), Moon (Isis), Venus (Lucifer) & Sun (Ra). Israel is located on the land formerly known as Canaan. Canaan was the most advanced post-deluvian civilization on Earth. Outstripping both Egypt and Sumer in all areas. Now the center of trade, holy land and soon the Divine Dragon's open 'Latin Kingdom.' Title: codeword "freemason" wordplay

Keith - December 7, 2009 08:48 AM (GMT)

FREEMASON.....using backwards alphabet code(BAC) for some letters
FREEMASON=
URVENASON

u'r venas on.....venas, usually spelled venus is five letter word in middle of "ur.....on"

so is it to be read "u'r on venus" like "you are on venus" or "uron" could be "from" meaning: FROM VENUS

FREEMASON
FIVENASON
FIVENAS ON
FIVENAS.....see the two word together in one sort of sharing a syllable?
FIVENAS.....FIVE VENAS.....FIVE venus\ and the number of venus is five (5)

i didn't know where to post this, but i do remember reading some things about venus on this thread so hey. venas and saturn are both planets. in addition, it's also a freemason topic and we have on TUM a jesuit subforum and a illuminati subforum but no freemason subforum.
any thoughts on why the freemason hides venus and five and son and same in their title?

also, since the f can 21 and that can be 12 which turns back into L, FREEMASON=LIVEMASON

i see three words from LIVEMASON:

EVIL, MAS, NO.....mas is spanish word with accent over a and means "more"

NO, MAS, EVIL.....NO 'more' EVIL. it'd be cool if one of their secret mottos was "no more evil", but the world seems to be not running in harmony with nature as it sould also, intials of "no more evil" is nme which is a condensed way to spell "ENEMY"

nme=NME=N-M-E=enemy

GMNL - December 7, 2009 09:38 AM (GMT)

Interesting.
The planet Venus (named after a Roman Goddess I believe) is thought by some to have been a sister planet to earth – and Mercury [again some believe] isn't a planet but was in fact Venus's moon.
Of course, the word Venus is synonymous with Lucifer. Lucifer is not Satan as many are under the assumption of, the original word in the King James Bible (where Lucifer shows up only once) was Helel. Lucifer is a Latin word (so how did it make it's way into a Hebrew Bible? = the Translators) which comes from the latin word Lux or Lucis: which means Light.
Anyway, if one studies Theosophy ("Lucis trust" publishes their books) they will come into contact with the strange Theosophy belief which is that: the Lord of this world is a man named Sanat Kumara who they coin the "Eternal Youth", and this being and many with him came from the planet Venus to earth....
And what is another name for this Sanat Kumara? = Al Khdir

It's possible that Zacharia Sitchin has based his theory (story)of an Anunnaki race coming from a planet that was 'close to earth' on the Theosophists very belief.

so was the HELEL lucifer or satan in bible kjv? i hear you that lucifer is only mentioned twice i don't know theospophy or Al Khdir but i know in a heartbeat that khdir is a BAC anagram for "PI DRS" and pi is pi and drs is the start of the "pi code".

and SANAT is anagram for SATAN but you kinda probably knew that, but why would someone talking about lucifer name it(lucifer) of an anagram of satan if the two are not the same? seems like someone is going long lengths to make confusion and cause union of the two and going back two posts ago, what if we are on venus and not earth and NASA with their fancy gadgets and pictures are lying to us, and top freemasons know this, and what would it matter if we were living on venus. would it really change anything?

Helel was the original Hebrew word in the translation. Lucifer at the time of the translation, I believe, was a common name that was given to the planet Venus as the word Lucifer means: Light bringer, light bearer and morning star. Of course, Venus is the morning star. Maybe the word Helel also means morning star so the translators thought that area of the bible was talking about the planet venus seen in the morning; or maybe it's a metaphor - you need to understand, Lucifer only shows up ONCE in the King James version of the bible which is in Isaiah 14:12. And if you read that area of the bible it has absolutely nothing to do with satan or a fallen angel. It is talking about a fallen Babylonian King.

Agreed. It's definitely a possibility. It all began with the word: Lucifer (which again, in reality, is a harmless Latin word which basically means Light) and this very word being connected to the biblical Satan...who is the Prince of darkness..? It started with the wording of "falling from heaven" that people started to accept this belief that Satan and Lucifer are one and the same, which they are surely not. But I'm sure the elite love this, because then people misunderstand what a Luciferian is and the people will likely never figure out what the elite really are into as far as their belief/worship is concerned: Which for me, the evidence is clearly showing that they are pagans.
Sanat of course will immediately come across as an anagram for Satan – and for all I know it could be. But it could also be a name they have given to this person to throw people off. Maybe it also has a double meaning which has nothing to do with "The Devil". You need to understand that the word Satan is a descriptive name, meaning: Adversary or enemy.
But if you read up on this Kumara individual it appears that he has been mentioned in many religions that predate Christianity.

Erm, I'm pretty sure we're on earth. You can see Venus from earth without a telescope. All of their esoteric symbolism and anagrams and hidden meanings of course is to just confuse us.

Keith - January 18, 2010 07:01 PM (GMT)

here's another anagram off BAC for "FREEMASON":

"AN EVIL SUN" or "SUN'Z ALIVE".....short for "SUN IZ ALIVE" and an anagram for "FREEMASONRY" is:

"A HOME RUN REY".....rey is spanish word for "king", so:
"A HOME RUN KING"---and i've heard before that baseball is a masonic game, the all time home run leader being the most powerful stat in baseball, too.

but i prefer this angaram for "FREEMASON":

"LIVE PI ZEN"

Keith - April 3, 2010 08:44 PM (GMT)

FREEMASON to be unscrambled using the backwards alphabet code considering symbols too.

F =6=9=R
R =I
E = W due to symbols and then in B.A.C. its w=d...D
E= same as above.....D
M=E due to symbols
A= 26 in B.A.C.....26
S=19=16=P.....P
O=12=AB.....AB
N=Z due to symbols

FREEMASON=RIDDE26PABZ=PI BAZE 26 DDR

"pi base 26--ddr"=freemason unscrambled

Keith - April 7, 2010 04:57 AM (GMT)

FREEMASON to be unscrambled using the backwards alphabet code considering symbols too.

F=6=9=R
R=R
E=3 due to symbols which then goes to the C...E=3=C
E=3 due to symbols which then goes to the C...E=3=C
M=E due to symbols....turn the M on its side to get E
A=A
S=H
O=O
N=M then like before turn on its side to get E

FREEMASON=RRCCEAHOE...unscramble that to "HORCERACE"

horcerace is another way to spell horserace

there are acutally a few ways to get to the word 'horcerace' but i just chose this way... there is probalby even a way to free-up another "s" for use, so we could get to "horserace" instead of "horcerace"....beacause we would have to take out the C which we got from the 'E"....so we have E and need to make it an S. E is the 5th letter of the alpahbet and the symbol of 5 damn near makes the S symbol...in fact when i handwrite my homework and look at it later, sometimes i can't tell my s's from my 5's. there's probably a few paths to get to the word horcerace from freemason, but all of which are fairly well hidden

Keith - April 8, 2010 10:26 AM (GMT)

let's analyze to unscramble the word "numbers"

N=Z due to symbols...Z=A in b.a.c....N=Z=A U=21 which is 12 reversed..12=O in b.a.c....u=21=12=o
M=N in b.a.c.
B=Y in b.a.c.
E=M due to symbols
R=R
S=S

NUMBERS=AONYMRS...unscramble that to "MASONRY"

Keith - April 12, 2010 12:30 AM (GMT)

i explained 2 or 3 posts ago that "freemason" can be unscrambled to "pi base 26--DDR", but in fact the word "freemasonry" can literally stand for what pi in base 26 is: DDRSQLOLYR(first 10 letters of pi code in base 26) here's the breakdown(remember i am using the backwards alphabet code while still keeping symbols in mind):

F=21=12=L
R=R
EE=5 and 5 which is 10...10 can be Q in B.a.c.
M=14=reduces to 4 if we read between the line...M=14=4=D
A=1 which is the symbol of L
S=S
O=O
N=same as the M 4 letters previous...N=14=4=D
R=R
Y=Y

so, FREEMASONRY=LRQDLSODRY...unscramble that to: DDRSQLOLYR amazing! the first 10 letters of the pi IN BASE 26

Keith - July 19, 2010 04:46 AM (GMT)

anagram of "one five zero" is "freemasonry" or any way u want to arrange the "one" or the "five" or the "zero"

O=O
N=N
E=M due to symbols

F=F
R=R
V=E in backwards alphabet code
E=E

Z=A in backwards alphabet code
E=5 then 5 looks like "S" due to symbols...E=5=S

R=R
O=12 in backwards alphabet code....12 reduces to 2 if we read between the line, then going back in the backwards alphabet code 2=Y....O=12=2=Y

ONE FIVE ZERO = ONM FREE ASRY...unsramble that to "FREEMASONRY"

first time a string of the 1 0 and 5(one zero five) occurs in pi is digits 49 to 51 in the fashion of "510"...the corresponding Pi in base 26 letters for those slots is "ELM", a type of tree and one of the few real words in the pi in base 26(looking at just the first 101 letters)....but ELM can be:

E=M due to symbols
L=15=AS
M=N in backwards alpahbet code

MAS'N, short way to spell "mason"

Freemason = Sons of Light! Now replace the 'm' with a 'j' and we have Jason as in Jason and the Argonauts who are looking for the Golden Fleece. Study the power of The Order of the Golden Fleece controlled by Juan Carlos of Spain. You'll notice that when Carlos stood next to Grandmaster Bertie of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta that he wore his Order of the Golden Fleece chain. Why does Argonauts remind me of the once powerful Borja land of Aragon of the now called Spain well in truth European Union division whatever? Lets remember that this wording ties up with the word dragon.

Keith - July 19, 2010 06:44 PM (GMT)

freemasonryrnosameerf.....=.....u reed pi searyuzli and cri

u reed pi searyuzli and cri.....you read pi seriously and cry

f=u in bacwards alphabet code(BAC)
r=r e=e
e=e m=w due to symobls...w=d in BAC, or m=14=4=d a=1
s=19.....as=119=Pi in BAC
o=15=5=s due to symbols...5 looks like S
N=13 in BAC...31=EA
R=R
Y=Y
R=U in BAC beacause of the 9 and 6 look alike
N=Z due to symols
O=L in BAC
S=19=9=I in BAC
A=A
M=N in BAC
E=W due to sym0bls...w=D in BAC
E=3 due to symols 3=C
R=R
F=I in BAC because 6 an9 look alike

palindrome of "freemasonry" (freemasonryrnosameerf), read through the lens of the backwards alphabet code from left to right, no anagramming, leads to possibility of " U REED PI SEARYUZLI AND CRI".... "you read pi seriously and cry"

Keith - August 13, 2010 06:15 PM (GMT)

MASON.....anagram it and use BAC

M=E due to symbols
A=A

Title: "Christ the Redeemer" Statue of Brazil, 666 mts

Maximiliano - July 31, 2010 01:03 AM (GMT)

THE STATUE OF "CHRIST THE REDEEMER" OF BRAZIL, IT IS LOCATED 666 METER ABOVE THE CITY OF RIO DE JANEIRO IN BRAZIL!

http://es.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cristo_Redentor

""The statue of Christ the Redeemer is located 709 meters above sea level, in the city of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, specifically in the top of Corcovado Mountain. It has a total height of 38 meters, including the 8-meter pedestall. It was inaugurated on October 12, 1931, after approximately five years of work.""

So, an becouse the city of Rio de Janeiro its located 5 meters above sea level:

709 mts - 5 mts - 38 mts = 666 mts

So this statue of "Christ the Redeemer" stands up above 666 meters above Rio de Janeiro

Note also the following:

""Among others who collaborated to the realization can be cited engineers Heitor da Silva Costa (author of the project), artist Carlos Oswald (author of the initial design of the monument) and the French sculptor Paul Landowski (executor of the head and hands sculpture).""

This men, Paul Landowski, was also the same sculptor who created the "International Monument of the Reform" also called "Reformation Wall" in Geneve, Switzerland, in which at the centre of this monument its located the images of Theodor Beza, John Calvin, William Farel, and John Knox, and below them the acronym of the jesuits: IHS.

Why subtract the figures?

Shouldn't that be 709 meters (base of statue above sea level) + 38 meters (total height of statue including 8-meter base), which equals 747 metres ASL?

This is how the figures seem to read: that 709 meters is where the base starts. Allowing for the fact that I could be wrong & that 709 meters ASL is the top of the statue, then 709 meters (base of statue above sea level) - 38 meters (height of statue including 8-meter base) = 671 meters.

Where does the 5 meters figure come from (the only "5" mentioned seems to be the approximate number of years of its construction)?

Maximiliano - July 31, 2010 02:36 AM (GMT)

Soulinspiration you are right, the Corcovado mountain in which the "Christ the Redeemer" statue its located are 709 meter above the sea level, so i was wrong when i make the calculation. sorry, it will not happen again.

that fake jesus with long hair is throwing the occult "osiris slain" pose user posted image

soulinspiration - July 31, 2010 01:41 PM (GMT)

By Roman standards of hair length the hair in this depiction is long. Compared to the standards of the time it likely was not.

The plethora of customs & practices relating to appearance in both Jewish & Christian communities over the millennia mean that there have been many different interpretations of this over time and our perceptions of the relativity of length in terms of hair is unavoidably filtered by contemporary mores.

Compared to the length that women have had their hair at different times it is not even particularly long.

Maybe Jesus had a US Marines buzz cut? Unlikely I think. Perhaps as unlikely as a Roman hairdo.

The following is probably the most well researched & considered discussion of this matter that I personally think is all too often coloured by the Roman standards of the past 2000 years or so:

"Should Men Have Long Hair"

http://www.hurtingchristian.org/PastorsSit...as/longhair.htm

QUOTE

Introduction

When my youngest son was in high school, he decided to let his hair grow out. One of his Christian friends quoted to him 1 Corinthians 11:14, "Doth not even nature itself teach you that if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?" So he came to me and asked me what the Bible taught about men and long hair. This study was the answer to his request.

1. Is long hair shameful?

The one time it is mentioned in the Bible is 1 Corinthians 11:14 mentioned above. Is this a command from God? Is this just man's opinion? What does it mean? It is plain that elsewhere in the Bible long hair is spoken of in a positive manner. Does the Bible contradict itself?

2. The Nazarite vow.

Numbers 6:5 & 7 speak of the Nazarite vows' requirement of not cutting the hair. Most Nazarites took a vow for 100 days or less, but as the Believer's Bible Commentary states, "In some rare cases, people were Nazarites for life – e.g. Samuel, Samson, John the Baptist." In fact Judges 16:17 specifically states Samson never had a razor touch his head. Nazarites must have had very long hair but nowhere are they condemned. They were only following God's command. Would God in one place in the Bible encourage long hair, and then in another place condemn it?

3. Long hair praised.

In 2 Kings 1:8 the messenger's description of a man with long hair and a leather girdle caused the king to instantly realize it was the prophet Elijah. He must have had long hair indeed. In fact the Hebrew words the servant used to describe Elijah were ba'al sa'ar which means "lord of hair." In 2 Samuel 14:25-26 Absalom's long hair was praised for its handsome appearance and nowhere is it ever referred to as shameful. In Leviticus 19:27 God commands that men should not cut the hair on the corners of their head (NIV – "temples") or the corners of their beard. In 2 Samuel 10:4-5 Harun shaved off half the beard of David's servants. The men were so ashamed David told them to wait at Jericho until their beards grew back and then return home. In this case, being clean-shaven was considered shameful! Psalm 133 praises the oil flowing down Aaron's beard to his collar.

4. Greek word study.

In 1 Corinthians 11:14 the Greek word translated "long hair" is komao which means tresses of hair or locks. It comes from the root word meaning "to take care of" which indicates some kind of preparation to make the hair appear in tresses. Komao appears only three times in the Bible, and all three times are right here in the 11th chapter of 1 Corinthians. The usual word for hair is thrix. It is possible Paul is referring to some pagan practice of fixing the hair in a feminine manner, and this is what he is condemning for men, although condoning for women. Some hairstyles were considered immodest and condemned in 1 Timothy 2:9 and 1 Peter 3:3. At any rate, Paul would not teach anything contrary to the rest of scripture.

5. Conclusion.

1 Corinthians 11:13 says, "Judge for yourselves...." and verse 16 seems to imply there was no custom concerning this in the churches. It seems the interpretation is up to each individual depending on the cultural standards of their day. I think the New Bible Commentary sums up best how we should look at this issue, "To dress with decorum is a Christian principle of permanent validity for the outward appearance reflects the inner attitude. How this principle finds expression in detail will vary from place to place and from age to age."

Title: The Armistice That Ended 1WW Signed at Description: 11:00 hs of 11/11 of 1918!

Maximiliano - July 31, 2010 03:18 AM (GMT)

The Armistice Signed by the Allies Forces whith Germany was signed at the 11:00 am hours of the 11 day of November, the eleven month of 1918!

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Armistice_wit...mpi%C3%A8gne%29

This is know it today as the "Rememberance Day" or "Armistice Day".

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Remembrance_Day

Remembrance Day – also known as Poppy Day, Armistice Day (the event it commemorates) or Veterans Day – is a Commonwealth holiday to commemorate the sacrifices of members of the armed forces and of civilians in times of war, specifically since the First World War. It is observed on 11 November to recall the end of World War I on that date in 1918 (major hostilities of World War I were formally ended "at the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month" of 1918 with the German signing of the Armistice).

""The armistice between the Allies and Germany was signed in a railway carriage in Compiègne Forest on 11 November

1918, and marked the end of the First World War on the Western Front. Principal signatories were Marshal Ferdinand Foch, the Allied Commander-in-chief, and Matthias Erzberger, Germany's representative. It was a military agreement that marked a complete defeat for Germany, but was neither an unconditional surrender nor a treaty.""

Interesting to note that Marshal Ferdinand Foch, Commander in Chief of the Allies Forces was educated by the Jesuits at the College of St. Etienne. and that his brother was a jesuit priest.

Title: The Satanic Symbology of SB-1070 Immigration Law

Maximiliano - July 31, 2010 01:19 AM (GMT)

We know that the satanists worship and use the number eleven (11) as a ritual for his Luciferians acts against us and the Lord.

Note the following:

If we add the six characters of the official name of the Immigration Law of Arizona "SB-1070" like the Kabbalists do, giving a number to every letter, being to the letter S the number 19, and the letter B the number 2, and to this we add the two numbers 1 and 7 we get the following calculation:

19+2+1+7=29

And becouse in the Kabbalah we must also add this two numbers: 2 and 9, we get the number 11!

Keith - July 31, 2010 01:43 AM (GMT)

low odds numerology there...still a connection though

Finland's president ratifies EU's Lisbon Treaty http://english.people.com.cn/90001/90777/90853/6498984.html

10:48, September 13, 2008

Finnish President Tarja Halonenformally signed the European Union's Lisbon Treaty on Friday, completing the final approval procedures of the treaty in Finland, according to reports from the capital of Finland Helsinki.

The Finnish 200-seat parliament approved the treaty in June by a vote of 151 against 27, while 21 members were absent.

The treaty, signed by EU heads of state and government in December last year, will make the bloc's much needed institutional reforms possible. It needs to be ratified by all EU member states before it can enter into force. But the treaty was turned down by the Irish public in a referendum in June.

MEPs legalise EU symbols through the backdoor
http://www.euractiv.com/en/future-eu/meps-.../article-175323

Published: Friday 12 September 2008

The Parliament's Constitutional Affairs Committee yesterday (11 September) took the lead in attempting to legalise the use of the 12-star flag and Beethoven's 'Ode to Joy' as official Union symbols, a step that the 27 member states failed to agree upon while negotiating the Lisbon Treaty.

When the committee's draft is adopted in plenary on 1 October, 'Ode to Joy', the unofficial anthem of the Union, would have to be performed at the opening ceremony of each new Parliament following European elections and at formal sittings. But the new procedure will only apply to the Parliament and not the other institutions.

The European flag will also be displayed in all Parliament meeting rooms, rather than just in the plenary chamber and outside the building, as it is the case now. In addition, MEPs asked for the motto 'United in Diversity' to be reproduced in all official parliamentary documents and for 9 May to be formally recognised as 'Europe Day'.

"Symbols are vital elements of any communication process [and] convey an emotional image of the underlying values of the organisations they represent," reads the draft recommendation adopted by the committee by a majority of a 20 votes to four.

The text also regrets that the symbols have become a "collateral victim" of efforts made to reach an agreement on the Lisbon Treaty among all 27 member states.

The Parliament likes to claim a pioneering role for itself in choosing and displaying symbols representing the Union's unity. Indeed, after the first elections in 1979 it started campaigning for the Council of Europe's flag to be officially recognised as that of the European Communities.

The flag, anthem and Europe Day were adopted at the EU summit in Milan in 1985, while the 'United in Diversity' slogan became the EU's official motto in 2000. However, the use of these symbols was never made legally binding. They were included in the ill-fated European Constitution, but following its rejection in France and the Netherlands, EU leaders could not agree to make them part of the Lisbon Treaty, whose entry into force is still up in the air due to the Irish 'no' vote in June (EurActiv 13/06/08))

16 EU states, including founding members Germany and Italy but not France, nevertheless succeeded in pushing through a declaration in the treaty's annex, reaffirming that the flag and anthem "will continue as symbols to express the sense of community of the people in the European Union and their allegiance to it".

These symbols would give Europe "a soul" and would help citizens to better identify with the Union, Jo Leinen, the German chairman of the Constitutional Affairs Committee, told EurActiv.

He was certain that the plenary would confirm the committee's vote, and also expressed his hope that the Commission and member states will follow Parliament's lead. But the Commission said it had not yet decided whether it would take similar measures.

EU begins secret drive to force Ireland to vote again on rejected Lisbon Treaty

By Daniel Martin

Last updated at 1:16 AM on 12th September 2008
http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/worldnews/...bon-Treaty.html

A secret European Union plan to force Ireland to vote again on the Lisbon Treaty emerged yesterday.

French officials have penned an explosive document entitled 'Solution to the Irish Problem', in which they say the EU should push Ireland into re-running its referendum next year, opening the way for the treaty to come into force next year.

In return, Europe would offer Dublin a few promises, in a bid to ensure its people vote in favour of the treaty.

Gordon Brown smiles as he signs the Lisbon Treaty

Critics say it is almost identical to the EU Constitution, rejected by the French and the Dutch in 2005.

Labour promised British voters a referendum on the constitution - but then reneged on their promise when it was re-fashioned as a treaty.

Ireland's support is vital because the Lisbon Treaty cannot come into force across the EU until all 27 countries have ratified it. Ireland was the only country which gave its voters a referendum.

The leaked document predicts that Ireland will cave in at a meeting of Europe's leaders next month, and agree to hold a second referendum next Autumn.

In return, the EU will guarantee that Ireland will not lose its own EU commissioner, and will make 'declarations' that Ireland's neutrality and stance on abortion will not be affected by the treaty.

The 'no' campaign claimed during the referendum campaign that Ireland's outlawing of abortion, unless the mother's life is in danger, was under threat if the treaty was passed.

The document says there will be 'a political declaration confirming that the Treaty of Lisbon does not jeopardise Irish neutrality, or the rule of unanimity on tax matters and will not oblige Ireland to modify its position on abortion.'

It adds: 'The second Irish referendum could take place, on this basis, during Autumn 2009, pushing back the coming into force of the Treaty of Lisbon until 2010.'

It was written by a senior EU official based in Paris who is a member of a group called Friends of the Lisbon Treaty.

The treaty creates an EU president, a foreign minister and establishes and EU diplomatic service. Britain went ahead with ratification, despite its rejection by Irish voters.

Shadow foreign secretary William Hague said: 'It cannot be right for the Irish to be made to vote twice on the renamed EU constitution before the British people are allowed to vote once.

'Gordon Brown has cheated British voters of their say, By denying people any decision on this treaty he is actually undermining the EU's own democratic legitimacy. The least he can do now is make it absolutely clear that there must be no bullying of Ireland to get them to vote again.

'The right response to the Irish "no" vote is to abandon the Lisbon treaty altogether and call a total halt to the centralisation of power in Brussels.'

Neil O'Brien, of Eurosceptic think-tank Open Europe, said: 'The EU simply won't take no for answer. They will make Ireland vote again and again until they are bullied into coming up with the so-called "right" answer.

'The British Government should be ashamed of itself for being part of the attempt to bully and isolate the Irish. The polls show that people in most other countries would say to the EU Treaty too. That's why Gordon Brown is terrified of allowing us to have the vote on Europe which he promised at the last election.'

Nigel Farage, leader of the UK Independence Party, said: 'It's deja vu all over again. In Europe, yes means yes and no means: "We'll do it again later".'

Serbia ratifies key EU pre-membership accord

http://www.euractiv.com/en/enlargement/ser.../article-175208

Published: Tuesday 9 September 2008

Serbia has overcome another hurdle on its path towards EU membership with today's (9 September) ratification by its parliament of a key pre-accession agreement offering the country closer trade relations and easier travel within the Union.

140 deputies from the 250-seat parliament voted in favour of the Stabilisation and Association Agreement (SAA), with 26 rejecting it. This means that at least 13 members of the opposition - likely members of the Liberal block, who support EU membership and for this goal would even sacrifice Kosovo - joined the government on this issue.The biggest opposition group, the Serbian Radical Party (SRS), collectively abstained.

The SAA has been one of the hottest topics in Serbian politics in recent months and even led to the collapse of the former government, led by the nationalist Vojislav Kostunica, who argued that signing the accord would imply recognition by Belgrade of Kosovo's independence.

The last 'victim' of the SAA was the leader of Serbia's main opposition party, Tomislav Nikolic, who resigned last Friday (5 September) due to internal pressure within his party resulting from his endorsement of the accord.

Speaking to EurActiv, Enlargement Commissioner Olli Rehn's spokesperson Krisztina Nagy welcomed ratification as another measure "bringing the country closer to the EU".

The Union had already signed the SAA with Serbia's President Boris Tadic prior to the country's parliamentary elections in May, a step aimed at boosting pro-Western forces (EurActiv 30/04/08).

The Commission is in favour of unblocking the interim trade deal, which is part of the SAA, to reward Serbia for the positive steps it has taken recently, most notably the arrest of the former Bosnian-Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and his swift extradition to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) in The Hague.

However, the 27 EU member states have the final say on the issue, with a unanimous decision required before the accord can come into effect. The Dutch government in particular says it will only give its approval upon Serbia's full cooperation with the ICTY. This means that Belgrade must first capture other war criminals, most notably General Ratko Mladic (EurActiv 04/09/08).

During his trip to Brussels last week, Serbia's President Boris Tadic reassured the EU that his government was doing "everything possible" to arrest Mladic and Goran Hadzic, another on the tribunal's most-wanted list.

ICTY prosecutor Serge Brammertz will travel to Belgrade tomorrow to get a personal picture of Serbia's efforts before reporting back to the EU's foreign ministers at their meeting on 15 September. In the event of a positive report, the ministers could decide to give the SAA the green light.

In a parallel move, Serbian MPs also gave their approval to an important energy deal with Russia, giving the go-ahead to the South Stream gas pipeline project, which is expected to transport 10 billion cu/m of Russian gas per year across the Black Sea to the Balkans and on to other European countries. Serbia's energy minister said the agreement would make Belgrade a strategic partner of both Russia and the EU.

Serbia balances EU membership bid with Russian Gazprom ties

http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/...zprom-ties.html

Russia has strengthened its grip on Europe's energy supply after Serbia's parliament ratified a deal that gives Moscow control of the country's oil and gas industry as well as allowing it to lay a controversial pipeline across Serb territory.

By Adrian Blomfield in Moscow
Last Updated: 6:52PM BST 09 Sep 2008

Mirko Cvetkovic, Serbia's prime minister, insisted that his country could be friends with both Russia and Europe

Trying to balance its national interest between the West and the East, MPs also agreed to set Serbia on the path towards membership of the European Union.

The passage of both bills by large majorities reflects the difficulties faced by Serbia's pro-western government in seeking integration with Europe while maintaining its historic ties with Russia, seen by many Serbs as their country's only true protector.

Speaking after the parliamentary session was completed, Mirko Cvetkovic, Serbia's prime minister, insisted that his country could be friends with both Russia and Europe even at a time when East-West relations are at their most strained since the Cold War.

"We can cooperate at the same time between the East and the West," he said. "We would like Serbia to be a driving engine in the region and offer some kind of a bridge between the East and the West."

Under the energy deal, originally signed in January, the Russian state energy giant Gazprom will buy a controlling stake in Serbia's oil and gas monopoly NIS. Gazprom's proposed South Stream pipeline will also cross southern Serbia, carrying Russian gas into the heart of Europe.

The deal represents another blow to a proposed EU pipeline Nabucco which is meant to carry gas from the Caspian basin along a route that bypasses Russia, thus reducing Europe's energy dependency on Russia.

But the EU has failed to unite over the plan and Gazprom has managed to persuade Bulgaria, Hungary, Greece, Slovenia and Austria to sign up to the South Stream project.

In the past year, Russia has also signed a cooperation deal with major gas supplier Algeria and is attempting to secure agreements to carry gas from central Asian countries through Russian territory – a move that could cause the collapse of the Nabucco project.

Some European diplomats had hoped that Serbia could be persuaded to rescind its deal with Gazprom after several cabinet ministers complained that the sale of NIS was too cheap. Auditors had valued the stake at triple the amount Gazprom had paid for it.

The original agreement had been made at a time when Serbia was seeking Russian support over the future of Kosovo and before either elections that returned a pro-western government to power or the arrest of Bosnian-Serb warlord Radovan Karadzic, which lifted one of the last obstacles to Serbia's EU membership.

According to sources, some European diplomats had attempted to persuade Serbia to sell the stake in NIS to Austria's biggest energy company OMV.

Despite the disappointment, the EU could give Serbia candidate member status as early as next year.

Dutch delay Serbia’s march towards EU membership

http://www.euractiv.com/en/enlargement/dut...-175411?Ref=RSS

Published: Tuesday 16 September 2008

The Union's foreign ministers failed yesterday (15 September) to overcome Dutch opposition to unblocking a trade accord with Serbia but said they were confident they could do so at their next meeting on 13 October.

The Dutch representative Maxime Verhagen maintained his position - the last remaining obstacle to the EU granting Serbia trade benefits - despite a positive report from the UN's chief war crimes prosecutor Serge Brammertz on Belgrade's cooperation.

The trade benefits are part of a Stabilisation and Association Agreement (SAA) ratified by Serbia last week (EurActiv 09/09/08), which is seen as key pre-membership accord.

Many other EU member states want the SAA implemented as soon as possible. But, despite acknowledging the progress made by Serbia, the Dutch referred to the Brammertz report by saying "a lot more work is still needed" to capture the remaining suspects, most notably former general Ratko Mladic. "I did not find myself in a position […] that I could conclude that Serbia was now fully cooperating," Verhagen said.

Serbian Foreign Minister Vuc Jeremic immediately dismissed the Dutch reading, saying: "Serbia's full cooperation with the tribunal exists […] and when we finish it, the Netherlands will have nothing to object to".

Talking to journalists in Belgrade, Serbian President Boris Tadic called on Mladic and the other alleged war criminal Goran Hadzic to give themselves up and "lift a heavy load from Serbia's shoulders".

EU ministers were keen to avoid putting Serbia off with yesterday's decision, raising hopes that an agreement could be found at their next meeting in October.

Enlargement Commissioner Olli Rehn reiterated his position that the arrest of Karadzic was "a milestone and should be recognised by the EU," urging Serbia to start implementing the trade deal “unilaterally" as this could "accelerate its European future".

Despite the Dutch veto, he stressed that Serbia could still become a full candidate for EU membership "under the best possible scenario and if everything goes according to plan" in 2009.

Jeremic immediately picked up on this, telling Serbian state television that yesterday's decision was "definitely not a big defeat, but just a delay of an unavoidable step, Serbia's full membership in the European Union".

EU's first 'Roma summit' draws crowds and controversy

http://www.euractiv.com/en/socialeurope/eu.../article-175463

Published: Wednesday 17 September 2008

The event, organised by EU Social Affairs Commissioner Vladimír Špidla, managed to attract a big audience but produced little in terms of policy initiatives.

Attendance at the first European Roma Summit yesterday (16 September) exceeded all expectations, with more than 500 representatives of EU institutions, member-state governments and civil society participating. But the event also highlighted differences between stakeholders.

In the morning session, it soon became clear that there was no consensus on the policy course to be followed. Calls for an EU framework strategy on Roma inclusion, supported by the EU Roma Policy Coalition and human rights NGOs, received a mixed reaction from policymakers at the event.

The idea of creating a Roma unit within the European Commission, modelled on a previously created Council of Europe division, drew contrasting responses from representatives of the French government, which currently holds the EU's six-month rotating presidency, and the Czech government, which takes over in January.

Czech Minister for Human Rights and National Minorities Džamila Stehlíková welcomed the proposal, saying "the Czech Presidency will support the establishment of an EU Roma unit" at the Commission. But France's Christine Boutin, the minister for housing and urban affairs, instead insisted that "it is not necessary to create new committees or policy instruments," calling for efficient and effective use of existing tools.

Sharing Boutin's view, Commissioner Špidla said "existing solutions are already designed for the long term" and said it was "irresponsible to think that the European Commission might develop a centralised approach from Brussels".

Scathing criticism came in the afternoon session from Roma activist Rudko Kawczynski, who accused the organisers of lacking awareness of the issues at stake. "We have spent a whole day here without understanding the problem," he said, "while Roma in this conference room are, at best, decoration".

Kawczynski claimed that aid policies have created a myriad of self-referential Roma rights NGOs out of touch with the realities faced by Roma populations, who live in conditions "worse than in apartheid South Africa […] in many little Warsaw Ghettos". "New actions are part of the problem, not the solution," he concluded.

The atmosphere in the conference room became increasingly tense when Eugenia Maria Roccella, representing the Italian government, was booed as she started speaking by a small but vocal group of Roma activists. The group then left the room in a sign of protest against the Berlusconi executive's plans to fingerprint Roma (EurActiv 30/06/08).

Taking the floor, Shigeo Katsu, the World Bank's vice president for Europe and Central Asia, offered a more positive perspective. Illustrating the evolution of a decade of funding by the World Bank in favour of Roma inclusion, he underlined that "some progress has been made". However, he added, "we still have a long way to go. We need to push further and step up to the next level".

EU moves towards visa facilitation for Georgians

http://euobserver.com/9/26811

VALENTINA POP

25.09.2008 @ 17:43 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - The European Commission recommended on Thursday (25 September) that the bloc's justice and home affairs ministers open negotiations on facilitating visa issuing procedures for Georgians, who currently face tougher travel conditions than Russians.

"Easier access to visas will certainly improve co-operation and exchanges between the EU and Georgia," Jacques Barrot, the block's justice commissioner said, stressing that ordinary citizens will find it easier and cheaper to travel, study and do business in the EU.

He called the proposal a "balanced" one since it also includes a re-admission agreement between the EU and Georgia, "ensuring the return of those who illegally stay in the EU to their home country."

The commission's move follows a decision taken by the European Council on 1 September, announcing visa facilitation measures with Georgia. The EU's executive body has now drafted a mandate for the member states to develop a visa facilitation agreement with Georgia, "providing facilitation for Georgian citizens equivalent to those granted to Russian citizens" a commission press release states.

The commission is proposing to the member states a list of ideas that include fewer documents required to obtain a visa, multiple-entry visas with a long period of validity, waiving or reducing fees for specific categories yet to be defined and setting deadlines for processing visa applications, as well as a possible exemption from the visa obligation for holders of diplomatic passports.

Neither the commission nor the Council spokespeople could confirm to EUobserver whether the visa facilitation agreement with Georgia will be on the agenda of the next meeting of European justice ministers.

A similar EU visa facilitation agreement with Russia has already been in place since 1 June 2007, with several European politicians noting that it is easier for a South Ossetian or Abkhazian person - many of whom hold Russian passports - to travel in the EU than it is for Georgian citizens.

In the common declaration issued on 9 August by the presidents of Poland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, following the Russia-Georgia conflict, they claimed the current visa facilitation programme with Russia was "pointless," since Moscow issued passports to "foreigners" and then used this "EU-given privilege to claim intervention rights" in order to "protect Russian citizens."

Under the current visa facilitation agreement with Russia, EU visa fees are fixed at €35, the issuing period is cut to 10 days and the number of required documents is reduced. Students, schoolchildren and disabled people are exempt from visa fees, while businessmen and people visiting relatives in the EU find it easier to travel.

A re-admission agreement with Russia is also in place, designed to facilitate the expulsion of clandestine migrants originating or transiting this country on their way to the EU.

Georgia lifts visa restrictions for Russians

Meanwhile, Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili has lifted the visa restrictions on Russians imposed during the military conflict over South Ossetia.

Russians are now able again to obtain Georgian visas at any checkpoint on a shared border for $20 (€14).

But diplomatic ties between the two countries remain on ice, after Moscow recognised the independence of Georgian breakaway regions South Ossetia and Abkhazia.

CIA ‘backed’ Irish battle against Brussels treaty

Sunday TimesSeptember 28, 2008 http://www.timesonline.co.uk/tol/news/poli...icle4837672.ece
Nicola Smith Brussels

FIRST it was the sheer ingratitude of the Irish, then it was the failure of the Dublin government to mount a successful yes campaign. Now Brussels has found a new explanation as to why Ireland voted down the European Union treaty in June - a CIA and Pentagon-backed plot, devised by American neoconservatives to weaken the EU.

The European parliament wants an inquiry into whether Declan Ganley, the multi-millionaire chairman of the Libertas group that campaigned against the treaty, could be in the pockets of US defence and intelligence services.

The calls have been led by Daniel Cohn-Bendit, the firebrand 1968 student leader turned Green MEP, who pointed to Irish press reports that “revealed there possibly exists a link between the financiers of the no campaign in Ireland and the Pentagon as well as the CIA.

“If proved true, this would clearly show there are forces in the US willing to pay people to destabilise a strong and autonomous Europe”, he said.

Cohn-Bendit’s suspicions were backed by Hans-Gert Pöttering, president of the European parliament: “The facts must be put on the table. We cannot allow Europe to be harmed by people who demand transparency but do not provide it themselves.”

Last week the parliament’s most senior MEPs discussed the issue and urged the Irish Standards in Public Office Commission to investigate Ganley’s finances.

“The suggestion is not only wrong but ludicrous,” said a CIA spokesman.

Speculation by MEPs appears to rest on the fact that Ganley’s company Rivada Networks has telecoms contracts with the US military worth more than €200m (£159m).

He disclosed last week that he loaned €200,000 of his own money to fund the Libertas campaign against the treaty. It is not clear on what terms the loan was given or if it breached rules on political donations.

Ganley said he considered Pöttering's remarks to be "absolutely outrageous" and insisted that neither he nor Libertas had done anything wrong.

Cohn-Bendit pointed to the right-wing Heritage Foundation in Washington as the intellectual source for the CIA's plans to derail European unity.

His claims were dismissed by Sally McNamara, a senior EU policy analyst at the foundation. "This administration is one of the most pro-European we have seen in a long time. There is no sinister antiEU conspiracy," she said.

Public to have more say with 1 million EU signature plan

http://www.europarl.europa.eu/news/public/.../default_en.htm

Institutions - 06-10-2008 - 14:17

Citizens could have a direct impact on EU law if the Lisbon Treaty comes into force if they can gather at least 1 million signatures from across the EU. The treaty would allow citizens to ask for new EU laws or a review of existing ones. MEPs recently discussed how the signatures would be collected, verified and what would be the legal obligation to act.
Discussions by MEPs on the Constitutional Affairs Committee on 18 September come ahead of a report on the subject by Sylvia-Yvonne Kaufmann of the GUE/NGL group. She believes the legal position needs clarification.

Democratic "directness" appreciated

The introduction of such a system by the reform treaty would make it the first example of direct democracy between several different countries.

MEPs heard from many NGO representatives who said the move would make the EU's institutions more open to people. Several speakers thought that not just EU citizens but people who are resident in the Union should also be allowed to take part.

One million signatures represents 0.2% of the EU population. There was some discussion about whether it should be exactly 1 million (for example is 970,000 acceptable?) - and how many countries it should come from.

Don't set hurdle of participation too high

Professor Jürgen Meyer, a former member of the Bundestag said that the 1 million mark gave it weight but did not set the hurdle too high.

There was also some debate about how to collect signatures, how they should be verified and how long people should have to collect them. Whether electronic signatures were acceptable and should people give their address were also issues.

The chair of the Constitutional Affairs Committee, German Socialist Jo Leinen thought the signature idea would lead to more involvement by people in the running of the EU. He hoped the reform treaty would be adopted before the European parliamentary elections in June next year.

Ms Kaufmann said the initiative opens the door for direct democracy and is a new legal tool. She also said that it was important to draw on the legal traditions across different countries and cultures.

The report is expected by January.

EU elections could be pan-European by 2014

Citizens in one member state could be allowed to vote for a candidate in another country in European elections under a new plan put forward by UK deputy Andrew Duff.

He also proposes the creation of “semi-open” lists that would give parliament the power to verify the credentials of candidates.

Duff, parliament’s rapporteur on electoral reform, outlined his ideas at a news conference on Monday.

He said, “These are radical measures but they are badly needed to address the profound democratic deficit facing the EU.”

The transnational list would mean a voter in, say Manchester, would be able to vote for a candidate in Bologna and vice versa. The EU-wide list would run alongside existing national registers, from which 750 deputies would be elected.

The creation of semi-open lists would put an end to the current practice of closed lists, where some member states, including the UK, only allow electors to vote for a political party and not individual candidates.

“This is ok for people at the top of voting lists but scarcely appeals to voters who would, I believe, prefer to be have the chance to vote for a particular candidate,” Duff said.

On giving parliament powers to check candidates’ credentials, he said the assembly now had “sufficient maturity and experience” to perform this task. He denied it was an attempt to muzzle the Eurosceptic voice in parliament.

Other plans include moving the date of the election from June to May, weekend voting and reform of the system of immunity for MEPs.

Duff said he accepts his proposals will require a treaty change and would be subject to possibly tortuous negotiation between parliament and member states. All attempts at similar reform in the past have been blocked by member states.

But he is optimistic his report will be adopted by parliament by the end of the current mandate next year, allowing the issue to be taken up by the Swedish presidency of the EU in the second half of 2009.

He hopes the new system will be place by 2014.

EU assembly embraces EU symbols http://www.europeanvoice.com/article/2008/...bols/62641.aspx

By Rikard Jozwiak
09.10.2008 / 18:55 CET

European Parliament will increase its own use of the EU's flag, anthem and motto.

The European Parliament has overwhelmingly approved a motion to formalise the use of EU symbols, with 503 of its 785 members voting in favour of displaying the EU flag in all EP meeting rooms and at official events organised by the parliament.

The motion also stipulates that the European Union's anthem, based on Ludwig van Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (Ode to Joy), should be performed at the Parliament's formal sittings and at the opening ceremony that follows each European Parliament election.

All of the Parliament's official documents will have the EU motto “United in diversity” printed on them and there will also be a formal recognition of the celebration of Europe Day on 9 May.

Carlos Carnero González, a Spanish Socialist MEP, said during the debate that the decision was “a political message to our citizens: the symbols of the union are alive in the institution that represents 500 million inhabitants”.

The vote was based on a resolution passed in February, in which the European Parliament regretted that France's and the Netherlands' rejection to the constitutional treaty in 2005 had resulted in references to the use of EU symbols being dropped from the Treaty of Lisbon, an adjusted version of the constitutional treaty.

While the constitutional treaty referred to use of EU symbols across the bloc, today's vote relates strictly to the Parliament's use of them.

The 96 MEPs that voted against the proposals and the 15 who abstained mainly came from the Independence/Democracy group in the Parliament and non-attached members who fear a creeping extension of the use of EU symbols in public life. UK

Conservatives, who belong to the European People's Party (EPP-ED), were also against the idea of formalising the use of the EU symbols.

Geoffrey Van Orden, a Conservative representing the constituency of Eastern United Kingdom, said that his constituents “do not want a constitution, they do not want the Treaty of Lisbon and they certainly do not want a state called Europe and I think it is an affront to them to try and introduce or give official character to these symbols.”

EU steps up pressure on Ireland to hold second Lisbon Treaty referendum http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/newstopics...referendum.html

By Bruno Waterfield
Last Updated: 11:34PM BST 10 Oct 2008

European Union officials, Euro-MPs and high-level diplomatic contacts are stepping up the pressure on an increasingly isolated Ireland to hold a second referendum on the Lisbon Treaty.

Brian Cowen, Ireland's Prime Minister, must explain to a summit of Europe's leaders next Wednesday how he is planning to resuscitate the EU Treaty, which was rejected by Irish voters in June.

While the final decision will be taken in December, Mr Cowen will hear demands from France and Germany that a second referendum take place as early as March 2009, before European elections.

Brussels diplomats have warned Ireland that it is isolated after angering other EU countries, such as Britain, by taking controversial financial crisis measures that benefited Irish banks while "dumping on others".

"The economy might be going into freefall and the Irish really did not help things. Sympathy for their difficulties is running out," said a diplomat.

According to informal briefing notes circulating in Brussels, EU officials are already in the advanced planning stages for a second vote to be held in Ireland in either Spring or Autumn next year.

One document, seen by The Daily Telegraph, cites Irish sources predicting that Ireland will be offered an "opt-out" on EU defence and security cooperation alongside plans to ratify parts of the Treaty in the country's parliament.

A second vote would then be held on "sensitive" aspects of the EU Treaty with "diverse declarations" presented as major concessions to Irish concerns.

Another text even suggests the slogan "if you don't know, learn!" as the basis for a propaganda blitz targeting, what EU officials regard as, a "lack of understanding" among Irish voters.

"We need to change minds by dramatising how serious the consequences of another No will be for Ireland," said one official.

Irish sources have said the campaign will be posed as "put up or shut up" with voters being given the stark choice between the Treaty and membership of the EU.

Margot Wallstrom, European Commission Vice-President responsible for "communicating" the EU, is planning to set up a "rebuttal function" to tackle "misinformation" from No campaigners.

"We cannot treat the Irish 'no' as merely a national issue or only a Treaty ratification problem," she wrote in an internal memorandum.

"The difficulties encountered in explaining to citizens the rationale of the Lisbon Treaty and in clarifying that the EU needs to be equipped for today's and tomorrow's challenges are difficulties which we encounter across the Union."

Canadian Premier hopes to integrate economy with European Union

Published on 10-10-2008 Email To Friend Print Version

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, ONT. -- Canada's premiers will play a pivotal role in the country's efforts to integrate its economy with the 27 nations of the European Union, Quebec Premier Jean Charest says.

Preliminary talks between Canadian and European officials will begin on Oct. 17 at a summit in Montreal. The provinces' role in the negotiations will be instrumental to the fate of the proposed massive agreement because it involves issues that primarily fall under their jurisdiction, Mr. Charest told The Globe and Mail yesterday.

No deal could happen without the premiers at the table, he said.

"Unless we are fully involved in the negotiations, we are not going to get the deal we want," Mr. Charest said.

The Globe and Mail

He described the proposed pact as a groundbreaking initiative on a scale that has never been attempted. The accord would go well beyond the scope of the NAFTA agreement between Canada and the United States by encompassing not only trade in goods and services but also the free movement of skilled workers and an open market in government services and procurement.

Mr. Charest said the federal government can sign a treaty with other countries dealing with these areas. But he said Ottawa does not have the power to commit the provinces to areas that fall under their jurisdiction. "It is without effect if we don't sign on," he said.

The fact that provinces will be at the negotiating table reflects their efforts to play a major role in charting the country's destiny on key issues where their interests are at stake. The push to remove trade and investment barriers with the EU countries comes as Canada is making an effort to lessen its dependence on the United States, its largest trading partner.

Mr. Charest was in Niagara-on-the-Lake yesterday, where he and Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty spoke on a panel at the Ontario Economic Summit about the toll the weakened U.S. economy has taken on Central Canada. Thousands of manufacturing jobs have vanished in Ontario and Quebec in the past few years, and the pain is far from over, economists say.

Mr. McGuinty told the audience that Canada's premiers will lead their first-ever trade mission to China later this fall. "We need to find more ways to market ourselves as a nation," he said.

Mr. Charest has been involved in the initiative involving the EU countries for two years, including lobbying business leaders in its member countries. He said it is up to Canada to "hustle" for the proposed trans-Atlantic accord because no one is going to come knocking on its door.

"There's no one who gets up in the morning in the world community saying, 'why don't we make a deal with Canada today?' " Mr. Charest said. "If we want these types of agreements, we have to go out there and fight for them and hustle for them."

The pitch he is making to Europeans is to do a deal with Canada that can serve as a model for something far more ambitious with the United States.

"We've always had a very clear view that it's our responsibility to promote our interests abroad," Mr. Charest said.

EU flag and anthem revived by MEPs

2008 10 11
By Stephen Adams
http://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/worldnews/europe
/2823052/EU-flag-and-anthem-revived-by-MEPs.html

MEPs have decided to revive symbols of the European Union like the flag and the anthem in an attempt to foster greater pride in the institution.

The flag, a politically correct motto and Beethoven's Ode to Joy will all be used more by the European Parliament as it tries to help citizens identify more easily with the EU.

But Nigel Farage, leader of the UK Independence Party and an MEP himself, has accused his parliamentary colleagues of "trying to ram them down our throats".

MEPs said: "Symbols are vital elements of any communication process."

The politicians stated they "convey an emotional image of the underlying values of the organisations they represent."

With this in mind, they have decided to make more use of the flag and the motto "United in Diversity." It is to be printed on all material emanating from the European Parliament.

More controversially, the finale from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Ode to Joy, is also to be played more at official occasions.

It has unfortunate associations, having been used previously to celebrate Adolf Hitler's birthday and as the anthem of a socially divided Rhodesia under Ian Smith.

Chancellor Angela Merkel of Germany had said that eliminating the use of symbols was a key difference between the EU constitution, which was rejected in French and Dutch referenda in 2005, and the Lisbon Treaty which followed.

David Miliband, the Foreign Secretary, has also welcomed their reduced importance, telling the House of Commons last July: "It is good that the symbols, flags and anthems, which distracted attention from the discussion of the European constitutional treaty, are done away with so that we can focus on what will make the EU useful to this country - jobs, climate and energy, the issues that matter to ordinary people."

Mr Farage told The Times: "We were told that the symbols would disappear .. now they are trying to ram them down our throats."

European Leaders Seek `One Voice' to Counter Crisis

Published on 12-10-2008 Email To Friend Print Version
http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=206...refer=worldwide

European leaders met to forge a new set of measures to combat the credit freeze after their failure to act a week ago contributed to the worst sell-off in the region's stocks in two decades.

``I want Europe to speak with one voice for Europe and for the world because this is a global crisis," French President Nicolas Sarkozy told reporters as he greeted European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso at the Elysee Palace in Paris. Sarkozy said he's seeking ``an ambitious, coordinated plan."

German Chancellor Angela Merkel, whose government earlier this month rejected French suggestions to form a joint bank- rescue fund, said yesterday the euro region will implement ``the same toolbox of instruments." Merkel, Sarkozy and their counterparts in the 15-nation euro region are being forced to shift stance as a deepening slide in financial markets has threatened to tip Europe into a prolonged recession.

``Measures by euro-area governments to end the financial crisis have been uncoordinated and insufficient," said Juergen Michels, a Citigroup Inc. economist in London. ``Increasing risks of an economic disaster might force governments to set up more coordinated and more comprehensive measures."

U.K. Prime Minister Gordon Brown met Sarkozy, Barroso and European Central Bank President Jean-Claude Trichet. The leaders of the euro nations then gathered at 5 p.m. local time. The talks come after finance chiefs from the Group of Seven nations established guidelines on Oct. 10 for combating the credit crunch, while falling short of adopting new initiatives.

Draft Statement

The 15 euro countries may agree to guarantee interbank loans of as long as five years to break the credit-market freeze, according to a draft statement cited by Agence

France- Presse.

Luxembourg's Jean-Claude Juncker, who heads the Eurogroup of euro-region finance ministers, said in a statement today that ``no financial institution of systemic importance'' can be allowed to fail. Juncker, who will take part in today's meeting in Paris, said that access to liquidity will be assured, efforts to unblock financial markets will be intensified and individuals' savings accounts will be protected.

``Some of us hoped it had had more teeth or more muscles to it, but at least it was endorsed,'' French Finance Minister Christine Lagarde said in Washington yesterday, referring to the G-7 statement. Sarkozy has convened ``a meeting of all heads of states of the euro-group. Not to talk about it, but to actually put meat and muscles on the bones of that skeleton.''

`Quite Specific'

``I can assure you, you will not be disappointed, and it will be quite specific,'' she said.

Merkel said yesterday during a visit to eastern France that Germany backs ``coherent reaction in the euro-zone to the international financial crisis.'' In Paris today, she said joint action to shore up markets ``should be a sign of strength for the euro-zone.''

European benchmark stock indexes slid 22 percent last week amid an investor panic about the freeze in credit markets. The cost to protect corporate debt from default set new highs around the world and the rate banks charge each other for three-month loans climbed to record premiums over central bank benchmark rates.

Contracts on Europe's benchmark Markit iTraxx Crossover index, a measure of the cost to insure corporate bonds, soared more than 2 percentage points in the past month to 756.60 two days ago, according to JPMorgan Chase & Co.

Anglo-Irish Bank Corp. Plc, Ireland's third-biggest lender, and ING Groep NV, the largest Dutch financial-services institution, plunged more than 42 percent, leading declines in banks and insurers last week.

Brown's Rescue

U.K. policy makers took the lead in planning to purchase stakes in banks hammered by losses on assets tied to mortgages. Brown set up a 50 billion-pound ($85 billion) program to invest in at least eight British lenders. U.S. Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson will tap some of the $700 billion financial-rescue package approved by Congress this month to buy equity in financial companies.

It ``made sense to implement measures in Germany and other European states like the ones in the U.S. and U.K.'' Commerzbank AG Chairman Klaus-Peter Mueller said in a Bloomberg Television interview.

A German program may allot up to 100 billion euros ($134 billion) to recapitalize private banks, state banks and insurance companies, Handelsblatt reported, citing unidentified officials. Merkel said the plan would involve ``providing banks with sufficient capital so that they are able to operate on their own -- and I don't rule out that there could be capital support.''

Initial Response

European officials last month rejected taking more concerted action. Lagarde said then she had ``decided to take no other measures'' than banning short-selling and German Finance Minister Peer Steinbrueck dismissed the need to ``adopt a comparable program'' to the U.S. program to buy distressed assets from banks.

At an Oct. 4 summit, leaders of France, Germany, Britain, Italy, Luxembourg, the ECB and European Commission stopped short of a regional rescue effort. They agreed to ease accounting rules, seek tougher financial regulations and weaken enforcement of competition and budget laws.

Today's Paris crisis talks, the second in as many weekends, reflects the speed at which the U.S.-led credit crunch has infected Europe's banking system, financial markets and economy. Governments this month have bailed out financial companies including Fortis and Dexia SA. The ECB cut interest rates this past week for the first time since 2003 and offered banks unlimited funding every week at the main refinancing rate.

Frozen Markets

Even so, Europe's credit markets remain frozen, like those elsewhere. The cost of borrowing euros for three months remains close to a record high, choking off access to cash for companies and consumers. That is pushing the 15-nation euro area toward its first recession since the single currency began trading in 1999.

``We have to reduce the cost of borrowing in Europe and there is room for that,'' Corrado Passera, chief executive officer at Intesa Sanpaolo SpA, Italy's second-biggest bank, said yesterday.

Brown's government has also proposed guaranteeing loans between banks to thaw money markets. The G-7 refrained from endorsing the approach two days ago. The U. K. leader may renew his push today. The U.K. plans to recapitalize its biggest banks including Royal Bank of Scotland Group Plc and provide 250 billion pounds of bank loan guarantees.

Brok wants second Lisbon referendum before EU elections http://www.theparliament.com/latestnews/ne...e-eu-elections/

Mon 13th Oct 2008
Martin Banks

German deputy Elmar Brok has backed calls for the Irish to hold another referendum on the stalled Lisbon treaty before next June's European elections.

Irish prime minister Brian Cowen is expected to come under pressure from both Paris and Bonn to call a second referendum as early as March when he attends this week's EU summit in Brussels.

Brok, a member of the European convention that paved the way for the now defunct EU constitution, said the referendum should be held before the elections "otherwise the momentum will be lost".

"Of course, it is up to the Irish to decide whether or not to hold another referendum," he went on.

"However, a large number of Irish voters thought they were poorly informed about the treaty before the first vote and this is something the Irish government will have to address.

"I believe we need to be able to go before the electorate next year having put all such institutional matters behind us.

"Rather than this, the public wants to know what we have to say on issues such as climate change and the current financial crisis," said the centre-right MEP, a former chair of parliament's foreign affairs committee.

Brok was speaking at a news conference in parliament with Spanish EPP deputy Íñigo Méndez de Vigo on the future of the treaty. His comments come after Irish foreign minister Micheál Martin told MEPs that the debate about the treaty must "take its course" in his country.

Meanwhile, press reports at the weekend say that EU officials are already in the advanced planning stages for a second vote in Ireland in either spring or August next year.

Margot Wallström, the commission's vice president responsible for "communicating Europe", is thought to be planning to set up a "rebuttal function" to tackle "misinformation" from no campaigners.

UK urged to drop its 'paralysing stand-off' with Europe http://www.theparliament.com/latestnews/ne...ff-with-europe/

Wed 8th Oct 2008
Martin Banks

A new report says that Britain's ability to deal with the challenges of the 21st century will depend on its "active participation" in the EU.

The report says that following the Irish rejection of the Lisbon treaty it would be "wasteful" if the UK were to "fall back into its paralysing and perennial stand-off" between Eurosceptic and Europhobe opinion.

Sir Stephen Wall, chairman of the Chatham House commission, says: "In this report, we have tried to analyse how best the British interest can be safeguarded and promoted.

"If we conclude that we can best do it by working with those of our European neighbours who share our political values, that is a conclusion driven by hard logic, not soft love."

The report, 'A British agenda for Europe', was presented at a news conference in Brussels on Tuesday.

It also concludes that British thinking on many of the international challenges of the next decade - from combating climate change to dealing with a rising China - will evolve closer to its EU partners' views than to those of the United States.

It says no government, whether one of the world's major powers, an intermediate power like Britain, or a smaller state, will be able to protect the interests of its citizens on its own.

Therefore, a "clear British vision that looks beyond the Lisbon treaty" at the range of risks emerging from beyond Europe's borders is "essential", it says.

The report says the EU should encourage Ukrainian integration into the EU, which, it says, would further stabilise a European country that has "great economic significance" for the EU in a number of areas, including food production and energy transportation.

It predicts that Britain's energy picture will change "radically" over the next 20 years and, as supplies of British North Sea oil and gas decline, increased imports of gas will have to come from Russia.

"Britain should push for a more coordinated European energy strategy in order to be in a position to better handle Russia's dominant position within European energy markets," it says.

It says the "island mentality" that dominates British debate on domestic security "disregards the increasingly mobile" nature of 21st century threats.

"Confronting a terror plot aimed at London but coordinated in Frankfurt and Calais requires Europe-wide structures and procedures for judicial, police and counter-terrorism cooperation.

"Britain's arrangement to be able to opt in or out of current formal EU procedures in this area allows it the flexibility to pick and choose its areas of cooperation.

"In the future, however, there is the real risk that Britain will be excluded from certain enhanced areas of EU cooperation, as it is currently from the Schengen system."

Danish PM: meltdown shows cost of rejecting euro

Associated Press 10.14.08, 6:43 AM ET http://www.forbes.com/feeds/ap/2008/10/14/ap5549924.html

COPENHAGEN, Denmark - Denmark's prime minister says the global financial meltdown has highlighted the disadvantages of staying outside the euro zone.

Anders Fogh Rasmussen says the government maintains its target to hold a Danish referendum on adopting the euro before the next scheduled national election in 2011.

Because it's not in the euro zone, Denmark was not invited when the big European nations met over the weekend to discuss their response to the financial crisis.

And while the European Central Bank slashed its interest rate, Denmark had to raise its rate to defend the Danish krone.

Fogh Rasmussen said Tuesday that for the first time the consequences of remaining outside the euro zone have "become very clear to Danes."

Ireland changes bank guarantee to meet EU rules

http://www.hindu.com/thehindu/holnus/000200810131713.htm

BRUSSELS (AP): EU regulators are likely to clear Ireland's bank guarantee after the country made broad changes to the plan, the European Commission said on Monday.

The EU executive said it now stands as the only neutral judge of EU governments' plans to pump billions into the banking sector.

Ireland _ with banks that loaned heavily during a housing boom _ was the first European country to guarantee all bank deposits and interbank loans for six Irish-based lenders.

Britain and others at first complained this would attract money away from their nations' banks without a guarantee to Irish rivals. But Britain, Germany and others now plan their own guarantees to shore up troubled banks.

Under EU pressure, Ireland has agreed to cover major foreign-based banks operating in the country. It also agreed to create a pricing program levying a fee on banks to pay for the guarantee, and to set safeguards to stop banks from profiting from a plan that now limits their business and balance-sheet growth.

EU Competition Commissioner Neelie Kroes on Monday warned that her office was now the ``only neutral referee'' checking that billions of euros (dollars) backing up banks won't damage competition across the economy.

``There will be problems if those measures are discriminatory or could cause negative spillovers in other member states by, for example, diverting financial flows,'' she said.

Under European Union state aid rules, governments can only fund private businesses in a strict set of circumstances to make sure they don't give one company an unfair advantage.

The current crisis puts those rules at risk with four EU nations _ France, Germany, Italy and Britain _ calling last week for more flexibility.

Kroes defended the EU's state aid rules by saying they exist to keep the economy functioning well and governments ``have to rise above the impulse for unilateral'' action that could cause chaos.

EU antitrust regulators say they are already flexible because they quickly cleared emergency government rescues of mortgage lenders Bradford & Bingley and Hypo Real Estate, as well as Denmark's banking guarantee.

Iceland warming to EU, IMF as crisis threatens to worsen

Published on 14-10-2008 Email To Friend Print Version
http://www.gulf-times.com/site/topics/prin...48&parent_id=28

REYKJAVIK: A senior Icelandic minister long opposed to joining the European Union said yesterday that option must now be considered to safeguard the island's crisis-hit economy.
Iceland was forced over the past week to take over three big banks, shut down its stock market and abandon attempts to defend its free-falling currency.
Trading in Icelandic shares was due to begin again yesterday but the exchange said it would now start on Tuesday.
Iceland has long been wary of joining the EU for fear of the impact on its vital fishing industry. It has also been cautious, even as the financial crisis erupted, about seeking help from the International Monetary Fund (IMF).
But there were indications yesterday that the island could embrace both.
Fisheries Minister Einar Gudfinnsson said on Icelandic radio: "It's no secret, I've been against membership. However, the current turmoil means we have to look at every option."
EU membership is a charged issue because it is a pre-requisite for joining the euro. Before the current financial storm, many citizens and politicians had called for Iceland to move in that direction.
The crisis is rapidly changing the political landscape. Foreign Minister Ingibjorg Solrun Gisladottir, writing in yesterday's edition of daily Morganbladid, said embracing the EU and adopting the euro had to be long-term ambition now.
Gisladottir is a Social Democrat, a party which has been pro-EU.
"In the short term, our defence is cooperation with the International Monetary Fund and in the long term EU membership, adoption of the euro and backup from the European Central Bank," she wrote.
A European Commission spokeswoman said she was not aware of Gudfinnsson's comments but the EU's standard position remained that Iceland is a European country and thus entitled to apply for EU membership.
"Negotiation with Iceland, theoretically speaking, could go fast because as a member of the European Economic Area, it has already adopted many EU laws," a commission official said.
Diplomats said Iceland sent a parliamentary delegation to Brussels last month to plead for some link between its battered currency and the euro, but they were told firmly that only member states were entitled to such protection."
In the meantime, Icelanders must deal with currency curbs as the country tries to avoid a complete collapse.
The central bank, in a posting on its website, said people withdrawing foreign currency should show proof of a travel ticket or other documentation. – Reuters

Barroso and Sarkozy plead for permanent EU presidency

http://euobserver.com/9/26954

ELITSA VUCHEVA

Today @ 09:27 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso and French President Nicolas Sarkozy - currently chairing the EU - have urged the need for a permanent EU presidency to replace the rotating system.

"We need a president of the Council [the institution representing EU member states] that does not change every six months," Mr Barroso told journalists at the end of an EU leaders' meeting in Brussels on Thursday (16 October). "To lead [EU] member states, we need a very strong presidency."

The EU's Lisbon treaty - rejected by Ireland in June but already ratified by 22 EU states - puts forward a permanent head of the council as one of its key reforms.

Relations between Mr Barroso and Mr Sarkozy have warmed in the last months, with the French president referring to Mr Barroso by his first name, Jose Manuel, during Thursday's post-summit press conference and with the commission president even proposing the French leader fill the post.

"I do not know whether we are in condition to propose to president Sarkozy to be president of the European Council - I think he does not want it after his experience in the last months," Mr Barroso said referring to the Russia-Georgia conflict and the financial crisis, which the French president has had to tackle.

"In any case, me, I would vote in favour, of course," Mr Barroso added, smiling.

Mr Sarkozy stressed that the current situation of the EU presidency rotating from country to country every six months "must change," so that "tough dossiers" do not keep being passed around.

But he made it clear that EU president or not, he would remain closely involved in the bloc's affairs.

"It is not because one is not president of the Council that one can say nothing in Europe. France will continue to say things [after its presidency ends on 31 December]. We will perhaps still have the right, no?" he said.

"Yes," Mr Barroso replied.

French presidency noted 11.5 out of 20 at mid-term

Meanwhile, an independent Brussels-based think-tank has said the French presidency of the EU deserves a mark of 11.5 out of 20 for its mid-term performance.

The Thomas More Institute for European studies gave Paris its highest marks – nine and eight out of 10 respectively – for delivering an immigration pact, which will govern the way the bloc tackles migration and which EU leaders adopted on Thursday (16 October), and its plans to deal with the global financial crisis.

But France "can do better" when it comes to climate change and energy security, and has only provided "minimum service" to deal with the EU's institutional turmoil provoked by the Irish rejection of Lisbon, the Institute said on Wednesday.

The think-tank based its assessment on a study of 12 major themes of the French EU presidency – which started on 1 July – and took into account "not only the results obtained but also the implications and capacity of [French president] Nicolas Sarkozy and the French government to work in concert with France's partners."

Ireland to work with EU lawyers on Lisbon opt-outs

http://euobserver.com/9/26953

PHILIPPA RUNNER

Today @ 09:15 CET

Irish Taoisach Brian Cowen said his government is consulting with EU council legal services on drafting possible "opt-outs" to the Lisbon treaty, speaking after an EU summit in Brussels on Thursday (17 October).

"We are prepared to go into that process in good faith," he said, the Irish Times reports, with the structure of the European Commission, EU military integration, taxation and civil rights the likely areas of concern.

The Irish leader also underlined his personal support for the Lisbon document and used Iceland's financial meltdown to show the benefits of EU and eurozone membership.

"There is a huge body of opinion - not shared by the Irish people as things stand - that sees the need for stronger institutions, for better decision-making processes, for more effective decision-making to make sure we can deal with challenges that transcend national boundaries," Mr Cowen said.

"I wouldn't like to think what the situation would be if we ended up like them [Iceland] with our own currency," he added. "The access to the resources of the ECB [European Central Bank] far outweighs the resources of the Irish central bank or Iceland's central bank."

Ireland rejected the Lisbon treaty in a referendum in June, causing a headache for the country's pro-European Fianna Fail government, with 22 other EU states having already completed ratification.

The Irish leader on the first day of the EU summit pledged to come up with a road map for getting out of the situation in time for the EU summit in December.

But any future solution is unlikely to be in place in time for the June 2009 European elections, in a situation that will see 12 EU states lose 15 MEPs between them in order to comply with exisiting Nice treaty rules.

A debate in Ireland's upper house - the Seanad - on Thursday saw senator Eugene Regan, a lawyer and a member of the equally pro-European Fine Gael opposition party, suggest the EU runs the elections on Lisbon rules anyway.

"I don't believe any constitutional issue arises here. I do think it is a problem that we have created," he said.

EU-15 mostly on track to meet Kyoto targets

http://euobserver.com/9/26955

LEIGH PHILLIPS

Today @ 09:26 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - The 15 'old' European Union member states are on track to meeting their targets for cutting greenhouse gas emissions that they signed up to under the 1997 Kyoto Agreement.

The EU-15 as a whole, excluding member states that joined in 2004 and 2007, should meet its collective target of cutting greenhouse gas emissions by eight percent for the period 2008-2012 compared with 1990, the Kyoto agreement's baseline year.

While Denmark, Italy and Spain are behind in reducing emissions, the performance of the other EU-15 nations is enough to pick up the slack so that the EU-15 overall should meet its Kyoto commitments, according to figures in a report from the European Environment Agency (EEA).

"Emission performance remains mixed in the EU-15. A few member states are still off their Kyoto track," said Jacqueline McGlade, the executive director of the agency.

The EEA figures show that as of 2006, four EU-15 Member States - France, Greece, Sweden and the UK - had already reached a level below their Kyoto target.

Eight additional other states - Austria, Belgium, Finland, Germany, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Portugal - project that they will achieve their targets in the future.

The reductions are being achieved by a combination of domestic policies and measures, reforestation and buying "carbon offsets," in which the countries pay for other states to make the carbon reductions on their behalf.

The EU-15 have already cut emissions by 2.7 percent, which should climb to 3.6 percent by 2010. Reforestation counts for 1.4 percent of the eight percent cut, and the purchase of carbon offset credits through "Kyoto mechanisms" delivers another three percent.

Most of the EU-15 are planning for reforestation to achieve much of their Kyoto target. However, the total amount of carbon dioxide that could be removed annually between 2008 and 2012 is relatively small (1.4 percent compared to 1990), according to the EEA, although it is somewhat higher than the projections made in 2007.

This means that the countries may have to purchase more carbon offset credits to make up the difference.

"In the end, some member states might make use of Kyoto mechanisms more intensively than they are currently planning," the report says.

EU Leaders Call for Global Currency

Kurt Nimmo
Saturday, Oct 18, 2008
http://www.prisonplanet.com/eu-leaders-cal...l-currency.html

If we are to believe the Washington Post, French president and current EU leader Nicolas Sarkozy has pledged to save us from nameless “freewheeling bankers and traders” who get the blame for the current economic crisis.

Sarkozy, Gordon Brown, and EU honcho José Manuel Barroso are talking up an international summit to discuss an “urgent overhaul of the world’s financial architecture,” that is to say a new Bretton Woods to establish a brand spanking new international economic order. Sarkozy has managed to grab George Bush’s ear and he will travel to Washington on Saturday to lay the groundwork for a conference.

In 1944, 44 allied nations met at a resort in Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, to fiddle with monetary standards, fix exchange rates, and create the IMF and World Bank. “Launching a remake of this old model — particularly in such a short time, with so many new participants — would represent a daunting challenge at any time, but particularly during the twilight of the Bush presidency and the crisis that is still jolting banks and stock markets around the world,” reports the Post.

(Article continues below)

Sarkozy and the EU leaders would have us believe this new Bretton Woods will call for “globally coordinated regulation of the financial industry, elimination of tax havens and a compensation system in which traders are not rewarded for dangerous risk-taking,” among other things.

It was the demise of Bretton Woods in 1971, insists European Central Bank president Jean- Claude Trichet, that led to the abandonment of regulation and subsequent market turmoil. “The explosion of the first Bretton Woods in a way could be interpreted as a rejection of discipline,” said Trichet, reports Bloomberg.

Gordon Brown, the former Chancellor of the Exchequer, wants to fix that turmoil with a new spate of regulations aimed at international finance. On October 13 in London, Brown said “we must devise new rules for a world of global capital flows” just as the founders of Bretton Woods “devised rules for a world of limited capital flows.”

“We now have global financial markets but what we do not have is anything other than national and regional regulation and supervision,” Brown lamented from Brussels.

All of this is nonsense. It should be obvious by now the bankers engineered the current crisis in order to consolidate their hold on the global economy and all the talk about rogue traders, tax havens, and over-compensated executives is merely that — talk, or more specifically a sales pitch, a slick parlor trick devised to fool the commoners.

Glossed over in all the corporate media coverage is the global elite demand that a global currency be established. “Europe wants to present a blueprint for a new worldwide currency system,” reports the AFP in the video here.

“Another subject in tomorrow’s world is that of the great currencies,” Reuters reported Sarkozy musing on October 16. “How many should there be? What should the agreement between these great currencies be? Should we organize a discussion?”

Any discussion would be purely academic, as the ruling elite long ago decided to force a global currency down our throats. In fact, a global currency is at the very core of their plan to dominate the world. Control money and you control the destiny of states, you eliminate national sovereignty. “The control of money and credit strikes at the very heart of national sovereignty,” A.W. Clausen, president of Bank of America once observed.

As Georgetown professor and CFR historian Carroll Quigley noted, the goal of the banking families and their minions consists of “nothing less than to create a world system of financial control in private hands able to dominate the political system of each country and the economy of the world as a whole… controlled in a feudalist fashion by the central banks of the world acting in concert, by secret agreements arrived at in frequent private meetings and conferences.”

It remains to be seen if the EU will realize its “solution” to the world economic crisis. In 2007, Robert Mundell, “the father of the euro,” noted that “international monetary reform usually becomes possible only in response to a felt need and the threat of a global crisis.”

Certainly, the elite cooked up an appropriate global crisis, now they will engage in a full court press to establish a global currency and eventually a global government.

EU's Juncker Says U.K. Will Consider Adopting Euro After Crisis

By Simone Meier
http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=206...QW29p0&refer=uk

Oct. 15 (Bloomberg) -- Luxembourg Finance Minister Jean- Claude Juncker told German newspaper Rheinischer Merkur the U.K. will consider adopting the euro once the credit crisis abates.

``The British prime minister had to beg to be let into the room in which the euro group was meeting,'' Juncker told the newspaper in an interview published today. ``I'm sure that when the storm is over, the British will think about whether they shouldn't become an equal in all decision-making bodies.''

``The sole aim and purpose of all negotiations'' by world leaders ``was to win back trust of financial markets and investors,'' Juncker said. ``We've obviously achieved that. Now it's about maintaining this trust on markets in a lasting way.''

Juncker, who chairs a group of counterparts from the euro area, said he doesn't think ``it's necessary to make a clean sweep of the executive floors'' of global banks after the credit crisis. ``I'm demanding, however, that everyone remembers after the crisis, who solved it. Politicians did and not bankers.''

Russia should join EU, Berlusconi says

http://www.earthtimes.org/articles/show/23...sconi-says.html

Brussels - Russia should be allowed to join the European Union in the coming years, Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi said Wednesday. "I consider Russia to be a Western nation. So my project is that the Russian Federation should become a member of the EU in the coming years," Berlusconi told Italian reporters on the sidelines of an EU summit in Brussels.

Berlusconi's comments on Russia's EU aspirations were not new, but they nevertheless raised eyebrows in Brussels.

EU-Russian relations have sunk to a low since the August conflict in Georgia, and EU leaders have decided to freeze talks on a new cooperation agreement with Moscow.

Asked whether the time had come for the EU to normalize its relations with Moscow, Berlusconi said: "I would go beyond that."

Berlusconi has frequently touted his close friendship with Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, and Putin's two daughters have been spotted in the past spending their summer holidays at Berlusconi's villa in Sardinia.

Ireland promises Lisbon clarity in December

ELITSA VUCHEVA
15.10.2008 @ 21:25 CET
http://euobserver.com/18/26942

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS – Irish leader Brian Cowen on Wednesday (15 October) briefed EU colleagues on Ireland's progress since its rejection of the EU's Lisbon treaty in June, promising to present an action plan on a way out of the deadlock by December.

"Four months have elapsed since our referendum and our domestic political debate is taking its course, but still has some way to go," he told EU heads of state and government gathering for the October summit in Brussels.

Mr Cowen insisted that "it is not yet possible to be prescriptive about outcomes" of the Irish debate, but said he aimed to "have identified the necessary steps that need to be taken next year" by the EU leaders' next meeting in December.

"I look forward to returning here in December with a view to our defining together the elements of a solution and a common path to follow," the taoiseach told fellow state leaders.

The Irish premier also highlighted the efforts his government had put into finding a way out of the stalemate.

Following the No vote, Ireland had "commissioned a comprehensive, independent study into the reasons why people voted the way they did."

In the aftermath of the publication of the survey results, a parliamentary committee on Ireland's future in the European Union was established, with a task to examine "the issues that arose during the [referendum] campaign, including the concerns highlighted by the survey, and how they sit in the broader context of our EU membership," Mr Cowen said.

The committee is due to issue its report by the end of November.

Under pressure

Ireland has been under increasing pressure from other EU governments to find a way to pass the Lisbon treaty, despite the No vote in June, as 22 EU states have already ratified the document.

Sweden is expected to do so in the next months, while there are still question marks regarding ratification in the Czech republic, set to chair the EU in early 2009, Poland and Germany.

Dublin is also under increasing time pressure, as it seems increasingly likely that the June elections to the European Parliament will have to be held according to current EU rules, which foresee a reduction of the number of MEPs to 736.

The current rules would also force a reduction in the number of EU commissioners from the current one-per-state figure of 27, with a new commission to be appointed after the elections next year.

"I am extremely mindful that there are important milestones in the course of 2009 which require clarity at an early date," the Irish premier said.

"We will continue to work with our partners to ensure that we can overcome the uncertainty that currently exists," he added.

The Corporatists

By Philip Jones
10-20-8

Corporatists of left, right and centre show a marked hostility to allegations that the European Union is fundamentally fascist. This is perhaps not surprising since they combine in their belief in supranational government, collective solutions, corporatist economics, State intervention and what Tony Blair often termed the "Third Way" most of the characteristics of fascism.

They must therefore seek to distance themselves from that discredited ideology. This is made easier if they can find an enemy to whom they can ascribe the values of "fascism" - they choose nationalists and those they term "the extreme right".

A fine example is the article by Professor Richard Overy in the London Evening Standard of 15th May 2002 who described "fascism" as an exclusively "right wing" movement. This false analysis was supported by pictures of the Frenchman Le Pen and the late Austrian politician Jorg Haider who are in principal nationalists, not fascists. The defining aspect of fascism is that it is neither right nor left nor centrist it is left and right and centrist as the support for fascism in the 1930s from Liberals like Lloyd George, Conservatives like Samuel Hoare and Socialists like Ramsay Macdonald, Lord Allen of Hurtwood and Arnold Toynbee clearly demonstrate.

Fascism as represented by Hitler's Germany, Mussolini's Italy and the Vichy France collaborationists most certainly contained right wing elements, but had at least as many leftist factions. Mussolini was a socialist (he was the editor of the Italian Socialist Party's newspaper). Hitler joined the German Labour Party and just as Tony Blair rid Britain in the 1990's of its nationalisation policies so did Hitler in pre war Germany.

Whereas the much vilified Le Pen joined the Resistance against Fascism, former French President Francois Mitterand, later the leader of the French Socialist Party was a hero of the Fascist Vichy regime. The wartime leader of British Fascism, Oswald Mosley was a Labour minister and became the leader of the British Union of Fascists. His wife Lady Diana Mosley (91) recently declared in a BBC interview her opposition to Le Pen and her support for the European Union!

Fascism is on the move again in the form of the European Super-Statists who have mirrored in the EU project virtually every political and economic structure of 1940s Fascist Europe. Now, as it was back then, Czechoslovakia has been broken up. Yugoslavia has been carved up into petty `statelets, and currencies have been abolished.. Now as then, if the `Eurocrats` have their way, national parliaments are existing on borrowed time, to be maintained as useless shells. Now as then, the consistent anti-fascists in Europe - Russia and Yugoslavia - have been attacked and the fascist States - like Germany, Croatia (which managed to kill 400,000 Serbs, Jews and gypsies in the Jasenovac concentration camp) and Albania (which had its own Waffen SS division) - are on the (political) rise again - thanks to the power of a new German Europe.

Professor Overy wrote totally erroneously that the Dutch "have no tradition of fascism". In fact they were the only country to supply two full Waffen SS divisions for the German army. To describe Pim Fortuyn (murdered by a real fascist thug) as a fascist is preposterous. The homosexual Fortuyn had been attacked by a Muslim cleric (Bosnian and Albanian Muslims and many Arabs were faithful allies of Nazi Germany in the 1940s!) who said that a homosexual was "worse than a pig". His justified response was hardly extreme. What the sadly late Haider and Le Pen are harnessing in their rather crude nationalism are the votes of those whose nations, democracies and jobs (5 - 6 million unemployed in Germany thanks to "preparation" for the Euro) have been destroyed.

It is the, Brown's, Merkel's, Foch Rasmussen's, and Sarkovzsky's of this world who have recreated in this, the first decade of the 21st century a mirror image of the unemployment and desperation of the 1930s and 1940s in their supranational, unaccountable Euro-State. It was Monsieur Mitterrand who eroded and marginalised the authority of French democracy, not Le Pen.

It was the European Union which brought pressure to bare on the Austrians who they could not vote for, namely the late and probably assassinated Jorg Haider. It was Blair and Chirac who bombed journalists in a Belgrade broadcasting station not Fortuyn and it is the European Union which threatens to remove trial by jury and habeas corpus, not euro sceptics.
We are living in the age of the New Totalitarians. Almost all the so called `leaders` of the member states of the Europe Union are in thrall to the Corporatist Ideology of the architects of the New World Order. Their New European Order is little more than a stepping stone to the imposition of a Global tyranny based on the new `Third Way` or Communitarian ideology so beloved of the likes of Tony Blair et al.

Communitarians want to create a post-modern, post-democratic feudal society run by a small number of rich and powerful people with everyone else working as peasants. In order to achieve their objectives they must destroy the middle class and the nation state.

Isn't this what they are doing across Europe. Wake up people, before it's just too late.

" The Matrix is a system, and that system is our enemy. When you are inside it, you look around and what do you see? Businessmen, Teachers, Lawyers, Carpenters. The very minds of the people we are trying to save. But until we do, these people are part of that system and that makes them our enemies. You have to understand that most of these people are not ready to be `unplugged`. And many are so hopelessly dependent on the system, that they will fight to defend it ".

EU 'imposing too many UK laws'

27/10/2008
http://www.mirror.co.uk/news/latest/2008/1...15875-20842848/

The European Union passes too many laws and "goldplating" by Whitehall makes EU laws even longer, the TaxPayers' Alliance has said.

The pressure group, which campaigns for lower taxes, said the EU had added an average of 942 new laws to the UK statute book each year since 1998.

These regulations were an "enormous burden to business" and Britain's relationship with the EU needed a "serious rethink", campaigners said.

In a report, the TaxPayers' Alliance said the Government used EU directives as "vehicles for their own policy agendas", attaching numerous additional clauses and extending their scope - a practice known as "goldplating".

The report - titled Brussels or Whitehall: Locating the Source of the UK's Regulatory Burden - found that there were currently 16,980 EU acts in force.

Campaigners said more than 23,000 new regulations were added to the British statute book between 1997 and 2003 alone - an average of nearly 15 per working day. Health and safety requirements doubled between 1980 and 2008, from 5,932 to 10,360.

Ben Farrugia, a TaxPayers' Alliance policy analyst, said: "Regulations are an enormous burden to business, particularly in a time of financial hardship.

"The EU's addiction to regulating and Whitehall's compulsive gold-plating have added billions to business costs in recent years. Both the legislative process which has created this regulatory tangle and Britain's relationship with the EU needs a serious rethink."

The campaign group said the European Union (Transparency) Bill, put forward by Tory MP Mark Harper earlier this month, should be reintroduced as soon as possible.

Mr Harper's bid to force ministers to indicate whether legislation was "made in Britain" or originated in the EU was defeated in a whipped vote in the Commons on October 8. The TaxPayers' Alliance said the Bill would have brought a "new degree of openness" into the legislative system.

Brussels seeks Russia talks amid missile threat

http://euobserver.com/9/27053

RENATA GOLDIROVA

06.11.2008 @ 09:27 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - The European Commission has put pressure on EU capitals to approve next week the resumption of talks on a new EU-Russia partnership treaty, put on ice due to Russia's military presence in Georgia.

"These negotiations should continue, first because this would allow the EU to pursue its own interests with Russia, and secondly because this is the best way to engage with Russia on the basis of a unified position," the commission stated on Wednesday (5 November).

Brussels says that the next negotiating sessions should be agreed as soon as Monday (10 November), when 27 EU foreign ministers gather for their regular monthly meeting.

The move cannot be seen as a gift to Russia, external relations commissioner Benita Ferrero-Waldner said, AFP reports. "This does not mean business as usual because we cannot accept the status quo in Georgia."

Talks on an EU-Russia strategic deal were postponed on 1 September until Russian troops withdraw from Georgia's territory to positions held before the short war over South Ossetia in August.

Some post-Communist countries such as Lithuania and Poland - strong allies of Georgia in the conflict - claim that Moscow has not lived up to its committment.

Russian troops have withdrawn from the zones adjacent to South Ossetia and Abkhazia, with a Kremlin source quoted by Interfax on Wednesday saying Moscow would welcome more EU monitors in Georgia.

But the Russian army continues to operate in the Akhalgori district and the upper Kodori valley - zones inside the breakaway regions, but previously controlled by Georgian authorities. Russia is also building up troops inside the rebel-held zones and has refused to let OSCE monitors back into South Ossetia.

Earlier this week, Lithuanian and Polish presidents - Valdas Adamkus and Lech Kaczynski - issued a joint statement, expressing deep concern over the lack of will on the Russian side.

Russian threat

Meanwhile, Moscow has renewed its threat to deploy Iskander missiles in Kaliningrad - the Russian enclave between Lithuania and Poland - in response to US plans to place components of a missile shield in central Europe.

"What we've had to deal with in the last few years - the construction of a global missile defence system, the encirclement of Russia by military blocs, unrestrained NATO enlargement ...The impression is we are being tested to the limit," Russian president Dmitry Medvedev said on Russian TV.

The Czech Republic has described the threat as "unfortunate," while Poland said it was "a new political step."

But the timing of Mr Medvedev's address suggests another message, coming just hours after US president-elect Barack Obama gave his victory speech and taking the European Commission by surprise after its recommendation.

The Russian move could be seen as an attempt to gain greater respect from the incoming US administration as well as to revive the EU's internal rift over the controversial project.

Obama and EU to reinvent global politics, pundit says

http://euobserver.com/9/27054

VALENTINA POP

06.11.2008 @ 09:55 CET

The Obama administration will play a big role in "reinventing" the international system, especially on the financial side, in strong partnership with the EU, US foreign policy expert David J. Rothkopf said on Wednesday.

A former trade offical in the Clinton administration and a consultant on foreign affairs and emerging markets, Mr Rothkopf was talking from Washington during a video-conference organized by the Brussels branch of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, an international think-tank associated with the US State Department.

"President Obama will play a bigger role in re-inventing the international system than any other president before in past decades," Mr Rothkopf argued, with a number of organisations and treaties badly needing an "update" or to be replaced altogether – ranging from the stalled Doha round of trade talks known to the non-proliferation treaty, as well as outdated bodies such as the G7 or the International Monetary Fund that don't include the emerging economies such as China.

US-EU relations will "clearly" improve, with a second trip to Europe probably taking place in the first months of his mandate, Mr Rothkopf said.

The tendency of the Democratic Party to be "more comfortable" with multi-lateralism and listening to its European partners will also contribute to improving relations, he said.

But there was also a "necessity" for this partnership to improve, Mr Rothkopf argued.

"We can't do things alone, we need partnerships and burden sharing. I would expect a debate within NATO about a broader role and sense of burden sharing," he said, mentioning Afghanistan as an example where European help is needed.

"Problems within Europe are going to have an impact on this as much as US obligations are, to the extent that the EU is divided on some of the big issues of the time and on the nature of the common foreign policy and common defence policy," Mr Rothkopf added.

New global financial regulator and IMF reform

Mr Rothkopf emphasised the need for a global financial regulator – something the G20 meeting in Washington on 15 November is still unlikely to agree upon, with the outgoing Bush administration opposing this idea and the Obama team yet not in charge.

But G20 leaders would probably agree to meet again in the first months of 2009, when both the creation of such a body, as well as the reform of the IMF could take a more concrete shape.

He spoke of a "regulatory renaissance" and of of "fusion capitalism", by which he means seeing European and Asian visions of capitalism and how markets are to be regulated take greater prominance on the international stage, and not just the so-called Washington Consensus. Yet on the down side, Mr Rothkopf warned against "blazing new trails on protectionism" that would isolate economies and only aggravate problems.

In terms of what a global financial regulator would look like, Mr Rothkopf mentioned the EU as an example of "creating super-national structures," while also noting the problem of enforcement. "Getting everybody in a room and agreeing on principles is easy – this is what we are probably going to get on 15 November – but next year we'll see whether we'll get institutions that have the ability to enforce new global standards on the international financial markets. That's going to be the challenge," he said.

Any financial agreement would also foresee a leadership role for the US, in coalition with the EU and other countries, Mr Rothkopf projected.

MEPs back penalties for hiring irregular migrants

http://euobserver.com/9/27051

RENATA GOLDIROVA

05.11.2008 @ 09:29 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - The European Parliament civil liberties committee has backed the idea of introducing sanctions, administrative as well as criminal, against employers who hire undocumented immigrants from outside Europe.

Italian Socialist Claudio Fava, in charge of the dossier in the parliament, described the vote as "a step forward".

"Illegal immigrants help meet the needs of some unscrupulous employers who are willing to take advantage of workers prepared to undertake what are mostly low-skilled and low paid jobs," he said.

Brussels estimates there are four to eight million immigrants working without proper documentation in the EU, with the number swelling by up to half a million each year.

According to the approved piece of law, employers hiring irregular immigrants will have to, among other things, pay costs for the migrant's return, outstanding wages, taxes and social contributions.

Criminal penalties could be triggered in circumstances such as extreme exploitation and human trafficking, while those exploited severely could be granted a temporary residency permit in order to participate in a trial trying to win what an employer owns to them.

The directive does not exclude regularisation of clandestine workers, Mr Fava said.

But the issue of criminal measures is very divisive among EU member states.

In July - when the draft legislation was debated by EU interior ministers - some countries, including Germany, Finland, Hungary, Latvia, Poland, the Netherlands and Sweden, argued there were other ways to fight irregular employment.

The European Commission proposal on sanctions against employers who hire undocumented non-EU immigrants dates back to May 2007. It is part of the union's efforts to curb such forms of migration, while boosting legally sanctioned ways of labourers entering its territory.

Barcelona to host Mediterranean Union headquarters

http://euobserver.com/9/27045

ELITSA VUCHEVA

04.11.2008 @ 17:48 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS – The headquarters of the recently launched Union for the Mediterranean will be located in Barcelona, Spain, foreign ministers of the countries participating in the project decided on Tuesday (4 November).

The secretariat will be presided over by a single secretary general – yet to be appointed – and five deputy secretaries from Greece, Italy, Malta, Israel and the Palestinian Authority, said French foreign minister Bernard Kouchner – whose country currently presides over the Union for the Mediterranean together with Egypt.

Mr Kouchner, speaking to reporters following a meeting of EU and Mediterranean foreign ministers in Marseille, added that a sixth deputy secretary may yet be added to the list at the demand of Turkey.

The secretariat will be tasked with "implementing concrete projects" in a number of different areas: maritime safety, economy, energy, transport, agriculture, urban development and environment.

The French foreign minister hailed the results of the meeting as a great success and underlined that it was the first time that Israel would be present at such a level in an international institution alongside the Palestinian Authority.

In exchange for a position as deputy secretary, Israel has accepted that the Arab League could be present at all Union meetings, at all levels, although without any voting rights.

Prior to the decision, the Arab League had only been allowed to take part in Euro-Mediterranean meetings as part of the Egyptian delegation.

Barcelona beats Tunis and Valetta

Valetta, the capital of EU member Malta, and Tunis, the capital of Tunisia had also been in the running to host the UM's headquarters, but Tunis withdrew its candidacy last Friday, while Valetta did not gather enough support for its candidacy, according to the Times of Malta.

Barcelona had given the name to an earlier initiative aiming to boost EU co-operation with its southern neighbours that was set up in 1995 – the Barcelona Process.

Spain had also increased diplomatic efforts in the past weeks in order to gather support for its candidacy, with its prime minister Jose Luis Zapatero meeting both EU commission president Jose Manuel Barroso and EU external relations commissioner Benita Ferrero-Waldner last week.

EU foreign policy chief, Javier Solana – himself a Spaniard, said he was "very happy" that the Union for the Mediterranean's headquarters would be located in Barcelona, in the 19th-century Palace of Pedralbes.

"It is a great joy for me," he told reporters in Marseille.

After the decision that Barcelona would host the secretariat of the project, Spain demanded that its name also be changed from "the Barcelona Process: Union for the Mediterranean" to simply "Union for the Mediterranean," Mr Kouchner pointed out.

Academics remain sceptical

The Union for the Mediterranean – the brainchild of French President Nicolas Sarkozy – was officially launched at a summit meeting in Paris in July.

It is aimed at breathing a new life into the Barcelona Process, which has failed to achieve any significant results.

But observers and academics remain sceptical as to what the new initiative's added value can be.

"Essentially, I don't think that much has changed at all," professor Ahmed Driss from the University of Tunis said at a conference organised on Monday (3 November) during the European Parliament's Arab Week.

Additionally, the balance of powers within the Union of the Mediterranean is not good, he said.

"If we really want to have a joint presidency, one has to believe it is a joint, common project. There is no such impression today. You have one side proposing something to the other side. There was no common preparation, no real dialogue between the two sides prior to this," he told the conference's audience.

Professor Annette Junemann, from the Helmut Schmidt University of the Armed Forces in Hamburg voiced a similar opinion.

"The Mediterranean countries were not involved in setting up the project, it was mainly made in France," she said.

She added she saw "a lot of hot air" in the Union for the Mediterranean and "very little substance."

Additionally, all participants in the conference deplored the "de-politisation" of the project, which they said did not contain enough provisions on human rights. NGOs regularly complain of serious breaches in a number of the countries that are members of the new Union.

Conference participants also complained of a lack of civil society involvement.

The report by the European Monitoring Centre for Drugs and Drug Addiction confirms the need to bring society together to form a European alliance to tackle the issue of drugs http://europa.eu/rapid/pressReleasesAction...&guiLanguage=en

IP/08/1654

Brussels, 6 November 2008

The annual report by the European Monitoring Centre for Drugs and Drug Addiction (EMCDDA) on the drugs phenomenon in Europe in 2008, published today in Brussels, confirms the need to bring society together to form a European alliance to tackle the issue of drugs. This latest report from the EMCDDA on the drug phenomenon in Europe indicates that the consumption of drugs in Europe is stabilising, whilst the number of deaths linked to drugs is on the increase.

"Every hour, a young person in Europe dies from a drug overdose. This alarming fact from the EMCDDA's report confirms the urgent need to highlight to young people the serious risks of taking drugs", stated Jacques Barrot, Commissioner responsible for Justice, Freedom and Security. "To succeed in overcoming this problem, it is important to get society on board in every Member State. This is the goal of the European alliance on drugs which is aimed at involving and raising awareness of the risks associated with drugs amongst citizens, in particular young people, companies and local authorities", highlighted Vice-President Jacques Barrot.

This alliance, proposed by the Commission's new "Drugs Action Plan" 2009-20012, will be officially launched on the 26th June 2009 on the International Day against Drug abuse and Illicit trafficking. This new "Drugs Action Plan" adopted by the Commission on the 18th September 2008 focuses on reducing the demand and supply of drugs, tackling drug trafficking and concentrates on international action.

Some 12 million Europeans (between 15 and 64 years) have taken cocaine, 11 million have used amphetamines and 9.5 millions have used ecstasy. The latest figures for Europe confirm a stabilisation on amphetamine and ecstasy consumption. At the same time the figures show a steady growth in cocaine consumption, although this concerns only a small number of Member States. As regards heroine, the report does not show a decline in the epidemic problems linked to heroine, but certain signs indicate that the problems with synthetic opiates could worsen.

The annual report by the EMCDDA gives the European Union and the Commission a factual overview of the drug phenomenon in Europe. The European Monitoring Centre provided the European Commission with a technical support to evaluate the Drugs Action Plan (2005-2008) and to elaborate the "drug" action plan 2009-2012, which will be adopted by Member States before the end of the year.

EU leaders to debate new model for world finance

http://euobserver.com/9/27060

RENATA GOLDIROVA

Today @ 09:15 CET

EUOBSERVER / BRUSSELS - EU leaders are meeting in Brussels on Friday (7 November) to have lunch, with an overhaul of the international finance system the sole item on the menu.

France - currently sitting at the EU's helm - has tabled a three-page document consisting of five key priorities that "should be agreed no later than on 15 November," when global economic players meet to discuss the same topic in Washington.

The priority list, seen by EUobserver, suggests that no market segment, territory and financial institution, including hedge funds, should escape regulation or supervision.

It urges obligatory registration of the rating agencies; the convergence of accounting rules; and a review of the way in which the fair•value rule in financial institutions is applied.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) should also be given primary responsibility to recommend the necessary measures to restore confidence and stability as well as the necessary funds and the appropriate instruments to support countries in difficulty, Paris says.

The French EU presidency wants to see all five priorities translated into "concrete, operational proposals" within 100 days from a G20 summit in mid-November.

The summit, hosted by the US, will bring together the G7, the EU and 12 other major economies: Argentina, Australia, Brazil, China, India, Indonesia, Mexico, Russia, Saudi Arabia, South Africa, South Korea, and Turkey.

The three-page paper to be discussed by EU heads of state and governments is a shorter version of a document - labelled International Financial Architecture - that was discussed by EU finance ministers earlier this week (4 November).

At the time, French finance minister Christiane Lagarde said the French initiative enjoyed "massive support" among member states, except for a suggestion to "encourage an internationally co-ordinated response to the macroeconomic challenges to come."

This point was objected to by countries such as Germany, one EU diplomat told EUobserver, as it could imply a possibility to shape economic policies above the national level.

According to another diplomat, some ministers expressed concerns about potential over-regulation, with Sweden reportedly objecting tight regulation of hedge funds. "We should not turn financial markets into steady waters," the diplomat said.

EU calls for 'new deal for new world' with Obama

Published on 06-11-2008 Email To Friend Print Version
http://economictimes.indiatimes.com/Politi...how/3677238.cms

BRUSSELS: The head of the European Union (EU)'s executive body, the European Commission, on Wednesday congratulated Barack Obama on his victory in the US presidential election and called on him to work with the EU to shape a "new deal for a new world".

"This is a time for a renewed commitment between Europe and the US. I want to assure Senator Obama of the support of the European Commission and of my personal support in forging this renewed commitment to face together the many challenges ahead of us," European Commission President Jose Manuel Barroso said.

"We need a new deal for a new world. I sincerely hope that with the leadership of President Obama, the US will join forces with Europe to drive this new deal - for the benefit of our societies, for the benefit of the world," he said in a statement.

Ahead of Tuesday's election, politicians across Europe had expressed the hope that the successor to US President George W Bush - whether Obama or his rival, John McCain - would abandon Bush's unilateral stance in favour of more cooperation with the EU.

They hope, in particular, for cooperation on financial reform, climate change and the reform of global institutions such as the United Nations and Group of Eight leading industrial nations.

Global financial crisis may force Scandanavians to adopt the Euro

Euro fever sweeps through Scandinavia as currencies dive New rush to join the euro as Sweden and Denmark moot polls

Fall-out from global financial crisis reveals risk of shunning single currency

The Swedish krona has plummeted to its lowest-ever level against the euro.

The Danish and Swedish governments have begun preparing the ground for referendums on joining the euro, as part of a huge political reversal across Europe's northern fringes in favour of the single currency. Although voters have overwhelming rejected the euro in the past, both countries are now pointing to the recent damage inflicted on their national currencies as evidence that staying out has left them dangerously over-exposed to market vagaries.

"The financial turmoil has made it clear to all Danes that there is both a political and economic cost of staying out of the eurozone and that's why we should join it as soon as possible," the Danish Prime Minister Anders Fogh Rasmussen said this week. He voiced frustration at not having a say in bail-out plans drafted by Eurozone economies. "We just had to follow the rest, who took a decisive lead."

Danes were now having to carry a "very heavy burden", Mr Rasmussen said, after the Danish Central Bank's move to raise interest rates to 5.5 per cent to support the krone. The Danish currency is closely pegged to the euro and has come under fierce pressure as investors dump it in favour of bigger and safer currencies. "Over half of the electorate is now in favour of the Euro and the reason is simple: before, we had to warn them about the danger of staying out, now they're actually experiencing it for themselves."

In Sweden, the krona has plummeted to its lowest value against the euro since the currency's launch in 1999. "We should have joined the euro a long time ago, we would have been far better off," Cecilia Malmstrom, Sweden's Europe Minister said yesterday. "It makes no sense whatsoever for us to stay out and if we could hold a referendum tomorrow, we would."

Euro fervour has even spread as far as Iceland, which although not a member of the European Union, is now also seriously considering swapping its own currency which has nose-dived by more than 40 per cent this year.

A large majority of Swedes voted against the euro in 2003 but a new opinion poll shows a major turn-around in public opinion, with over 46 per cent saying they are now ready to surrender their beloved krona, which is emblazoned with their queen's image. "This has change has happened without any campaigning from our side so I'm sure that we turn it into big majority, which is why we should try to hold a re-run of a referendum as soon as possible," Ms Malmstrom said.

Although the Swedish Prime Minister, Fredrik Reinfeldt, says he will not organise a referendum before 2010, three out of the four ruling parties say they will hold a poll soon after. The Danish Prime Minister has refused to name a referendum date but senior officials say they do not rule out a poll as early as next year. But despite the current enthusiasm, both governments will struggle to address deep-rooted fears among their voters that giving up their currencies would tie them closer to the EU.

On the Drottninggatan, a shopping street in Stockholm, Swedes were divided. One man in his fifties held out a handful of coins, saying: "I know the value of this money, it's safe and I don't see reason to change." A mother fretted about rising prices if the euro was introduced. "Things will just get more expensive like they did in other countries."

The Eurozone: Who's a member?

*There are 15 member states of the Eurozone. They are: Austria, Belgium, Cyprus, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Malta, Netherlands, Portugal, Slovenia and Spain. Slovakia will join in 2009.

Ireland May Back EU Lisbon Treaty in Second Vote (Update2)

By Fergal O'Brien
http://www.bloomberg.com/apps/news?pid=206...wY&refer=europe

Nov. 17 (Bloomberg) -- Ireland may back the European Union's Lisbon Treaty in a second vote if the country is allowed to retain its EU commissioner and receives assurances in areas including taxation and neutrality, an Irish Times poll showed.

Forty-three percent of those questioned said they would vote ``yes'' to the treaty, with 39 percent saying they would reject it. Eighteen percent had no opinion. In the June ballot, voters shot down the treaty 53.4 percent to 46.6 percent.

Ireland's rejection of the treaty in the June 12 vote froze plans to streamline the 27-nation EU's decision-making process as the accord requires the approval of all member states. Foreign Minister Micheal Martin said yesterday that the government would decide whether to hold a second vote before a meeting of EU leaders in Brussels on Dec. 11-12.

It wouldn't be the first time Ireland has been down this road. Irish voters in 2001 rejected the Nice Treaty, the EU's current, more limited governing treaty, fearing it would end the country's military neutrality. The EU offered assurances to Ireland, helping the ``yes'' side to victory in a second referendum a year later.

``It's clear that people have concerns,'' Martin said today on RTE Radio, adding that Ireland is discussing neutrality, tax and social and ethical issues with EU lawyers. ``There is no appetite for a fundamental renegotiation of the treaty.''

Survey

A survey carried out for the government and published in September said that 42 percent voted ``no'' because of a ``lack of knowledge, information, understanding'' and around 33 percent expected the treaty would introduce conscription. Some 16 percent said they were concerned about issues ``related to loss of power and independence.

``I am confident that the Irish people would reject Lisbon again should the government be so spineless as to allow themselves to be bullied into asking us a second time,'' said Declan Ganley, chairman of anti-Lisbon campaign group Libertas.

Ganley, whose company Rivada supplies services to the U.S. military, spearheaded the campaign against Lisbon before the June vote. Politicians including Ireland's EU Minister Dick Roche have said Ganley's U.S. links ``raise questions'' about his motives in opposing the treaty.

Ireland was the only country to hold a popular vote on the treaty. It replaced the bloc's planned ``constitution,'' which was rejected by voters in France and the Netherlands in 2005.

The Irish Times poll of 1,000 people was carried out by TNS/mrbi on Nov. 10 and Nov. 11. It has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percent.

European Regulators given oversight of U.S. Finances

November 19, 2008
http://halturnershow.blogspot.com/

Without even a whisper to the American people, the United States has become a member of the European Union! Our Sovereignty? Out the window.

In one month of legislation and one diplomatic meeting, the United States has unilaterally abdicated all the gains for the concept of free markets won by the Reagan administration and surrendered, in total, to the Western European model of socialism, stagnation, and excessive government regulation.

At the G-20 meeting, Bush agreed to subject the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) and our other regulatory agencies to the supervision of a global entity that would critique its regulatory standards and demand changes if it felt they were necessary. Bush agreed to create a College of Supervisors.

According to The Washington Post, it would "examine the books of major financial institutions that operate across national borders so regulators could begin to have a more complete picture of banks' operations."

Their scrutiny would extend to hedge funds and to various "exotic" financial instruments. The International Monetary Fund (IMF), a European-dominated operation, would conduct "regular vigorous reviews" of American financial institutions and practices.

The European-dominated College of Supervisors would also weigh in on issues like executive compensation and investment practices.

These new regulatory powers have been delegated to unelected, international institutions with no political accountability.

All kinds of political agendas are advancing under the cover of responding to the global financial crisis.

Where Franklin Roosevelt saved capitalism by regulating it, Bush, to say nothing of Obama, has given government control over our major financial and insurance institutions; and it isn't even our government!

Without a vote, we are suddenly members of the European Union. Given the dismal record of those nations at creating jobs and sustaining growth, merging with the Europeans is like a partnership with death.

Power to regulate U.S. financial matters has now been transferred to the international community, led by socialists in the European Union.

Will Obama govern from the left? He doesn't have to.

George W. Bush has done all the heavy lifting for him. It was under Bush that the government basically took over as the chief stockholder of our financial institutions and under Bush that we ceded our financial controls to the European Union.

The U.S. federal government has completely, totally failed in its service to the American people. It does not protect our borders, it does not protect our election system from being swayed by illegal aliens casting illegal votes and now it has turned over control of our financial regulations to other countries.

I advocate repeating with our present government, the Founding Fathers solution to their governmental problems. In my opinion, it is time to throw off the federal government of the United States and replace it with a new government with better protections for our freedoms and our land.

European Central Bank: Britain Welcome To Join Euro

Published on 19-11-2008 Email To Friend Print Version
http://news.sky.com/skynews/Home/Business/...uro_At_Any_Time

As the pound struggles against other major currencies, the president of the European Central Bank has told Sky News that Britain is "welcome at any time" to join the euro.

European Central Bank president Jean-Claude Trichet

Jean-Claude Trichet said that it was up to the British people to decide - but pointed out the advantages of the single currency.

Mr Trichet also spoke of the defects in the global financial system which have left Britain, Europe and the US facing their gravest problems since World War Two.

When asked about the possibility of Britain joining the eurozone economies, Mr Trichet said: "It is an issue for the British people, but Britain would be welcome at any time.

"We are absolutely unanimous, at which moment the government and the people decide.

"There are a lot of advantages associated with the completion of the single market - you are not in an achieved single market as long as there are different currencies."

Last week, the Eurozone fell officially into recession for the first time since the euro's creation in 1999.

But the euro is is holding up better than sterling, which has loat 15% against the euro in the past six months, reviving suggestions the UK might be better off inside the European single currency.

When questioned on the broader economic picture, Mr Trichet said: "I would say that altogether we have a global system that had a lot of defects.

"I have seen a lot of very difficult crises. It is the first time that the heart of the finance of the industrialised countries is at stake.

"It is new and it is the first time since World War Two."

Whether the British like it or not, to other Europeans their country is looking more and more like Turkey - a cheap holiday destination.

Mr Trichet also said he was optimistic that the current crisis could be solved by global co-operation, but refused to be drawn on how long the rescue would take.

He said that problems could be solved "only by joint efforts of authorities", insisting the world financial powers were "all in the same boat".

Ireland can hold new vote on EU treaty

28 November 2008
By Jonathan Saul
http://news.scotsman.com/world/Ireland-can...vote.4741551.jp

IRELAND can legally hold a second referendum on the European Union's Lisbon Treaty, an Irish parliamentary committee report said yesterday.

The sub-committee was set up after Irish voters said "No" in a June referendum on the treaty of reforms which are aimed at streamlining the bloc's decision-making, but must be ratified by all 27 member states before it can take effect.

Treaty backers say the Irish rejection paralysed the bloc at a time when it needs rapid reform after taking in new members from the former communist east. They want Ireland to come up with a solution to the impasse by a summit on December 11-12.

"No legal obstacle appears to exist to having a referendum, either on precisely the same issue as that dealt with on 12 June or some variation thereof," the cross-party sub-committee on Ireland's future in the EU said.

Micheál Martin, the foreign minister, welcomed the findings.

"The report confirms that Ireland's place is at the heart of the European Union," he said in a statement.

UK 'closer' to adopting the euro

Sunday, 30 November 2008
http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/business/7757830.stm

The UK is "closer than ever before" to joining the euro, according to the president of the European Commission, Jose Manuel Barroso.

Speaking on a French radio show, he said British politicians were considering the move because of the effects of the global credit crunch.

In the same interview, Mr Barroso also forecast that interest rates will drop in Europe.

However Downing Street said its position on the euro remained the same.

Mr Barroso acknowledged "the majority" of British people continued to oppose joining the eurozone.

But he said the recent economic uncertainty had made the currency a far more attractive option.

Confidential conversations

In the RTL radio/LCI television broadcast, the former prime minister of Portugal said: "We are now closer than ever before.

"I'm not going to break the confidentiality of certain conversations, but some British politicians have already told me, 'If we had the euro, we would have been better off'. "

He said that the current poor economic situation had emphasised the importance of the euro and the UK but added he believed a move would not take place in the immediate future.

"I know that the majority in Britain are still opposed, but there is a period of consideration under way and the people who matter in Britain are currently thinking about it", he said.

The value of sterling compared with other currencies has fallen during the credit crunch, and the UK government has had to spend massively in recent months to try to support the economy.

'Awaiting decisions'

During the interview, Mr Barroso highlighted the situation in Denmark - an EU state that voted against joining the eurozone in 2000, but is now considering holding a new referendum on the single currency.

A Downing Street spokesman said: "We have no comment on this. Our position on the euro is the same - it has not changed."

Mr Barroso also said he expected the European Central Bank (ECB) to make a clear move to cut interest rates next week.

He said the conditions were right for a fall, but did not give further details adding: "I am awaiting decisions from the European Central Bank that go in this direction."

Jean-Claude Trichet, president of the ECB, has said that the bank could cut rates in the coming week as long as there is evidence that inflation pressures have eased.

The European Union has called for a 200bn euro boost across Europe to help stimulate an economic recovery.

Mandelson at centre of 'ditch the pound' row as European Commission president claims Britain is ready for the euro

Lord Mandelson was at the centre of a row last night over 'secret' plans to ditch the pound after an explosive claim that Britain is ready to join the euro.

The European Commission president said the UK was 'closer than ever before' to signing up to the single currency.

Jose Manuel Barroso said he had held private conversations with 'the people who count in Britain' and knew that they were ready to move into the euro-zone.

Euro bombshell: Business Secretary Lord Mandelson and Jose Manuel Barroso

That was widely seen as a reference to Lord Mandelson, who said at the weekend that 'our aim' should be to join the euro.

Lord Mandelson was the loudest cheerleader for the single currency during his stints in Tony Blair's Cabinet and has just been recalled from Brussels, where he was Britain's EU Commissioner.

But now he appears at odds with his new boss Gordon Brown.

Downing Street denied there had been any policy shift and said it had 'no plans' to ditch the pound. Sources said the suggestion that Britain was ready to enter was 'wishful thinking'.

Mr Barroso's remarks led to a backlash in Westminster. Shadow foreign secretary William Hague pledged that there were 'no circumstances' in which a Conservative government would propose joining the euro.

The Tories were understood to be preparing Parliamentary questions to Mr Brown, Lord Mandelson and other ministers to establish what discussions had been held with EU chiefs over euro entry.

Mr Barroso said senior British politicians believed the recent economic turmoil made membership of the single currency a far more attractive option. He boasted that the recession had weakened faith in the pound.

Speaking to French radio, the former prime minister of Portugal said: 'We are closer than ever before. I'm not going to break the confidentiality of certain conversations, but some British politicians have already told me "If we had the euro, we would have been better off".

'I know the majority in Britain are still opposed but there is a period of consideration under way and the people who matter in Britain are thinking about it.'

Mr Hague said: 'Keeping the pound is vital for Britain's economic future. We need interest rates that are right for Britain, not the rest of Europe.

'If Labour Ministers still want to get Britain into the euro, they should come out and say so.'

Nigel Farage, leader of the UK Independence Party, said: 'If Barroso would like to consult the "people who matter in Britain" then he can call for a referendum on the euro so the people of Britain can tell him where to go.'

Lord Mandelson had told a political conference on Saturday: 'Our aim, our goal, should be to enter the single currency.'

But he conceded that the Government was 'obviously not going to take on that challenge' in the current economic climate.

Sources close to Lord Mandelson insisted last night that he had had no private discussions on euro entry with Mr Barroso.

He also accepted that Mr Brown's five economic tests set in 1997 must be met before Ministers would hold a referendum.

A European Commission spokesman said Mr Barroso's comments were 'reflections'.

He added: 'The British are very pragmatic. When they feel it is right to join the euro, they will.'

MONDAY: ALL HELL TO BREAK LOOSE

Friday, September 26, 2008
http://halturnershow.blogspot.com/

Those of you who have been following my former radio show and now, this blog, know that I have a very good track record of telling you what's coming in the markets and when.

Tonight, as I write, it is Friday, September 26 at 7:05 PM and I regret to tell you that Monday all hell is going to break loose.

The reason President Bush, Treasury Secretary Paulson and Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke pushed so hard for Congress to act this week was because they knew that the last hour of trading last Friday was a "quadruple witching hour." During that hour, contracts for stock index futures, stock index options, stock options and single stock futures (SSF) all expire.

Quadruple witching hours occur only four times a year, on the third Friday of March, June, September and December.

Bush, Paulson and Bernanke knew that if a solution was not found by close of business today, they could not hold off the rest of the world any longer. The markets would start plummeting in Asia on Sunday night (East coast time) because with all the options and futures having now expired, the market is free to "correct" itself.

Congress has now failed to act, the quadruple witching hour has taken place and there is no bailout.

If Congress does not get a Bill passed by Sunday night, we should expect all hell to break loose when Asian markets open and the "correction" hits. Look for a severe, fast, downward spiral.

I'm talking about worldwide economic calamity beginning Sunday in Asia and spiraling out of control within a week or so. Two weeks tops.

If I am right (and I hope I am not) the world will see a financial catastrophe that will make "the great depression" look like a walk in the park.

Here's what you need to do this weekend

If you haven't taken my advice and gotten out of the markets already, you're too late. The only thing you can try to do now is prepare for the fallout of the worldwide economic collapse.

Go out and get yourself canned foods; enough to feed your family for a month or two.

In addition to canned foods, go out and buy 50lb bags of rice and oatmeal. You can use the rice as a bed for the canned foods for lunch and dinner and the oatmeal for breakfast. You may want to grab some honey and / or brown sugar to put on the oatmeal. You should also have dry milk powder to be able to mix with water to make milk.

If you do not yet have a gravity-fed water filter, go get one.

If you do not yet own guns to protect yourself and your family, try to buy one over the weekend. If you already own guns, get ammunition.

The reason you'll need the weapons is because civil unrest is likely to begin very quickly.

With economic collapse, supermarkets will run out of food fast. Roving bands of savage beasts will quickly realize they're hungry and come for your food. If you cannot protect yourself, they will kill you to get it.

The police will be totally overwhelmed rather quickly, so 911 won't be any help for you.

The cities will become nightmares within days and once the cities are emptied of food, the savages will have to come to the suburbs to get more. Rest assured, they will come.

Get together with your neighbors to form neighborhood defense teams. Get Family Radio Service walkie-talkies or CB radios and have them on a set channel for your neighborhood. If trouble comes, EVERYONE in the neighborhood must respond and use all deliberate force to restore order.

I hope this information helps.

TBR News – September 26, 2008
http://www.tbrnews.org/Archives/a2878.htm

"After 9/11, George Bush decided to put some hair on his sunken chest and fight a nice big war. The oil people and the Neocons whispered into his hairy ears that he could invade Iraq, save Precious Israel from an enemy and get all kinds of oil for the both of them. George is a nasty piece of work and as crooked as they come so he jammed an Imperial War Decree through a terrified Congress with ease. Now, with other friends of his, the crooked slimeball bankers, in danger of imminent meltdown due to their thievery, George has tried to jam another Imperial Decree through Congress. This one would give him huge amounts of money, unsupervised as to use, and make the docile American people eat the bill. This time a thoroughly discredited Bush has failed in his efforts on behalf of his friends and the American public has become aroused and infuriated to the point where another terrified Congress is refusing to heed the thoroughly discredited Bush. What will eventually happen, no one knows, but we now see that the Bush/Rove Might Republican Machine has run out of gas by the side of the highway and its crew of rodents are fleeing into the nearby woods for protection.

And may I give you several pieces of what I consider sound advice? First, if you have any extra money in one of the bigger banks, take it out and put it in a shoe box in your closet. If these banks start to collapse suddenly, which they are very likely to do, even the Government can't supply them and their branches with enough paper to cover deposits. The second thought is to take some extra money, assuming you have any, and buy gold with it. Get this from a reputable coin dealer and buy older European gold coins like British Sovereigns and Half Sovereigns, French or Swiss francs. Keep away from weird gold from small countries…very hard to sell if you need to….and never, never buy gold and let some big company help you out by insisting they will store it in their "safe vaults." Hah! And off to Aruba with them for sun and fun and their loot into Lichtenstein banks. Keep the money where you can get at it. Banks can no longer be trusted as we have found out the hard way."

Coping: Water Filtration

This weekend on Peoplenomics, we got into how to prepare for a six-month to year-long camping trip. Kinda like Houston residents are going through, except more generalized (country-wide) and less damage to start from. A subscriber took me to task for not getting more into water filtration systems and because that's absolutely a necessities of life (not to mention vodka and water requires water), here are some of his comments:

"First, I've been prepping for well over 5 years now, and know of no such thing as a "permanent type" filter that one could use if one found themselves in a permanent camping situation. Maybe you are referring to a reverse osmosis type system or other plumbed filter. (Yes - G)

That might be useful as long as you had water pressure to push it though the system but usually in a camping situation you wouldn't have that luxury. I'd sure be very interested in knowing of one that could be used in a permanent camping situation. Replaceable cartridge type filters - such as a Katadyn backpacking filter would be useful for such a short time, that you would soon be very thirsty. They aren't really a very good long term solution as they quite limited in the number of gallons of water that can be filtered, they take a lot of work, replacement filters are very expensive and you'd have to have a huge supply of them stored away.

While iodine tabs or purification tablets are a good short term solution in an emergency survival situation or if you're in the woods for a few days, this is really an impractical method of purification for a long term situation...happy living through modern chemistry isn't the answer here, George - not to mention the water doesn't taste very good either treating it with this method.

I assumed by the nature of your article, you were making the point that this would be a "A Lifetime of Camping". A lifetime generally implies a little longer than a week or two in the woods and requires a longer term approach to the problem of water. The Aquarain and Berky type filters will filter thousands of gallons of water with little effort required - simply pour the water in the top and gravity does the rest. You can filter enough water for an entire family at about a gallon an hour and the filters can be cleaned numerous times. Ten years of filters can be stored in a small space on a shelf.

As you placed it first on your list, water is the most critical need everyone will face in a TEOTWAWKI turn of events. I guess I just didn't see your filter solutions as long term, and if you are providing a list of things that people should think about to save their lives, I guess I think giving some examples that could be reviewed would be helpful for those that don't know quite as much as you do about these things.

Gurgle gurgle...throw me a rope here George, I'm drowning!

Good points, all....

MSNBC: In hard times, some flirt with survivalism

Published on 21-10-2008 Email To Friend Print Version
http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/27244465/

SEATTLE - Atash Hagmahani is not waiting for the stock market to recover. The former high-tech professional turned urban survivalist has already moved his money into safer investments: Rice and beans, for starters.

“I hoard food,” says Hagmahani, 44, estimating that he has enough to last his family a year or two. “I’m not ashamed to admit it.”

“People keep asking when this (economic crisis) is going to clear up,” says Hagmahani, who agreed to be interviewed on the condition that he be identified only by the pseudonym he uses for his survivalist blog, or by his first name, Rob.

The answer, he predicts, is that the country is entering what he calls a “Greater Depression.” “Maybe they jolly well better get used to the change in lifestyle.”

Hagmahani is not alone in concluding that desperate times call for serious preparations.

With foreclosure rates running rampant, financial institutions teetering and falling, prices for many goods and services climbing, and jobs being slashed, many Americans are making preparations for worse times ahead. For some, that means cutting spending and saving more. For others, it means taking a step into survivalism, once regarded solely as the province of religious End-of-Timers, sci-fi fans and extremists.

That often manifests itself as a desire to secure basic emergency resources — what survival guru Jim Wesley Rawles describes as “beans, bullets and Band-Aids.”

Rawles, speaking by phone from an “undisclosed location” somewhere between the Cascades and the Rocky Mountains, said he has seen traffic on his Web site, SurvivalBlog.com, explode in the last year.

Getting ready for ‘TEOTWAWKI’
“There are a lot more people — a lot more eager people — who are trying to get themselves squared away logistically,” said Rawles, who lectures and writes books on preparing for and surviving “TEOTWAWKI” — The End Of The World As We Know It.

Rawles, a self-described Christian conservative, said most of his readers had similar backgrounds when he started his blog in 2005. But he said that as the financial crisis has unfolded — particularly when oil prices began to soar — he started hearing from a much broader segment of the population.

“Now it’s the entire political spectrum — far right, far left and everything in between,” said Rawles. “I’m getting over 200 e-mails from readers a day. Now it is quite apparent how many more liberals are writing. Same concerns, different outlook. Greens, for instance, put less emphasis on self-defense and guns.”

Buoyed by an industry that flourishes when others languish, his site also is attracting record advertising revenue. The offerings include “secure, off-grid” mountain retreats, firearms training, home schooling aids, gold, freeze-dried food and water filtration systems.

Long-lasting food in demand
Others more directly embedded in the survival industry say they, too, are seeing the biggest surge of orders since the run-up to Y2K, when angst surged over whether computers would survive the dawn of a new millennium.

“I’m getting slammed with big orders,” said Kurt Wilson, a distributor of freeze-dried foods and other provisions with decades-long shelf life, like canned meat, cheese and butter.

“I have customers who were spending 200 bucks a month now spending $5,000 to $8,000,” Wilson said from his warehouse in Coeur d’Alene, Idaho. “I get little old ladies calling up, stocking up for their grandchildren.”

Wilson, who also has an online radio show called the Armchair Survivalist, said one of his new clients is a New York interior designer who specializes in outfitting cramped Manhattan apartments with hidden food storage units that double as tasteful furnishings.

Richard Mankemyer, general manager of the Survival Center, in McKenna, Wash. said he too is swamped.

“There are a lot more people interested in being prepared, stocking up and being on their own for extended periods of time, as we’ve been advising,” he said. Among them are businesses, he said, including a major Northwest corporation that recently spent “tens of thousands of dollars” to stock up on shelf-stable foods for its executives. He would not identify the company, but he said he urged the officials to stock up for its other employees as well.

Not just for the ‘Planet X’ crowd
Also reporting an uptick in business is Utah Shelter Systems, which makes underground dwellings designed for surviving the aftermath of a biological or nuclear attack.

“I think the economy certainly is part of it,” Sharon Packer, part owner of the Salt Lake City company, said of the surge in orders this year. “Anytime we become vulnerable, our risk of a terrorist attacks increases.”

She emphasizes that most people who purchase the shelters, which run between $40,000 and $50,000, are wealthy professionals interested in hedging their bets.

“Every once in awhile I have people who are concerned about Planet X or little green men, but they are usually not our clients,” she says.

A less surprising indication of the public nervousness about the recent financial turmoil can be found in gold brokerages and coin shops around the country. Many say that demand for gold and silver has been off the charts in recent months — a clear measure of concerns about the U.S. dollar and the soundness of the economy as a whole.

“We’re seeing absolutely unprecedented demand,” said Peter Grant, gold broker and analyst at USA Gold in Denver. “We’re seeing the full gamut … from high net worth (clients) to people looking at just a couple of ounces at a time.”

Preparing for a ‘major paradigm shift’
Seattle survivalist Hagmahani sees such commodity hoarding as just a partial measure for weathering a financial crisis.

On his blog, mutuallyassuredsurvival.com, he advises people to prepare for a “major paradigm shift” that will, in a decade, leave the U.S. with a Third World economy.

The $700 billion government financial bailout, in his view, only ensures a crisis that cannot be avoided after unbridled lending and spending.

“One of the most frightening possibilities is the banking system freezing up,” he said. “... Our remittance system is almost entirely through the banking system. … Without ATMs, you can’t get groceries, you can’t get paid… Is that a possibility? Yes.”

So Hagmahani, whose pen name is derived from the ancient religion of Zoroastrianism, is focused on procuring and stashing away enough food to last his family — himself, his wife and three kids — up to two years.

He said he began his preparations after witnessing the burst of the high-tech bubble in 2001, paying off the family’s debt, moving his assets away from stocks into safer investments, including, he implies, some precious metals and offshore accounts.

In the last three or four years, he has led his clan away from what he calls their former “yuppyish lifestyle." They no longer eat out, cook most meals from scratch, and rarely drive their one car. They also are all learning practical skills — such as sewing, nursing and wielding a gun for self-defense.

"One thing I'm adamant about is that each of the kids needs real skills; they can't just be a pencil pusher," says Hagmahani of 19-year-old Hans, Sofia, 14, and Erik, 12. "You might get lucky and get a cushy job, but you might not. You need high-tech skills and low-tech skills for dealing with a systemic breakdown."

Looking for farmland in South America
In addition to shifting some of his high-tech windfall into safe havens, Hagmahani is looking into buying farmland in South America — a last-ditch destination should the economic crisis become a catastrophe.

At the same time, he wants to be a model for others who want to be prepared. And he has his fans, relatively mainstream Americans who are worried by what they see and hear on the evening news.

"I didn't want to be the crazy aunt in the attic," said Susan Oakes, a fan of Hagmahani's Internet site. She started worrying about the state of the economy a few years ago. "I started reading more and trying to find people who were credible, and not the tinfoil hat group…. trying to figure out what I could do," she said.

To save money, she combined households with her two daughters' families in eastern Washington state. She cashed out of some of her savings and bought gold, and then started to garden on their half-acre plot. She has stockpiled staples and learned to can her fruits and vegetables. She now has enough, she believes, to last her family for six months and to have some left for charity, which she expects to be in high demand.

But Oakes said she finds no comfort in being well-prepared for what she fears is coming.

"We're in deep doo-doo," she said. "I honestly believe the government thinks we're idiots. … I get that they can't come out and say 'the sky is falling' but it is."

Ammo Shortages

More on the disappearing ammo from sporting goods stores:

"George, Regarding ammo shortages, I have am aware that the shortage in popular rounds is quite severe. I heard a comment by a local gun shop owner that he might these days only receive one of four cases of a given caliber, which makes me think it is not just that the end consumer is buying fast, but that at the top of the distribution channel a certain amount may be being redirected away from the civilian market. Perhaps to the FEMA or military? And why do I not see local or internet dealers receiving their lot and then selling fast. It seems that they are not even getting any even for an hour. I think we need an investigation."

Aw, gosh, come on. We need all kinds of investigations: What happened to all that Iraq money that's missing? How did those private security contractors get all that dough? Why didn't the government just let some bad banks fail? Why are the greedy being bailed by the needy? No way it's gonna happen, sorry. Congress abdicated during the Bush term and with Obama off talking about 'protectionism' and other nonsense in Canada, the only change in Washington is the rotation from Clintonistas to Obamanistas for a whole class of shadow government/ pol-appoint types.

And then when I read Chinese media promoting the same idea ("Trade protectionism no spur for world economic recovery") I have to wonder "Gee, you think a faltering communist government in China maybe has a vested interest in keeping its workers slaving away instead of questioning the shadow government within their government? Shadow governments are everywhere, LOL.

Yeah, there's a need for investigations, alright. But with most members of CONgress effectively neutered by lobbyists of this stripe or that, about the only way to get performance will be a huge number of recall elections for misfeasance/breach of the public trust by those who are supposed to be looking out for the rest of us...

Coping: Survivalists and the Ammunition Shortages

Every so often, a reader will pop in a question like "George, why are you such a 'survivalist' - or words to that effect. I usually sit back and ask "Who, me?" And here's why: Much of what I have done in life ever since being a young kid in Mrs. Brooks' Cub Scout troop has been about 'being prepared'. Pappy, being a captain in the fire department, well, that was all about being ready for anything from a small brush fire to a fully involved industrial building. Being a news director in a major market? A course in all that life can (and does) throw at people. Living on a sailboat for 10+ years with not so much as a mishap after 5-10-thousand miles under the keel...that too speaks to preparedness.

Yet curiously, when governments prepare for worst-case events, that's somehow not survivalism. That becomes 'continuity of government' and that's somehow more 'acceptable' to the PowersThatBe than individuals preparing for whatever life can throw them and being as best prepared as they know how. Which get's us to this week's cartoon from Rebecca Price:

So is having a little food stored, a gun, some seeds, and great outdoor gear...does that qualify a person as a 'survivalist'? Or, is there meme/concept coming from somewhere else? Next time you hear the word pop up, try to corner whoever you heard it from and ask them "Say, just what is a survivalist?" The answers are surprising. If you can goods out of your garden does that make you a 'survivalist'?

Speaking of which: You may wish to keep an eye on House Resolution 45 - which seeks to ban any kind of gun that is magazine-fed & semi-automatic. Yep...couldn't make this one up.

"Naw, George, they'd never try to confiscate or criminalize gun ownership - guaranteed by the Founding Fathers, would they?" Oh yeah - that and more if they can get away with it.

Locally, the Palestine Herald here in East Texas has a pretty good summary of this latest attempt to strip Americans of their Second Amendment rights. This is apparently not an issue to Illinois Democrat Bobby Rush, who doesn't seem to have a problem naming a bill after a 16-year old hero and son of a Chicago police officer who was killed while shielding a female classmate during a gang-related shooting. Like the gang-bangers are going to rush out and register their illegal weapons? I'm become less impressed by the day with Illinois politcos.

Still, it's part of a growing and dangerous trend - to strip the civilian population of its right to bear arms.

Even more insidious is the current ammunition shortage...which reads like an end-run around the efforts of the Gun Owners of America, the National Rifle Association, and the Second Amendment Foundation which are committed to maintaining the integrity of the Second Amendment.

If you're a long-time reader, you might recall that I started talking about the ammunition shortages two or three years ago. I'd mentioned this at the time to the fellow across the road and remember he'd said he hasn't seen any shortages.

Yet on Wednesday he called and said, essentially, that he was trying to get some ammo and had just run head-on into my ammunition shortages. He reported that several kinds of ammo that we was interested in were showing as "Out of stock" at Cheaper Than Dirt...and some that were showing as 'ion stock' resulted in emails later saying 'Sorry, out of stock on that, too.'

Yep, when I first started covering ammunition shortages back in March of 2006 it looked like a leading edge of the larger "encounters with scarcity meme" but as things have evolved, it may be an end-run around outright gun control. Guns are, after all, not much use without something to put in them.

These developments, and more, have served to sharpen my focus on some very interesting trends underway: The ammunition shortages, the attempts to subvert the Second Amendment, and I hear that tomorrow Texas may be joining the list of States that are lining up to tell the federal government that if a State doesn't specifically cede a power to the central government, then the central government may not seize unauthorized power and impose rules/laws in those States. One of the most interesting aspects of this emerging trend? Calls into question how much powetr the feds have over State militias and 'guards'.

More in this week's Peoplenomics report. But as usual, the discussion will be on first causes - conflict management, tactics, and objectives. Given a choice between a ghillie suit, cross bow, and night vision gear or five guns of any caliber (*without NV), care to guess which one I'd take?

Nationwide Ammunition Shortage Hits U.S.

Skyrocketing demand has been emptying the shelves of America's gun stores. Here's why.

February 28, 2009 - by Bob Owens http://pajamasmedia.com/blog/nationwide-am...ortage-hits-us/

If you, like thousands of other Americans, have Googled to find out why we are in the middle of a nationwide ammunition shortage, you would have stumbled across this 2007 blog entry.

In it, I corrected a poorly researched Associated Press story by Estes Thompson that claimed the military's consumption of ammunition was responsible for police ammunition shortages here in the United States. Few things could have been further from the truth, but it seems rather apparent, in retrospect, that the goal of that AP article wasn't to find the truth as much as it was to (falsely) lay blame for the police ammunition shortages at the feet of George W. Bush.

The real fact of the matter is that the military got the bulk of its small arms (pistol, rifle, machine gun) ammunition from one contracted ammunition plant, and that plant wasn't even running near capacity. The military's consumption clearly wasn't to blame, and anecdotal evidence and statements from ammunition manufacturers strongly suggested that police departments themselves caused the 2007 ammunition shortage by purchasing far more ammunition than they had in the past.

But what is causing our current ammunition shortages here in 2009?

Much of the demand comes from continued high law enforcement demand, the same demand that led to shortages two years ago. Police agencies around the nation have become more militarized in recent years and two trends within this militarization have led to greater police ammunition demand.

An increase in the size and number of paramilitary police units

Once upon a time, highly trained, heavily armed police units with alphabet-soup acronyms such as SWAT, SRT, SRU, or ERT were generally found as part of large, metropolitan police departments.

Today, law enforcement agencies of every size — including some university police forces — have SWAT-type units armed with some combination of submachine guns, assault rifles, and sniper rifles to add to the traditional compliment of pistols and shotguns. To become proficient to the level expected of these units, each officer must fire thousands of rounds in training every year.

An increase in the use of “patrol carbines” in law enforcement

Some agencies prefer to call them “patrol carbines”; others refer to them as “tactical rifles.” But whatever you call them, rifles based upon the AR-15 are becoming increasingly common as a weapon deployed to police officers outside of SWAT units, for some very logical reasons. AR-type rifles extend the range at which patrol officers can engage armed criminals, and because rifles have more practical accuracy than pistols, they can potentially reduce the number of shots fired to neutralize a suspect. Paired with the right kind of ammunition, the .223 Remington/5.56mm caliber rifle also has surprisingly less over-penetration, theoretically reducing threats to civilians who might be downrange. Each of these weapons will also require officers carrying them to fire hundreds of rounds in training each year, and in a city that rotates rifles from one shift to another among their patrol units, this can necessitate tens of thousands of rounds of training ammunition.

Fears of draconian gun and ammunition restrictions

The 2008 elections that saw the Democratic Party extend their power in both houses of Congress and saw Barack Obama elected president made gun owners very nervous, and with good reason.

We have a president that has favored gun bans and who desires to reinstate the horribly flawed 1994 assault weapons ban authored by our rather dim vice president. We also have radically anti-gun majority leaders in both the House of Representatives and Senate, and a Congress quite willing to pass massive, bloated laws without even bothering to read the contents. Fears of encroachment are certainly warranted.

Economic instability

As economies become unstable and people lose jobs, crime rates go up. It is an economic fact of life. Many people who are worried about an increase in crime arm themselves during economic downturns, leading to an increased demand for firearms and ammunition.

As a result of all of these factors, manufacturers of firearms and ammunition saw demand increase to unprecedented levels as civilians have made a run on the kind of firearms they suspect that gun control advocates presently in charge will try to outlaw.

This includes all handguns, all semi-automatic rifles (especially those targeted by the 1994 assault weapons bill that expired in 2004), and most semi-automatic shotguns.

Matt Reams of Sierra Bullets noted that after the 2008 presidential election demand shot up 50%-100% for bullets used by handguns or rifles in military calibers, and says, “Law enforcement has seemed to increase quite a bit the last year or so. The individuals jumped in after the elections and pushed our orders over the top when we were already running in high gear.”

Federal Premium/ATK is the largest ammunition manufacturer in the world, running the Lake City Army Ammunition Plant for the U.S. military under contract; it also is a major supplier of law enforcement and civilians. In a statement, the company noted “unprecedented demand” for law enforcement ammunition. While other corporations are presently laying off workers and shutting down operations, ATK is in the middle of capital improvements to further increase production capability.

Rick Shoupe of PMC Ammunition, which has a more civilian-focused market for his company’s products, reflected in his explanation:

Shortly before the presidential election the dam broke as far as U.S. gun and ammunition sales are concerned. I believe it is a reaction by the general public because of two main reasons. Number one, the political environment which results from the attitudes about gun control in the majority of Congress and the president himself. They are anti-gun. Number two, the current financial crisis in the U.S. has added to the frenzy, causing again the general public to want some sort of personal protection. Just in case they need it.

We are seeing a bubble in demand like I have never seen before and I have been in this business for 35 years. This demand is in addition to the military and law enforcement that also continues. PMC has expanded production to try and handle as much of the demand as it can before the demand starts to drop. Even so, the first scent of legislation being introduced to Congress will light another candle in the demand for these products. It will not end until the legislation is passed.

Individual shooters are stockpiling thousands of rounds of ammunition because of fears of future punitive taxation or outright bans of certain kinds of ammunition. Law enforcement agencies are also stockpiling ammunition to make sure they have enough on hand to meet training requirements. The shortage we are seeing is the result of both agencies and private citizens hoarding the most sought-after ammunition.

Thus, this shortage is the result of an accordion effect that has developed over the past few years.

Law enforcement agencies have been rapidly increasing their ammunition consumption because of how they are rearming, causing a permanent increase in demand. Just as ammunition manufacturers began to cope with that increase, a second run, based upon a downward-turning economy and rising fears of laws targeting gun and ammunition, dramatically expanded demand yet again.

Shortages of ammunition and firearms can be expected to continue for as long as it appears our overreaching federal government is a threat to our individual liberties, our economy continues to falter, and our police agencies keep militarizing.

It’s going to be a long ride.

Stock up while you can.

Can you survive economic crisis?

Booming preparedness industry says Americans are stockpiling

To some, the term "survivalist" conjures images of camouflage-clad men stockpiling freeze-dried food in a mountain cabin, but in the current economic crisis, the people quietly preparing to survive catastrophe may just be your next-door neighbors.

In his column in last month's Financial Times, business and technology expert Ade McCormack writes, "The world is in crisis and with it the world of business. Many of us have two plans. Plan A involves President Barack Obama performing some economic magic. Plan B involves a revolver, a vegetable patch and a subscription to Survivalist Monthly."

And while McCormack was writing with a hint of jest, dissent over the president's trillion-dollar spending approach to the economy has left many average, everyday Americans considering something looking suspiciously like plan B.

Discover the shocking truth about the U.S. economy – and what you can and must do – with "Black Hole," the most recent edition of WND's acclaimed Whistleblower magazine!

Bill Heid of Survival Seeds, a company that sells "banks" of high-yielding vegetable seeds sealed for long-term storage and awaiting a family's need to grow its own food, says business is skyrocketing.

"It's been dramatic, nothing short of dramatic," Heid told WND. "The survivalist mentality used to be considered a fringe element, but now that economic times are such as they are, many more average, regular folks are adopting the same set of preparations."

Heid told WND what's most notable is that his boom in sales isn't coming from just the usual survivalists stocking up for a Y2K-like event.

"Ninety percent of our increase in business is new business," Heid said, "people who have never thought about surviving in case of emergency before."

The Christian Science Monitor reports that Lehman's, an Ohio retailer of home self-sufficiency equipment, has recorded huge sales increases from across the preparedness spectrum, from curious buyers to the stereotypical die-hards, according to Glenda Ervin, the company's vice president of marketing.

Vic Rantala, founder of Minnesota-based Safecastle, which markets home shelters for protection against disasters such as hurricanes and chemical attacks, told the Monitor his company's revenues have more than doubled since 2007.

"If most people think of a survivalist as an armed loner with extreme views – there are folks like that out there, but there are many more in America who are simply involved in preparing for down times, lean times or disaster," Rantala, a former U.S. intelligence analyst, told the Monitor. "It's logical. It's common sense."

Seattle Times Columnist Danny Westneat interviewed Claire Anderson, a 68-year-old woman who was prompted by Obama's call for community organization to host a meeting of neighbors in her apartment. Their discussion of the slumping economy and fears of what lies ahead harkened back to the leaner days of her World War II childhood.

"I think we're headed back to the days of the victory gardens," Anderson said. "We have to figure out how to help ourselves. We can't be isolated. We can't sit around and wait for the government."

A New York Times article from last summer suggests last year's elevated fuel and food prices sparked a surge of interest in gardening that hasn't slowed since.

"Seed companies and garden shops say that not since the rampant inflation of the 1970s has there been such an uptick in interest in growing food at home," writes Times reporter Marian Burros. "Space in community gardens across the country has been sold out for several months. In Austin, Texas, some of the gardens have a three-year waiting list."

George C. Ball Jr., owner of the major seed and plant supplier W. Atlee Burpee Company, told the Times sales shot up by 40 percent last year, double the annual growth for the last five years.

Ball said of the surge in business, "You don't see this kind of thing but once in a career."

Anxiety over the economy has generated a spike in other areas of the survival and emergency preparedness industry, too.

Harry Weyandt is president of Nitro-Pak, a company that sells freeze-dried food, survival kits, fuel, camping gear and a variety of emergency preparedness products.

"Since the middle of last September, the demand for our long-storing foods and supplies has been very high," Weyandt writes in a column on his company's website. "We are shipping orders as fast as possible, but the demand for preparedness supplies and long storing foods is gaining steam again."

Last summer, an ABC News report said "there are worrying signs appearing in the United States where some … locals are beginning to hoard supplies." The report said some suppliers were concerned the U. S. government may be competing with consumers for stocks of storable food.

Spokesman Bruce Hopkins of Best Prices Storable Foods told WND his company was having trouble obtaining No. 10 cans and other storable foodstuffs, in part, because the federal government was purchasing such large amounts.

"We don't know why," Hopkins said. "The feds then went to freeze dried companies and bought most of their canned stock."

A statement from one of the world's larger suppliers of food stores, Oregon Freeze Dry, also confirmed that sales of No. 10 cans had increased so significantly, the company couldn't keep up and had to remove the products from their online catalog.

WND also reported a spike in gun sales in the wake of Obama's election that was even more intense than in the days following Y2K and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks

And since November, the sale of weapons and ammunition hasn't slowed.

The Orlando Sentinel reports months of steady, heavy buying have left gun dealers in Florida facing shortages on ammunition.

"The survivalist in all of us comes out," John Ritz, manager of a Florida shooting range, told the Sentinel. "It's more about protecting what you have."

"People are just stockpiling," said a spokeswoman for Georgia arms, which has seen bullet sales jump 100 percent since the election. "A gun is just like a car. If you can't get gas, you can't use it."

Newspapers from around the world reported last month on people facing the economic crisis with increased preparations for catastrophe.

The Sydney Morning Herald reports the story of Tony, a 44-year-old stockbroker who lives in a Sydney suburb with his wife and three children. Tony has been stockpiling supplies including rice, multivitamins, peanut butter, honey, soap and toilet paper.

Simon Beer, who operates a survivalist website in Australia, told the newspaper he has seen a surge in interest lately.

"Climate change, peak oil, the economic situation," Beer told the Herald, "people are seeing we're headed for catastrophic changes."

The Toronto Star reports the story of Paul, a man in his mid-50s who only three years ago became alarmed over the possibility of fuel shortage and began a plan to prepare for survival should the worst happen.

"When cars stop running? And grocery stores go bare? What do you think is going to happen?" Paul asked the Star. "It's mind boggling once you grasp it."

And while the newspaper did depict Paul as the more kooky kind of survivalist, labeling him "a conspiracy-minded fellow," the reporter nonetheless was surprised to find him "disarmingly self-aware and funny."

As for Paul, he laughed at the reporter for assuming a man who prepares for catastrophe necessarily fits some "survivalist" stereotype.

"What did you expect?" he asked the Star reporter with a smile. "Head-to-toe camouflage?"

Growing Food in Times of Scarcity

Today I got a call from a very good friend and one that has contact with some pretty prominent people. He was so sad, scared and worried, didn't want to pass on bad news but felt he should let me know. One of his close friends has a good source of information plus a high security clearance informed him that over the summer you would see more and more deployment by the military, come the end of summer into the early fall there "WILL" be martial law. The food source is being dried up gradually. Food will become so scarce and expensive families will be going hungry. This will be the start of a civil uprising and the military will be called into service to quell the looting, stealing, killing and destruction of property. This is all planned. Believe it or not but at least take the time to prepare for it just in case.

I am not telling you this is the gospel but I know where the information came from and it is certainly a credible source.

People, it more than likely cannot be stopped.. WAKE UP...You can still protect your family from most of the hard times with some planning. Do you want to see your children's eyes with hunger in them? Do you want to be on your knees begging for food ? I don't and I won't.

It is the beginning of spring now. Plant every square inch of land you can find, buy pots, buy dirt, buy food and put it away now while it is still here.

Those of you that say you don't have room... MAKE ROOM.. there are so many ways to increase space for your gardens, use your imagination.

How about a wall of food? simple, use PVC pipe, hook it to a rack or your fence or your patio supports. I have done this before just to see if it worked and to dress up a area of our patio that was not that attractive. I used 6" PVC pipes 10 feet long. just packed with good dirt and wired screen over the ends to allow drainage. Drilled holes in the pipe and planted. I grew flowers but vegetables can be grown just as easily. Just think.. put the smaller plants on the top tier, larger ones below. The only drawback is watering which with smaller containers you have to do regularly or you could just install a drip system?

How about planting your potatoes, asparagus and peanuts in bags? Easy to do and so much more prolific in production. Find some of the Tyvec we used for banners and signs during the campaign, cut into 4' lengths, stitch up two sides making a sack, poke holes for drainage in the bottom and add dirt. Plant all those potato eyes in the bags, add more compost or good dirt. As the plant grows add more dirt and when they are ready to harvest just dump out the bags, there are your future dinners. One bag can produce up to 30 pounds of potatoes. Do the same for Peanuts. The bags can be lined up alongside your garage, house, any out of the way place. (Don't try using paper bags they will of course fall apart when wet)

How about all of those hanging baskets you saved from last years flowers? Cut holes in the bottoms and use coffee filters to keep in the dirt. Plant your cukes, squash, any vining plant in these and watch them grow. Easy to harvest and prolific producers as long as you keep them moist and fertilized. Ever heard of the upside down planters? Make your own.

I spent a couple of hours yesterday starting some seeds for the garden. Easy and relaxing work. I splurged and bought some new 6 pack containers which comes with a bottom tray and a top clear plastic dome cover to protect the seedlings from being washed away by heavy rain, cold, etc.

I like to use a sterile medium, Peat Moss and Perlite, it is free of diseases and bugs and insures a good start to your little plants. Use one part Perlite with 20 parts peat and you will have a perfect medium for starting anything.

Get your hands dirty and fill your little pots with the mix, leave about a half inch on the top of each section. Put in your seeds (usually 2 seeds per container) add more soil to cover the seeds and press it down to insure good contact with the medium... Make sure you wet your peat mixture down before filling the containers. Peat is hard to wet totally and takes some mixing by hand to insure it is wet all the way through.

Then just cover and wait for nature to take its course:

Tim brought in a truck load of ruined hay to mulch our garden with and will get that on the garden tomorrow. Then the real work begins.. planting peas, beans, okra, peppers, eggplants and all the greens I love so much.. collards, kale, mustard and broccoli. These will do well even with some cold nights left to go.

Please people stock up your pantry, have enough food for your family for at least 6 months. A year would be better but I know how much it costs. Don't listen to the experts, buy what you normally eat no need to stock up on items that are recomended but you rarely eat. Make sure you have enough salt, sugar, oil, coffee, tea, chocolate and spices of all kinds. These will be the things people forget to store up on and will become good items to barter. Flour is already becoming scarce in our area, corn meal the same, Meat will become so expensive it will be out of reach for most of us but by buying now and canning it (freezing is ok but if your power is cut off your meat will spoil so I just can it all) I must have 10 cases of hamburger canned, beef stew, Chicken "N" dumplings, Pork Chops, vegetable soups and spagetti sauce all ready to go. Just open the jar and heat and eat. So much better than the store brands and you know exactly what is in them. Roasts can be canned also very easily. If you don't have a pressure canner yet get one by hook or crook. It will be a Godsend if things go sour and I think they will shortly.

Think about building a dehydrator, easy to build, I used one of those closet bags for hanging suits etc and replaced the plastic with screen wire. Added shelves and I can hang it outside in the fresh air with all the vegetables on it to air dry. The indians did it hundreds of years ago and it is still a good idea. Dried food lasts a long time, can be stored easily and is ready to just add water and heat and eat.

Everyone is busy buying all the expensive water purifiers.. why? Build one.. easy.. look at how a alcohol still is built, make a small one. You will be making distilled water in no time. I made one out of a old pressure cooker just take off the jiggler and attach a metal or glass tube (The first one I made used Aquarium tubing)to run to your water bottle. fill the cooker, turn it on and just watch the water start coming out of the spout. All the impurities will remain in the cooker and only pure steam will be put out to condense back into water. Add a pinch of salt to make it have some taste and you are in business.

When you go to the flea markets, yard sales etc make sure to snap up any and all canning jars and lids, you will need to can your produce for the next winters use.

Please take heed and start today. There is no time to lose and if you wait you may be one of the ones that are just begging for help from our wonderful Government which means you have to obey. You have to comply, you have to agree to be what ever they want you to be or you could just be left to starve !

DO NOT make your plans known to your neighbors unless they are also doing the same thing. When the SHTF there will be so many people on the streets looking for food for their families you will be a target. Just remember even a honest hardworking Christian will turn to anything to feed his children. He will steal, lie, even kill to keep his children from starving. Wouldn't you?

Coping: With Med Shortages

http://urbansurvival.com/week.htm

I asked the question Tuesday about medicine shortages and if they were increasing. Seems the answer is you bet! One email in particular stood out on this topic:

"Hey George,

I am a Pharmacist and wanted to respond to the email you printed from the fellow reporting his medication manufacturer change. First, there are ALWAYS shortages of some medications for various reasons...recall, raw material issues, unexpected demand, etc., etc.. Also, in this age of penny pinching insurance companies and dirt cheap prescriptions from WallyWorld and others pharmacies no longer have the luxury of sticking with a particular generic manufacturer and must constantly choose the cheapest available, so the product dispensed is not going to be consistent. A few months ago almost ALL the product line of the generic manufacturer ETHEX was recalled. Since they were major suppliers for several medications and the only supplier of a few this led to a huge disruption in the marketplace. Eventually this will be sorted out...no conspiracy here. However, I will say that the number of different medications that I am unable to get at the moment is much larger than is normal, so maybe something is going on, but I'm not sure what."

And if you're looking for additional detail, it turns out the FDA has a web page which goes through current drug shortages, resolved shortages, and even discontinued drugs. If you're a healthcare practitioner, or if you're on a drug that keeps you alive, you should maybe bookmark this page:

http://www.fda.gov/cder/drug/shortages/

Yeah, yeah, why doesn't ATF have a similar page for ammo shortages? And speaking of which, here's an interesting email:

"According to a Deputy Sheriff, ammunition will no longer be supplied to retail outlets for the public. What outlets have on the shelves and in stock now, is all they will be getting. Ammunition will be directed to the Military and Police Forces, ONLY. This 'word' comes from a long time friend of the family who is a Deputy Sheriff and has been for some 15 years.

I have no proof of this claim, but I am positive you will be hearing more about it soon."

I'll just put that over here in my "It wouldn't surprise me, but then things would get ugly...." file. Say, that file is getting phat.

There was ammo on these shelves …

Nationwide shortage leaves gun owners scrambling, paying extra

Posted: March 31, 2009
By Drew Zahn
http://www.worldnetdaily.com/index.php?fa=...ew&pageId=93483

Reports from across the country confirm that gun owners seeking to stock up on ammunition are facing the same list of problems: shortages, back orders, elevated prices and a long line of people staring at empty shelves where boxes of bullets used to be.

"Just about everywhere I've been, it's sold out," Darren Lauzon told KMGH-TV in Denver after he failed to find ammunition for his new .45 pistol. "Wal-Mart, Sportsman's, wherever."

"Folks have been experiencing shortages all over the country," a spokesman for the National Rifle Association told the Santa Rosa Press-Democrat in California. "Since the election there has been a great increase in firearms sales as well. Background checks are up, enrollment in training and safety classes is up, concealed weapons permits are up, gun sales are up – and ammo manufacturers can't keep up with demand."

Gun shops and retailers agree: the press for ammunition is emptying their shelves quicker than the manufacturers can restock them.

"We're probably selling ammunition right now at a 200 percent increase over normal sales," said Richard Taylor, manager at the Firing Line in Aurora, Colo.

"We've probably got over 4,000 cases of ammunition on back order currently. But we just don't know when we're going to receive that," Taylor told KMGH. "Y2K was just like a little blip on the radar screen compared to this. I mean, it's just phenomenal."

A Wal-Mart salesman told Ross Kaminsky of Human Events, "We used to get shipments almost every day. Now we only know we'll have it when we see it. I get at least a half-dozen calls a day asking for ammunition, especially for handguns, and when it arrives, the customers buy everything."

The shortages are creating multiple complications for both gun owners and sellers.

KSNW-TV in Wichita reports the cost of ammunition in many Kansas stores has risen between $5 to $15 more per box over the last six months, and even still, many retailers are limiting the amount of ammunition customers can buy.

"It is a bad problem," Bill Vinduska with Bullseye Firearms told the station, "because we really would rather be able to supply our customers their needs; and not being able to do that is really a problem."

"When you're turning down two or three thousand, four thousand dollars a day in sales because you just can't get the product, that's significant," said Burnie Stokes from Panhandle Gunslingers to KFDA-TV in Amarillo, Texas.

Jere Jordan, general manager Midsouth Shooters Supply in Clarksville, Tenn., a company that specializes in mail-order sales of ammunition and reloading supplies, told the Associated Press that his company has sold out of ammunition commonly used in semiautomatic pistols and popular military rifles.

And even though Midsouth is taking orders for supplies used by hobbyists to handload cartridges, Jordan has no idea when they'll be filled.

"The wait? We're not even guessing on the wait anymore," Jordan said. "It's exceeding 60 days."

Who's to blame for shortages?

According to Lawrence Keane, senior vice president of the National Shooting Sports Foundation, a trade organization representing both manufacturers and retailers, the shortages pinching store owners aren't the fault of their suppliers.

"We have heard from all across the country that there is a tremendous shortage of ammunition," Keane told the AP. "We've heard this from the manufacturers, that their customers are calling them trying to get supplies for inventory, and that the manufacturers are going full-bore, pardon the pun."

The shortages, for the most part, stem from a widespread surge in customer demand for ammunition, a surge many link to the election of Barack Obama and the belief, perpetuated in part by the National Rifle Association, that the new president favors limiting the right to bear arms codified in the Second Amendment.

"Sen. Obama's statements and support for restricting access to firearms, raising taxes on guns and ammunition and voting against the use of firearms for self-defense in the home are a matter of public record," declares Chris W. Cox, chairman of the NRA's Political Victory Fund. "Barack Obama would be the most anti-gun president in our nation's history."

"After the election," Midsouth's Jordan told the AP, "where you have a change of parties to a more liberal side, I would say I guess the conservatives want to protect what they feel might be taken away from them, either through a tax, or an all-out ban."

"Everybody's just worried about the new government coming in and trying to ban guns and make everything more difficult to obtain," NRA member Kevin Bishop told KMGH. "Well, the way [Obama] has been acting, there may be a little truth to the rumor."

Rich Wyatt, owner of a firearms shop and training facility outside of Denver, told Human Events'

Kaminsky that even "old ladies and young people and liberals" have been buying ammunition from him.

Wyatt's position seems to be that the new president sparked the ammunition buying frenzy with careless words from the campaign trail, such as when he said small town folks in Pennsylvania "cling to guns or religion" during hard economic times.

"Barack Obama is right about one thing," Wyatt said. "We are clinging to God and our guns, and I defy him to try to take either one from us."

Police come up short on ammo; increased costs, budget cuts, worldwide demand

By JOHN QUINN
Tuesday, April 7, 2009
http://www.fosters.com/apps/pbcs.dll/artic...WS_01/704079899

Even police are feeling the pinch from the greater demand for ammunition worldwide, sometimes finding themselves waiting for ammo of critical caliber.

The price and availability of ammunition for handguns and rifles varies with the rules of supply and demand — including the current cost of steel, difficult economic times, the ongoing Global War on Terrorism and concerns about federal authorities reinstating a U.S. ban on the sale of assault weapons.

Many manufacturers and dealers are struggling to keep up with the demand, especially since there has been a nationwide boost in ammunition sales since President Barack Obama was elected.

Sales have spiked again in the past month after U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder recently suggested that the Obama administration reauthorize the "Assault Weapons Ban and Law Enforcement Protection Act of 2007," similar to the 10-year ban which President Bill Clinton signed into law in 1994, but expired under President George W. Bush in 2004.

The new ban — in U.S. House Resolution 1022 — proposes to prohibit the sale of certain pistols, shotguns and semiautomatic rifles and assault weapons — especially military-style weapons with magazines that hold 10 or more cartridges in detachable magazines — but also includes ammunition commonly used by pistols or .22-caliber rimfire cartridges used for hunting or target shooting.

While police are authorized to use some of the weapons listed on the proposed ban — including the AR-15 assault rifle and M-16 automatic rifle — for emergency purposes, departments must plan ahead to purchase enough ammunition for their training and operational needs.

Capt. Michael Raiche said Dover police haven't had any problems purchasing .40-caliber ammunition for their handguns, but they previously had issues with obtaining .223-caliber ammunition for the department's semi-automatic and automatic rifles.

Raiche said the issues were connected to the fact the U.S. military uses .223-caliber ammunition in the ongoing war on terrorism.

Capt. Stephen Barrett, commander of the N.H. State Police's support services bureau, said it takes up to 18 to 24 months for ammunition orders to be fulfilled, which forces officials to plan ahead.

"We have been feeling that for a number of years," Barrett said, adding the cost of ammunition has also been going up by a noticeable amount, although specific figures were not available.

Barrett said the .223-caliber ammunition for the rifles takes much longer to arrive than the .45-caliber ammunition state troopers use for their handguns.

As a result, state police are just doing their best to manage their ammunition supply with their training needs.

Lt. Anthony Triano said Rochester police have also been impacted by the ammunition shortage. He added the cost of ammunition has doubled since last year, it takes far longer for orders to arrive and the department's budget has been cut this year.

"We're not looking for anything unusual," Triano said, adding Rochester police use .45-caliber ammunition for their handguns and rounds for the rifles used by their tactical unit.

Triano said police try to compensate by ordering the ammunition required for training much farther in advance.

Major Mark Peirce, executive officer of the Rockingham County Sheriff's Office, said their department has not encountered problems acquiring ammunition since they plan ahead and annually factor in a 3 to 5 percent increase in the cost of the three types of ammunition — .357-caliber for handguns, .223-caliber for rifles and 12-gauge shotgun shells — they use.

Peirce, who oversees the firearms budget, said the department plans ahead, acts early and manages their supplies.

Dallas-Fort Worth's 'modern survivalists' are ready for layoffs - or war

By MELODY McDONALDmjmcdonald@star-telegram.com
Apr. 04, 2009
http://www.star-telegram.com/804/story/1299768.html

Jack Spirko owns a media company, is married to a nurse and has a son in college. He has two dogs and lives in a nice house with a pool in a diversified neighborhood in Arlington.

Spirko, 36, considers himself an average guy with a normal life.

But for the past few years, Spirko has been stockpiling food, water, gas, guns and ammunition. He also has a load of red wine, Starbucks coffee and deodorant stashed away.

"I refer to myself as a modern survivalist, which means I don't do without," Spirko explained. "I have a nice TV; I have nice furniture. We are not living in the sticks, but I take all of these things very seriously."

Spirko, an Army veteran and self-described "stark-raving-mad Libertarian," is part of a growing movement of people who are preparing for a disaster — natural, economic or man-made. Referred to as "modern survivalists" or "preppers," they are taking steps to protect and provide for their families should something bad happen.

Theirs is a different breed of survivalist, far from the right-wing militants or religious extremists who hole up in bunkers, live off the land and wait for the apocalypse.

Preppers are regular people with regular jobs who decided after 9-11, after Hurricane Katrina or when their 401(k)s tanked that they can't rely on someone else to help them if something goes awry.

"We are normal people just like you," Spirko said. "We just understand that, sometimes, stuff goes wrong."

Prompted by Katrina

Donnie, 38, a McKinney resident who is an account executive with an international trade show organization, said Hurricane Katrina opened his eyes. He spent six weeks working as a paramedic in New Orleans.

"It was a logistical nightmare getting to the area," Donnie said. "And the longer you were there, the more you realized that, in a blink of an eye, your life can be turned upside down. I don't want to be the person in the bread line or standing in line for ice."

Donnie, like many of those interviewed for this article, agreed to talk to the Star-Telegram on the condition that his last name not be used.

"I usually don't advertise it," Donnie said. "There are people who cast a wary eye."

He said that after Katrina, he amassed about two weeks' worth of food. But last September, after the economy began to sour, he "kicked into a higher gear" and acquired more supplies and water-filtration systems.

"I probably have about six months' worth of food for two people," Donnie said. "I keep about 30 gallons of water on hand, and I have the means to store another 200 gallons if I have advance notice of something going bad."

Art Markman, a professor of psychology at the University of Texas at Austin, said that when people start stockpiling food and water or buying weapons, they are in a motivational state called "avoidance mode."

"You turn on the news and only hear about job losses and the prospect that things are going to get worse than better," he said. "You see signals that the world is full of nasty things you need to avoid. You've engaged in this general sense of avoidance. You are trying to focus on safety concerns."

Markman said the trend is not surprising, given the economy.

What exactly preppers are preparing for isn't specific. It could be a layoff, tornado, global pandemic or nuclear war.

Internet sites devoted to survivalism often refer to scenarios like TEOTWAWKI, an acronym for "the end of the world as we know it."

"I am prepared for just about any disaster that disrupts everyday living," said Bob, 43, a sales manager from eastern Pennsylvania who runs www.thinkprepared.net.

"... The economy is at the forefront of my concerns. The unemployment rate is soaring, and most people are not prepared to be without a paycheck for a week, much less a month or longer," Bob said.

Booming business

Businesses that sell storable foods, disaster shelters and guns are thriving.

Bruce Hopkins, owner of Best Prices Storable Foods, which sells dehydrated and canned foods, said sales "exploded" last spring and remain steady. On a single day last week, Hopkins sold $31,000 worth of storable food. Hopkins said a popular item is a one-year food supply for a family of four or family of two, priced at $4,000 and $2,700, respectively.

"I think to have anything less than a month's food supply is foolish," said Hopkins, whose business is in Quinlan, south of Greenville. "I think it is time to stop watching American Idol and start paying attention to what is going on in the world."

Walton McCarthy, owner and principal engineer of Radius Engineering International, builds underground disaster shelters that protect against nuclear, chemical and biological warfare, among other things.

He said his business has tripled since July, when reports of Iranian missile tests surfaced. McCarthy's disaster shelters hold 10 to 300 people and cost $105,000 to $6 million. His customers include politicians, doctors and key executives.

"What we are going through now is the Pearl Harbor blues," said McCarthy, whose company is based in Forney, east of Dallas. "All of the ingredients are here. It is around the corner, and no one should be surprised."

At Cheaper Than Dirt Outdoor Adventures, a gun store in north Fort Worth, business has never been better. Owner Dewayne Irwin said he sees three types of customers: "You have the everyday good ol' boy Texas gun owner. You have the folks that are coming in and saying, 'I've lost my job and my neighbor lost their job' and they really believe they might have to fight over a bucket of carrots or something. And you have the guys who are first-time gun buyers and they don't really know why. It is Main Street. It is crazy."

'Going back to my roots'

Spirko grew up in rural Pennsylvania, where hunting, fishing, gardening, and canning and storing food were a way of life.

"No one looked at that back then and said, 'These people were survivalists,'•" Spirko said. "That is just what you did."

After Spirko got out of the Army, he moved to Texas and started working in communications and sales.

"I found myself in my mid-20s pursuing corporate America, working the six-figure job and traveling all over the United States," Spirko said.

And then, Y2K happened or, rather, didn't happen.

"I thought they were absolutely crazy," Spirko said. "They thought the toaster was going to explode when it goes to 2000 or whatever."

And while Spirko didn't buy into the Y2K scare, he did think legitimate concerns had been raised.

"Right after that, we had the dot-com bubble explode. We had the stock market crash. My portfolio went down by 50 percent overnight. And then 9-11," he said. "I started going back to my roots and started to look at ways to preserve our cash and make sure we had some food on hand."

In July, Spirko launched a podcast for modern survivalists at TheSurvivalPodcast.com. He encourages people to pay down their debt and have extra cash, water and food and an evacuation plan. About the same time, he expanded his backyard garden, where he grows tomatoes, peas, corn, strawberries, onions and jalapeños, among other things.

"We had two big scares with produce last year — jalapeños and tomatoes," Spirko said. "First jalapeños had salmonella, and then tomatoes had salmonella. If that can happen, what other things can happen?"

Gwenn, 52, a self-described "girlvivalist," runs a lodging house in Beaumont. She has plenty of water, a year's worth of food and a shotgun for protection.

"When we had Hurricane Ike here, a lot of my tenants didn't evacuate," she said. "While my neighbors were standing in line for MREs [Meals Ready to Eat] at the shopping center, we were grilling steak."

Keeping it quiet

Many survivalists — Spirko is not one of them — are "closet preppers."

Afraid that they will be viewed as crazy or weird, they don't tell people they are storing freeze-dried food, canning their own vegetables or setting up an alternate location where they can go if TEOTWAWKI arrives. They also don't want "raiders" beating down their door if a disaster happens.

Bob said survivalists are often viewed — incorrectly — as doomsayers.

"Some people think we want the end of the world as we know it," he said. "I can tell you from my heart, I hope nothing like that ever happens. I want my sons to grow up and have a great life."

Still, Bob believes that everybody should at least have a 72-hour bag of gear, also known as a "bug-out bag," ready to go.

"Survival today is more about being prepared for short-term situations, like hurricanes, floods and blizzards," Bob said. ".•.•. Learn some basic skills like gardening, first aid and personal defense. Become self-reliant like our grandparents were."

Jordan Mills, 30, an information technology contractor in downtown Houston, put his bug-out bag to good use during Hurricanes Rita and Ike. In it, he keeps his birth certificate, medical records, cash, food, water, flashlights, tape, garbage bags, clothes and other supplies.

Mills said he didn't choose the "survivalist" label, but others have called him that.

"The word brings to my mind an image of a gruff mountain man with a log cabin, 10 years of food stored up and enough guns to outfit a small army," he said. "I don't meet that image at all. I consider the chance of a total collapse of society and the end of the world as we know it to be pretty much zero. To me, survivalism is really just preparing for day-to-day inconveniences or emergencies."

A growing community

Every morning, Spirko gets in his diesel Jetta and makes the 50-mile commute from Arlington to Frisco, where his media company is based.

During the drive, he records his daily podcast. He discusses things like storing food safely, finding alternative energy options, dealing with anti-survivalist stigma and finding time to prep.

"The more I dug in, the more I learned," he said. "And then something really cool happened: This community started to build around it."

Spirko said that about 4,000 people download his podcast each day and that his audience is growing.

"People are always waiting for someone else to come and help them," he said. "To me, survivalism is just waking back up to traditional American values. I'm talking about basic self-responsibility, basic self-worth — understanding that you control your life more than anybody else.

"If you do nothing, you may not regret it. But if you do regret it, you are really going to regret it."

Canned Ham, Going Once, Twice: A Rise in Grocery Auctions

By Sean Gregory Sunday, Apr. 19, 2009
http://www.time.com/time/business/article/...1891500,00.html

This Friday, as he has done almost every Friday for the past four years, Ron Peterson will offer antiques, coins, jewelry, furniture and cars at the weekly auction he runs in Monroeville, New Jersey. This is all typical fare for the bidding business. But if you're also hankering for ham and paper towels, no need to run to the supermarket. As the stock market headed south last fall, Peterson, owner of Elmer Auction, LLC, added grocery items like cereals and cleaning supplies to his ledger. And they've sold, to the cash-strapped ladies and gentlemen sitting in each and every row. "People are skipping the decorative items," says Peterson, "and buying what they need."

These days, the auctioneers are selling more than just art, antiques and the furniture from Aunt Esther's estate. As the economy fell, so did the demand for discretionary items sold at most community auctions across the country. Desperate for new revenue streams, auctioneers have started selling basic grocery store items to help pick up the slack. Hungry for bargains, shoppers have started bidding on fruits and vegetables. As long as the final offer comes in below the grocer's retail price, they'll save a few bucks on the essentials. "Right now, the auction business is in a downfall," says Raymond Toler, owner of Raymond's Auction House in Archdale, N.C. He started running monthly grocery auctions in October, after hearing that they were becoming popular among other auction companies in his area. "We're just trying new things to get people in here," he says. (See pictures from a grocery auction.)

During the downturn, auctioneers in Michigan, Indiana, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Georgia and other places have either added groceries to their programs, or increased the frequency of food sales. Grocers are eager to hand over their goods to the auction houses once they know they're not going to sell them in the store. For example Clyde DeHart, owner of DeHart's Auction Service in Carlisle, Pa., takes "scratch n' dent" items from a nearby BJ's Wholesale Club store. Since BJ's sells in bulk, if one can of corn gets smashed in the truck, the whole case can't be displayed in the store. So DeHart takes the case, throws out the bad can, and auctions off the rest. If, say, a bag of Iams dog food gets ripped, DeHart will tape it and offer it at auction. "I wouldn't do that with human food," he says.

Some items are near or slightly past their sell-by dates, but these days, expiration won't keep shoppers from a discount. Other stuff is just sitting on the shelves, and will go to waste if it's not auctioned off. The grocers get the proceeds from the sale, and the auctioneer takes a cut for commission. DeHart, for example, says he usually receives about 30% of an auction's proceeds. He started running grocery auctions three months ago. During one five-hour auction in March, bidders paid $10,000 for groceries that retailed for $26,000. (See pictures of the world's longest yard sale.)

For his next big sale on April 17, DeHart lists about 100 items on the docket, including coffee, Pampers, Twizzlers, relish, macaroni & cheese, and Chef Boyardee. "This is the DeHart's (sic) stimulus plan," his listing says on dehartsauction.com, "and it does work." (To find a grocery auction in your area, try auctionzip.com, a site that lets you search for sales by zip code. Type "grocery" in the "keyword" bar).

Auctions only work for shoppers if they do a little research. Consumers need to know the price of a given item in the local grocery store, and discipline themselves not to bid above that number. Such self-restraint is no easy task. "We joke all time about the Little Debbies," says Chris Crepeau, owner of Michigan Auction Sales in Holt, Mich. "People always want those specific snack cakes, and pay too much for them." The auction process sweeps up some shoppers — I just want to win, darn it, no matter how much I pay for that dog food. Others figure that while they're at the grocery auction anyway, they might as well spend an extra dollar to secure that ground beef. Beats making another trip to the store.

On the whole, however, the auction houses report that shoppers are saving. The deals vary by product, but Crepeau says his customers are paying 25-50% less than they would in the supermarkets. Crepeau has been running monthly grocery auctions for two years; over the past couple of months, attendance has doubled. "We have a lot of laid-off people around here," says Crepeau. "They need ways to save a buck."

They also often need a respite from grocery shopping's drudgery. Scouring the supermarket for all the items on your list is not much fun. You may get pumped shopping for shoes and new shirts, but who relishes the chance to buy relish? Sure, you can bid on frozen chicken pot pie over the eBay, but that's a pretty lonely endeavor. At the very least, these auctions offer another social outlet in tough times. "It's a fun experience," says Randy Zimmerman, a mother of seven from Holt. "We goof around with the auctioneers. People are having conversations throughout the auction — it's a real chance to meet new people."

Still, saving is the real key. Zimmerman has seven children, between the ages of 2 and 19. At a grocery auction in early April, she bought hot dogs, frozen pizzas and an Easter ham, among other items. Zimmerman figures all the stuff she bought would have cost $300 in the grocery store. She paid $100. "The more we save on food, the more we have for all the other bills each month," Zimmerman says. "Our cash flow can stretch out further. These auctions have just been a blessing."

Crisis Spurs Spike in 'Suburban Survivalists'

May 25, 2009
By Gillian FlacCUS
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Six months ago, Jim Wiseman didn't even have a spare nutrition bar in his kitchen cabinet.

Now, the 54-year-old businessman and father of five has a backup generator, a water filter, a grain mill and a 4-foot-tall pile of emergency food tucked in his home in the expensive San Diego suburb of La Jolla.

Wiseman isn't alone. Emergency supply retailers and military surplus stores nationwide have seen business boom in the past few months as an increasing number of Americans spooked by the economy rush to stock up on gear that was once the domain of hardcore survivalists.

These people snapping up everything from water purification tablets to thermal blankets shatter the survivalist stereotype: they are mostly urban professionals with mortgages, SUVs, solid jobs and a twinge of embarrassment about their newfound hobby.

From teachers to real estate agents, these budding emergency gurus say the dismal economy has made them prepare for financial collapse as if it were an oncoming Category 5 hurricane. They worry about rampant inflation, runs on banks, bare grocery shelves and widespread power failures that could make taps run dry.

For Wiseman, a fire protection contractor, that's meant spending roughly $20,000 since September on survival gear–and trying to persuade others to do the same.

"The UPS guy drops things off and he sees my 4-by-8-by-6-foot pile of food and I say 'What are you doing to prepare, buddy?'" he said. "Because there won't be a thing left on any shelf of any supermarket in the country if people's confidence wavers."

The surge in interest in emergency stockpiling has been a bonanza for camping supply companies and military surplus vendors, some of whom report sales spikes of up to 50 percent. These companies usually cater to people preparing for earthquakes or hurricanes, but informal customer surveys now indicate the bump is from first-time shoppers who cite financial, not natural, disaster as their primary concern, they say.

Top sellers include 55-gallon water jugs, waterproof containers, freeze-dried foods, water filters, water purification tablets, glow sticks, lamp oil, thermal blankets, dust masks, first-aid kits and inexpensive tents.

Joe Branin, owner of the online emergency supply store Living Fresh, said he's seen a 700 percent increase in orders for water purification tablets in the past month and a similar increase in orders for sterile water pouches.

He is shipping meals ready to eat and food bars by the case to residential addresses nationwide.

"You're hearing from the people you will always hear from, who will build their own bunkers and stuff," he said. "But then you're hearing from people who usually wouldn't think about this, but now it's in their heads: 'What if something comes to the worst?'"

Online interest in survivalism has increased too. The niche Web site SurvivalBlog.com has seen its page views triple in the past 14 months to nearly 137,000 unique visitors a week. Jim Rawles, a self-described survivalist who runs the site, calls the newcomers "11th hour believers." He charges $100 an hour for phone consulting on emergency preparedness and says that business also has tripled.

"There's so many people who are concerned about the economy that there's a huge interest in preparedness, and it pretty much crosses all lines, social, economic, political and religious," he said. "There's a steep learning curve going on right now."

Art Markman, a cognitive psychologist, said he's not surprised by the reaction to the nation's financial woes–even though it may seem irrational. In an increasingly global and automated society, most people are dependent on strangers and systems they don't understand–and the human brain isn't programmed to work that way.

"We have no real causal understanding of the way our world works at all," said Markman, a professor at the University of Texas, Austin. "When times are good, you trust that things are working, but when times are bad you realize you don't have a clue what you would do if the supermarket didn't have goods on the shelves and that if the banks disappear, you have no idea where your money is."

Those preparing for the worst echo those thoughts and say learning to be self sufficient makes them feel more in control amid mounting uncertainty–even if it seems crazy to their friends and families.

Chris Macera, a 29-year-old IT systems administrator, said he started buying extra food to take advantage of sales after he lost his job and he was rehired elsewhere for $30,000 less.

But Macera, who works in suburban Orange County, said that over several months his mentality began to shift from saving money to preparing for possible financial mayhem. He is motivated, too, by memories of the government paralysis that followed Hurricane Katrina.

He now buys 15 pounds of meat at a time and freezes it, and buys wheat in 50-pound bags, mills it into flour and uses it to bake bread. He checks survivalist Web sites for advice at least once a day and listens to survival podcasts.

"You kind of have to sift through the people with their hats on a little bit too tight," said Macera, who said his colleagues tease him about the grain mill. "But I see a lot of things (on the Web) and they're real common sense-type things."

"I don't want to be a slave to anybody," he said. "The more systems you're dependent on, the more likely things are going to go bad for you."

That's a philosophy shared by Vincent Springer, a newcomer to emergency preparedness from the Chicago area.

Springer, a high school social studies teacher, says he's most worried about energy shortages and an economic breakdown that could paralyze the just-in-time supply chain that grocery stores rely on.

In the past few months, Springer has stockpiled enough freeze-dried food for three months and bought 72-hour emergency supply kits for himself, his wife and two young children. The 39-year-old is also teaching himself to can food.

"I'm not looking for a retreat in northern Idaho or any of that stuff, but I think there's more people like me out there and I think those numbers are growing," he said.

Survivalism Grows Popular in Phoenix-area residents are growing food, obtaining guns, sharing ideas

June 23, 2009
by Ryan Randazzo
The Arizona Republic
http://standeyo.com/NEWS/09_USA/090624.AZ.preparing.html

As the recession lingers, some Phoenix-area residents are shifting attention from their financial troubles, including falling home values and shrinking retirement savings, to stockpiling food and ammo.

Photo: Jeff Rodriguez, 26, a software engineer from Glendale, has stockpiled bags of grain in his garage. Rodriguez belongs to a local network of like-minded people who are studying survival tactics in the face of the economic downturn. (Tom Tingle / The Arizona Republic)

HOLLY NOTE: While Jeff's intentions are good, storing food in the garage isn't. Too high temperature is the #1 enemy of food storage. Temperatures easily top 100ºF for most of summer in this area and food stored under these conditions will deteriorate rapidly. Stored food needs constant temperatures not above 70ºF.

The second mistake is leaving food unprotected. This grain needs to be put in proper food-grade storage containers to seal out light and pests, and treated to remove oxygen and moisture. At this rate, unless Jeff plans to eat this food immediately, it's money wasted and a lot will be going in the trash bucket.

They worry the economic turmoil could lead to skyrocketing inflation, food scarcity, even violence. To prepare, they are forming social-networking groups to discuss how to store grains, purify water, plant gardens and, if needed, shoot guns.

"Most of us feel that if things do get better, it will be a long way out," said Jeff Rodriguez, a 26-year-old software engineer from Glendale. "I want to have some preparations in place."

The economy has him thinking a lot more about things like where his food comes from, how much cheap oil is left in the world and how people in the blazing-hot Valley would survive a major economic failure.

He has carefully prepared a 12-row, 384-square-foot garden, stores a ton and a half of grain in his home, and is considering buying pygmy goats or chickens.

He also has researched solar electricity and a rainwater-collection system.

He is far from alone. Rodriguez belongs to a local network of like-minded people who include retirees, young mothers and successful professionals.

These people are joining thousands nationwide who are studying survival tactics far from the backwoods bunkers associated with "survivalists."

At least two survival-related groups have formed in Phoenix since December, and groups with varying outlooks and politics have sprouted nationally from Kentucky to New York.

Of course, it's not unheard of for mainstream groups to prepare for emergencies. The Mormon Church, which reports 13.5 million members worldwide, has long counseled self-sufficiency and encourages families to keep a prudent supply of food on hand.

Disasters such as hurricanes and 9/11, and even perceived troubles like the Y2K bug, always increase interest in survivalism. The men behind the counters at U.S. Surplus Corp. in Phoenix see a crush of new customers every time tragedy strikes.

The newbies stand out from the military personnel and outdoor enthusiasts who stop in for rugged clothing, rations or canteens.

"They are the ones trying to fix up a cave to live in," store manager Gary Pickering said. "They are asking a lot of questions and buying things they normally wouldn't, like water-purification tablets."

Sales at the store haven't slid with the rest of the economy, officials said. Preparing for a disaster makes sense only if people actually know how to use the equipment they are buying, said Cody Lundin, who runs a survival-skills school in Prescott and authored two books on the subject.

He says people should learn to care for themselves in case of emergency whether a disaster is pending or the economy is tanking.

Last year was among the best ever for his school, although it's not always clear what motivates people to sign up.

"I'm seeing an influx of people simply calling to inquire what I think about stuff," Lundin said. "They are probing the waters because they are getting freaked out."

Professional counselor Rita Archambault said her East Valley clinic is treating more people with anxiety over the economy.

"I have not seen so much concern about the economy in my entire life," she said.

If planting a garden, raising poultry or stockpiling ammunition makes people feel better about their situation, good for them, she said.

"If you are not hurting anybody and you are reducing your anxiety, what harm is there?" Archambault said.

The only danger is if people get so obsessed that they neglect their job or family, she said.

It's not surprising that many of the people preparing for tough times are educated professionals, said Heidi Wayment, a social-psychology professor at Northern Arizona University who has researched disasters and anxiety.

"To understand the huge potential crisis that could come from economic collapse, you have to be educated," Wayment said. "I wouldn't say these people are crazy - far from it."

The people who are newly interested in survival skills recognize their eccentricity.

"I'm cognizant that what I'm doing is not normal," said Rodriguez, adding that his roommate thinks the food stockpile and garden are cool.

On a recent Friday evening, he and a few of the nearly 100 survivalism group members gathered at a Scottsdale bar. Amid the pumping dance music, they discussed the jobless rate, harvesting rainwater and protecting their property from looters.

"It would be fair to say most have at least some interest in firearms," Rodriguez said.

That's not to say the members glorify violence.

"I wouldn't even know what to do with a gun!" exclaimed MaryLou Benigno, 68.

Benigno, a retired teacher, has been gardening for years, but the economy has brought more urgency to her hobby.

She lectures the group on how to keep a worm-bed of compost under the kitchen sink from stinking up the house and the best places to buy seeds.

Benigno has been shopping for a cheap foreclosure home with land for a garden, which she hopes to share with friends.

"I don't want to be corny and say something like, 'Getting back to nature,' but if you develop a site properly, you could grow on every inch of the place," she said.

Lynn Smith, a Scottsdale commodities trader, spoke of his plans to head to Iowa for the summer, where his family owns a sprawling piece of land.

"It would be kind of hard to get by in the desert," he said.

Smith, 53, sold his home shortly after the real-estate peak in 2006 when he feared a market collapse and, despite a substantial income, now lives in an RV.

He can work remotely, so he'll spend the summer in the Midwest exploring how to grow food and may come back to Scottsdale next year, "depending what happens."

Smith pulled out aerial photographs of the Iowa property. "It's all flat, and I could see someone coming from any direction except this one patch of trees," he said.

The group nodded in agreement.

Urban Survival Techniques - Protect Yourself - Government Terrorism (#6)

wednesday, May 20, 2009
http://urban-survival-techniques.blogspot....protect_20.html

Editor's Note: This urban survival technique essay by GT actually applies to everyone, everywhere. Government is not your friend; it is your enemy. Whatever you try to do protect yourself -- whether it be arming yourself, storing food, using real money (gold and silver) instead of their funny money fiat currency, tokens, or credit instruments, trying to secede or asserting your sovereignty -- the government will object to. Their actions against you will range from merely thwarting you, to punishing you, to imprisoning you, to killing you.
DB

Here's what GT has to say about protecting yourself from governments.

First, the following discussion of problems and urban survival techniques is protected under my right of free speech and, on this site, the right of a free press.

Sure, the government ignores the constitution, and especially The Bill of Rights, but I as an individual am still aware they are the laws of the land even if the government chooses not to follow these laws. Now that I have tried to protect myself legally, let's get on with the real protection.

In the last century, the 20th century, it has been estimated that up to 200 million people were murdered by their own governments and up to 250 million murdered in wars. I believe that in the new century we could see over a billion deaths.

There are promises of improvements to come in this new century but, as a whole, it seems more threatening than promising. The government will be a part of that threat. It has killed before. It will kill again. And you might be the target. I want to remind you that the ultimate power of the government is to kill without question or opposition. Among those you will have to protect yourself from will be the government.

This country's government is perfectly capable of murdering innocent people in the millions and getting away with it. Anyone notice how well the government handled "The Injun Problem"? But maybe that example is so old no one thinks about it. (If you do, and complain about it, you'll most likely be put on a trouble-makers list.)

So, we switch forward to today. You will not see Janet Reno on Death Row. Yet she claimed responsibility at one time for commanding the forces at Waco, Texas. That was when the BATF, the FBI, and the Army murdered a bunch of children and one possibly crazy religious nut. Guess what, as far as the United States government is concerned, they don't care because:

THEY GOT AWAY WITH IT!

Now the Iranians and Muslims are mad at us, claiming we have murdered a million and half of their children because of our sanctions. I disagree with their numbers but it is highly possible there have been deaths in the thousands. But remember this about the Government: "THEY GOT AWAY WITH IT!" No one cares about those children.

Is it true? Yes or No. That what you have to ask. No fumbling for excuses. You don't excuse a bank robber if someone died as a result even if he wasn't the killer, even if he wasn't inside to prevent the killing. The intent to commit a crime was there. Sanctions and blockades are considered acts of war. The intent is there. No saying: "We didn't murder their children, we just stopped the Iranian from trading." Is the result, large numbers of children dead because of our government's policy? Yes or No?

If it is true, I can't think of anything else to cause them to hate us so much. The worse type of scum is the murderer of children. Everywhere in the civilized world, the harshest punishment is reserved for child killers. That is how they see us. What's worse: We (our government) got away with it.

The lie we tell ourselves is that they hate us for our freedom is bulls---! They hate us as anyone would hate a child killer. The even worse lie we tell them: "It is only collateral damage." It's not. It's murder. Murder that will drive them beyond hate. I believe very soon, instead of calling The United States "The Great Satan", they will call us "The Great Child Killer!"

When they do, that means we will have the worst reputation in the world. Far worse than the Nazis. To a very large segment of the world we will have surpassed Hitler's evil. He was an equal opportunity killer. We kill children. Theirs and our own.

Maybe the United States isn't so bad. There are a lot of other countries with much bigger mass murder rates. They have killed children. They have killed their own citizens and others. Lenin, Stalin, Mao Tsu Chu and Hitler probably murdered 100 million in the name of their governments. Guess what? Those governments got away with murder too!

Beside murder, what else is The Government capable of? Not much really. Basically what most governments do, especially the United States government, is to make everything and anything illegal. Of course, there are enough laws on the books; we may have already reached that point.

They try to sneak their agenda by -- to make everyone a criminal so the government can cash in on the guilt. Occasionally, events happen that allows the government to make wholesale power grabs. The attack on the World Trade Center was one. The crash of the currency, and the hyperinflation and rioting that follows, will be another excuse to grab power, limit freedoms, crack down and crack heads. They are so busy passing laws that they don't have time to protect you, which is supposed to be their job, their ONLY job.

The government doesn't want you to protect yourself. At best, it thinks of its citizens as children unable to protect themselves. You better leave that to the Mommy government. At worst, being able to protect yourself means you can protect yourself from the government when it becomes too oppressive.

You may not have any intention of fighting the government. You only intended to protect yourself from bad guys. The police don't seem to be able to provide protection. And you want to protect yourself? How dare you! If everyone was allowed to protected themselves to the fullest extent possible in the free market, who would need or want "government protection"? They don't really want you to even have the barest survival essentials. As an example of government protection, I give your exhibit #1, the Dollar! The government offers its protection to our currency. In fact it promises: THE FULL FAITH AND CREDIT OF THE UNITED STATES.

How is the promise working? It's not. Look at the stock market disorders, and the nervousness over bonds and other investments. People are now calling the housing market a boom about to go bust. [Editor's note: This was written in the early 2000s. Now it's 2009 and the bust has occurred.] Business failures and lies, the high unemployment and high inflation the government statisticians try to hide, are all signs there is going to be a complete collapse of the global economy.

If some nations are unhappy because they see us as a global bully, imagine how unhappy they will be when the dollar collapses, going the way of other fiat currencies. They lost their money. They are not only going to be unhappy, because the world was forced to be tied to the dollar, I believe quite a few will declare war on us. Not much makes people madder than losing all their money.

The Government solution to the problem of a collapsing economy will be to issue a new currency. Once the world has lost its trust in the Dollar, why should anyone trust a new paper currency?

The government will lie. It will say its new fiat currency is backed by gold. It will be the same kind of lie the Europeans are using with the Euro. The Euro is supposedly backed by 15% gold, but no one (at least not you or me) can redeem the Euro for gold.

New currency won't work. It must be those gold bugs' fault! Get them! A lot of people feel confiscation is not going to be possible. I think it will be. [Editor's note: It has already started -- e-gold confiscation in 2008.] First, it won't be called "Confiscation". I am not sure what it will be called, but it will probably be called something patriotic so as to induct guilt. The effect will be the same. I know the government will rob people of their gold because I see it in cop shakedowns and with the drug forfeiture laws. I'm sure, soon enough, there will be a "Terrorist Forfeiture Law". The result will be to separate gold bugs from their gold.

There will be more laws. However, if the drugs laws are any indication, the new laws will take away more freedoms and hurt the innocent, instead of punishing the guilty. I see laws on hoarding, precious metal ownership, laws restricting travel, and more.

Also, I see laws that have nothing to do with protecting people, crime or terrorism. They will pass these laws because they can and the government passionately hates the people doing these things. I see laws against home schooling, religious expression and, of course, laws against successful businesses and commerce. (I think sooner or later they are going to come after e-gold and the other electronic gold backed businesses. Can't let people have an alternate to paper money.) [Editor's note: Already happened.] If people can buy e-gold how can they launch their next fiat-money scheme?

Rabble-rousers and big mouths like me who are on the internet will be illegal if we aren't already. To the government, we are the one who causes riots, not the opportunists, criminal minded, or the desperate. Well before the riots, they will be coming for me. I plan to be long gone. One reason I am writing this a year, three, five years before you need it is so that it will be there when I've stopped writing and started hiding.

Things that are really useful for citizens to protect themselves, but the government hates, tend to spread very far and wide on the internet. An example is PGP encryption. The government doesn't really care about your individual personal survival. They do only what is necessary for the groups that support them, to keep themselves in power.

What will the government be doing during the riots? Most riots have ten to fifty times as many spectators as looters. When the police come they don't care whether or not if you're an innocent bystander. They are there to crack heads.

To prevent the next riot the Government will pass laws against protesting. (There goes our right to peacefully assemble and have the government address our grievances.) To force people to use the new worthless currency, you will be given the choice of taking their money or the government can take your inventory, manufactured goods, and crops because you're "Anti-Prosperity".

Where are they going to lock up all these "criminals"? Their crisis plan includes a mad rush to build prisons, but those will not hold everybody. There is talk of building open air camps. It is a trial balloon. How many remember the camps of Germany, Russia, Cambodia and other hellholes? I do.

I have a memory of the concentration camps from my father. He was a World War II vet and told me a little about them. He was assigned to bury the dead at Dachau. That gave him nightmares for the rest of his life. Thanks to him, I have a first-hand horror of government "camps".

World War II wasn't that long ago. I think their trial balloon will fail. Enough people have a horror of camps and will do anything to prevent the government from having them here. Of course, protesting may not enough. Remember, the government is used to getting away with whatever it wants. It did not prevent Japanese-American citizens from being sent to camps during World War II.

Is shooting the bastards a solution? I don't believe so. The government has more than enough media supporters to turn you into the bad guy.

"It was self defense," you might say. So did Randy Weaver.

"It was an accident," they say. Waco was an accident.

It doesn't matter that people are upset over those and other outrages. From the government's point of view, the victims were the bad guys. What is even more important from the government's point of view: "We, the government, got away with it!"

Since the government knows it can get away with murdering millions of its citizens, there has to be more than a willingness for the citizens just to shoot the bastards.

One tactic is just to refuse to help the government in any form. That can be hard. Most of the things they ask are "reasonable requests". Or it takes less time to pay or say yes or otherwise go along. There is a hidden price. You don't have rights to protect yourself any longer. No, you "volunteered".

If they ask you to do something, refuse and then disappear so they can't force you to help them. What you're trying to do is take the first step in destroying the government's legitimacy.

No doubt the government will make it illegal to refuse to help. This is going to be a life or death struggle. There is going to come a point where you will have to decide to break the law. Remember, no matter what the government says, it is not against the higher laws of God, Karma, or the Universe to refuse to serve evil or corrupt people. If you're worried about breaking the law, you will already be breaking it if you do the following:

Do I stock up on food and other necessaries? FOOD HOARDER! Go to Jail! Do not pass go. Do not collect 200 worthless dollars.

Do I buy gold or silver? TERRORIST! You're helping to sponsor the international terrorist network. You'll be tried in a secret military court like John Lingh and other would be terrorists. Best plea bargain before you get into real trouble.

Do you buy a gun to protect yourself and family in the riots to come? GUN-NUT! Well, you've already broken the law. Come along quietly! What if you say: "The only way you're getting my guns is to pry them from my cold dead hands!" No problem! Remember they already killed a bunch of them gun-nuts in Waco, in Ruby Ridge and too many other places to bother naming. Remember! "WE'VE GOTTEN AWAY WITH KILLING THEM! WE WILL GET AWAY WITH KILLING YOU!"

By writing this I probably am breaking quite a few laws. Never mind the protection of the First Amendment. Well, if they haul my sorry self to jail, I'll will make sure as many people know as possible since I am trying to become famous. If I can't become famous, I'll settle for infamous!

That is another way of protecting yourself. Go for the glory and make yourself famous or infamous, as the case may be. They are many people, mostly whistle blowers like Philip Agee who worked for the CIA, who the government would like to kill. They let it be known if they committed suicide, it was not their idea.

If they die or disappear, they want their friends and the press ask a lot of embarrassing questions. They won't like me in jail anyway. I know too many trouble-makers and if I'm in jail I'll make friends with a lot more. I am sure to lead the other prisoners in rabble rousing. I've been in riots. I know how to start them too. My songs will become even more filled with satire -- you see how I treat Greenscam! -- and I can communicate intelligently.

Be aware, I am not ruling out shooting the bastards! Some will think it will be the only way to restore a constitutional republic. If you do, DON'T GET CAUGHT! Else,... Woe is you!

The government will not protect you. It will PROTECT ITSELF! If they catch you, the government will probably torture you, and kill your family and friends while making you watch. You'll have to make the hit in such a way it can't be traced back to you. Just like after almost a year, we still don't know who was behind the World Trade Center. We just accused Osama without proof. Otherwise, why not share it? The Muslim would love to have proof. They are not known for mercy and if they had proof they would be sure to execute him in a way sure to hurt. The Trade Center attacks were especially heinous in their laws. [Editor's note: Muslims can justify any heinous act, just as can Christians, by selective quoting of their so-called sacred texts.]

Is secession an answer? Maybe. We originally seceded from England. If people secede, they will have to avoid the mistakes the South made in Lincoln's War [Editor's note: The War of Northern Aggression was not about slavery; it was about establishing the federal government as master over the indivdual states instead of as their servant. Lincoln was a traitor the the Constitution, which explains why he is so revered today by the federal government and its lackeys.] The most important one: You must not secede for an immoral cause. Every country that broke away and succeeded in becoming a new nation had the support of at least one other nation. The South failed because the biggest possible supporter -- England -- detested slavery. The South wasn't about to give up their slaves for England's support. That was a mistake. If they had England behind them, it would have broken the blockade. The British Navy was the best at the time -- the reason the British Empire being at its prime.

Another mistake the South made in seceding was that the South was seen as firing the first shot. It is true that Lincoln did all he could to provoke that first shot. The South fired first and thereafter they could be seen as traitors and rebels.

Be aware that if there is secession, the Federal Government will fight the secessionists dirtier and meaner than they do in a "regular" war. This, in a history of mean knife fights. There will be no mercy for the secessionists if they lose. There will be one thing going for the secessionists. The United States will be fighting the world at the same time. You don't have to join the enemies of The United State if you secede. Just let other countries know you are no longer part of the United States.

What is my answer? It is probably the most improbable. I will not recognize, serve, or be a part of any government. My hope is that government is seen for what they are. Bloody murderers. Child Killers. I want decent people to shun all forms of government. Instead of relying on government to protect you, have insurance companies protect you.

It will be the method with the least bloodshed, and the quickest way of eliminating one of the worst evils the world has known. A few see government as I do. I am hoping to get others to share my viewpoint.

You may think it may not work. I think it will, but I can't explain why. I can't explain that any more than I can explain why I survived growing up and all the other males are now dead. I only knew I would have no part of the drug dealers, the pimps, the winos, and others that I saw. To avoid them I needed to find the opposite, a strong positive male image. My father couldn't fulfill that role. He deserted his family.

I had no good role models. So I created one. It was an imaginary friend that became my best friend. He taught me. He said: "Whatever you see the people around you doing, just do the opposite." He also told me when to run and when, if cornered, to fight. With that advice I survived. Surviving and living to be 21 was a big and very pleasant surprise. I had a bigger surprise in store. Shortly after I passed my 21st birthday, I looked into the mirror. Instead of me, I saw my imaginary friend. I had grown into the man I envisioned. Being that man, I knew I could not only protect myself but others when the time came. The time to protect others is now, since I am writing this series.

Most people know how corrupt this country has become. They do nothing but throw their hands in disgust. There is another way. For better or worse, I've given you an image of the future with this series. You can create other images. Currently I believe this is not the image we want our country to be. One of the things I've learned from Napoleon Hill's "Think and Grow Rich" is you need a very positive image. I unknowingly created one for myself when I was growing up. I can create a positive image of this country and so can you.

First, we all must have the image of a constitutional republic.

Next, we must be aware of the faults of a constitutional republic: Mainly, they don't remain republics for long. Those placed in power as our servants ignore the constitutional restraints. They become the masters.

Third, you must willing willing to live and let live. If your fellow man is not hurting others but doing something you don't approve of or you are envious of him, you must not try to get the government to change his life or steal his wealth. It will only hurt you or your children.

We are trying to come up with a perfect image of our country to replace the evil real life one we see around us. To get there you must do this:

You must be able to see it,
Taste it,
Smell it,
Feel it and be surrounded by it.
Let your senses envelope with it until,... It is more real than real.

and then, you there!

I learned how to use the imagination from a 1970 movie called "Tribes". It works no matter what you imagine.

Let me tell the More-Real-Than-Real image I have for this country.

The United States no longer exists. (Just like the United Socialist States of Russia -- The USSR no longer exists). The U.S. had a very brief shining moment but its reputation was ruined by corruption. People no longer think of themselves as citizens of The United States (capitalized spelling) just like the people of Nazi Germany or Vichy France could call themselves citizens of those counties. Instead the area once known as the United States has split into regions -- The Northeast, The South, The Midwest, The West, and The Northwest -- and into cities already known the world over -- The New York City Region, The Los Angeles Region, and so on. Each region has been recognized as a nation in its own right. Each region is true to the constitution.

The idea of regions is so you don't get a super-sized Federal government ruling and robbing 50 states. At most a region has 5 to 10 states. The states are free to withdraw or secede for any reason, with a vote of 65% of all eligible voters. They are free to merge as well. For instance: The Northwest and British Columbia may merge since they have more in common with each other than the other regions or Canada.

Each region has its own constitution based on the original united states (lower case spelling) constitution which allows no government regional or state to use anything but gold or silver as money. It wouldn't allow creation of a Central Bank, Federal Reserve or any other organization that usurps the nation's power to coin its money. It would correct flaws in the original constitution including adding the right to life, liberty and property as Jefferson wanted originally.

It allows for citizens to sue and hold personally responsible any government official or anyone who benefits from the government if they have been criminally victimized by that official or benefitter. No sovereign immunity for these guys. Impeachment is changed. If any government official is under impeachment or criminal charges, they are to be immediately removed from office and banned from using their powers. The impeachment process is to see if they should be reinstated. It's not a trial. No one has a right to a job. Each and every day they must prove they are worthy of the job. Politicians should prove they are worthy of their jobs, too. Bureaucrats would be subject to impeachment as well. Right now, it is impossible to remove a bureaucrat. Another important change, if they are not going to follow the constitution, they lose the office and have to go through impeachment to see if they should be reinstated. If they want to make laws but are unwilling to follow the highest law of the land, they should not hold office.

I know this has gotten away from the subject of urban survival techniques, but your "mental urban survival backpack" should include a vision of something positive as well as physical survival essentials.

Thank you.

Retailers Cut Back on Variety, Once the Spice of Marketing

JUNE 26, 2009
http://online.wsj.com/article/SB124597382334357329.html

For years, supermarkets, drugstores and discount retailers packed their shelves with an ever-expanding array of products in different brands, sizes, colors, flavors, fragrances and prices.

Now, though, they believe less is more.

Pharmacy chain Walgreen Co. is cutting the types of superglues it carries to 11 from 25. Wal-Mart Stores Inc. has decided that 24 different tape measures is 20 too many. Kroger Co. has tested stripping out about 30% of its cereal varieties.

In the next year or so, these and a few of the other largest retailers are expected to slice the assortment of products in their stores ...

Why the Sudden Rush to Stock Your Pantry?

(A serious matter with some minor humor injected)

By Will Thomas
http://thecomingdepression.blogspot.com/

I know a number of survival advocates including former military and pastors who tell us to stock up on food for the long-term including what we buy at the grocery store for daily needs. I truly understand the mindset but when I hear about workers from the Postal Service say they have been instructed to have 30-40 days of food on hand, perhaps we need to delve further into the matter.

If the local postmaster made the suggestion, that's one thing. If the directive was handed down from the top and they've gone postal (no pun intended) then perhaps we should examine the situation a little more closely.

1. A 30 day supply of food at the grocery store could easily cost a family of 4 around $800.00 plus.
2. Not many families can afford to pay $800.00 out this payday for immediate food.
3. Families and individuals on limited incomes are unable to meet such a request.

What do they know that the rest of us don't?

1. Is it Bird flu/H1N1?
2. Is North Korea more powerful than we are being told?
3. Is our economy about to collapse?
4. Are the powers that govern going to devalue the currency and we wake up to a new dollar worth 20% of what the old one was?
5. Are we being blackmailed by a foreign country?
6. Have we actually sold our sovereignty to China?
7. Do we have an unknown threat that has been identified but is still classified?

I recently discovered a company that sells food to the public. In order for you to realize savings, you order a half or full truckload of your favorites and split the cost. So when 100 people from a church get together and split the cost, each member pays $190.00 and receives 3 times the amount of food they would get at the grocery store. Cases of peas, corn and many other veggies plus spaghetti, drinks, paper goods and tons of other edible delights including candy; canned fruits, canned soups and everything is in date and fresh.

This is not salvage food, nor is it throw away donations. This is a resourceful way for people and groups to get together and save big money on their food bill. The company even delivers to your location or to your private retreat or bug out location if you order a quarter, half or full truckload.

So, if you believe that the cold war is over, please disregard everything written in this article. Keep only enough food in your pantry to supply you or your family for 1 or two days. Remember Hurricane Katrina and for heaven's sake, stop stocking up on ammo and guns. Glenn Beck thinks the FEMA camps are real. The cat is out of the bag.

Get along now and be a good green weenie and make sure your cows don't pass gas (that will be taxed) and that you don't drink too much water. Invest everything you have in questionable stocks and any other Government run business you can find. Pray (which qualifies you as a Terrorist) for some of our current leaders to retire or go into exile and more importantly, move in with you. Nevertheless, be sure to stock up on food through this company called TruckloadGroceries.com. I am all for saving anything when it comes to money, especially on food.

Ten Things You Need to Know to Live on the Streets

This article appeared in the August 3, 2009 edition of The Nation.
July 15, 2009
http://www.thenation.com/doc/20090803/ten_things

This monthly feature was conceived by writer and Nation editorial board member Walter Mosley as a kind of do-it-yourself opinion and action device. Most often "Ten Things" will offer a brief list of recommendations for accomplishing a desired political or social end, sometimes bringing to light something generally unknown. The purpose of the feature is to go to the heart of issues in a stripped-down, active and informed way. After getting our visiting expert--or everyday citizen--to construct the list, we will interview that person and post a brief online version of "Ten Things," with links to relevant websites, books or other information. Readers who wish to propose ideas for "Ten Things" should e-mail us at NationTenThings@gmail.com or use the e-form at the bottom of this page.

For millions of Americans, the housing crisis began well before last year's front-page collapse. Bigotry and criminalization by an unjust system of policing and incarceration, combined with economic privation, have kept even the meager privilege of a subprime mortgage or slumlord lease out of reach for many. As the crisis unfolds, the number of homeless will grow.

Picture the Homeless, a social justice organization founded and led by homeless people in New York City, has joined The Nation to come up with a list of things you need to know to live on the street--and ways we can all build movements to challenge the stigma of homelessness and put forward an alternative vision of community.

1 Be prepared to be blamed for your circumstances, no matter how much they may be beyond your control. Think of ways to disabuse the public of common misconceptions. Don't internalize cruelty or condescension. Let go of your pride--but hold on to your dignity.

2 There is no private space to which you may retreat. You are on display 24/7. Learn to travel light. Store valuables in a safe place, only carrying around what you really need: ID and documents for accessing services, a pen, etc. You can check e-mail and read at the library. You can get a post office box for a fee or use general delivery (free).

3 Learn the best bathroom options, where you won't be rushed, turned away or harassed. Find restrooms where it's clean enough to put your stuff down, the stalls are big enough to change in and there's hot water so you can wash up. If you're in New York City go to Restrooms in New York.

4 It's difficult to have much control over when, where and what you eat, so learn soup kitchen schedules and menus. Carry with you nuts, peanut butter or other foods high in protein. Click here to find a list of soup kitchens by state.

5 Food and clothing are easier to find than a safe place to sleep--the first truth of homelessness is sleep deprivation. Always have a blanket. Whenever possible, sleep in groups with staggered schedules, so you can look out for one another, prioritizing children's needs over those of adults.

6 Know your rights! Knowing constitutional amendments, legal precedents and human rights provisions can help you, even if they're routinely violated. In New York, for example, a 2003 court-ordered settlement strictly forbids selective enforcement of the law against the homeless. The Malcolm X

Grassroots Movement offers another resource, and the ACLU has cards, brochures, fact sheets and films.

7 Learn police patterns and practices. Be polite and calm to cops, even when they don't give the same respect. Support initiatives demanding independent police accountability. Link with groups from overlapping populations of nonhomeless and homeless people (i.e., black, Latino, LGBT groups) that are fighting police brutality and building nonpolice safety projects, like the Audre Lorde Project's Safe OUTside the System in Brooklyn. Organize your own CopWatch--and photograph, videotape and publicize instances of police abuse. Consider and support models like the Los Angeles Community Action Network or the People's Self Defense Campaign of the Malcolm X Grassroots Movement in Brooklyn.

8 The First Amendment protects your right to solicit aid (panhandling), especially if your pitch or sign is a statement rather than a request. To succeed, be creative, funny, engaging ("I didn't get a bailout!"). Find good, high-traffic spots where the police won't bother you.

9 Housing is a human right! Squat. Forge coalitions with nonhomeless but potentially displaced people in this era of mass foreclosures. Support United Workers in Baltimore, the Coalition on Homelessness in San Francisco, the Nashville Homeless Power Project. Learn about campaigns against homelessness in other nations, including the Landless Workers' Movement in Brazil and the Anti-Eviction Campaign in South Africa.

10 Don't go it alone! Always be part of an informal network of trust and mutual aid. Start your own organization, with homeless people themselves shaping the fight for a better life and world. Check out the Picture the Homeless Blog for news, updates and reports on homelessness in NY.

Why more Americans are learning to pick locks, bust out of handcuffs, and avoid surveillance.

It's a sticky Saturday morning and I'm handcuffed in the back seat of a Jeep Grand Cherokee parked on the side of a Philadelphia street. On one side of me is my boyfriend, Bruce, and on the other his best friend, Nick. Both of them are also cuffed—and like me, sweating like pigs. I reach into my hair and pull out a bobby pin that within seconds I've fashioned into a simple device I use to jimmy open my handcuff locks. Our assignment now is to evade 12 professionally trained trackers in a 25-square-block area for the next eight hours.

It may be hard to believe, but we asked for this. Actually, we paid for it: $550 apiece.

Today is the final day of a three-day "Urban Escape and Evade" course offered by onPoint Tactical LLC, a New Jersey-based company that teaches soldiers, police officers, and, increasingly, civilians urban survival skills.

Among the lessons we've learned are how to break through zip ties and telephone cords (the most common materials used as binding by kidnappers), smash a car window without making a sound, pick tumbler- and padlocks, puncture the tires of a pursuit vehicle with homemade caltrops, call for help using a ham radio, kill an attack dog—and, of course, how to escape from handcuffs. To make today's exercise even more difficult, we've been assigned a variety of missions that will test our newfound prowess in urban tactical maneuvering.

OnPoint, started in 2004 by Kevin Reeve, a 52-year-old professional scout and tracker, is the only school in the country that teaches urban tactical skills. In the past nine months, demand for the course has surged. For the first time, Reeve approximates his annual revenue to top $200,000—a fair sum for a business whose overhead consists largely of renting out space in community centers for classes and buying enough Goody bobby pins to prop up the coifs at a beauty pageant. In years past, Reeve said he barely pulled in enough revenue to make a profit.

Driving the growth, in part, is a fear that resonates from the wealthiest consumers to blue-collar workers: that with the global financial crisis dragging on, life as we know it is undergoing a radical change. Looking forward, pundits say that at best we will no longer be able to subsist on the diet of credit we have so ravenously consumed for the last decade. At worst, our future looks like something out of a Mad Max movie.

What this has to do with breaking out of handcuffs or picking padlocks requires a rather Hobbesian leap. It assumes that if the government can no longer provide for or protect its citizens, there will be a complete upending of the societal order. It assumes that humans will act to the worst of their capacity. It assumes that if, in fact, the financial crisis is just a mile marker on the highway to hell, we could soon be facing a very different, very violent world. So, beyond the novelty element of being able to pull a Jack Bauer-like escape, there is a sense that these skills are a necessity as our society becomes ever more precarious.

"I think everybody [who takes the class] wants to feel a little bit more secure. For some people it's just a hobby, but there are a number of people who look at the world, and say, ‘Things are probably not getting better,' " Reeve says.

Each escape-and-evade class has 15 to 20 slots, and there's one held each month in a different city across the country. Last month it was in Nashville, Tenn., the month before that, in Chicago. When I attended, it was split between the sleepy town of Medford, N.J., and the downtown region of Philadelphia. Soon, Reeve will have a mobile training team that will be able to set up shop in Atlanta, Charlotte, Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, and Seattle. He is also restructuring the company to include Kelly Alwood, a lead instructor, as partner, and is now adding to his bench. Currently, Reeve employs about six instructors, most of them ex-military, to teach the courses alongside him on a contract basis. OnPoint offers several courses in urban and wilderness survival, tracking, and scouting, but its escape and evade is by far the most popular—by tenfold, Reeve approximates.

Increased exposure has also helped propel onPoint closer to the mainstream. Neil Strauss, who is best-known for his 2005 book, The Game: Penetrating the Secret Society of Pickup Artists, attended Reeve's class in 2007 as part of a larger quest to prepare himself for an impending disaster. In March, the diminutive writer and veritable god among sexually frustrated males published a book about his experience, Emergency: This Book Will Save Your Life, which spent 12 weeks on the New York Times' best-seller list. More than half of the people in the class I attended were there because they had read it.

Although escape and evade was but a small part of the book, it seems to have awakened the Jason Bourne—or even the Neil Strauss—wannabe in countless readers. One student, a chef, had recently come from a seminar in Los Angeles given by Strauss on how to be a pickup artist, his third such class. Strauss is intelligent, funny, and completely relatable. Not only do his readers want to hear about his experiences, they want to have them.

When Reeve first started out, his largest client was the U.S. military, which sent soldiers as a supplement to requisite SERE training, standing for Survival, Evasion, Resistance, and Escape. Now, his main clients are civilians. "I expected a bunch of military guys and me here," a 34-year-old computer programmer from Boston named Chris, told me on the first day of class. "I walked through the door and looked around and was like, Oh, shit, it's just a bunch of mes," he says. Chris had read about the onPoint in Emergency.

My class was largely comprised of middle-class professionals. There was one couple (the only other one besides Bruce and me) that owned a natural-food store in New Hampshire. There was a salesperson for LexisNexis from Florida, a guy from North Carolina who owns a steel servicing business, a former bond-trader for Lehman Bros., a corporate banker from Washington, D.C. And then there was Nick, my cuff-mate, who works for a video game publisher; Bruce, who works in public relations; and me, a journalist.

The exception was Kyle, who hopped from city to city and had spent much of his life living on the streets. He had dreads down to his lower back and dirty fingernails. He said he was taking the class because he was often hassled by cops. (It should be noted that neither Reeve nor Alwood endorsed escaping from police cuffs. In fact, Alwood said with a wry smile, if you get arrested, police officers don't appreciate it when you unlock the handcuffs and give them back.)

Reeve has spent much of his professional career as a teacher. For five years he worked at Apple Computer (AAPL) as a leadership instructor, and he spent seven years working with the famously splenetic Tom Brown Jr. at Brown's eponymous wilderness survival school, also headquartered in New Jersey. When Reeve spotted a vacancy in the market for urban survival training, he left to begin his own business. Alwood came along two years later after reading about onPoint in a tactical journal. He had spent five years as an instructor at the U.S. Air Force CPEC sniper school and before that as a private military contractor and a bounty hunter, work that he still does on the side.

Though it isn't formally tracked, the growth in the survival industry is not limited to onPoint. Firearms sales in the most recent quarter at Sturm, Ruger & Co. (RGR) and Smith & Wesson (SWHC) have grown between 22 percent and 55 percent from a year earlier. The number of background checks for firearm purchases, required before the sale of a gun at a federally licensed dealer, has risen to 6 million through May of this year, a 25.5 percent jump from the same period in 2008.

The media attribute the spike in background checks and firearms sales to fear that President Barack Obama will reverse key provisions of the Second Amendment. They have also claimed it is due to increased interest in ammo and weapons as an investment vehicle. But isn't it also possible that it has to do with the same fear that is propelling sales at some camping supply and military surplus stores, which are up 50 percent?

Online activity has done anything but buck the trend. Doug Ritter, founder of Equipped To Survive, which publishes consumer reports on survival gear, says traffic has grown by the double digits, starting when "things really got depressed economically." Since the site's launch in 1996, it has seen a steady 5 percent growth with 50 percent leaps after major disasters.

"We first noticed a lot of new people showing up on the forum last fall, when people started to recognize that we really are in a recession. And then the unemployment rate started to skyrocket and people started to worry about whether they were going to lose their home," Ritter says. "They're trying to get prepared for more troubled times." The site now receives about 260,000 unique visitors a month.

Traffic at Post Peak Living, an e-commerce site that sells survival kits, has also swelled, particularly as the price of oil rises, says co-founder Andre Angelantoni. Seizing the business opportunity, he has begun to offer online courses in subjects ranging from how to raise chickens to how to start your own garden to the $199 flagship "Uncrash" course, which helps registrants evaluate how each facet of their lives will be affected by the inevitable fall. Angelantoni and his business partner, Craig Wichner, believe the world has reached its peak in oil production and society will regress to the way it operated in the Colonial era.

People have always anticipated the end of days. And in truth, while having survival skills—whether they are tactical or horticultural—could save your life, in reality they will likely do little more than what stockpiling canned beans and toilet paper did in preparation for Y2K: that is, lend a sense of security.

At the end of the final day, after my cohorts and I had successfully evaded Reeve's trackers, we convened at a Chili's Bar & Grill and swapped stories with the other students. None of them had been "caught," either, but many of them had been spotted by Reeve and his trackers and had run for it. Some went deep into disguise; the most shocking of all was Kyle cutting off at least 24 inches of dreads for the exercise. The mood was light-hearted; we were all drinking beer. Maybe it was because, with our knowledge, we all felt a little safer—or at least better prepared next time we got locked out of our homes. Sara Behunek is a financial blogger for TheDeal.com.

Coping: Preparing for Much with Little

22 Jul 2009
http://urbansurvival.com/week.htm

First, a thank-you for George Noory for having Cliff High and me on the Coast To Coast AM show last night/early this morning - Noory is a masterful interviewer and a good human being.

Following the show, a couple of readers sent in questions that went to the idea of "What can I do to prepare for even more calamitous times ahead, which may include food shortages and such if I just have a tiny amount of money that can be spared? I can just barely make ends meet now."

A good question. There are plenty of answers, too, which will depend on where you are and what level of preparing you're willing to invest in. I say 'invest' because that what preparedness is, in its most generalized kind of way...investing today in learning and saving in ways that never cross most people's thinking, since they are so used to the day-after-day routine. Why, to this kind of person, those of us that actually have thought out survival beyond 'more of the same' really are nutjobs.

Education: This part doesn't have to cost much at all. Starts with something as simple as a library are and having the sense to read 2-3 general books on survival like the SAS Survival Manual, for example. Then, reading up on local wildlife and learning what plants are edible (not to mention which wild beasties thing you're the edible) is an investment anyone can make.

Throw in a couple of books on basic survival housing: Lean-to's, teepees, and such are quick to make from most anything at hand and properly done can keep you out of the weather.

Own a Knife: But this gets me to the second thing you should have: A good pocket knife. Knife selection is one of those very personal decisions - and lots of people have a half dozen knives, depending on where they plan on going.

Just to put it in perspective, I've got five knives that make up my personal knife collection and with the right knife, I feel more prepared than most for anything that comes along. Sure, there's the $20 eBay survival knife with an 8-inch blade, a built-in compass, fishing gear, and such. Just the ticket for out on the wilder parts of the property and beyond if on foot.

Just going out to dinner? That three-blade folding Case knife that was passed on to me by my father (my so expects to inherit it, too) is the all-purpose family relic. Need to pick a thorn out of your foot? Trim back 3/8th's of an inch of insulation while wiring? Whittle something down that isn't fitting right in the shop? Something that takes a nearly fine-enough-to-shave-with edge? This is the one - and plenty of time sharpening follows after a big electrical job of any size, LOL.

The all-round knife is a 3 1/2 single blade, one-handed opening knife - again, about $20 off eBay. That's the one that gets used for cutting up cardboard boxes when something comes via UPS or FedEx.

If I'm mucking about on machinery, the Leatherman tool is great. And both Elaine and I have steels with flints, so if there's tinder about, there's fire. Torn up credit card bills are recommended tinder if things hit the fan, LOL.

Assuming you can hang onto a library card and can read up on knives, even with a cheap pocket stone for sharpening you're looking at all of what, $25?

Better Clothes - Forget Logos: You will want to maybe change your clothes-buying habits. Forget brands and go with practical. Heavy denim will last longer than cotton twills, heavy shirts are generally warmer than light shirts. Tick socks better for long walks than thin ones, and the thicker the sole on the shoe, with bigger grips, the easier walking long distances will be, should you need to use your legs for something besides walking from the computer to the shower, shower to car, car to cubicle. Doesn't have to cost anything more - just a change of tastes so that you can exist outside if you have to, or walk somewhere if there's no gas, or it's price makes turns it into rarium or unobtainium.

Water Container: Next thing you'd want would be a water container of some kind, since people are 70+% water. lots of options here...everything from a sophisticated 'gator' kind that you wear to a regular bottled water bottle with some water purification tablets in a smaller container taped to it. Water's a good thing and thirst is bad. Hang with the REI and camping crowd. If you've got a load of dough, a Berky water filter is marvelous. But tabs and household bleach (unscented, of course - duh) and disinfecting tabs is cheaper.

May not seem like much, but depending on what part of the country you're in (or can walk to) this is the start of basic survival. Then start watching SurvivorMan and other such TV shows. Much to be gleaned from that.

A simple pack: You can get a simple kid's book bag for less than $10 if you hang at the dollar stores or WallyWorld on sale. May not be fancy (come on, you've always wanted one in pink, right? LOL) but we're talking function here and screw the rest.

Basic food: Long term food looks to be an issue, so to solve that problem you can make a basic stored foods plan with something as a 20-pound sack of white rice (brown may have more nutritional value) and a couple of sacks of beans. A multiple vitamin and some granola bars are a bonus.

A friend of mine up the road bought come PVC pipe 13-years ago and stored away wheat flower in it and says it's still good. A little care and caution a person can accumulate a tremendous amount of food over time and store it safely.

Radio - optional: For less than $50 you can get one of those all-purpose crank-powered radios with a flashlight and NOAA weather radio in it. There's entertainment and such. Optional though. If it clouds up, get your rain hat - First People lived for centuries without NOAA.

Also cheap: Boy Scout and Girl Scout used field manuals. Boy Scouts is quite good and I still refer to my 1950's vintage copy often when I think about building a bridge over the creek here, or some such.

Bow for Hunting: Since you've got a pocket knife, you can take up archery with either an inexpensive bow and hand hewn arrows, or a few fiberglass items. May not put the tastiest meat on the table, but people in other countries eat things like squirrels and rats when necessary, although a blunt head instead of a broadhead is to be considered for game birds.

While you whittle out additional arrows (and mount the feathers from your latest grouse or whatever) the next thing I'd invest in - while there's still computers and power is the four DVD set of 22,000 survival books from SurvivaleBooks.com. This is a collection of mostly government training manuals for everything from the 1994 Navy Cooking Course (but they never explain why spoons dissolve in Navy coffee by midway through the second watch) to escape and evasion, or on a more down-to-earth note "How do you live without electricity?"

Backpack to shove things in, some paper and a binder for key field identification guides and some time spent on learning a new hobby - relearning about being a competent human - is not that expensive. Our budget?

Library Card 0.00 Local Good knife 20.00 eBay
Sharp stone 5.00 eBay or local
Flint & Steel 20.00 Amazon or eBay
Good used recurve bow 50# 60.00 eBay
Water purification tablets 20.00 eBay/ Amazon
Rice 10.00 any store
Beans 10.00 any store
Cheap back pack 10.00 dollar store
Hooks and line 10.00 Any sporting goods shop
DVD set 30.00 www.survivalebooks.com
Total 195.00

Want that radio to keep from being bored to tears? OK, $50 bucks then...but that bored part is where you get into nature and hear other voices like the wind - and a lot more.

Would it be nice to have something more than a cheapie kids backpack? Sure! Would it be nice to have that Berky filter? Yer damn straight, it would be. Or, that (fill in the blank) MRE a pack full of those dandy ready-to-eat meals you just add hot water to. Yum. But, you get the idea.

Next I'd be adding a first aid kit, bug repellant...but as you can see, this is like any other hobby or pursuit - depends if you want to approach it from the 'heavy on the toys' or the 'heavy on the knowledge' side, doesn't it?

Ultimately, I'm hoping the web bot predictive work is wildly off the mark. But, if it's even close, my confidence in our personal survival of the future is much higher as my knowledge of everything from MOUT tactics (military operation in urban terrain) to eating off the land - goes up.

For America to survive - we need to only do a couple of things: Uphold the Constitution and push back against all enemies, foreign and domestic whether they come armed with a violent ideology or a phat purse and a standing army of lobbyists. Don't know about you, but the Gloria Gaynor song comes to mind (maybe because I've been up all night?) -- it's "I will survive..." and if you take back ownership of your life from the corpgov brainwashing that has been mainstream media of late, not only will you survive it all in stride as a more powerful human, but so will you and those you love.

I'm just sayin....you can make your own version of geocaching if you really want to have some options. But even that would break down in a crustal shift...so maybe the 'old ways' are more durable.

Londoner eats rabbits and squirrels in six month treehouse experiment

Daisy Dumas
28.07.09
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard/art...ment/article.do

A young Londoner has given up his city life and warm home to live in a treehouse for six months.

Nick Weston, 27, moved from Clapham to woodland on the Kent/Sussex border during the spring and is half way through his experiment to live as sustainably and self-sufficiently as possible.

With no radio, few visitors and mostly books for company, he must have been one of the last people in the country to learn about Michael Jackson's death - it took him three days to hear the news. And he was feeling glib about avoiding swine flu until he learned one of his landowner's sons had it.

No stranger to the outdoors, Mr Weston is a self-styled survival expert, having last year appeared in Channel4's Shipwrecked - a loosely survival-based programme that pitches teams of young Britons against one another in the Cook Islands.

Mr Weston, who left his job in the events industry, taught himself to forage and hunt and passes on his knowledge of foraging at a camping centre. He has a 20ft by 14ft vegetable patch, growing peas, broad beans, runner beans, rocket, leeks, red onions, tomatoes, potatoes, marrows, salads and spinach. He fishes for trout and sets night lines to catch eel, as well as hunting and snaring pigeons, rabbits and squirrels.

Not for the faint-hearted, squirrels are a "nightmare" to skin but make good eating after slow cooking in stock. Mr Weston has even eaten snails but draws the line at slugs which, he has heard, are best avoided.

He has become a dab hand at making nettle beer and also has a batch of elderflower champagne brewing.

Nick Weston's treehouse
Mr Weston has a girlfriend in London who works in fashion. She visits at weekends and has helped decorate the treehouse, complete with wood-burning stove, hot shower, front door, windows and balcony.

It is all quite a change from his London life. Mr Weston said: "I'm missing seeing friends, visiting friends for dinner and my girlfriend. In London everything's so easy, it's all on a plate, you do realise how lucky you are to have London when you're out of it.

"I've only appreciated that since leaving. The one thing I miss the least is music blaring from mobile phones on buses. Everything's a learning curve and is learnt through trial and error. Things take longer here, even a simple cup of tea is time-consuming. I miss being able to flick a switch on a kettle."

He has built hot and cold smokers to preserve meat and fish and is making a clay oven, something that is taking some practice. He has no electricity or running water but has built a hot shower he says is "really nice - and very liberating" and has a double bed.

He spends £50 a month, which covers his ammunition and supplies. "I'm shocked by the amount of money I used to spend on nothing. A Tube fare is half a week's outgoings for me. We don't need to spend as much," he said.

Nick Weston's tips for wild cuisine

Slow-cooked squirrel
Squirrel is a “springy little creature” and so has a tendency towards toughness. It is best slow-cooked — he recommends browning the squirrel, “chucking it into a stock with some vegetables” and leaving to cook over a fire for about 15 hours.

Eels à la treehouse
Best smoked for 24 hours in a hand-made cold smoker, but failing that, skin, gut and fillet as you would a fish then fry and serve with freshly picked salad.

Nettle beer
Pick 200 tender stems of nettle. Boil in five gallons of water for 15 minutes and add 3kg sugar. Allow to cool then add 100g of cream of tartar and 30g of brewers' yeast. Leave for 7-10 days.

Meadowsweet cordial
Pick 200g of Meadowsweet flower heads (about half a carrier bag). Boil in 1.5 litres of water, stir and take off the heat. Add juice of two lemons, stir and leave for an hour. Strain through muslin, boil again and add 700g granulated sugar. Add 50g citric acid and cool.

Disaster Preparedness – Principles of Self-Sufficiency

By Don McAlvany

1. Change the way you look at everything. Rethink your entire lifestyle.
2. Develop discernment about people.
3. When you invest, invest first in the right people.
4. Honesty, look at yourself, your strengths and your weaknesses.
5. Seek the counsel of others you trust.
6. Find like-minded people who can be part of a mutual support group and who you can cooperate with.
7. Find alternate methods for doing everything.
8. Develop an instinct for what doesn't feel right. No matter how good something looks or sounds on the surface, go with your gut feeling, with your instinct, with your intuition.
9. Eliminate non-essentials from your life. Eliminate all time wasters and money wasters, and things you don't need - i.e. clothes, furniture, junk, etc. Eliminate television from your life.
10. Simplify your lifestyle - learn to say 'no' to things or activities which do not make you self-sufficient. Learn to place
God and yourself, and not other people.
11. Develop physical, mental and spiritual disciplines.
12. Learn to treat everything as if it were irreplaceable.
13. Buy things that will last, even if they cost more.
14. Acquire tools that do not depend upon electric power.
15. Learn to spend time alone with yourself in total silence - think, reflect, reminisce, and plan [or strategize] in silence.
16. Learn to spend time alone with yourself and your family, apart from superficial entertainment and distractions.
17. Learn something from every situation you are in everything you hear, see, touch, or feel has a lesson in it. Learn a principle from every mistake you make, from everyday life situations.
18. Make sure your trust is in the Lord and not your own preparedness. Pattern your preparedness according to the guidance of the Lord. Listen to what the Lord puts in your heart - don't use only your reasoning power.
19. Learn to enjoy simple pleasures from the smallest things - have measure of joy and happiness that doesn't come from creature comforts or entertainment.
20. Store up memories for times of isolation or separation from your loved ones.
21. Establish priorities for all of life [i.e. relationship, needs, present needs, future needs.] Set goals for areas you'll be proficient or self-sufficient in. Set a schedule or time line based on money and time you can invest in self-sufficiency.
22. Examine the concept of civil disobedience [from the Bible and history.] At what point should the people of Egypt have said 'no' to killing the male babies in Moses' day? At what point should the people of colonial America have said 'no' to King George? At what point should the people of Germany have said 'no' to Hitler? At what point do we say 'no' to despots in our day - when they take over money, our property, our guns, our children, our freedom? Decide what is your choke point - when do you move to civil disobedience? [For many throughout history - it was when evil leaders handed down edicts that were directly contrary o God's Word or commands.] Don't set your choke point too early or too quickly, nor too late, nor never. Think through or calculate a strategy - then never look back.
23. Learn to ask the right questions in every situation. [In 'Operation Waco,' nobody asked the right questions.]
24. Bring orderliness into your life. If you live in disorder it will pull you down, it will break your focus. Think focus versus distraction. Eliminate the distractions from your life.
25. Self-sufficiency [or survival] principles are learned on a day-to-day basis and must be practical.

26. Always have more than one way to escape, more than one way to do something. Have a plan B and a plan C.
27. Everyday life [and especially crisis] requires 'up-front systems' and 'back-up systems' if the first line of defense or 'up-front systems fails.
28. Real education [or learning] only takes place when change occurs in our attitudes, actions, and way of life.
29. Wisdom is making practical applications of what you know. It is not enough to know everything you need to know. It will only serve you and others if practical application is made of that knowledge.
30. Fix in your own mind the truth about your capabilities. In a crisis situation this principle will keep you from cockiness [or overconfidence] and will provide you with confidence.
31. Decide ahead of time before a crisis arrives, how you will react in a given situation so that you are not swayed by the circumstances, the situation, or your emotions.
32. Beware of being spread too thin in your life. Decide on the few things in life that you must do and do them well. Think focus versus distraction. Make sure that unimportant, non-essential distractions don't keep you from achieving your important objectives.
33. Learn to quit wasting things. Be a good steward of all that God provides.
34. Buy an extra one of everything you use regularly and set the extra one aside for the time when such items may be difficult or impossible to obtain.
35. In every situation, train yourself to look for what doesn't fit, for what's out of place, for what doesn't look right.
36. Teach your children [and yourself] that they are not obligated to give information to a stranger. You don't have to answer questions [not even to a government official] that are none of their business.
37. Sell or give away things you do not use or need. Consider giving away or selling 50% of your 'stuff,' [i. e. the non-essentials.] Simplify and streamline your life, lifestyle and possessions.
38. Find someone who lived through the Great Depression and learn from them how they were self-sufficient, how they made do with little, and how they found joy and contentment in the midst of hard times. An excellent book on this subject is We Had Everything But Money: Priceless Memories of the Great Depression.

Letter Re: We Have Some Hard Decisions Ahead

http://www.survivalblog.com/2009/12/letter...me_hard_de.html

Dear SurvivalBloggers:
The economy has taken a dramatic turn for the worse for many Americans. Hundreds of pages could be written to describe how it happened and who did it. While many individuals and households have had the financial resources and good fortune which will allow them to weather economic uncertainty, many will simply not be able to maintain their standard of living. Many two income households are now one income households and that income may have decreased due to companies cutting back on work hours. This situation has been occurring for many Americans for many many months, forcing people to assess what is important and downgrade their lifestyle. The time to make hard decisions has arrived, and will dramatically alter the lives of many for years.

People who relied on spouses to pay the bills are now paying the bills. Those who have relied on savings and unemployment benefits to maintain their standard of living are now faced with the reality that those resources are exhausted. Bills are not being paid. Healthcare premiums are not being paid. Automobile and household maintenance is being neglected which will create costlier repairs down the road. Simply put:
You might have to stop making your car payment and save those payments up to buy a used car. The car you currently have financed will be repossessed.
You might have to stop paying your mortgage and save those payments up to move into an apartment.
You might have to give up your healthcare, your magazine subscription, your club membership, your vacation plans, your charitable donations, your cell phone, your internet access or home phone service, your lawn care service, your financial support that you provide to friends and family who are having financial problems themselves, and many more expenditures not listed here.
You might have to contact an attorney to discuss bankruptcy.
You might have to sell off your possessions and assets.
You might have to move in with other families, friends, relatives, or shelters provided by the government or charitable organizations.
You may come to realize that what you thought was valuable and important to you has no value or significance at all.

Basic human needs will become the biggest priority in your life after you shed the things that have merely brought comfort and convenience to you. You may be forced to downscale your lifestyle so dramatically that it will cause you to question your own intelligence and hindsight for not planning for such a life changing event.

The things that you have always taken for granted could become difficult to obtain now that there is no longer enough money to buy those things. Basic needs become vital issues that need to be addressed:
Food, and ‘non-electric’ means both to prepare it and store it.
Portable water filtering devices and containers to store water for drinking, cooking, and bathing.
Over the counter medicines, vitamins, supplements, first aid supplies, and some basic health and first aid literature in book form. Individuals using prescription medications, or require medical attention, will need to determine their best course of action during a period of financial distress.
The need for shelter may require the purchase of a tent, camper trailer, and other camping equipment if you can longer provide an actual roof over your head and have no one to turn to.
The need for personal protection will become more obvious as desperate people begin to take desperate actions to provide basic needs for themselves and their families. The level of security you choose will be determined by your location, your finances, and your personal views and beliefs. If chaotic conditions occur lawless activity will surely follow. Past incidents of disaster and mayhem give testimony to this.

The times that we endure today will be the history that others will read tomorrow. History has shown us events that have destroyed some societies and created new ones to take their place. Those who rise to power often decide the fate of millions. And there have been times when a people rise up as a nation, united to achieve mutual goals of prosperity and hope for a better future. Today as a nation, Americans must uphold their moral convictions and beliefs that a nation of people that stand united will not perish. There are events occurring in this country that could change the very existence of our nation as we know it. And no one person or political party can decide the best course of action to insure our prosperity and hopes will not be taken away from us. The answer to our problems is right in front of us, and we must cling to it as if it is our only hope, because it is the only thing We The People have left: The Constitution of the United States of America .

We must set aside our differences and unite as a nation before those that would profit from our demise succeed in destroying us. - T.R. in, Florida

A Suggested Survival List

by Chuck Baldwin
December 15, 2009
http://www.raidersnewsnetwork.com/leadstory71.htm

One does not have to be a prophet to know that we are on the precipice of some potentially catastrophic--or at the very least, challenging--days. In fact, most of us are already in challenging days, and some are already enduring catastrophic events. That is, if one would call being out of work, losing one's home, facing life-threatening medical conditions without any prospect of medical insurance, several families being forced to live in one house due to homes being foreclosed, etc., catastrophic.

The potential for an escalation of cataclysmic events, however, is very real. Only a "blooming idiot" would call someone who attempts to prepare for "the day of adversity" a Chicken Little now. Anyone who does not see the storm clouds on the horizon isn't paying attention.

For example, can one imagine what would happen if terrorists nuked a major American city or cities? (Once again, I encourage readers to go get the videos of the CBS TV series "Jericho" to get an idea of how quickly life, and even civilization, could change.) Imagine if there was another 9/11-type event. What would happen if some form of Zimbabwe-style inflation hit the US? What would happen if anything disrupted the distribution of Welfare checks, or food to local grocers? Imagine a Hurricane Katrina-style natural disaster in your town. I think people everywhere are beginning to awaken to just how vulnerable we all really are.

As a result, people from virtually every walk of life have recently been asking my thoughts on how they should prepare. Therefore, I will attempt to share with my readers some of the counsel I have given these folks.

First, a disclaimer. I am not an economist; I am not a survival expert; I am not a firearms expert; I am not an attorney; I am not a physician. In fact, I am not an expert in anything! For several years, however, I have tried to learn from others. I am an avid reader. My work has allowed me to travel extensively. I have had the privilege of sitting at the feet of--and learning from--many of America's most learned, most trained, and most qualified "experts" in a variety of fields. What I write today, I have learned from others. I've formed my own opinions and priorities, of course, but everything I'm sharing has been said, or written about, before. But if I can share something in today's column that will help someone be better prepared for the days to come, then my goal will have been achieved.

Location:

First, analyze your living conditions. Where do you live? Do you live in an urban or rural environment? Is it a big city or small town? Do you live in an apartment or condominium? How close are your neighbors? Do you even know your neighbors? Would you trust them if the electricity was off and they were hungry?

Could you grow your own food, if you had to? How easily could you secure your home? If you live in a cold weather environment, how long could you stay warm without electricity? These are the kinds of questions you need to ask yourself now.

Over the past several decades, masses of people have migrated into large metropolitan areas. More people live in urban areas than at any time in American history. While this may be well and good for times of prosperity, it is an absolute nightmare in any kind of disaster. Does anyone remember what New Orleans looked like after Hurricane Katrina came through? Can anyone recall what happened in downtown Los Angeles during the 1992 riots? Needless to say, any inner-city environment could become a powder keg almost instantaneously, given the right (or wrong) circumstances. And the bigger the city, the bigger the potential problems.

If you live in the inner city, I suggest you consider moving to a more rural location. Obviously, now is a very good time to buy property (especially rural property), but the downside is, selling property is not as favorable. If you can afford it, now is a great time to buy a "safe house" outside the city. If you are fortunate enough to have family or some true friends nearby, you might want to put your heads--and some resources--together in preparation for serious upheaval. Obviously, a team of prepared people is much better than being alone.

If you must stay in your urban location, have some commonsense plans in hand in the event of a major disaster. Get to know your neighbors: find out whom you can trust and whom you can't. Keep some extra gasoline on hand, in case you need to get in your car quickly and leave. Have several exit routes planned ahead of time, in case roads are blocked. Have a "bug-out" bag containing essential ingredients to live on for 3 or 4 days. If leaving is not an option, have a plan to secure your home as best you can. You'll need to think about things such as food, water, medicine, warmth, self-defense, etc. But at this point, to do nothing is absolute lunacy!

Provisions:

During a major disaster, food will quickly disappear. Living for over 3 decades on the Gulf Coast, I can tell you with absolute certainty that whenever disaster strikes (usually an approaching hurricane, for us), food and provisions at the store sell completely out in a matter of a few hours. People panic, and within hours, you cannot find food, bottled water, ice, generators, batteries, candles, etc. In a matter of hours, every gas station in the area will be completely out of gas. Not days. Hours!

Furthermore, almost all disasters include a complete loss of electricity. The water supply is compromised. Bottled water becomes more valuable than bank accounts. Dehydration becomes a very real and present danger. I remember witnessing a man offer an ice vendor $100 for an extra bag of ice during Hurricane Ivan. My wife and I went 2 weeks (14 days) without electricity in the aftermath of that hurricane. Believe me, I got a taste of just how precious bottled water, ice, batteries, generators, fuel, etc., can become.

I suggest you have a supply of food and water to last at least 2 weeks. A month would be even better. Personally, I can live a long time on tuna fish or peanut butter. You can purchase MREs from a variety of sources, as well as "camp-style" packaged food from stores such as Academy Sports & Outdoors. Of course, bottled water is available everywhere during normal times. Stock up! Plus, I suggest you have some water purification tablets or a Katadyn water filter on hand. And, if you are able, prepare to grow your own food. Canning food is another very helpful hedge against deprivation. If your parents were like mine, this was standard operating procedure.

Get a generator. Keep a supply of fuel on hand. Stay stocked up on batteries, candles, portable lights, first aid supplies, and personal hygiene items--especially toilet paper. Trust me, during times of intense and prolonged disaster, toilet paper could become more valuable than money. I also suggest you never run out of lighters or matches. You never know when you'll need to build a fire, and during a prolonged survival situation, fire could save your life. If you live in a cold weather climate, you probably already have some sort of wood stove or fireplace.

Obviously, you need to take stock of your clothing. Do you have clothes suitable for extended outdoor activity? What about boots? During a disaster, you would trade your best suit from Neiman Marcus for a good pair of boots. Do you have gloves? Insulated underwear? What about camouflage clothing? These could become essential outerwear in the right conditions. Plus, any "bug-out" bag will need to include spare clothing.

And one more suggestion, while we're on this subject: the best resources in the world are of little use if one is physically incapable of making good use of them. In other words, GET IN SHAPE. During any kind of emergency situation, physical exertion and stamina become immensely important.

Commodities:

I suggest you have at least some cash on hand. Just about any and all disasters will result in banks being closed for extended periods of time. That also means credit card purchases being suspended. You need to have enough cash to be able to purchase essential goods (if they are even available) for an undetermined amount of time.

Of course, some survival gurus insist that during any cataclysmic climate, precious metals will become the only reliable currency. But when most of us are trying to feed our families and pay our bills, it is difficult to get excited about buying gold and silver. Obviously, I would never recommend that anyone jeopardize the present on the altar of the future. My parents made it through the Great Depression with canned goods and garden vegetables; gold and silver were certainly not a priority with them. And maybe it should not be with you, either?

In fact, in a disaster, what is considered a valuable commodity can change rather quickly, as the barter system takes a life of its own. What is valuable is determined by what you need and how badly you need it. In a prolonged disaster, simple things such as toilet paper, canned goods, ammunition, and clothing could become extremely valuable; while cars, video games, televisions, etc., could be reduced to junk status. In antiquity, wars were fought over things such as salt.

Speaking of cars, remember that during a prolonged "national emergency" that might involve some sort of nuclear attack or widespread civil unrest, an Electromagnetic Pulse (EMP) might be employed; in which case, most every late model vehicle would be completely inoperable. Accordingly, if one can keep an older, pre-computer-age vehicle in good working order, he or she might be driving the only non-government vehicle capable of going anywhere.

Self-Defense:

Needless to say, during any kind of disaster, your safety and protection will be completely up to you. If you really think that the police are going to be able to protect you during an upheaval, you are living in a dreamworld.

In both the New Orleans and Los Angeles disasters, police protection was non-existent. Lawless gangs quickly took control of the streets, and people were left to either defend themselves or swiftly become the helpless prey of violent marauders. In fact, in New Orleans, some of the policemen actually abandoned their oaths to uphold the law and joined with the criminals, turning their weapons upon the public.

Face it, folks: in any kind of disaster, you must be able to defend yourself, or you and your family will be meat for these animals of society that will quickly descend without mercy upon the unprepared, unsuspecting souls around them. This requires that you be armed! It also requires that you be skilled enough to be able to efficiently use your arms.

Therefore, I strongly suggest that you purchase firearms sufficient to keep you and your family safe, and also that you practice sufficiently to know how to proficiently use them.

Now, when it comes to a discussion of which firearms are preferable for self-defense, the suggestions are as varied as the people who proffer them. These are my suggestions:

I believe every man (along with his wife and children of adequate age) should be proficient with the following weapons: a handgun in .38 caliber or above, a .22 rifle, a center-fire hunting rifle, a semi-automatic battle rifle, and a shotgun.

My personal preference for a self-defense handgun is either a .45 ACP 1911 (either Colt or Kimber) or a .40 S&W. In the .40 caliber, my favorite is a Glock 23. In the 1911, I like the Commander size configuration. I also like the Glock 30 and 36 in .45 caliber. My wife prefers to carry a Smith & Wesson .38 caliber revolver in the snub-nose, J-frame configuration. But this is primarily due to the reduced weight of these weapons for carry purposes. If needed, she could make a good accounting of herself with a Glock 19 in 9mm. If you are someone who has never owned and seldom fired a handgun, I recommend you buy a Glock. They are as simple as revolvers to operate, reliable, and almost indestructible. Plus, they provide increased magazine capacity, and are safe. They are also very easy to disassemble and clean.

For a .22 rifle, I really like the Ruger 10/22. For a hunting rifle, my suggestion is either a .270 or .30-06 caliber bolt-action rifle. (If I had to pick one, I'd pick the .30-06.) I prefer the Remington Model 700 BDL, but there are several fine weapons in this configuration and caliber by numerous manufacturers. For a battle rifle, I suggest an AR-15-style weapon in .223 caliber. Here I prefer a Bushmaster. (Please, I don't need to hear from all you .308 lovers out there. I love the Springfield M1A, too.) For a shotgun, I suggest a 12-gauge pump. Here I prefer a Winchester Model 1300, which is not made anymore. So, you'll probably have to choose between Mossberg and Remington.

Whatever you choose, practice with it to the point that you are able to use it proficiently. And be sure you stock up on ammunition. A gun without ammo is reduced to being either an expensive club or a cumbersome paperweight.

Spiritual Power:

I firmly believe that man is created to have fellowship with his Creator-God. I really don't know how people can face the uncertain future that we currently face without the spiritual knowledge, wisdom, comfort, and power that is made available through Jesus Christ. I believe the maxim is true: "Wise men still seek Him." I strongly suggest that you seek to possess a personal relationship with God's only begotten Son.

That we are facing challenging days is a certainty. Exactly what that means is yet to be determined. I trust that some of my suggestions will help you be better prepared for what lies before us.

Survivalism Lite

They call themselves 'preppers.' They are regular people with homes and families. But like the survivalists that came before them, they're preparing for the worst.

By Jessica Bennett | Newsweek Web Exclusive
Dec 28, 2009
http://www.newsweek.com/id/228428

Lisa Bedford is what you'd imagine of a stereotypical soccer mom. She drives a white Tahoe SUV. An American flag flies outside her suburban Phoenix home. She sells Pampered Chef kitchen tools and likes to bake. Bedford and her husband have two young children, four dogs, and go to church on Sunday.

But about a year ago, Bedford's homemaking skills went into overdrive. She began stockpiling canned food, and converted a spare bedroom into a giant storage facility. The trunk of each of her family's cars got its own 72-hour emergency kit—giant Tupperware containers full of iodine, beef jerky, emergency blankets, and even a blood-clotting agent designed for the battle-wounded. Bedford started thinking about an escape plan in case her family needed to leave in a hurry, and she and her husband set aside packed suitcases and cash. Then, for the first time in her life, Bedford went to a gun range and shot a .22 handgun. Now she regularly takes her two young children, 7 and 10, to target practice. "Over the last two years, I started feeling more and more unsettled about everything I was seeing, and I started thinking, 'What if we were in the same boat?'" says Bedford, 49.

Bedford is what you might call a modern-day survivalist—or, as she describes it, a "prepper." Far from the stereotype of survivalists past, she owns no camouflage, and she doesn't believe that 2012—the final year of the Mayan calendar—will be the end of the world. She likes modern luxuries (makeup, air conditioning, going out to eat), and she's no doomsayer. But like the rest of us, Bedford watched as the housing bubble burst and the economy collapsed. She has friends who've lost their homes, jobs, and 401 (k)s. She remembers Hurricane Katrina, and wonders how the government might respond to the next big disaster, or a global pandemic. And though she hopes for the best—the last thing she wants is for something bad to happen—she's decided to prepare her family for the worst. "We never set out to go build a bunker to protect ourselves from nuclear fallout; I have no idea how to camp in the wild," Bedford says, laughing. "But as all of this stuff started hitting closer to home, we [wanted] to take some steps to safeguard ourselves."

In the past, survivalists and conspiracy theorists might go out into the woods, live out of a bunker, waiting (or sometimes hoping) for the apocalypse to hit. It was men, mostly; many of them antigovernment, often portrayed by the media as radicals of the likes of Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh. In the late 1990s, Y2K fears brought survivalism to the mainstream, only to usher it back out again when disaster didn't strike. (Suddenly, unused survival gear began showing up in classifieds and on eBay.) A decade later, "preppers" are what you might call survivalism's Third Wave: regular people with jobs and homes whose are increasingly fearful about the future—their paranoia compounded by 24-hour cable news. "Between the media and the Internet, many people have built up a sense that there's this calamity out there that needs to be avoided," says Art Markman, a cognitive psychologist at the University of Texas who studies the way people think. And while they may not envision themselves as Kevin Costner in Waterworld—in fact, many preppers go out of their way to avoid the stereotypes that come along with the "survivalist" label—they've made a clear-eyed calculation about the risks at hand and aren't waiting around for anybody else to fix them. "I consider it more of a reaction than a movement," says Tom Martin, a 32-year-old Idaho truck driver who is the founder of the American Preppers Network, which receives some 5,000 visitors to its Web site each day. "There are so many variables and potential disasters out there, being a prepper is just a reaction to that potential."

That reaction, of course, means different things to different people. Some prep for economic disaster, while others prep to escape genetically modified foods. An organic farmer could be considered a prepper; so might an urban gardener. Some preppers fear putting their names out in public—they don't want every desperate soul knocking down their door in the event of a disaster—while others see it as a network they can rely upon were something horrible to happen. Some preppers fear the complete breakdown of society, while others simply want to stock up on extra granola bars and lighter fluid in case of a blackout or a storm. Hard-core survivalists might think of preppers as soft; "Eventually, the Chef Boyardee is going to run out," jokes Cody Lundin, the founder of the Aboriginal Living Skills School, a survival camp based out of his home in Prescott, Az. But prepping, says Martin, is just a new word for a very old way of life. "You don't have to have a survival retreat loaded with guns secluded in the wilderness to be a prepper," adds David Hill Sr., 54, a former jet mechanic who runs the Web site WhatisaPrepper from his home in rural West Virginia. "There are many people who live in urban and suburban areas who don't own guns who also identify themselves as preppers."

Waitrose shoppers turn to Spam for emergency supplies

15.01.10
http://www.thisislondon.co.uk/standard-bus...y-provisions.do

To some, Spam is a joke, most famously in a Monty Python sketch set in a café which served little else.

But for many Brits it's a comfort food to have in stock in case of hardship.

Waitrose, the upmarket supermarket chain more usually associated with organic vegetables, said sales of the ham and pork product rose 40 per cent last week.

Corned beef sales were also up, by 70 per cent, as shoppers filled larders with goods that would see them through prolonged bad weather and rumoured food shortages.

Overall sales for the week to 9 January jumped 22 per cent to £92.5 million.

Waitrose's parent company, John Lewis, did not do so well in the snow. Sales at the department store fell 1.4 per cent on the same period a year ago to £53.8 million.

“Footfall was depressed in many shops through the middle of the week,” said Andrew Murphy, director of operational development.

Americans stock up to be ready for end of the world

Published on 02-14-2010 Email To Friend Print Version
London Guardian

Tess Pennington, 33, is a mother of three children, and lives in the sprawling outskirts of Houston, Texas. But she is not taking the happy safety of her suburban existence lightly.

Like a growing army of fellow Americans, Pennington is learning how to grow her own food, has stored emergency rations in her home and is taking courses on treating sickness with medicinal herbs.

"I feel safe and more secure. I have taken personal responsibility for the safety of myself and of my family," Pennington said. "We have decided to be prepared. There all kinds of disasters that can happen, natural and man-made."

Pennington is a "prepper", a growing social movement that has been dubbed Survivalism Lite. Preppers believe that it is better to be safe than sorry and that preparing for disaster – be it a hurricane or the end of civilisation – makes sense.

Unlike the 1990s survivalists, preppers come from all backgrounds and live all over America. They are just as likely to be found in a suburb or downtown loft as a remote ranch in the mountains. Prepping networks, which have sprung up all over the country in the past few years, provide advice on how to prepare food reserves, how to grow crops in your garden, how to hunt and how to defend yourself. There are prepping books, online shops, radio shows, countless blogs, prepping courses and prepping conferences.

John Milandred runs a website called Pioneer Living, which is one of the main forums for discussing prepping. It provides a range of advice for those who just want to store extra food in case of a power cut, to those who want to embrace the "off the grid" lifestyle of America's western pioneers. "We get inquiries from people from all walks of life. We had a principal from a school asking us to talk to their children. We have doctors and firemen and lawyers," he said.

Milandred lives in Oklahoma and, should society collapse around him, he is well placed to flourish. Indeed, he might not notice that much. His house has a hand-dug well that gives him fresh water. He grows his own food. He has built an oven that needs neither gas nor electricity. He can hunt for meat. "If something happened, it really would not affect us," he said.

There are several reasons for the rise of prepping. The first is that, in the post-9/11 world, mass terror attacks have become a fear for many Americans. At a time when US diplomacy is focused on preventing Iran getting nuclear weapons and terror experts continue to warn of "dirty bombs" on American soil, it is no surprise that many Americans feel threatened. Added to that paranoia has come the recession. Suddenly, millions of Americans have been losing their jobs and their homes, reinforcing a feeling that society is not as stable as it once seemed.

Hollywood has caught on. A succession of films, such as 2012, The Road, The Book of Eli and Legion, have tapped into an American Zeitgeist that is worried about the end of civilisation.

"Prepping masks a wide range of stances and ideologies. But the more people are prepared, the more they are likely to have an apocalyptic way of thinking," said Professor Barry Brummett, of the University of Texas-Austin.

Even government officials have accepted that the financial crisis posed a threat to social order. In recent testimony before Congress, treasury secretary Tim Geithner admitted that top-level talks had been held on whether the US could enforce law and order in the wake of a collapse of the financial system.

Certainly, Tom Martin agrees. He runs the American Preppers Network, which helps provide a wide range of resources. Martin, a truck driver who lives in Idaho, believes that more and more people will become preppers. "Millions of people now have the mindset that they want to be prepared for something, but don't know what to call it," he said.

That rings true with Pennington. In the 1990s, survivalism was the province of anti-government militiamen or loners in the woods. But preppers are more concerned with stocking up on food and water and relearning skills so that they can fend for themselves.

To that end, Pennington has set up a website called Ready Nutrition, which teaches basic food skills to prepare for a time when pre-packaged goods at a supermarket might not be available: "Prepping is not taboo, like survivalism. There is no negative connotation to it. We are not rednecks. In many ways, our ancestors were preppers. So were the Native Americans. It is just going back to being able to look after yourself."

I suggest you stock up whilst the stores have food and the sheople haven't flocked to them already in a panic. Start using water distillers or gravity water filters from now on and get used to them on a daily basis in case of needs soon and in the future. I suggest people also buy these cheap ten litre collapsible water containers or bigger. Great way to store water when you have an idea of trouble and in the meantime they take up little space indeed rather than ten spare two litre empty plastic bottles which is the equivalent. Whilst on the subject of survival I also suggest people utilise these cheap camping stoves which are flat top and look like a proper cooker ring. Their all over the place right now and some places are doing them as cheap as £7.99 up to £23 depending where you go. All they use is canisters of Butane and will run on maximum 2kW+ for around one hour and twenty minutes a can. The cans of Butane average a pound in price each. Always good for if Putin cuts the gas supply off at some point in the future. The cheapest places for those two items in the U.K are B&M Bargains and Poundland.

20 Things You Will Need To Survive When The Economy Collapses And The Next Great Depression Begins

April 2010
http://theeconomiccollapseblog.com/archive...pression-begins

Today, millions of Americans say that they believe that the United States is on the verge of a major economic collapse and will soon be entering another Great Depression. But only a small percentage of those same people are prepared for that to happen. The sad truth is that the vast majority of Americans would last little more than a month on what they have stored up in their homes. Most of us are so used to running out to the supermarket or to Wal-Mart for whatever we need that we never even stop to consider what would happen if suddenly we were not able to do that. Already the U.S. economy is starting to stumble about like a drunken frat boy. All it would take for the entire U.S. to resemble New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina would be for a major war, a terror attack, a deadly pandemic or a massive natural disaster to strike at just the right time and push the teetering U.S. economy over the edge. So just how would you survive if you suddenly could not rely on the huge international corporate giants to feed, clothe and supply you and your family? Do you have a plan?

Unless you already live in a cave or you are a complete and total mindless follower of the establishment media, you should be able to see very clearly that our society is more vulnerable now than it ever has been. This year there have been an unprecedented number of large earthquakes around the world and volcanoes all over the globe are awakening. You can just take a look at what has happened in Haiti and in Iceland to see how devastating a natural disaster can be. Not only that, but we have a world that is full of lunatics in positions of power, and if one of them decides to set off a nuclear, chemical or biological weapon in a major city it could paralyze an entire region. War could erupt in the Middle East at literally any moment, and if it does the price of oil will double or triple (at least) and there is the possibility that much of the entire world could be drawn into the conflict. Scientists tell us that a massive high-altitude EMP (electromagnetic pulse) blast could send large portions of the United States back to the stone age in an instant. In addition, there is the constant threat that the outbreak of a major viral pandemic (such as what happened with the 1918 Spanish Flu) could kill tens of millions of people around the globe and paralyze the economies of the world.

But even without all of that, the truth is that the U.S. economy is going to collapse. So just think of what will happen if one (or more) of those things does happen on top of all the economic problems that we are having.

Are you prepared?

The following is a list of 20 things you and your family will need to survive when the economy totally collapses and the next Great Depression begins....

#1) Storable Food

Food is going to instantly become one of the most valuable commodities in existence in the event of an economic collapse. If you do not have food you are not going to survive. Most American families could not last much longer than a month on what they have in their house right now. So what about you? If disaster struck right now, how long could you survive on what you have? The truth is that we all need to start storing up food. If you and your family run out of food, you will suddenly find yourselves competing with the hordes of hungry people who are looting the stores and roaming the streets looking for something to eat.

Of course you can grow your own food, but that is going to take time. So you need to have enough food stored up until the food that you plant has time to grow. But if you have not stored up any seeds you might as well forget it. When the economy totally collapses, the remaining seeds will disappear very quickly. So if you think that you are going to need seeds, now is the time to get them.

#2) Clean Water

Most people can survive for a number of weeks without food, but without water you will die in just a few days. So where would you get water if the water suddenly stopped flowing out of your taps? Do you have a plan? Is there an abundant supply of clean water near your home? Would you be able to boil water if you need to?

Besides storing water and figuring out how you are going to gather water if society breaks down, another thing to consider is water purification tablets. The water you are able to gather during a time of crisis may not be suitable for drinking. So you may find that water purification tablets come in very, very handy.

#3) Shelter

You can't sleep on the streets, can you? Well, some people will be able to get by living on the streets, but the vast majority of us will need some form of shelter to survive for long. So what would you do if you and your family lost your home or suddenly were forced from your home? Where would you go?

The best thing to do is to come up with several plans. Do you have relatives that you can bunk with in case of emergency? Do you own a tent and sleeping bags if you had to rough it? If one day everything hits the fan and you and your family have to "bug out" somewhere, where would that be? You need to have a plan.

#4) Warm Clothing

If you plan to survive for long in a nightmare economic situation, you are probably going to need some warm, functional clothing. If you live in a cold climate, this is going to mean storing up plenty of blankets and cold weather clothes. If you live in an area where it rains a lot, you will need to be sure to store up some rain gear. If you think you may have to survive outdoors in an emergency situation, make sure that you and your family have something warm to put on your heads. Someday after the economy has collapsed and people are scrambling to survive, a lot of folks are going to end up freezing to death. In fact, in the coldest areas it is actually possible to freeze to death in your own home. Don't let that happen to you.

#5) An Axe

Staying along the theme of staying warm, you may want to consider investing in a good axe. In the event of a major emergency, gathering firewood will be a priority. Without a good tool to cut the wood with that will be much more difficult.

#6) Lighters Or Matches

You will also want something to start a fire with. If you can start a fire, you can cook food, you can boil water and you can stay warm. So in a true emergency situation, how do you plan to start a fire? By rubbing sticks together? Now is the time to put away a supply of lighters or matches so that you will be prepared when you really need them.

In addition, you may want to consider storing up a good supply of candles. Candles come in quite handy whenever the electricity goes out, and in the event of a long-term economic nightmare we will all see why our forefathers relied on candles so much.

#7) Hiking Boots Or Comfortable Shoes

When you ask most people to list things necessary for survival, this is not the first or the second thing that comes to mind. But having hiking boots or very comfortable and functional shoes will be absolutely critical. You may very well find yourself in a situation where you and your family must walk everywhere you want to go. So how far do you think you will get in high heels? You will want footwear that you would feel comfortable walking in for hours if necessary. You will also want footwear that will last a long time, because when the economy truly collapses you may not be able to run out to the shoe store and get what you need at that point.

#8) A Flashlight And/Or Lantern

When the power goes off in your home, what is the first thing that you grab? Just think about it. A flashlight or a lantern of course. In a major emergency, a flashlight or a lantern is going to be a necessity - especially if you need to go anywhere at night.

Solar powered or "crank style" flashlights or lanterns will probably be best during a long-term emergency. If you have battery-powered units you will want to begin storing up lots and lots of batteries.

#9) A Radio

If a major crisis does hit the United States, what will you and your family want? Among other things, you will all want to know what in the world is going on. A radio can be an invaluable tool for keeping up with the news.

Once again, solar powered or "crank style" radios will probably work best for the long term. A battery-powered until would work as well - but only for as long as your batteries are able to last.

#10) Communication Equipment

When things really hit the fan you are going to want to communicate with your family and friends. You will also want to be able to contact an ambulance or law enforcement if necessary. Having an emergency cell phone is great, but it may or may not work during a time of crisis. The Internet also may or may not be available. Be sure to have a plan (whether it be high-tech or low-tech) for staying in communication with others during a major emergency.

#11) A Swiss Army Knife

If you have ever owned a Swiss Army knife you probably already know how incredibly handy they can be. It can be a very valuable and versatile tool. In a true survival situation, a Swiss Army knife can literally do dozens of different things for you. Make sure that you have at least one stored up for emergencies.

#12) Personal Hygiene Items

While these may not be absolute "essentials", the truth is that life will get very unpleasant very quickly without them. For example, what would you do without toilet paper? Just think about it. Imagine that you just finished your last roll of toilet paper and now you can't get any more. What would you do?

The truth is that soap, toothbrushes, toothpaste, shampoo, toilet paper and other hygiene products are things that we completely take for granted in society today. So what would happen if we could not go out and buy them any longer?

#13) A First Aid Kit And Other Medical Supplies

One a more serious note, you may not be able to access a hospital or a doctor during a major crisis. In your survival supplies, be absolutely certain that you have a good first aid kit and any other medical supplies that you think you may need.

#14) Extra Gasoline

There may come a day when gasoline is rationed or is simply not available at all. If that happens, how will you get around? Be certain to have some extra gasoline stored away just in case you find yourself really needing to get somewhere someday.

#15) A Sewing Kit

If you were not able to run out and buy new clothes for you and your family, what would you do? Well, you would want to repair the clothes that you have and make them last as long as possible. Without a good sewing kit that will be very difficult to do.

#16) Self-Defense Equipment

Whether it is pepper spray to fend off wild animals or something more "robust" to fend off wild humans, millions of Americans will one day be thankful that they have something to defend themselves with.

#17) A Compass

In the event of a major emergency, you and your family may find yourselves having to be on the move. If you are in a wilderness area, it will be very hard to tell what direction you are heading without a compass. It is always a good idea to have at least one compass stored up.

#18) A Hiking Backpack

If you and your family suddenly have to "bug out", what will you carry all of your survival supplies in? Having a good hiking backpack or "survival bag" for everyone in your family is extremely important. If something happened in the city where you live and you suddenly had to "go", what would you put your most important stuff in? How would you carry it all if you had to travel by foot? These are very important things to think about.

#19) A Community

During a long-term crisis, it is those who are willing to work together that will have the best chance of making it. Whether it is your family, your friends, a church or a local group of people that you know, make sure that you have some people that you can rely on and work together with in the event that everything hits the fan. Loners are going to have a really hard time of surviving for long.

#20) A Backup Plan

Lastly, it is always, always, always important to have a backup plan for everything.

If someone comes in and steals all the food that you have stored up, what are you going to do?

If travel is restricted and your can't get to your "bug out" location immediately do you have a Plan B?

If you have built your house into an impregnable survival fortress but circumstances force you to leave do you have an alternate plan?

The truth is that crisis situations rarely unfold just as we envision. It is important to be flexible and to be ready with backup plans when disaster strikes.

You don't want to end up like the folks in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina. You don't want to have to rely on the government to take care of you if something really bad happens.

Right now the U.S. strategic grain reserve contains only enough wheat to make half a loaf of bread for each of the approximately 300 million people in the United States.

How long do you think that is going to last?

Now is the time to get ready.

Now is the time to prepare.

The United States economy is going to collapse and incredibly hard times are coming.

Will you be able to survive what it happens?

The distinction between a Republic and a democracy is not an idle one. It has great legal significance.

The Constitution guarantees to every state a Republican form of government (Art. 4, Sec. 4). No state may join the United States unless it is a Republic. Our Republic is one dedicated to "liberty and justice for all." Minority individual rights are the priority. The people have natural rights instead of civil rights. The people are protected by the Bill of Rights from the majority. One vote in a jury can stop all of the majority from depriving any one of the people of his rights; this would not be so if the United States were a democracy. (see People's rights vs Citizens' rights)

In a pure democracy 51 beats 49[%]. In a democracy there is no such thing as a significant minority: there are no minority rights except civil rights (privileges) granted by a condescending majority. Only five of the U.S. Constitution's first ten amendments apply to Citizens of the United States. Simply stated, a democracy is a dictatorship of the majority. Socrates was executed by a democracy: though he harmed no one, the majority found him intolerable.]

craig-oxley - September 23, 2008 12:55 AM (GMT)

POINT 1, is that this country is no longer a Republic we are a corporation that is still in bankruptcy, which is why we cannot now just declare bankruptcy! "The UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT CORPORATION went BANKRUPT in 1933. They MUST renew the bankruptcy every 70 years. It was renewed in 2003. So it's already been bankrupt for over 70 years which is why everything is such a mess. The U.S. Government became the US GOVERNMENT CORPORATION via the Act of 1871. The result is that even our elections have been a complete sham and scam. The American people believe the system goes something like this, because it is what we have been taught in school (and) essentially brainwashed to believe." (1)

If one understand Maritime Admiralty Law and how it applys on the land now, then one can see a possible reason for this if staged. One would also have to monitor the words and language spoken to see if theres a real connection. Remember the words which you think you know, you do not. Words like Vehicle, traffic, road/roadway etc are all corporate terms for business.

Same as if a corporate police officer asks:

Were you driving the vehicle sir?

No but I was travelling in my carriage.

I ask you again sir was you driving on this road?

No I was travelling in my carriage upon this common way

I have to also speak with your passenger sir

No you may speak to my guest but I have no passenger

But is he not with you sir whilst your driving?

No whilst I've been travelling my guest has been with me.

Same thing sir

No far from it, my guest has not paid me any currency to travel with myself. Therefore he is merely a guest

So do did you drive this vehicle again sir?

No I was in control of my carriage merely travelling.

So also my friend when on hears the word Traffic this is a corporate term. The real definition is commerce, trade, sale or exchange of merchandise, bills, money and the like. That was lifted straight out of a dictionary from 1914 called Bouvier's Law. So quite frankly this may simply be another signal of some sorts based upon the disruption or possible disruption of corporate traffic haha. Interesting isn't it when you know occult teachings on the bird cage system we're within haha. You'll never think like you once did, you never did think you just responded with a flight action programmed into you by the system previously. Now you will think with that powerful brain independantly for once. Now when we consider this was being broadcasted by British Intelligence well we can only wonder at what devious occult signals their trying again. One thing with my scenario above is that you then have to watch what corporate contracts you've signed. Remember when the carriage was registered as a corporate vehicle against a number plate? Well they can start nawing at you from this angle then. - CRAIG OXLEY

THE BIRTH CERTIFICATE BOND

Article by Guy Euden
http://www.tpuc.org/node/408

Hi all, well let's start my mentioning this is the perfect article to present to you in between the AFV part one and part two.

It is very important that you realise that without the above document, you will not be able to fulfil most of the remedies mentioned in “Standing in Commerce” aka “Commercial Redemption”

Your BC bond if you like starts you on your way to your personal sovereignty it is the first step, the meat and potatoes of all that you do afterwards.

You want a simple explanation on how important it is?
Ok, if you enter a courtroom un-bonded you stand little or no chance, the minute you step into the courts territory you are in contempt, I am not saying you cannot win, but I am saying you enter as a debtor!

If you enter a court un-bonded, you are already in contempt of court! Why? Because you have entered a place of business, a place of commerce and you are not insured to operate!! So you are operating in a position that it is very difficult to rise from.

Let’s not forget that if you are not bonded you cannot start down the road of identifying yourself as the creditor e.g. “Guy Euden” to the Debtor “GUY EUDEN” (the legal fiction, your vessel that sails in commerce) yes you may file a UCC1 or equivalent but is that enough?

To perfect the bond process you need to follow the steps on our Standing in Commerce forum, but in the interest of giving you a clue here and now, you need:

Full “Certified copy of an entry” or “Birth Certificate”
An EIN number from the IRS in the states
You will need to file a UCC1 at some point
And you need to purchase a “Winston Shrout” DVD (he supplies the template for the “Bond Order etc.. in one of the DVD’s in whatever set you buy)

Once you have these things you can then create your bond, you will need a close group to help you, as you will need 2 Surety’s (your wing men) they must also have EIN numbers, known as their “private offset account” these will need to be placed on the bond, with signatures and a thumbprint in red YES A THUMBPRINT!

Two more witnesses to the signatures and you can file it, you give the treasury Thirty(30)days to rebut the bond (they won’t unless you have made a mess of it) after the 30 days are up you are bonded!

The thing is, and it is important for you to understand this, the bond is “unlimited value” I mean they cannot put a value on the substance of life so the bond is unlimited, now in a courtroom a Judge has a bond (it’s his bar number for insurance or indemnity if you like) the court will have a bond so will the barrister etc.. (Insurance against their wrong doing!) so you see you enter the courtroom with a bond you are already equal!! But wait there is more!! You see, by having a private bond of unlimited value you trump their bonds, as theirs will be corporate bonds and of little value compared to yours!

Now when you have a bond in place you can issue other bonds off of it (you need to do a seminar for this or you might get yourself in trouble) so you may indemnify the court you are about to go into, this is a double edged sword, it gives them insurance against you doing something wrong, BUT it gives you a means to ensure proper due process, how? I’ll tell you.

If you write a bond to indemnify yourself you also indemnify yourself from them (judges, court etc..) if they do not adhere to due process you can liquidate that bond!
What do you think happens if you liquidate a bond worth say,, £300,000,000, I’ll tell you, the brown stuff hits their fan!!
The courts worth what £2 million? The judges bond poultry few hundred thousand? And the rest... well chump change!! So let’s be kind and say £3million top whack! Where’s the other £297,000,000 coming from? Enjoy those thoughts I’ll leave that bit with you, watch “Winston Shrouts Kelowna” for more detail.

So it really is the meat and potatoes of the “Standing in Commerce” technology

The BC bond also helps with the AFV technology covered in part one!

As I stated in the part one article you can use two steps to ensure performance on their part to honour your presentment, however here in the UK this is a new process, so they may still silly and dishonour you!

So you use your bond to liquidate the asset they have presented to you and are now in dishonour with by keep returning it (the bill) when you do this (liquidate) your tiger the IRS (more on this at the seminar) will take that money straight out of their account, they will go crazy!! Nothing is going to make them look twice at what they have done like cash disappearing from their accounts!

Remember we are in an equivalent bankruptcy to (chapter 11) but the Lying Deceitful British Government and Judiciary don’t like to admit it, so don’t bother trying to get them to admit it, they won’t!
So as I have stated in the past, you cannot pay a debt, we have no means to do so, they fraudulently creating “resulting trusts” as liabilities for you to pay, so AFV their presentment and present it back to them to settle the account!! But to get full satisfaction “GET YOUR BOND”

ANYONE WISHING TO ATTEND THE SEMINAR ON THE 15TH AND 16TH OF NOVEMBER 2008 IN NOTTINGHAM, NEEDS TO GET THEIR BOOKINGS IN YOU CAN CONTACT ME AT: guyeuden@tpuc.org
I WILL SEND YOU A SEMINAR BOOKING FORM AND FILL IT IN AND GET IT BACK TO ME ASAP PLS.

If you get all of your bits in the “needed list” you can get your bond sorted out straight after you complete the seminar, then your well on your way.

This is just a skim over the surface, its more indepth from here on in, Dont be thinking that the bond is just orderable part of the process ones all parts are in place is to create your bond and then lodge it with a treasury, from then on your sovereignty and power grows!

Thanks for your time Guy Euden

Who we truly are in Canada

Minister Jackie Grant Veloice: Harper | 07.06.2006 11:02 | Analysis | Repression | World

Who we truly are in Canada and a serious rebuttal to the unlawful Justice system!!

Who We All Truly Are

We are live women or men. We are live de-jure free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men, also known as any of them in accord with the Coronation oath of Elizabeth the Second, also known as a ministers in accord with (but not in subjection to) section 176.1 of the Criminal Code of Canada. Free men and women (even the king or queen) are equal in rights according to common law.

We are not PERSONS (though the GOVERNMENT and COURTS would like to think you are). PERSONS are incorporated legal fictions, also known as the STRAWMAN. You are not INCORPORATED CORPORATE CHATTEL (a PERSON) or a TRADE NAME SLAVE (a PERSON) or a DEAD LIMITED LIABILITY PUBLIC PERSON or OFFICER (a PERSON) or a TAXPAYER (a PERSON), all of which are LEGAL FICTIONS and are dead. We are live women or men.

In the famous PERSONS case Emily Murphy and her ilk proclaimed all women were PERSONS in the law and most women and men assumed this made women equal to men (they always were equal in true fact). The truth was that this ruling had the effect of making nearly everyone assume that they were all PERSONS (see PERSON in the definitions section near the bottom of this page). This assumption gives the governments and corporations tacit consent to treat ignorant women and men as chattel or slaves. The police magistrate courts have since been shelved (Emily Murphy was the first woman to become a police magistrate judge in the commonwealth). PERSONS are bought and sold in CANADA in accord with the Canadian Ownership Control and Determination Act.

The courts we face today are corporate bodies, private law merchant courts under Admiralty or maritime law or civil law and run by the Bank of England. Since the Dominion of Canada went into receivership in 1933, CANADA is held in receivership by the Bank of Canada, which controlled by the Rothschild family owned Bank of England in the CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON or The CROWN, which is also known as the CAPITAL CITY, the Square Mile, or THE CITY. There are two CROWNS, one is held by Elizabeth Mary Alexandra of the Windsor-Mountbatten family acting as HER MAJESTY ELIZABETH II, and the other is THE CITY, which, though it is the financial master or creditor of the debtor HER MAJESTY, is not the military or ecclesiastical master of HER MAJESTY.

The CROWN, a 677 acre independent sovereign nation in the centre of London England located on the site of the ancient Roman city of Londinium, is the centre of world finance and is also controlled by illuminati bankers.

The government of CANADA and the courts are DE FACTO. A DE FACTO government comes into, or remains in, power by means not provided for in the country?s common law or constitution, such as coup d? etat, revolution, usurpation, abrogation or suspension of the de jure lawful constitution. Since the illegal authority of these courts is corporate or civil, these corporate merchant maritime Admiralty courts of the bankrupt corporation must have our consent to proceed against us legally (the Maxim of Law = contract is the law).

They try to obtain our consent in many ways.

One common way is to approach the average John Doe and present him with a piece of paper containing an altered form of the name John Doe such as Doe, John or JOHN DOE or DOE, JOHN or DOE, John. They then ask Jon Doe if he is Doe, John or JOHN DOE or DOE, JOHN or DOE, John. These form or bastardizations of his name only appear to be John Doe?s name, but the average ignorant Jon Doe usually ignorantly consents that this is his name. What John Doe does not know is that the only lawful way to write one?s name (according to Legal Forms and Styles for Canada) is first name first middle name middle, family name last, first letter in each name in upper case and the rest in lower case (John Doe). The other presented forms of writing names are reserved for military operations or corporations. Once John consents to the idea that his name is one of these corporate or military forms he ignorantly assigns himself by tacit consent the status of a dead (or incorporated, from corpse) legal fiction known as a PERSON, and has given himself up as chattel with the status of salvage from a decommissioned or abandoned warship (CANADA is an incorporated legal fiction with the status of a decommissioned or abandoned British warship under Admiralty or maritime jurisdiction). Poor John Doe has ignorantly given up his birthright as a live man and child of the Creator and has assigned himself the status of a STRAWMAN, which is another name for PERSON, along with chattel (which comes from cattle).

The only lawful place to put our name in all capitals is on our gravestones, because there our bodies are actually incorporated (corpses) or a dead PERSONS and not the whole men or women or souls, our spirits are gone and all that is left is the shells or the vessels.

Once John Doe gives consent to being DOE, JOHN or some other corporate form of his name, poor ignorant John Doe then is unwittingly in the corporate or civil realm and is under the jurisdiction of the DE FACTO corporate government (liable to pay DE FACTO corporate taxes as a TAXPAYER which is also a PERSON) and the DE FACTO corporate merchant courts of the CROWN. If anyone changes your name for financial purposes or some other benefit that is a criminal offence known as fraud (cc.380). Another thing that poor ignorant John Doe does not know is that the CROWN through it?s legal BAR franchises has a global monopoly on fraud (In 1870 the Rothschild banking family founded American Bar Association in Indiana).

If John Doe hires a lawyer and becomes a client of that lawyer who is sworn to the CROWN via the BAR association John Doe in his ignorance proclaims to the world that he is incapable of conducting his own affairs in law and that may be interpreted by the treasonous merchant courts as a sign of John Doe stepping into the jurisdiction of those same corporate maritime admiralty courts. If John Doe merely steps foot in the courtroom that may be interpreted by the treasonous merchant courts as a sign of John Doe stepping into the jurisdiction of those same corporate maritime admiralty courts. If John Doe rises when the judge enters the room that may be interpreted by the treasonous merchant courts as a sign of John Doe stepping into the jurisdiction of those same corporate maritime admiralty courts. If John Doe enters a plea other than non assumpsit without prejudice or without prejudice I undertake no plea that may be interpreted by the treasonous merchant courts as a sign of John Doe stepping into the jurisdiction of those same corporate maritime admiralty courts. If John Doe answers any questions from the court clerk, prosecutor or judge at all that may be interpreted by the treasonous merchant courts as a sign of John Doe stepping into the jurisdiction of those same corporate maritime admiralty courts (one should always answer any questions from anyone attempting to exercise questionable authority with a question, because the master questions whereas the slave answers).

It would be best for John Doe to not have anything at all to do with the illegal DE FACTO corporate merchant courts. The judge knows full well he is not presiding over a lawful court, but a private law merchant court run by the Bank of England.

We free woman or men, ministers of Yehovah, who are in a state of awareness will not attempt to disprove the cases that corporate POLICE OFFICERS attempt to present against us using the laws of mammon in the lying evil fascist bastard?s illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS. This would legitimize the court?s supposed jurisdiction and the fraudulent laws of the lying evil fascist bastards, it would make us all parties to fraud.

The lying evil fascist bastards are attempting to CONVICT us (or convince us), in illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS.

What we do first to fight for our freedom is to challenge in writing the assumed jurisdiction of the lying evil fascist bastard?s illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS to proceed against us while attempting enforcement of their fraudulent DE FACTO CIVIL LAWS.

We submit Demand Notices to the sovereign de jure live free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men who charged us and/or attempting to prosecute us in their capacity as fraudulent CORPORATE CHATTEL or INCORPORATED TRADE NAME SLAVES or DEAD ?LIMITED LIABILITY? PUBLIC PERSONS & OFFICERS (a.k.a. LEGAL FICTIONS).

We start off by sending Demand Notices to the lying evil fascist bastards and their lackeys, not their capacity as fraudulent CORPORATE CHATTEL or INCORPORATED TRADE NAME SLAVES or DEAD ?LIMITED LIABILITY? PUBLIC PERSONS & OFFICERS (a.k.a. LEGAL FICTIONS), but in their capacity as sovereign de jure live free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men (a.k.a. ?any of them? or minister). This blows the lying evil fascist bastard?s minds because they are not used to anyone dealing with them in any capacity other than fraudulent CORPORATE CHATTEL or INCORPORATED TRADE NAME SLAVES or DEAD ?LIMITED LIABILITY? PUBLIC PERSONS & OFFICERS (a.k.a. LEGAL FICTIONS). They are not used to anyone dealing with them in any forum of law but their illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS.

Fascism should more appropriately be called Corporatism because it is a merger of State and corporate power.
- Benito Mussolini, 1883-1945, Fascist dictator of Italy

Serving the lying evil fascist bastards Notices as sovereign de jure live free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men (a.k.a. ?any of them? or minister) removes them from the jurisdiction of their illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS (the ?Temples of Baal?) and brings them into the de jure lawful jurisdiction of our Creator (a.k.a. Yehovah the parent of Yeshuah the Christ).

The lying evil fascist bastards must then recognise the de jure supremacy of our Creator (Yehovah the parent of Yeshuah the Christ) in the law. They must recognise our de jure full rights as de jure live free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men (a.k.a. ?any of them? or minister). If they do not do so they commit fraud, obstruction of justice, and treason (and other crimes as well).

De jure live free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men (a.k.a. ?any of them? or minister) can lawfully have and use the de jure gifts of our Creator (a.k.a. Yehovah the parent of Yeshuah the Christ) any time he or she wills to do so.

Genesis 1:29 - And Adoni (Yehovah) said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of all the earth

Usually the lying evil fascist bastards will then do whatever they can to get rid of your case as quickly as possible and get you out of their hair. The lying evil fascist bastards quite often drop their CASE to CONVICT you in their illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS. Sometimes they will do almost anything in attempts to intimidate us into believing we are wrong.

If the lying evil fascist bastards do proceed to an attempt to bring us to trial in their illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS, we then go before the lying evil fascist bastards and challenge them to prove if their DE FACTO KANGAROO COURT has any right to proceed against you. So long as we do not surrender ourselves into their jurisdiction willingly or by ignorance, they will fail to prove any jurisdiction over us every time. The truth is the lying evil fascist bastards have no jurisdiction over de jure live free-will full-liability natural-born private free women or free men (a.k.a. ?any of them? or ministers).

No jurisdiction = no trial? = no conviction!

If they do unlawfully force or ?railroad? us through the TRIAL anyway, first we must refuse to speak except to say only that we ask them to establish that they have jurisdiction to proceed against us by explaining their oath, who are they sworn to and the meaning of their oath, whether whomever they are sworn to has a oath and what the meaning of the oath of who they are sworn to is, and whether whomever they are sworn to is allegiant to Yehovah the Creator and God spoken of in the King James Bible. We must answer every request or offer they make to us with a question demanding that they would they establish they have any jurisdiction over us by confirming their Oaths in the manner we need satisfied before we can proceed. They will often lie to us, yell at us, threaten to lock us up, and do anything they can to get us to answer their questions (if we do answer their questions they might claim we have ignorantly given them tacit consent that they have jurisdiction over us). If we do talk to them then only answer their questions with our own questions about their lack of jurisdiction. Then once their fraudulent TRIAL is over we can defeat any "illegal" CONVICTION merely by refusing to sign (or MARK) the JUDGE'S ORDER against us.

No jurisdiction = no trial? = no conviction!

This is the Maxim of Law (see Definitions below). If there is no CORPORATE contract with the JUDGE and the illegitimate, fraudulent and unlawful DE FACTO KANGAROO COURTS then they have no jurisdiction over us.

No jurisdiction - no trial? - no conviction!

We do not live in CANADA. CANADA is an incorporated dead legal fiction, an abstract concept that exists only in the abstraction of legalisms. We live within our skin on the land called Canada. We are live free women or men and children of Yehovah the true Creator.

We walk free.

Libertinum ingratium leges civiles in pristinalm redigulnt; sed leges angiae semel manumissum semper liberum judicant.

- Co. Litt. 137,

english translation ?

The civil law reduces the unwilling freedman to his original slavery, but the laws of the Angloes judge once manumitted as ever after free.

The English people have had from the days of old simple and pure Common Law rights and property rights. But there also existed along side of it, even in those days, the law of commerce, which is the Maritime Law or Law in Equity, Mercantile Law, Admiralty Law, Law Merchant, Military Law, but usually known as Civil Law. The earliest recorded knowledge we have of Maritime Law is in the Isle of Rhodes, 900 B. C. -- then there's the Laws of Oleron, Laws of the Hanseatic League, Maritime Law, which was part and parcel of their civil law. This is the law of commerce, whereas the Common Law was the law of the women and men living on the land.

William the Conqueror subjugated all the Saxons to his rule except London Town. The merchants controlled the city and their walls held off the invaders. The merchants were able to provision the city by ships and William's soldiers were not able to prevail. Finally, acknowledging that he could not take the City by force, he resorted to compromise. The merchants demanded "the "Lex Mercantoria" [the Maritime Law]. This was granted and remains to this day. The inner City of London has its special law where the Merchant's Law is the law of the City of London.

Protection of their shipping industry was one of the main reasons for the resistance by the merchants of London. The Saxon Common Law had no provision for fictitious persons (companies) or limited liability. Common law recognized only natural women and men with full liability. The Roman Civil Law was a derivative of the Maritime Law and is the basis of Civil Law in most European countries. Identifying features of Roman Common Law are the usage of precedent and judgment by magistrate(s) in courts of Summary jurisdiction.

At Runnymede, in 1215, the Barons of England forced King John to sign the Magna Carta, one of three primary documents establishing the fundamental rights of the English people to this day, {The others being the revision of the Magna Carta in 1225, the Petition of Rights [1628] and the Bill of Rights [1689]}. The primary objective and content of the Magna Carta was the prohibition of the use of Summary jurisdiction [the Roman or Admiralty Law] as a means of unauthorized taxation and seizure of property without due process of Law or just compensation.

The United States of America is a CROWN corporation. In 1604, a group of leading politicians, businessmen, merchants, manufacturers and bankers, met in Greenwich, then in the English county of Kent, and formed a corporation called the Virginia Company in anticipation of the imminent influx of white Europeans, mostly British at first, into the North American continent. Its main stockholder was King James I, and the original charter for the company was completed by April 10th 1606. After the original 13 American colonies won their ?independence? and an ?independent? country was formed after 1783, the Virginia Company simply changed its name to... the United States of America.

There are two USAs, or rather a USA and a usA. The united states of America with a lower case ?u? and ?5? are the lands of the various states. These lands, are still owned by THE CROWN as the head of the old Virginia Company. Then there is the United States of America, capital ?U? and ?S?, which is the 68 square miles of land west of the Potomac River on which is built the federal capital, Washington DC and the District of Columbia. It also includes the US protectorates of Guam and Puerto Rico. The United States of America is not a country... "United States" means -- (A) a federal corporation 28 USC $ 3002(15), Ch.176, It is clear that the United States...is a corporation... 534 FEDERAL SUPPLEMENT 724.

It is well settled that "United States" et. al. is a corporation, originally incorporated February 21, 1871 under the name "District of Columbia," 16 Stat. 419 Chap. 62 (reorganized June 11, 1878); a bankrupt organization per House Joint Resolution 192 of June 5, 1933, Senate Report 93-549m and Executive Orders 6072, 6102, 6111, and 6246."

One needs to look at the origins of copyright law to see under what laws the corporation of United States was formed, hint: it will take you back to Britain. As well, the inferior negotiating status of America during the Paris Treaty shows that it was not ever considered to be a country like the United Kingdom.

QUOTE

Dear Brother Eric;

I disagree with your conclusion that medical doctors owe federal income tax. A medical license is a state priviledge, so technically, they owe only state income taxes.

Dear Brother,

You are quite incorrect in your conclusion. The 16th Amendment enables Congress to reach all "income" (as defined in the Eisner and Flint cases) from whatever privileged "source" derived----barring no privileged "source" whatever. The State medical license is a privileged "source;" that "source" produces "income;" that income is excise-taxable on both a Federal and State level. Your conclusion was once the holding of Pete Hendrickson, now he has changed that position to include State and County officers and employees. By logical extension, he must hold that a State-granted privilege is a source from which income is derived and thus the Feds can income-excise tax that income also---as is the case with every State-chartered corporation.

The same principle holds true after the Helvering decision in 1938. The Federal government can tax the income of State police officers. In 1939 The Public Salary Tax Act was passed by Congress which enabled the Federal government to tax the income of "all STATE and local officers and employees," since to be an "employee" of a State office is a privilege and thus outside the pale of common law rights. The act also enabled the State government to tax the income of all FEDERAL employees in the jurisdiction of that State wherein those Federal Employees work and reside.

The Congress can tax the "income" derived from any in-privilege source, be that source a State privilege or a Federal privilege. You may wish to have a copy of my 100-page memorandum for 10.00 FRNs. It took me about four months to compose it and I finished it yesterday.

Lord Bless,

Brother Eric

AntiSionist - March 20, 2009 01:17 AM (GMT)

Dear Brethren and Friends,

I have come to the following conclusions about the Income tax. It took many years of mistakes and blunders to finally arrive at what I consider to be the truth. They are as follows:

1. The Fourteenth Amendment is the foundation for the Sixteenth Amendment. Once a Fourteeth Amendment US citizen, always a Fourteenth Amendment citizen. No court will release you from that status. There is no returning to the former status of first being a citizen of your state and then a United States citizen. All state constitutions were altered to comport with the Fourteenth Amendment converting the Calvinist Federal Republic of United States into a Jesuit Roman Provincial Empire.

2. In 1894 the Jesuits, in control of Congress, sought to put an "income tax" upon the "occupations" of US citizens. This means there existed an existing "privilege" that would generate "income" that could be taxed "directly" and "uniformly" just as a corporation could be taxed, though at different rates. That "privilege," as calculated, was directly tied to Fourteenth Amendment citizenship making citizenship "national," intended for both Blacks and Whites---not just the Black freedmen.

3. But in the Pollack case of 1895 the Supreme Court ruled that this "income tax" was a "direct tax" upon individuals. Because that tax was not "apportioned," it was declared unconstitutional and the income tax law was set aside. Not to be thwarted, the Jesuits, using their Masonic Skull & Bones President Taft (beholden to "American Pope" James Cardinal Gibbons), passed the Sixteenth Amendment in 1913 (via the proclamation of Masonic Secretary of State Philander Knox), installing one of their planks of The Communist Manifesto within the US Constitution. Thus, the Sixteenth Amendment (1913) set aside the Pollack case (1895) as the Fourteenth Amendment (1868) set aside the Dred Scott case of 1857.

4. The Sixteenth Amendment was intended to tax the "income" of individuals. This is why the wording of the amendment states that the income tax may be collected "without apportionment" and "without regard to any census." These phrases betray the intent of the amendment which set aside Pollack. Apportioned taxes and censuses apply only to individuals! Thus, individuals with "income" can be directly taxed without apportionment by the US Congress. Thus, the only other Congressional option is to tax "uniformly." Thus, the Fourteenth and Sixteenth Amendments working in combination, laid the foundation for the taxing the "income" of every US citizen. That income tax was now direct and uniform, without apportionment. The question is now "What is the 'source' of that 'income,' not 'what' is 'income.' It is clear. Every dime that comes into the hands of an individual is "income." But the "source" of that income is not clear; we must find it.

5. If the source of a citizen's "income" was a Fourteenth Amendment privilege, then the Pollack case would have sustained the income tax law of 1894. This is a most important conclusion. Therefore, there is another "source" which generates "income" for the citizen. The $64,000 question is "What is that source?" This is the great secret of the federal judiciary that will never be spoken in any open court. This is the great masonic secret of the Order's Federal Courts; I suspect the judges are taught this in Judges School. Find the "source" and the "income" tax becomes understandable.

6. Here are two clues. If you look at your most recent Birth Certificate, it is bordered on all four sides with the design of a stock. It has the appearance of a security or a savings bond on its borders. Compare the documents and see for yourself. Secondly, that birth certificate is filed in Washington, D. C., with the Bureau of the Census which is a part of the---now get this---The COMMERCE Department. Why in the name of Christ is the Bureau of the Census a part of the Commerce Department? There can be only one answer: Every US citizen is "in commerce." We are Fourteenth Amendment "commercial citizens." Thus, everything we do is "commerce" and thus generates "income." The second clue is found on the back of your Social Security Card. At the bottom is a number beginning with a letter followed by eight numbers. The Social Security Administration has admitted that this number is a BOND NUMBER. This means that every US citizen is BONDED and thus is a DEBTOR. He now (as an artificial person in the law just like a corporation) is the human, living, breathing, "bonded security" for the US Government to pay the national debt owed to the Jesuit Order's Federal Reserve Bank. That artificial, bonded security can have all of his property, both personal and real, taken to pay the national debt. (This means that the Congress can pass a law to take all of your money and land if deemed so necessary during a "national emergency.") That credit extended to the US Congress by the Federal Reserve Bank every year was created out of nothing---a stroke of a pen---and the interest payments on that debt is paid by the bonded, commercial Fourteenth Amendment US citizens of the United States incorporated in 1871. Thus, the "source" of our "income" is the commercial status of each citizen (a bonded security of the United States corporation now in receivership since 1933 via HJR-192 explained below) evidenced by his "bonded" "taxpayer" status, enjoying no ancient common law rights whatsoever.

7. Now we must retrace the history of the Social Security Act. Notice the word "security." The act was passed to provide security or collateral for the Federal Reserve Bank, not for the security of the individual. In 1929 the Order used three Irish Roman Catholic short-sellers of stock to cause the Great Depression. Those men were Joe Kennedy, Tom Bragg and Ben Smith. With the fall of the market orchestrated by the Knights of Malta (John J. Raskob of Dupont, etc), Masonic FDR was put in office thanks to Papal Knights Al Smith, Raskob and Joe Kennedy. One of the first acts he signed into law was House Joint Resolution 192, suspending all payments in gold. Our gold coins and currency redeemable in gold were taken from us. Shortly thereafter, the Social Security Act was passed. The combination of these acts put every citizen in commercial paper, and ended any Federal Common Law. Every citizen is "in commerce," using commercial papar, has no common law rights, and all is a privilege which can be taxed to an unlimited degree by the Congress and regulated by statute via the police powers---thus laying the foundation for a huge fascist police state in the future. This also gave the IRS inquisitonal police powers to seek out the financial affairs of the Empire's commercial citizens without regard to the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Assement every April 15th is voluntary (less tha Fifth Amendment should be violated) but the income tax is indeed owed and will be assessed and collected.

8. The remedy to this commercial status which is the basis for owing the income tax on every penny that passes through the commercial citizen's hands must then be found in a code that regulates commercial transactions. If there is no remedy, then the 13th Amendment prohibiting involuntarily servitude is now being violated. That code is the Uniform Commercial Code. The solution has been found and it really works. It is composed of a series of filings but once properly accomplished, the federal income tax problem is resolved. The US citizen must become the SECURED PARTY for the artificial person that he is in the law. Once one becomes the Secured Party for the artifical human resource in commerce, he then can discharge debts owed to the IRS. I have personally seen five Notices of Levy totally over 250,000 dollars (FRNS) paid by Bills of Exchange via this UCC process. It works and is totally within the Law of the UCC---only if these filings are done correctly.

This information is most valuable as I believe the Order is fomenting a Tax Revolt at this very moment. It is using a host of "tax patriots" who are wrongly advocating that and that "wages are not income." Now the tax can be easily "discharged."

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Dear Brethren and Friends,

After six-month review of over twenty Supreme Court cases, I have concluded that both Cryer and Hendrickson are liars as to who really owes the income-excise-privilege tax.

All this information is available in my Memorandum of Law on CD now for sale at the low price of 10.00. There is a three-fold nexis that catches nearly everyone so that they do indeed owe the income-excise-privilege tax on their monies. The first is the government-granted privilege to do business as an artificial person such as a statutory trust, corporation or partnership. The second hook is working as a matter of professional license, such as a doctor or a lawyer. Any professional that is doing business with a state-granted license owes the income-excise-privilege tax as he is in privilege. This was decided in Springer v. U.S. way back in 1870. Third, every person who is "employed" by the federal or any state government is in privilege and owes the income-excise-privilege tax, for the tax is an AVOIDABLE excise tax on his income derived from his "source," i.e., his government- conferred employment privilege. And the last---and the most clever which began in 1942 thanks to the propaganda film of 33rd degree Walt Disney---is everyone working in the "legal relationship of employer and employee" owes the income-excise-privilege tax on their wages. They derive "income from wages"---not that all wages are "income" as defined by the Supreme Court. For most Americans have volunteered into this "legal relationship" because most corporations will only hire "employees," evidenced by a signed W-4 or have admitted they are "self-employed." Thus, the bullied American worker at common law moved from status to contract by voluntarily entering into a privileged relationship with the state of their residence and therefore the federal government/IRS can tax that "source" of "income" as per the 16th amendment and the Supreme Court's Helvering decision of 1938.

Thus, Hendrickson and Cryer and Schiff and a host of other "tax protest" leaders are fomenting a tax revolt while never telling the people they in fact owe the income-excise-privilege tax due to their "legal relationship of employer-employee" which they have ignorantly and voluntarily entered into with the state though they are working for a private business in the private sector.

Cryer is a LICENSED attorney and thus owes the income-excise-privilege tax on every cent he collected for his services. Cryer is also a high freemason as per his bio on his Memorandum of Law. Further, the DOJ/IRS must have deliberately lost their case against Cryer to further the revolt. This is pure Jesuit Hegelian dialectic at its finest!

Brother Eric

It's a subject that every American should know about inside out, but it takes a great deal of time to learn how to extricate yourself from the US citizen "legal entity" status back into a fully sovereign state citizen, as discussed by Richard MacDonald in his recorded lectures.

The entire country has been hoodwinked into a legal system that is based on treating you like a piece of "property" (or chattel) of the state, You are considered a legal entity, just like Taco Bell or Starbucks, no different, if you call yourself a "US citizen" or a "resident" of the state you live in. Everything is based on commerce and the Uniform Commercial Code (UCC).

You are ensnared into this status under your social security number, your birth certificate, your MARRIAGE licence, your driver's licence, your vehicle registration, etc. You must break the nexus with all of these corporate "hooks" and establish your identity with the court as your family name with lower case letters. You have to forget about the "benefits" of being a US citizen (Eg. collecting social security) and declare your sovereignty as a state citizen.

In California, if I establish with the court that I am a sovereign STATE citizen, I declare my GOD GIVEN RIGHTS as a MAN (not a "person") under the original, founding California constitution of 1849. The knaves, slicksters, and corrupt jackals of the Illuminati persuasion created a SECOND --CORPORATE constitution in 1879 and that's the only one that they want you to know about, BUT the original constitution, the People's constitution of 1849, is FULLY IN FORCE and cannot be superceded or replaced by the 1879 corporate constitution. This Founding constitution and Corporate constitution dichotomy applies to EVERY state in the Union.

Once you realize that you can remove yourself from the "protection" of the corporate legal system, you are no longer subject to its regulation---AND taxation. Every judge, every court, every prosecutor, every cop in America DOES NOT WANT YOU TO KNOW THIS...

That doesn't mean that you can commit crimes and get away with it, however.

You can drive a car without a licence or state registration, for instance, and do it legally If you are stopped by a cop, you make it clear that you are not under the rules and regulations of the state motor vehicle department because you have a RIGHT (AS A STATE CITIZEN AND SOVEREIGN) to travel along the roads of America (upheld by the Supreme Court) without requiring the states' permission (a driver's licence) to do so. There are many other advantages to being a sovereign, state citizen.

The "US citizen" is a controlled and regulated LEGAL entity of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, which is a FOREIGN CORPORATION. People who call themselves "residents" of the UNITED STATES or call themselves "residents" of their home state, are declaring their affinity with that corporate status and are in fact considered ALIENS residing in that state.

Paul Verge put together a well done DVD that talked about this in depth. It's called Hyjacking Humanity (http://www.thecauseofeffect.com/) .

Robert Menard (see videos below) of Canada does talks about this as well. There are many others.

EVERYONE should look into this and become a state citizen... as was George Washington (Virginia) and Benjamin Franklin (Pennsylvania).

The Founding Fathers were NOT US "citizens." YOU shouldn't be one either.

Regards, Ken

craig-oxley - July 4, 2009 02:30 PM (GMT)

By: Stephen Kimbol Ames

Queen Elizabeth controls and has amended U.S. Social Security, as follows:

S.I. 1997 NO.1778 The Social Security (United States of America) Order 1997 Made 22nd of July 1997 coming into force 1st September 1997. At the Court at Buckingham Palace the 22nd day of July 1997. Now, therefore Her Majesty an pursuance of section 179 (1) (a) and (2) of the Social Security Administration Act of 1992 and all other powers enabling Her in that behalf, is please, by and with advise of Her privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered as follows:

"This Order may be cited as the Social Security (United States of America) Order 1997 and shall come into force on 1st September 1997."

Does this give a new meaning to Federal Judge William Wayne Justice stating in court that he takes his orders from England? This order goes on to redefine words in the Social Security Act and makes some changes in United States Law.

Remember, King George was the "Arch-Treasurer and Prince Elector of the Holy Roman Empire and c, and of the United States of America." See: Treaty of Peace (1738) 8 U.S. Statutes at Large. Great Britain which is the agent for the Pope, is in charge of the USA 'plantation.'

What people do not know is that the so called Founding Fathers and King George were working hand-n-hand to bring the people of America to there knees, to install a Central Government over them and to bind them to a debt that could not be paid. First off you have to understand that the UNITED STATES is a corporation and that it existed before the Revolutionary war. See Respublica v. Sweers 1 Dallas 43. 28 U.S.C. 3002 (15)

Now, you also have to realize that King George was not just the King of England, he was also the King of France. Treaty of Peace * U.S. 8 Statutes at Large 80.

On January 22, 1783 Congress ratified a contract for the repayment of 21 loans that the UNITED STATES had already received dating from February 28, 1778 to July 5, 1782. Now the UNITED STATES Inc. owes the King money which is due January 1, 1788 from King George via France. Is this not incredible the King funded both sides of the War. But there was more work that needed to be done. Now the Articles of Confederation which was declared in force March 1, 1781 States in Article 12 " All bills of credit emitted, monies borrowed,and debts contracted by, or under the authority of Congress, before the assembling of the United States, in pursuance of the present confederation, shall be deemed and considered a charge against the United States, for payment and satisfaction whereof the said United States, and the public faith are hereby solemnly pledged."

Now after losing the Revolutionary War, even though the War was nothing more than a move to turn the people into debtors for the King, they were not done yet.

Now the loans were coming due and so a meeting was convened in Annapolis, Maryland, to discuss the economic instability of the country under the Articles of Confederation. Only five States come to the meeting, but there is a call for another meeting to take place in Philadelphia the following year with the express purpose of revising the Articles of Confederation

On February 21, 1787 Congress gave approval of the meeting to take place in Philadelphia on May 14, 1787, to revise the Articles of confederation. Something had to be done about the mounting debt. Little did the people know that the so called founding fathers were acutely going to reorganize the United States because it was Bankrupt.

On September 17, 1787 twelve State delegates approve the Constitution. The States have now become Constitutors. Constitutor: In the civil law, one who, by simple agreement, becomes responsible for the payment of another's debt. Blacks Law Dictionary 6th Ed. The States were now liable for the debt owed to the King, but the people of America were not because they were not a party to the Constitution because it was never put to them for a vote On August 4th, 1790 an Act was passed which was Titled.-An Act making provision for the payment of the Debt of the United States. This can be found at 1 U.S. Statutes at Large pages 138-178. This Act for all intents and purposes abolished the States and Created the Districts. If you don't believe it look it up. The Act set up Federal Districts, here in Pennsylvania we got two. In this Act each District was assigned a portion of the debt. The next step was for the states to reorganize their governments which most did in 1790. This had to be done because the States needed to legally bind the people to the debt. The original State Constitutions were never submitted to the people for a vote. So the governments wrote new constitutions and submitted them to people for a vote thereby binding the people to the debts owed to Great Britain. The people became citizens of the State where they resided and ipso facto a citizen of the United States. A citizen is a member of a fictional entity and it is synonymous with subject.

What you think is a state is in reality a corporation, in other words, a Person.

"Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is Person." 9 F. Supp 272
"Word "person" does not include state. 12 Op Atty Gen 176.

There are no states, just corporations. Every body politic on this planet is a corporation. A corporation is an artificial entity, a fiction at law. They only exist in your mind. They are images in your mind, that speak to you. We labor, pledge our property and give our children to a fiction.

Now before we go any further let us examine a few things in the Constitution.

Article six section one keeps the loans from the King valid it states; All Debts contracted and Engagements entered into, before the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

Another interesting tidbit can be found at Article One Section Eight clause Two which states that Congress has the power to borrow money on the credit of the United States. This was needed so the United States (Which went into Bankruptcy on January 1, 1788) could borrow money and then because the States were a party to the Constitution they would also be liable for it.

The next underhanded move was the creation of The United States Bank in 1791. This was a private Bank of which there were 25,000 shares issued of which 18,000 were held by those in England. The Bank loaned the United States money in exchange for Securities of the United States

Now the creditors of the United States which included the King wanted paid the Interest on the loans that were given to the United States. So Alexander Hamilton came up with the great idea of taxing alcohol. The people resisted so George Washington sent out the militia to collect the tax which they did. This has become known as the Whiskey rebellion. It is the Militia's duty to collect taxes. How did the United States collect taxes off of the people if the people are not a party to the Constitution? I'll tell you how. The people are slaves! The United States belongs to the floundering fathers and their posterity and Great Britain. America is nothing more than a Plantation. It always has been. How many times have you seen someone in court attempt to use the Constitution and then the Judge tells him he can't. It is because you are not a party to it. We are SLAVES!!!!!!! If you don't believe read Padelford, Fay & Co. vs. The Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Savannah. 14 Georgia 438, 520 which states " But, indeed, no private person has a right to complain, by suit in court, on the ground of a breach of the Constitution, the Constitution, it is true, is a compact but he is not a party to it."

Now back to the Militia. Just read Article One Section Eight clause (15) which states that it is the militia's job to execute the laws of the Union. Now read Clause (16) Which states that Congress has the power to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States.... the Militia is not there to protect you and me, it is their to collect our substance.

As you can plainly see all the Constitution did is set up a Military Government to guard the King's commerce and make us slaves.

If one goes to 8 U.S. statutes at large 116-132 you will find "The Treaty of Amity, Commerce and Navigation. This Treaty was signed on November 19th, 1794 which was twelve years after the War. Article 2 of the Treaty states that the King's Troops were still occupying the United States. Being the nice King that he was , he decided that the troops would return to England by June 1st, 1796. The troops were still on American soil because, quite frankly the King wanted them here.

Here is the key to were this started:

Many people tend to blame the Jews for our problems. Jewish Law governs the entire world, as found in Jewish Law by MENACHEM ELON, DEPUTY PRESIDENT SUPREME COURT OF ISRAEL, to wit:

"Everything in the Babylonian Talmud is binding on all Israel. Every town and country must follow all customs, give effect to the decrees, and carry out the enactment's of the Talmudic sages, because the entire Jewish people accepted everything contained in Talmud. The sages who adopted the enactment's and decrees, instituted the practices, rendered the decisions, and derived the laws, constituted all or most of the Sages of Israel. It is they who received the tradition of the fundamentals of the entire Torah in unbroken succession going back to Moses, our teacher."

We are living under what the Bible calls Mammon. As written in the subject Index, Mammon is defined as ("Civil law and procedure").

Now turn to the "The Shetars Effect on English Law" -- A Law of the Jews Becomes the Law of the Land, found in "The George Town Law Journal, Vol 71: pages 1179-1200." It is clearly stated in the Law Review that the Jews are the property of the Norman and Anglo-Saxon Kings. It also explains that the Talmud is the law of the land. It explains how the Babylonian Talmud became the law of the land, which is now known as the Uniform Commercial Code. The written credit agreement -- the Jewish shetar is a lien on all property (realty) and today it's called the mortgage! The treatise also explains that the Jews are owned by Great Britain and the Jews are in charge of the Baking system.
We are living under the Babylonian Talmud, it is were all of our problems come from. It was brought into England in 1066 and has been enforced by the Pope, Kings and the Christian churches ever since. It is total and relentless mind control, people are taught to believe in things that do not exist.

Now before you scream that the UCC is unconstitutional I'm sorry people, you are not a party to any constitution. Read the case cite below.

"But, indeed, no private person has a right to complain, by suit in court, on the ground of a breach of the Constitution. The Constitution it is true, is a compact, but he is not a party to it." Padelford, Fay & Co., vs. Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Savannah 14 Ga. 438, 520

You have to understand that Great Britain,(Article six Section one) the United States and the States are the parties to the Constitution not you. Let me try to explain. If I buy an automobile from a man and that automobile has a warranty and the engine blows up the first day I have it. Then I tell the man just forget about it. Then you come along and tell the man to pay me and he says no. So you take him to court for not holding up the contract. The court then says case dismissed. Why ? Because you are not a party to the contract. You cannot sue a government official for not adhering to a contract (Constitution) that you are not a party too. You better accept the fact that you are a Slave. When you try to use the Constitution you are committing a CRIME known as CRIMINAL TRESPASS. Why ? Because you are attempting to infringe on a private contract that you are not a party to. Then to make matters worse you are a debt slave who owns no property or has any rights. You are a mere user of your Masters property! Here are just a couple of examples:

"The primary control and custody of infant is with the government" Tillman V. Roberts. 108 So. 62

" Marriage is a civil contract to which there are three parties-the husband, the wife and the state." Van Koten v. Van Koten. 154 N.E. 146.

"The ultimate ownership of all property is in the State: individual so-called "ownership" is only by virtue of Government, i.e. law amounting to mere user; and use must be in accordance with law and subordinate to the necessities of the State. Senate Document No. 43 73rd Congress 1st Session. (Brown v. Welch supra) You own no Property because you are a slave. Really you are worse off than a slave because you are also a debtor.

"The right of traffic or the transmission of property, as an absolute inalienable right, is one which has never existed since governments were instituted, and never can exist under government." Wynehamer v. The People. 13 N.Y. Rep.378, 481

Great Britain to this day collects taxes from the American people. The IRS is not an Agency of the United States Government.

All taxpayers have an Individual Master File which is in code. By using IRS Publication 6209, which is over 400 pages, there is a blocking series which shows the taxpayer the type of tax that is being paid. Most taxpayers fall under a 300-399 blocking series, which 6209 states is reserved, but by going to BMF 300-399 which is the Business Master File in 6209 prior to 1991, this was U.S.-U.K. Tax Claims, meaning taxpayers are considered a business and involved in commerce and are held liable for taxes via a treaty between the U.S. and the U.K., payable to the U.K. The form that is supposed to be used for this is form 8288, FIRPTA-Foreign Investment Real Property Tax Account. The 8288 form is in the Law Enforcement Manual of the IRS, chapter 3. The OMB's-paper-Office of Management and Budget, in the Department of Treasury, List of Active Information collections, Approved Under Paperwork Reduction Act is where form 8288 is found under OMB number 1545-0902, which says U.S. with holding tax return for dispositions by foreign persons, of U.S. Form #8288, #8288a.

These codes have since been changed to read as follows: IMF 300-309, Barred Assessment, CP 55 generated valid for MFT-30, which is the code for the 1040 form. IMF 310-399 reads the same as IMF 300-309, BMF 390-399 reads U.S.-U.K. Tax Treaty Claims. Isn't it INCREDIBLE that a 1040 form is a payment of a tax to the U.K. Everybody is always looking to 26 U.S.C. for the law that makes one liable for the so called Income Tax but, it is not in there because it is not a Tax, it is debt collection through a private contract called the Constitution of the United States Article Six, Section One. and various agreements. Is a cow paying an income tax when the machine gets connected to it's udders ? The answer is no. I have never known a cow that owns property or has been compensated for its labor. You own nothing that your labor has ever produced. You don't even own your labor or yourself. Your labor is measured in current credit money. You are allowed to retain a small portion of your labor so that you can have food, clothing shelter and most of all breed more slaves. Did you ever notice how many of the other slaves get upset if you try to retain your labor. You are called an extremist, terrorist and sometimes even a freeman. They say that you are anti-government. When the truth of the matter is you just don;t want to be a slave. But, you do not have the right to force others to be free if they want to be a slave that is entirely up to them. If they want bow down and worship corporations, let them. The United States, Great Britain and the Pope are not the problem, it is the other slaves. We would be free if the want-to-be-slaves were gone. The United States, Great Britain and the Pope would not even exist, because no one would acknowledge them. I for a matter of fact, think that those who are in power are also tired of the slaves. All the slaves do is stand around and MOO!!! For free healthcare, free education, free housing and they beg those who are in power to disarm them I do agree that a slave should not have access to a firearm. How can you disagree with the government passing out birth control ? I hope the breeding of slaves stops or at the very least slows down.

You see we are cows, the IRS is company who milks the cows and the United States Inc. is the veterinarian who takes care of the herd and Great Britain is the Owner of the farm in fee simple. The farm is held in allodium by the Pope.

Now to Rome.
"Convinced that the principles of religion contribute most powerfully to keep nations in the state of passive obedience which they owe to their princes, the high contracting parties declare it to be their intention to sustain in their respective states, those measures which the clergy may adopt with the aim of ameliorating their interests, so intimately connected with the preservation of the authority of the princes; and the contracting powers join in offering their thanks to the Pope for what he has already done for them, and solicit his constant cooperation in their views of submitting the nations." Article (3) Treaty of Varona (1822)

If the Sovereign Pontiff should nevertheless, insist on his law being observed he must be obeyed. Bened. XIV., De Syn. Dioec, lib, ix., c. vii., n. 4. Prati, 1844. Pontifical laws moreover become obligatory without being accepted or confirmed by secular rulers. Syllabus, prop. 28, 29, 44. Hence the jus nationale,(Federal Law) or the exceptional ecclesiastical laws prevalent in the United States, may be abolished at any time by the Sovereign Pontiff. Elements of Ecclesiastical Law. Vol. I 53-54. So could this be shown that the Pope rules the world?
The Pope is the ultimate owner of everything in the World. See Treaty of 1213, Papal Bull of 1455 and 1492.

I could go on and on, this is just the tip of the iceberg. Don't let this information scare you because without it you cannot be free, You have to understand that all slavery and freedom originates in the mind. When your mind allows you to accept and understand that the United States, Great Britain and the Vatican are corporations which are nothing but fictional entities which have been placed into your mind, you will understand that your slavery was because you believed a lie.

This is how a sovereign conducts MYSELF in Bankruptcy court

I'll let the video speak for itself, but let me just point out a few things that you may or may not catch. First of all, I object to any names or titles such as Miss or STAR HILLS, (artificial joinder of the all caps 'name), Second, the judge doesnt even know her own name and first calls herself 'Judge' Brimel, then tries to say that she wont allow me to 'interrogate the court', (she doesn't even know her own name)

,,,At this point you stay on point and do NOT let the judge deny you access to the court and/or due process, so take note, 'I allow her' to finish her 'opinion', (which is not LAW), and when she finishes 'speaking', I simply continue my line of questions, bear in mind, I don't know her from Adam, and must establish who she is and whether she has any affilliation with the opposition as I've filed dozens of documents into the record since April and they have been not only completely ignored every single one, but several judges and clerks have already conspired with GMAC to FRAUD me out of my home, (I have recussed 2 judges in this matter so far, one of which refuses to butt out and I have filed my objections to that and he has responded with no basis of his own for opposing me)
The judges have rolled the banks agenda forward to un-warrantledly seize my family legacy, (the CONstitution protects us from unwarranted searches and seizures as far as I recall, and although this CON doesnt apply to ME, the living woman, it does apply to THE ones who took an Oath to uphold it, and they must protect the sovereign (or ' Queen', which is who I am), as well as the citizens (subjects, although they're not MY subjects,) under said Oath, The courts even sent the Sheriff to my door to threaten me and posted a 5 Day Notice to Vacate, (that was back in May,,, as you can see,,, I'M STILL HERE :P) and speaking of Oaths, note where I ask the 'alleged Judge' Diod you take an Oath inder God?, and she tries to sidestep this question by saying that ALL judges take Oaths, and doesnt remember the wording of her Oath, yet affirms that she is conducting herself in honor of that Oath, (that she doesnt remember)

I think I had her at hello,,, what do you think?

I think the judge did pretty good, but the attorneys for GMAC couldnt cite a single quote for the basis of their motion, just a long pause and then sa "GMAC claims otherwise" with NO basis for saying that,,,, that's because they HAVE no basis, so they just throw some blanket statement out there to try and cover thier fraud nice try LIEWYER ,, can i get a drum roll?

Remember, if you know who YOU are as a sovereign, you conduct yourself as such, then you take authority over them, rather than the other way around, if you let them bully you, then you have given them the authority to do so, and they WILL run with that ball if you let them have it

This went as well as I could hope for, I will now enter my default of my Notice of Status on all government officials, and Bill them accordingly, and this gives me time for them to respond or acquiesce, (and they CAN'T rebut it, so they will HAVE to acquiesce) and I'll have time to file that evidence into the record also, (I'll be posting that Notice of Default on ThinkFree forum, for your review in the next week or so, (where you can register to see many of my documents I have filed in this and my other cases under the ID 'earthica-star' at the link below)

LANDMARK DECISION PROMISES MASSIVE RELIEF FOR HOMEOWNERS AND TROUBLE FOR BANKS

Ellen Brown, September 19th, 2009
http://www.webofdebt.com/articles/mers.php

A landmark ruling in a recent Kansas Supreme Court case may have given millions of distressed homeowners the legal wedge they need to avoid foreclosure. In Landmark National Bank v. Kesler, 2009 Kan. LEXIS 834, the Kansas Supreme Court held that a nominee company called MERS has no right or standing to bring an action for foreclosure. MERS is an acronym for Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, a private company that registers mortgages electronically and tracks changes in ownership. The significance of the holding is that if MERS has no standing to foreclose, then nobody has standing to foreclose – on 60 million mortgages. That is the number of American mortgages currently reported to be held by MERS. Over half of all new U.S. residential mortgage loans are registered with MERS and recorded in its name. Holdings of the Kansas Supreme Court are not binding on the rest of the country, but they are dicta of which other courts take note; and the reasoning behind the decision is sound.
Eliminating the “Straw Man” Shielding Lenders and Investors from Liability

The development of “electronic” mortgages managed by MERS went hand in hand with the “securitization” of mortgage loans – chopping them into pieces and selling them off to investors. In the heyday of mortgage securitizations, before investors got wise to their risks, lenders would slice up loans, bundle them into “financial products” called “collateralized debt obligations” (CDOs), ostensibly insure them against default by wrapping them in derivatives called “credit default swaps,” and sell them to pension funds, municipal funds, foreign investment funds, and so forth. There were many secured parties, and the pieces kept changing hands; but MERS supposedly kept track of all these changes electronically. MERS would register and record mortgage loans in its name, and it would bring foreclosure actions in its name. MERS not only facilitated the rapid turnover of mortgages and mortgage-backed securities, but it has served as a sort of “corporate shield” that protects investors from claims by borrowers concerning predatory lending practices. California attorney Timothy McCandless describes the problem like this:

“[MERS] has reduced transparency in the mortgage market in two ways. First, consumers and their counsel can no longer turn to the public recording systems to learn the identity of the holder of their note. Today, county recording systems are increasingly full of one meaningless name, MERS, repeated over and over again. But more importantly, all across the country, MERS now brings foreclosure proceedings in its own name – even though it is not the financial party in interest. This is problematic because MERS is not prepared for or equipped to provide responses to consumers’ discovery requests with respect to predatory lending claims and defenses. In effect, the securitization conduit attempts to use a faceless and seemingly innocent proxy with no knowledge of predatory origination or servicing behavior to do the dirty work of seizing the consumer’s home. . . . So imposing is this opaque corporate wall, that in a “vast” number of foreclosures, MERS actually succeeds in foreclosing without producing the original note – the legal sine qua non of foreclosure – much less documentation that could support predatory lending defenses.”

The real parties in interest concealed behind MERS have been made so faceless, however, that there is now no party with standing to foreclose. The Kansas Supreme Court stated that MERS' relationship "is more akin to that of a straw man than to a party possessing all the rights given a buyer." The court opined:

"By statute, assignment of the mortgage carries with it the assignment of the debt. . . . Indeed, in the event that a mortgage loan somehow separates interests of the note and the deed of trust, with the deed of trust lying with some independent entity, the mortgage may become unenforceable. The practical effect of splitting the deed of trust from the promissory note is to make it impossible for the holder of the note to foreclose, unless the holder of the deed of trust is the agent of the holder of the note. Without the agency relationship, the person holding only the note lacks the power to foreclose in the event of default. The person holding only the deed of trust will never experience default because only the holder of the note is entitled to payment of the underlying obligation. The mortgage loan becomes ineffectual when the note holder did not also hold the deed of trust." [Citations omitted; emphasis added.]

MERS as straw man lacks standing to foreclose, but so does original lender, although it was a signatory to the deal. The lender lacks standing because title had to pass to the secured parties for the arrangement to legally qualify as a "security." The lender has been paid in full and has no further legal interest in the claim. Only the securities holders have skin in the game; but they have no standing to foreclose, because they were not signatories to the original agreement. They cannot satisfy the basic requirement of contract law that a plaintiff suing on a written contract must produce a signed contract proving he is entitled to relief.
The Potential Impact of 60 Million Fatally Flawed Mortgages

The banks arranging these mortgage-backed securities have typically served as trustees for the investors. When the trustees could not present timely written proof of ownership entitling them to foreclose, they would in the past file "lost-note affidavits" with the court; and judges usually let these foreclosures proceed without objection. But in October 2007, an intrepid federal judge in Cleveland put a halt to the practice. U.S. District Court Judge Christopher Boyko ruled that Deutsche Bank had not filed the proper paperwork to establish its right to foreclose on fourteen homes it was suing to repossess as trustee. Judges in many other states then came out with similar rulings.

Following the Boyko decision, in December 2007 attorney Sean Olender suggested in an article in The San Francisco Chronicle that the real reason for the bailout schemes being proposed by then-Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson was not to keep strapped borrowers in their homes so much as to stave off a spate of lawsuits against the banks. Olender wrote:

"The sole goal of the [bailout schemes] is to prevent owners of mortgage-backed securities, many of them foreigners, from suing U.S. banks and forcing them to buy back worthless mortgage securities at face value – right now almost 10 times their market worth. The ticking time bomb in the U.S. banking system is not resetting subprime mortgage rates. The real problem is the contractual ability of investors in mortgage bonds to require banks to buy back the loans at face value if there was fraud in the origination process.

". . . The catastrophic consequences of bond investors forcing originators to buy back loans at face value are beyond the current media discussion. The loans at issue dwarf the capital available at the largest U.S. banks combined, and investor lawsuits would raise stunning liability sufficient to cause even the largest U.S. banks to fail, resulting in massive taxpayer-funded bailouts of Fannie and Freddie, and even FDIC . . . .

"What would be prudent and logical is for the banks that sold this toxic waste to buy it back and for a lot of people to go to prison. If they knew about the fraud, they should have to buy the bonds back."

Needless to say, however, the banks did not buy back their toxic waste, and no bank officials went to jail. As Olender predicted, in the fall of 2008, massive taxpayer-funded bailouts of Fannie and Freddie were pushed through by Henry Paulson, whose former firm Goldman Sachs was an active player in creating CDOs when he was at its helm as CEO. Paulson also hastily engineered the $85 billion bailout of insurer American International Group (AIG), a major counterparty to Goldmans' massive holdings of CDOs. The insolvency of AIG was a huge crisis for Goldman, a principal beneficiary of the AIG bailout.

In a December 2007 New York Times article titled “The Long and Short of It at Goldman Sachs,” Ben Stein wrote:

“For decades now, . . . I have been receiving letters [warning] me about the dangers of a secret government running the world . . . . [T]he closest I have recently seen to such a world-running body would have to be a certain large investment bank, whose alums are routinely Treasury secretaries, high advisers to presidents, and occasionally a governor or United States senator.”

The pirates seem to have captured the ship, and until now there has been no one to stop them. But 60 million mortgages with fatal defects in title could give aggrieved homeowners and securities holders the crowbar they need to exert some serious leverage on Congress – serious enough perhaps even to pry the legislature loose from the powerful banking lobbies that now hold it in thrall.

Ellen Brown developed her research skills as an attorney practicing civil litigation in Los Angeles. In Web of Debt, her latest book, she turns those skills to an analysis of the Federal Reserve and “the money trust.” She shows how this private cartel has usurped the power to create money from the people themselves, and how we the people can get it back. Her earlier books focused on the pharmaceutical cartel that gets its power from “the money trust.” Her eleven books include Forbidden Medicine, Nature’s Pharmacy (co-authored with Dr. Lynne Walker), and The Key to Ultimate Health (co-authored with Dr. Richard Hansen). Her websites are www.webofdebt.com and www.ellenbrown.com.

Everything I've been banging out all in one nicely polished video folks. Download and store my friends, this is a classic and especially at the end. I would like to point out though that the Roman fasce with an Iron axe is in fact a symbol the United States corporation being continually at a state of war. This power makes the U.S President a dictator with no need for a senate. This is how the President can empower the EPA and then lick the Congress via the EPA power on a subject on Climate for instance. You'll notice a fasce without an axe head on the Lincoln Memorial. This is because only the dictator U.S President has the real dangerous supreme power. In truth we know who the U.S President's real covert controllers are and its those Papal Nobility controlling missile protected, Borgo Spirito Santo and their revived Knights Templar known as the Society of Jesus. -Craig

Wesley Snipes acquitted of federal tax fraud

Actor also not guilty of conspiracy but convicted for failing to file returns

Feb. 1, 2008
http://www.msnbc.msn.com/id/22955757/

OCALA, Fla. - Action star Wesley Snipes was found not guilty of federal tax-fraud and conspiracy charges Friday, but was convicted on three misdemeanor counts of failing to file a tax return.

Snipes had faced up to 16 years in prison if convicted on all charges, but can now only get up to three years. The “Blade” star and two co-defendants had been indicted in 2006 after Snipes stopped paying, using tax protest arguments long rejected by the courts.

Snipes sat emotionless as his verdict was read, then nodded in relief. He refused to talk with reporters after the verdict, and is still liable for millions in taxes likely to be pursued in civil court.

“Mr. Snipes has always been committed to doing the right thing, and after this trial is over he’ll make whatever amends are required,” defense attorney Robert Bernhoft said. “But this is a man of integrity.”

Snipes’ lawyers argued that he was a victim of crooked advisers, and the jury seemed to believe it. Co-defendants Eddie Ray Kahn, the founder of a tax protest group, and Douglas P. Rosile, an accountant who lost his licenses, were convicted Friday by the same panel of tax fraud and conspiracy. Both face up to 10 years in prison.

The government said Snipes failed to file tax returns from 1999 to 2004, a period in which he signed two contracts for more than $10 million on sequels in the “Blade” trilogy.

The actor, who also appeared in “White Men Can’t Jump,” is among the most famous targets of an IRS criminal investigation, and his prosecution was key for the government.

“We thought there was sufficient evidence for a conviction on all counts, but obviously the jury disagreed,” U. S. Attorney Robert O’Neill said.

Snipes used bizarre arguments to justify his position, saying the IRS’ own code meant income earned in this country wasn’t taxable, and the agency had no legal authority because it’s not a proper government entity.

Later, the actor threatened the government and individual agents in his pursuit, declaring himself a “nonresident alien” not subject to tax laws.

Prosecutors say Snipes paid taxes in the 1990s, but changed his mind after meeting Kahn in 2000. He allegedly stopped filing returns, illegally sought $11 million in 1996 and 1997 taxes paid and drew fake checks to pay the U.S. Treasury.

Kahn founded the central Florida tax protest group American Rights Litigators and its successor, Guiding Light of God Ministries. He has been using tax scams since at least the early 1980s, according to government documents, and refused to defend himself in court against these charges.

Rosile, a CPA who lost his licenses in Florida and Ohio, allegedly prepared the fraudulent documents for Snipes, along with numerous other Kahn clients.

Judge and jury have long rejected their ideas, but there were exceptions.

The IRS bears a unique burden of proof in criminal tax cases. It must show not only that someone broke the law, but he or she did so with willful, bad purpose to defraud the government.

A few defendants have won acquittal because the jury thought they sincerely believed they did not have to pay.

Banks are chartered by the "king" who controls commerce, to act in commerce, and this makes them liable for tax. If you use the king's commerce you can be taxed as a corporation.

when you open a bank account you are engaging in, and accepting the benefits of, the kings commerce, and a juristic ficton is created which, in turn, creates an attachment of equity jurisdiction to you. This is what makes you liable for income tax. The creation of this fiction may be found, apparently, in the Bank Rules. the rules imposed by government. Not the silly bank rules that govern their relationship with you, but the ones which govern their relationship with the "king".
This is why, when you open an account, it comes to you in the ALLCAPS form of the corporate fiction. As the ALLCAPS you are a fiction and not only subject to income tax, but subject to Summary Processes - judge, no jury, and no defence argument or statement permitted. For your convenience you can plead guilty by post.

There are subtle reasons for the cashless society. And some very pressing ones why we should keep that old demon, cash, in our lives.

The Ficticious Legal Entity Called "a Person"

February 14, 2010
by Paul Verge

A quote, famously attributed to Rothschild agent Col. Edward House, but rarely understood except by "one man in a million" envisages people as collateral on the national debt:

"[Very] soon, every American will be required to register their biological property in a National system designed to keep track of the people and that will operate under the ancient system of pledging.

By such methodology, we can compel people to submit to our agenda, which will affect our security as a chargeback for our fiat paper currency. Every American will be forced to register or suffer not being able to work and earn a living.

They will be our chattel, and we will hold the security interest over them forever, by operation of the law merchant under the scheme of secured transactions. Americans, by unknowingly or unwittingly delivering the bills of lading to us will be rendered bankrupt and insolvent, forever to remain economic slaves through taxation, secured by their pledges.

They will be stripped of their rights and given a commercial value designed to make us a profit and they will be none the wiser, for not one man in a million could ever figure our plans and, if by accident one or two would figure it out, we have in our arsenal plausible deniability.

After all, this is the only logical way to fund government, by floating liens and debt to the registrants in the form of benefits and privileges. This will inevitably reap to us huge profits beyond our wildest expectations and leave every American a contributor or to this fraud which we will call "Social Insurance."

Without realizing it, every American will insure us for any loss we may incur and in this manner; every American will unknowingly be our servant, however begrudgingly. The people will become helpless and without any hope for their redemption and, we will employ the high office of the President of our dummy corporation to foment this plot against America."

If you can decipher what this means, you will truly understand a massive piece of the Global Agenda.

Essentially, House's quote illuminates the multiple "need" for imposing Legal Person's status upon us by the Satanic (Ego Worshipping) Elite.

The 'Strawman', also known as the Legal Person or Natural Person is the idea that a Fictitious Legal Entity, called a PERSON, exists for purposes of Law and Commerce.

This PERSON is similar to a Company or Corporation in that it exists as a construct of the imagination - it has no real body, and no soul to save, but for legal purposes, carries similar rights and attributes to that of a Human Man or Woman.

These rights include Ownership of Property, Lobbying the Government, Voting, and other activities related to money. The PERSON allows us to function with Limited Liability (read: Less Responsibility)

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Corporate_personhood

Our primary Legal Person, or "ID Card" consists of Birth Date, Eye color, Hair colour, Height, Weight, and now Fingerprints and Retina-scans, as if that's all we are. Nowhere on an ID Card are your Soul, or your Personality, or your Hopes, Dreams or Capacity to Love ever mentioned...

The emotional insecurities we have about our Bodies are magnified & exploited through constant propaganda and advertising, while our media hammers away at our psyche, "reminding" us that we are only Bodies, that bodies can only be sexy or ugly, and that Bodies and their Parts must be regarded as Possessions or Objects to be Owned.

In addition, by Registering (signing over to the state) your Biological Property (your body and the bodies of your children), creating a Birth Certificate (a Financial Security Instrument representing proof of parental consent in signing over the child) you are thus Consenting to the State's Ownership of You and Your Children.

The State then creates a child's very first Legal PERSON, with the parental signing of the Birth Certificate, which is given a "commercial value". If you have an older-style Birth Certificate, look on the Reverse side of it, to see 3 points of interest.

1) A 6-10 digit Number that you have never used in your life.

2) The words "Revenue Receipt" on the left side of this number.

3) The words "For Treasury Purposes Only" on the right side of the number.

Incidentally, before the 1900's, people USED to write the evidence of a birth in their Family Bible.

This first Legal Person attached to you, is known as a "NATIONAL CITIZEN" which later becomes synonymous with being a "Government Employee", when you SUBMIT (give in) an APPLICATION (to beg) for REGISTRATION (to sign over your rights) to become a SINner (by signing up for the Fraud called Social Insurance or Social Security).

You then receive your Employee ID # (also known as a SIN #) which creates another Person called a "TAXPAYER". This means you consent to the Income Tax Act, and now makes you liable for the Income Tax, in exchange for the "Benefits" of being a Government Employee.

The Strawman/Legal Person is thus the Evidence of your Signature (an oath) and Consent to Obey a set of Acts or Statutes, usually located on paper contract, or in a card form with your signature.

For example. You sign for a "Drivers License" to create a Legal Person called a "DRIVER", and have consented to follow the Traffic Safety/Motor Vehicle Acts of your state or province.

You sign up for a "Bank Account" to create a Legal Person called an "ACCOUNT HOLDER", usually providing your SIN # as part of your "Identification" which consents to allowing access to your bank account by court order to pay your Income Taxes by force!

You sign up for "Voter Registration" to create Legal Person called a "VOTER", which gets to vote for new Employee's and Presidents/Prime Ministers for the Corporation your PERSON resides in, and thus consent to the actions of your representative and their party, even if it means going to war against an innocent foreign country, or proroguing their own Parliament illegally!

There are literally dozens, if not hundreds of different PERSONS you can be holding, but none of them are YOU.

PERSONS must RESIDE within another Legal Entity, they cannot "Live" anywhere - that is why you are asked if you are a Resident of CANADA or the UNITED STATES. Authorities are not asking you, the Living Man or Woman if you Live in the Country, the are asking if your Legal Person RESIDES (has the right to do business/work) within their Corporation.

We have to know what words mean when people claiming authority try to use Legal words to control us. Legal dictionaries are different than regular dictionaries, because Legal words carry Weight in Law, and are often defined completely differently within various Acts, Statutes and Legal dictionaries. It is literally another language, which is why they call it Legalese.

SOLUTIONS

Only by realizing and discerning WHO we really are : Powerful spiritual beings with unlimited creative potential created by God, can we break the first invisible chain keeping us from freedom.

"You can declare your Rights and stand upon them as a Sovereign Man or Woman by filing "Notices of Understanding and Intent" and "Claims of Right", example of both available on the Web. You must tailor your own Notices and Claims to your own situation. It is not a simple cookie-cutter process.

Standing upon your Sovereignty in court and winning is FACTUAL, but you must not fall for their NAME GAME, where they try to get you to accept your LEGAL NAME, which puts you in their jurisdiction. Doing that, in the eyes of the court, turns you from a Living Human with Human Rights, into a Soulless Corporate Entity with No Rights whatsoever.

The best solution to win against the crooked and corrupt courts is to never go to court and play their fixed game at all. If someone tries to use a Court Order against you, make sure it is SIGNED by a JUDGE or it is INVALID. Most Court Order's aren't actually signed, and officials use unsigned Court Order's as a confidence trick to gain your consent!

There is no silver bullet. There is no lazy way to learn about your rights. You must Research and do your homework to REALLY learn what you are doing. Ignorantly walking into court is like playing carelessly with a loaded handgun."

You are not a PERSON. You are a Living Soul of Flesh and Blood. A PERSON has Privileges that can be Revoked while a Living Human has Rights that are Inalienable!

Knowing THAT, is the first step to stopping the War Against Consciousness.

First of all anything claimed to be illegal by the system is infact nonsense as this term is referring to the color of law. In other words it means appears to be but is not. Only accept the terms lawful and unlawful from Common Law. Never call yourself a driver and never admit to your carriage being a vehicle. Vehicle means to the corporate system that your carriage is drawn by mechanical power and used for commerical purposes on the highways in the transportation of passengers. First of all your not doing commerical actions and you're not transporting passengers as their not paying, their truely travellers. So a vehicle is that in or on which goods etc may be carried from one place to another. That which is used as an instrument of conveyance, transmission or communication. The term Vehicle refers to every device in, upon or by which a person or property is or may be transported upon a highway. First of all you're not using a highway its truely a common way. Then of course you're not a person which is defined as a corporation in other words an artificial legal identity. First of all your not corporate, you're flesh and blood whilst legal is again color of law illusion. A vehicle is in fact an inland vessel in admiralty. Now don't forget a vessel is once again a corporation and your strawman. Don't be fooled by some of the mainstream attacks in the article below. These people are on the right track and hardly anyone understands their rights. -Craig

'Sovereign Citizens' Claim Immunity From Ind., Federal Law

State Sees Uptick In People Claiming To Be Diplomats Living In Embassies

UPDATED: 7:39 pm EST March 4, 2010
http://www.theindychannel.com/news/22729218/detail.html

INDIANAPOLIS -- Fed up and fired up, an increasing number of Indiana residents who have lost confidence in the government are going to extreme measures to claim they are "sovereign citizens."

By doing so, residents contend that they no longer have to pay taxes, claiming their homes as embassies and using identification cards that show them as diplomats, 6News' Rafael Sanchez reported.

Indiana authorities call such proclamations both illegitimate and illegal. About 10 people every month ask the state to put a seal on a document so that they can claim freedom from taxes.

There are plenty of American flags draped on homes along U.S. 36, a road that leads to the home of Donald Moore, who claims to be a diplomatic agent and ambassador -- a mark of a so-called sovereign citizen.

Moore, a father of seven, and his wife invited 6News to their home, but decided not to appear on camera.

Moore is equipped with an official looking identification card and a badge, which he said means United States law doesn't apply to him.

"It gives me diplomatic immunity," Moore said, referring to the ID card. "The way I understand it, the federal government is incorporated, and all the states are incorporated. This takes me out of the corporation."

Moore and others said they draw their beliefs from the Bible and U.S. Constitution. Moore said all that has to be done to be exempt from U.S. laws is to file documents available online with the Secretary of State.

Many claim that the statements within the papers they provide are enforceable because of a state seal placed on the material, but in reality, that seal is placed on any number of documents and doesn't make what's on the documents true.

Secretary of State Todd Rokita said he's troubled that people use self-made ID cards that show his name and the state emblem in an attempt to open bank accounts, buy items tax free and board airplanes.

"Just because you allege something or concoct yourself a document doesn't mean you're getting off the hook," Rokita said. "You're going to get in worse trouble."

Jonathan Dilley is serving a nearly four-year sentence in federal prison for using his sovereign citizen paperwork.

Last year, Dilley was convicted after making and presenting his own promissory notes to pay off more than $800,000 of debt.

Another so-called sovereign citizen, Brad Henry, said he loves America, but is fed up with government in general.

"I don't have any rights you don't. You just don't have the guts to stand up for yours," Henry said, when questioned about the authenticity of documents.

Henry said he doesn't mind paying sales taxes, but won't pay property taxes. He asked Delaware County officials to exempt him from annual bills because he considers his house to be an embassy. The county denied the request.

Embassies are where officials from other countries work. They must be recognized by the U.S. Department of State to be legitimate.

In all of Indiana, only three people, all workers at the Mexican Consulate in Indianapolis, have real diplomatic plates and the privileges that accompany them, officials said.

Some so-called sovereign citizens refuse to use state-issued licenses or plates. When they're pulled over, police said they often show an ID that says no one can delay, detain or arrest them without facing damages of $2 million, Sanchez reported.

"We are people who love our organic United States of America, the way it was found and meant to be, and are trying to preserve that," Henry said.

Indiana is not the only state seeing an uptick in sovereign citizens. In February, four men were convicted in Missouri for buying and selling fraudulent credentials related to the movement.

In March 2009, federal authorities arrested four men in Las Vegas in a similar operation.

Some people are paying between $900 and $2,100 to become members of a sovereign citizens group.

State and federal revenue departments said they couldn't reveal any information about whether they are investigating anyone claiming to be a sovereign citizen and refusing to pay taxes in Indiana.

The U.S. Department of State said that only people on its list are considered diplomats. Moore and Henry are not on that list.

Indiana State Police said vehicles without legal plates will be towed and that owners will be ticketed for any offense.

Comments for "The US Wasn't Founded as a Christian Nation "
Vojko said (March 31, 2010):

It's true that the United States of America was not founded as a Christian nation. The United States was founded as two companies, The London Company (Charter of the Virginia Company of London) which was established by royal charter by King James in 1606 and became a joint stock company in 1609. The second company was the Plymouth Company also founded in 1606 by King James I and became a joint stock company. The main purpose of these two companies was to make money for the crown and the shareholders of these two joint stock companies in the City of London Corporation. There were competing interests for the plunder of North America with the Spanish in present day Florida. The founding principals in the colonies back then were to make a profit and get as much recruits as possible as North America was a giant dangerous wilderness with savage natives, disease, hunger and ruthless leaders. I'm sure that many of the "British blue blood" were Freemasons that ran colonies but it wasn't till 1717 that the United Grand Lodge of England came to being when "four London lodges came together at the Goose and Gridiron Ale House, St Paul's Churchyard". The founding of the Grand Lodge was 111 years after the King James I charters to the two companies in 1606.

On an interesting side note the second great world power at that time (first power being the British empire), the Roman Catholic church had a role to play in the early founding of America. A prominent catholic Daniel Carroll according to an internet article:

"Daniel Carroll (July 22, 1730 – July 5, 1796) was a politician and one of the Founding Fathers of the United States. He was a prominent member of one of America's great colonial families that included his cousin Charles Carroll of Carrollton who signed the Declaration of Independence, and his brother John Carroll who was the first Catholic bishop in the United States. He was one of only five men to sign both the Articles of Confederation and the Constitution of the United States."

It gets even more interesting:

"The choice of the present site of Washington was advocated by Carroll, and he owned one of the four farms taken for it, Notley Young, David Burns, and Samuel Davidson being the others interested. The capitol was built on the land transferred to the Government by Carroll, and there is additional interest to Catholics in the fact that, in 1663, this whole section of country belonged to a man named Pope, who called it Rome. On 15 April, 1791, Carroll and David Stuart, as the official commissioners of Congress, laid the corner-stone of the District of Columbia at Jones' Point near Alexandria, Virginia. When the Congress met in Washington for the first time, in November, 1800, Carroll and Notley Young owned the only two really comfortable and imposing houses within the bounds of the city. Young's name is among those assisting as collectors of subscriptions (1787) for the founding of Georgetown College."

"The Jesuit bishop John Carroll was probably the richest man in America in the late 1700's. Carroll allowed funding to construct D.C. (which is nicknamed "Rome on the Potomac"). The owner of the land used to be Francis Pope and his priest was Jesuit Andrew White (White House)."

"Washington D.C.'s original name was Rome, Maryland, and a branch of the Potomac River was called Tiber Creek, which was named after the Tiber river in Rome. Like Rome, Washington D.C. has 7 hills, whose names are: Capitol Hill, Meridian Hill, Floral Hills, Forest Hills, Hillbrook, Hillcrest, and Knox Hill."

The founding of America it's early years has a mixture of British imperialism, Freemasonry, and the Roman Catholic church in it.

Instructions for turning a remittance slip into a cheque

[dohtml] [/dohtml]

QUOTE

1. Do not detach the payment (remittance) slip from the letter.

2. Write in red on the letter above the remittance:

Paid in Full
Attention of the chief accountant
Reset account to Zero
In accordance with Bill of Exchange Act 1882

3. Fill in the cheque amount and total, sign and date the remittance

4. Endorse the back of the remittance with your name, address & signature

5. make a copy for your records

6. Send to utility company with "For Attention of Chief Accountant" on envelope by recorded delivery.

QUOTE

INDORSING CHEQUES

1. In indorsing cheques note the following points:

2. Write across the back—not lengthwise.

3. If your indorsement is the first, write it about two inches from the top of the back; if it is not the first indorsement, write immediately under the last indorsement.

4. Do not indorse wrong end up; the top of the back is the left end of the face.

5. Write your name as you are accustomed to write it, no matter how it is written on the face. If you are depositing the cheque write or stamp "For Deposit" or "Pay to _____Bank_____," as may be the custom, over your signature. This is hardly necessary if you are taking the cheque yourself to the bank. A cheque with a simple or blank indorsement on the back is payable to bearer, and if lost the finder might succeed in collecting it; but if the words "For Deposit" appear over the name the bank officials understand that the cheque is intended to be deposited, and they will not cash it.

6. If you wish to make the cheque payable to some particular person by indorsing, write "Pay to _____(name)_____ or order," and under this write your own name as you are accustomed to sign it.

7. Do not carry around indorsed cheques loosely. Such cheques are payable to bearer and may be collected by any one.

8. [11]If you receive a cheque which has been transferred to you by a blank indorsement (name of indorser only), and you wish to hold it a day or two, write over the indorsement the words "Pay to the order of (yourself—writing your own name)." This is allowable legally. The cheque cannot then be collected until you indorse it.
[dohtml] [/dohtml]

A cheque payable to order and a blank indorsement.
[dohtml] [/dohtml]
9. An authorised stamped indorsement is as good as a written one. Whether such indorsements are accepted or not depends upon the regulations of the clearing-house in the particular city in which they are offered for deposit. The written indorsement is considered safer for transmission of out-of-town collections.

10. If you are indorsing for a company, or society, or corporation, write first the name of the company (this may be stamped on) and then your own name, followed by the word "Treas."

11. If you have power of attorney to indorse for some particular person, write his name, followed by your own, followed by the word "Attorney" or "Atty.," as it is usually written.

12. It is sometimes permissible to indorse the payee's name thus, "By _____(your own name)." This may be done by a junior member of a concern when the person authorised to indorse cheques is absent and the cheques are deposited and not cashed.

13. Do not write any unnecessary information on the back of your cheque. A story is told of a woman who received a cheque from her husband, and when cashing it wrote "Your loving wife" above her name on the back.

- My friend Alton made an attempt to use this method to pay his water bill and the company wrote back asking him where his cheque was. On his behalf I wrote them a nice reply explaining that the bill they sent was the cheque and we put in a copy of the original cheque and statement and we gave them 14 days to respond otherwise by tacit acquiecence the payment has been accepted by them.
  I should point out that if companies do reject your initial payment they have dishonured themselves, point this out and tell them you want your account handled by their chief accountant. Lowly bods lower down in the company hierarchy do not know how to process these payments one idiot even claimed the bill of exchange act does not apply.

- My friend Alton did the same last week with his water company and has not heard anything either. I am typing this from his house now and his phone just rang and I said to him if that was the water company questioning the method of payment do you know what to say to them, and he said no. So I said the person on the other end of the line is going to be just a clerk and you ask them if they are experts in negotiable instruments to which they will reply no. Then tell them that you have used a negotiable instrument to meet the liability they had created and in law they must accept the payment in accordance with the Bill of Exchange Act.

- I had this very same conversation just minutes ago about my water bill....the clerk DID reply "No", so I advised that all was correct and in accordance with the BOE, and she would need to speak with someone who was 'an expert in negotiable instruments'.

- I spoke to a lawyer on Friday, and, discussed this topic with him. He said that yes, in fact, this method should actually work. he did say however, that it would be a good idea to have the signature witnessed as you could very well be asked to attend court to verify you signed it.

- All remittance slips can be turned into cheques and these are both lawful and legal ways of paying any debt. Any company that refuse such payment are violating the laws of commerce and you should ask them to explain why in writing.

- Some companies are claiming they cannot see the signature this is important because it is your signature that they draw on when they dip into the illuminatie account to pay the debt they created in your strawman. Getting someone to witness your signature is a good idea you should also photo copy everything you are sending to them. Also make sure all such cheques are sent by recorded post otherwise they will claim they have not received your payments.

- When you write a cheque you must fill out the AMOUNT in words and numerals. If you look carefully you will see that the numerals are in a box, (ie not on the page) the important part is the words. When you receive an account, statement, demand or whatever there is no written amount, therefore nothing to pay. If you write the words on as you did, you change the substance of the document and your signature makes it a negotiable instrument. If you ignore it another process happens.

- Along the very bottom of the remittance slip and under the black line there is a long ref # then the amount due. Below that is another long ref # and at the end of this very long ref.no. are:- "73" on the phone bill, and "91" on the two other bills. These are consumer credit accounts which the payment is drawn out of already. They then proceed to ask you again for the money.

NOTICE OF FAILURE AND OPPORTUNITY TO CURE

Dear Mr xxx,

Regarding a letter sent to me dated 29 March 2010 and sent by John Cxxxx. I do not understand the nature of your query. You suggest that I have recently sent you a query and cannot be answered as it was not signed.

I have sent you no query. I trust this clears the nature of your letter up.

However, I did on 25/03/2010 send you (received by yourselves on 26/03/2010) a negotiable instrument with instructions in order for you to adjust the account to zero. This was signed, both front and back, and dated.

This negotiable instrument is entirely legal, a specie of money as stated in the Bill of Exchange Act 1882.

I expect that negotiable instrument to be acted upon and adjustments made to the account.

You have ten (10) days in which to comply from the date of receipt of this notice or send valid, legal and substantive reasons as to why you could not act legally.

Bill of Exchange Act 1882:

42. (1.) When a bill is duly presented for acceptance and is not accepted within the customary time, the person presenting it must treat it as dishonoured by non-acceptance. If he do not, the holder shall lose his right of recourse against the drawer and indorsers.
43 (1.) A bill is dishonoured by non-acceptance
(a.) when it is duly presented for acceptance, and such an acceptance as is prescribed by this Act is refused or cannot be obtained; or (b.) when presentment for acceptance. is excused and the bill is not accepted.

Yours (without frivolity or vexation)

Why the yellow fringed US flag in our courts? What it REALLY means:

July 21, 2010
Compiled by Lipper
http://theintelhub.com/2010/07/21/why-the-...t-really-means/

There has been much discussion on the yellow fringe that boarders the U.S. Flag, I thought it was time to post this here….

President, Dwight David Eisenhower, by Executive Order No.10834, signed on August 21, 1959 and printed in the Federal Register at 24 F.R. 6865, pursuant to law, stated that: “A military flag is a flag that resembles the regular flag of the United States, except that it has a Yellow Fringe border on three sides.”

Why the yellow fringed US flag in our courts? What it REALLY means:

When you enter a courtroom displaying a gold or yellow fringed flag, you have just entered into a foreign country, and you better have your passport with you, because you may not be coming back to the land of the free for a long time. The judge sitting under a gold or yellow fringe flag becomes the “captain” or “master” of that ship or enclave and he has absolute power to make the rules as he goes. The gold or yellow fringe flag is your warning that you are leaving your constitutionally secured RIGHTS on the floor outside the door to that courtroom.

Court Cases on Yellow Fringed Flags:

In every case, the court ruled that it is frivolous to argue that there is a yellow fringed flag in the court. A court is not under military jurisdiction because of the yellow fringed flag, but the yellow fringed flag is there because the court is under military jurisdiction. Keep this in mind as you read the cases

(at this site.)

Under martial law, you are presumed guilty until proven innocent.

Flag – Martial Law Pursuant to 4 U.S.C. chapter 1, Â§Â§ 1, 2, & 3; Executive Order 10834, August 21, 1959, 24 F.R. 6865, a military flag is a flag that resembles the regular flag of the United States, except that it has a YELLOW FRINGE border on three sides. The President of the United States designates this deviation from the regular flag, by executive order, and in his capacity as Commander-in-Chief.

No new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State. So — why have the Germans been allowed to erect a German enclave at Holloman Air Force Base in New Mexico, under the Law of the Flag? Why have the judges of the State and Federal Courts been allowed to erect foreign enclaves within our courthouses under the foreign flag of the yellow fringe on the soil of our Republic?

The flags displayed in State courts and courts of the United States have gold or yellow fringes. It is your warning that you are entering a foreign enclave and will be subject to the jurisdiction of that flag. The flag of the gold or yellow fringe has no constitution, no laws, and no rules of court, and is not recognized by any Nation on the earth, and is foreign to this Republic and the United States of America.

When two nations go to war, the object of the game is to capture the other guys flag. When you go onto foreign soil, take the other guys flag down and put yours up, you have captured the other guys territory and put it under the law (Constitution) of your republic flag, or at the very least bring your flag, for a parley session / negotiation.

2) Martial Law was imposed by Abraham Lincoln, at the point when succession from the union occurred. This was needed since the republic had no congressional legislative quorum, to enact laws, etc. Lincoln pledged to restore the Republic, but was assassinated.

3) We have operated under Martial Law since and various states of emergency, created to continue this Martial Law dictatorship.

4) The original 13th Amendment was attempted to be hidden and concealed and the war of 1812 was to ensure that was done so that agents of the Crown could continue to keep their agents in America and continue payments to the Crown.

5) The Treaty of Peace, and the Constitution recognized the debts of the thirteen colonies. Can’t be free as a debtor.

6) By papal Bull the Vatican / pope declared He owned the world.

7) The crown agreed, and turned over lands to the Pope and became Arch Treasurer for the Vatican.

All colony lands claimed for the King and the Vatican. Genocide of the native peoples instituted for financial gain.

9) U.S. Legal History

U.S. Law is Private Merchant Law, leaving the people as Surety and Debtor on the bankruptcy.

Law is contract, universally and in the U.S., so we must follow the progression of contractual agreements, which constitute the underlying U.S. Law. (We cannot address all individual laws and cases or you would not have time in a life to review it, even though ignorance of the millions of laws, statutes, codes, etc… is no excuse in Private Admiralty Jurisdictions.)

In basically chronological order, the following progression of contracts, and our interpretation of them follows:

The USA, a corporation of the English Crown, is bankrupt, and has been since at least 1788. The Articles of Confederation states in Article 12: “All bills of credit emitted, monies borrowed, and debts contracted by, or under the authority of Congress, before the assembling of the United States, in pursuance of the present confederation, shall be deemed as considered a charge against the United States, for payment and satisfaction whereof the said United States, and the public faith are hereby solemnly pledged.” The “Founding Fathers,” as constitutors, acknowledged and reorganized the debt in the US Constitution 1787, Article VI, hence “constitution.” Bankruptcy occurred on January 1, 1788 based on 21 loans that the United States of America received from the King of England dating from February 28, 1778 through July 5, 1782, the repayment of which had been ratified by Congress on January 22, 1783. The United States Bank, created in 1791, was a private bank, with 18,000 of 25,000 shares owned by England.

No de jure, constitutional Congress has existed since March 27, 1861 when seven (7) Southern States walked out of Congress leaving Congress without a quorum for adjourning and therefore ending sine die. That which is called “Congress” today assembles and acts under the authority of the President acting in capacity of being Commander-In-Chief of the Armed Forces, under emergency war-powers rule, i.e. “law of necessity,” i. e. no law (see 12 Stat 319, which has never been repealed and exists in Title 50 USC §§ 212, 213, 215, Appendix 16, 26 CFR Chapter 1 § 303.1-6(a), and 31 CFR Chapter 5 § 500.701 Penalties).

Since the above-referenced date, March 27, 1861, Americans have been under Fascist rule via presidential executive order under the aforementioned Emergency War Powers, 12 USC 95 a, b. Every “citizen of the United States” is now “legally” established as an “enemy” via the Amendatory Act of March 9, 1933, 48 Stat. 1, amending Trading with Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, H.R. 4960, and Public Law No. 91.

December 6th, 1865, the 14th Amendment was proclaimed as ratified (even though it never properly was, see below). The 14th Amendment, which is private Roman Catholic Ecclesiastical Trust Law, constitutes a constructive, cestui que trust, a public charitable trust, “PCT,” that was expressly designed to bring every corporate franchise artificial person called a “citizen of the United States” into an inseparable merging with the government until the two are united (with the power inhering in the government, not the people). A cestui que trust is fundamentally different from a regular trust, which is express in nature and consists of a contractual indenture involving three (3) parties: Grantor (Creator or Trustor), Trustee, and Beneficiaries. In an express trust, legal ownership is transferred by written contract between Grantor and Trustee in which the Grantor surrenders ownership of property to the legal person, the Trust, to be managed by the Trustee on behalf of those who are to benefit from the arrangement, the Beneficiaries. A cestui que trust, on the other hand, differs from an express trust in several crucial ways:

a. It is not formed by express contract, i.e. overt agreement expressed in writing, but by legal construction, i.e. fiat.

b. A cestui que trust has no Grantor, but, being a constructive trust created by operation of law, i.e. by make-believe, has only co-trustees and co-beneficiaries. The co-trustees are the parties with the duties for managing property for the "public good," i.e. for the benefit of those designated as co-beneficiaries.

The Legislative Act of February 21, 1871, Forty-first Congress, Session III, Chapter 62, page 419, chartered a Federal company entitled "United States," a/k/a "US Inc.," a "Commercial Agency" originally designated as "Washington, D.C.," in accordance with the so-called 14th Amendment, which the record indicates was never ratified (see Utah Supreme Court Cases, Dyett v Turner, (1968) 439 P2d 266, 267; State v Phillips, (1975) 540 P 2d 936; as well as Coleman v. Miller, 307 U.S. 448, 59 S. Ct. 972; 28 Tulane Law Review, 22; 11 South Carolina Law Quarterly 484; Congressional Record, June 13, 1967, pp. 15641-15646). A "citizen of the United States" is a civilly dead entity operating as a co-trustee and co-beneficiary of the PCT, the constructive, cestui que trust of US Inc. under the 14th Amendment, which upholds the debt of the USA and US Inc. in Section 4.

In conformity with the above-referenced creation of United States (1871) and the 14th Amendment, the Legislature of each State created a limited-liability corporation, chartered in a private, military, international, commercial, admiralty/maritime jurisdiction, entitled "STATE OF…" e.g. "STATE OF CALIFORNIA," as evidenced by, inter alia, the change in the seal and the creation of a new constitution, e.g. Constitution of the State of California (1879), concerning which, re California:

a. A general partnership agreement, hereinafter "General Partnership," exists between the California Republic (1849), and STATE OF CALIFORNIA (1879), with STATE OF CALIFORNIA acting as governmental controller.

b. STATE OF CALIFORNIA now acts as an agent/instrumentality of United States, collecting whole life insurance premiums, known as "taxes," for the International Monetary Fund, based, inter alia, upon the Limited Liability Act of 1851 and the bankruptcy of United States of 1933, see House Joint Resolution 192 of June 5, 1933; Public Law 73-10; Perry v. U.S. (1935), 294 U.S. 330-381, 79 L Ed 912; 31 USC 5112, 5119.

Inasmuch as all law is contract, the contract involved in a constructive trust is an implied contract. An implied contract can be ratified by two (2) means:

a. Acquiescence by silence, i.e. the "government" asserts its intentions concerning your life, rights, and property and you assent, don't rebut, and compliantly go along with what they claim. In 1871 the Government changed the nature of its contract with the people from law as defined by the original Constitution of 1787 that recognizes law (common law), admiralty (on the sea only), and equity (functioning by voluntary contract between all participating parties), and began relating to people as if they were "citizens of the Unites States" within/under the private, commercial, international, military jurisdiction of the new de facto corporation, i.e. US Inc. They offered people a "new deal," and almost everyone bought it (based on naïve and foolish trust and assuming that everything was OK). The people were thereby denied access to law and placed on the ship of state of US Inc. where the captain's word is law and no one has any rights. As Jefferson phrased the matter, "As government grows, liberty recedes."

b. You expressly accept "benefits" offered by the government, and thereby finalize the contract by deed. This is similar to finalizing a contract with a restaurant by sitting down at a table, reading a menu, and then ordering and consuming a meal. By your deeds you affirm to the restaurant that you will pay for the meal in accordance with the price stated on the menu. No written contract is signed, but a contract is formed nevertheless.

By the above two (2) means people give implied assent that they are bound by an alleged contract with US Inc. in accordance with the terms and conditions that inhere in being treated as a "citizen of the United States" under the 14th Amendment, and are therefore placed into permanent legal status as a Debtor and Surety for U.S. Inc.. In such a position people leave the ground of sovereignty and all capacity for asserting their unalienable rights in favor of being presumed as having exercised their sovereignty and free-will autonomy for the purpose of going along with the government's assertion that they sacrifice everything for the "public good," i.e. the PCT. By so doing people lose their standing in law, i.e. they "die a civil death in the law." They are placed in the legal position of mortmain (i.e. as if deceased) and are shorn of capacity for asserting their rights, since the presumption is that they have already exercised those rights for the purpose of being placed in the position they are in, i.e. property of the government with a lien against you and everything your life labor could ever create, including your children. The private being (the real individual) is sacrificed for the good of the public (the imaginary collective).

When people die such a civil death in the law they are like ghosts, and thereby incapable of managing their own affairs and enjoying their unalienable rights. Like the estate of a decedent, they are then managed by the executors/administrators of the estate, in probate. Such is the condition of every “citizen of the United States” today in law, managed by the government agencies acting as executors/administrators of their estates in bankruptcy, legal incapacity, and civil death as assets of the bankrupt US. The US is property of the private Real Parties of Interest, the Creditors in bankruptcy.

The 14th Amendment was allegedly established for the purpose of creating a citizenship for the liberated blacks, and other disenfranchised people, who otherwise had no citizenship because they could not comply with the requirements for state citizenship. What actually happened was that the blacks were taken off of the Southern slave plantations and placed into the slave plantation of US Inc., a far worse lot. The government then gradually absorbed everyone else—including state citizens—into the same condition.

1871-1913. Officers of the actual government held office in dual capacity, i.e. in both USA and US Inc. status.
